PICTURES MAKE NEWS

A los Angeles jury agreed that Willy Pogany hadn't made a good likeness off Constance Bennet and so the actress didn't have to' pay the $3500 Willy asked for the picture. So Connie got her picture made, her name in the papers and a lot of free publicity; Willy got a lot of free publicity so he can show the picture for two-bits a throw and make more than the thirty-five hundred smacks he didn't get, and some of us who were disinterested can get a good laugh. Pictures make news.

WE HAD A VISITOR

Mrs. Frank Baldwin of the Waco Times Herald and News Tribune was talk. Of course, Phil is a country boy, having been "raised" at Lubbock. But Mrs. Baldwin didn't act a bit uppity, just acted as if a country editor might be human maybe. And made us think she meant it when she asked us to come in and see her down in the big city.

GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENT WORKS

We don't know how much the government unemployment census has helped business in general. But the Census itself was a job well done. Administrator John D. Biggers, who is also president of Libby-Owens-Ford Glass Company, included in his final report that the job had cost less than two million of the five million appropriate for it. Strange, isn't it. Local Postmaster K. L. Scudder can tell something of how the job was done so economically. The Post Office Department did most of the work. And that right in the middle of a big rush of fail business. The Department took no additional help, and the cost was paid for transportation of the cards and for printing, not for the extra work the P. O. Department did. Funny, we didn't know government departments were supposed to work.

SLATONITE TO ISSUE SPECIAL EDITION FOUNDERS AND BUILDERS HONORED

On July Fourth Slaton is expecting thousands of guests to be here for the celebration that has been planned. Every organization in the town is joining in the effort to show our town at its best on that occasion, and to let that best sell itself to our friends, our neighbors and our guests from afar.

The Slatonite wants to have some little part in that showing, and will issue on that date a Special Edition dedicated to the Founders and Builders of Slaton. To those who dreamed and planned and toiled in the building of our little city we want to offer our tribute in this issue.

The FOUNDERS' and BUILD-ERS' NUMBER will not be the product of some imported highpressure organization. It will be issued from start to finish by Slaton people who live here and work here, and who intend to keep on living here. On this basis the Slatonite solocits your support in this undertaking. We feel that it is appropriate and worthy.

General Rains Visit County

Add To Local Moisture Break Western Drouth

General rains over the South Plains Wednesday night brought more moisture to Slaton and surrounding territory. A few spots in the county report serious hail damage, notably southwest of Lorenzo where cotton crops are a total loss. Heavy rains in the immediate vicinity have not apparently done great injury to cotton that was up to a stand. A few late crops may need to be scratched or replanted, but the moisture, though not needed, is not unwelcome.

Farmers are about to concede that this is an "unusual" year for this county. Even in the past sixty days ten to twelve inches of rainfall has put down half a year's average of moisture. Hailstorms have been frequent, and the most fearless Plainsmen now look with suspicious eye at approaching clouds to see if it is advisable to go into the storm cellar.

to celebrate the rains here, there was extreme rejoicing in the western part of Lubbock county and in Lynn, Terry, Gaines, Hockley, and other counties where the drouth had reached a critical stage, but was broken by Wednesday's rains.

Are You a 'Canny' Canner? By JOSEPHINE C. BOND.

Do you get 100 per cent returns from your canning efforts? It isn't always enough to do "lots of canning." You may have 500 full jars in your cellar at the end of the season, but if 100 of these leak because of cheap or old rubber rings, you are only getting an 80 per cent return on your labor. One of the greatest mistakes the housewife canner can make, I have found, is to yield to the mistaken clerk who substitutes "unknown brands" for advertised brands produced by reputable manufacturers. Substitution may be all right at times, when an item can be used up in a short time. But when it comes to jar rings-play safe-buy a recognized

There is a lot of difference in jar rings. The rubber used in them is compounded, or mixed, in much the same way that the batter for a cake is mixed, and, like cake batter, unless the recipe is tested and the ingredients of the best, the results will be disappointing. Inferior jar rings will 'check' or crack and allow air to seep into the jars.

Lesson for June 19 THE SUFFERING SERVANT *

LESSON TEXT—Mark 15:22-39.

GOLDEN TEXT—For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. Mark 10:45.

PRIMARY TOPIC—God's Wonderful Love.
JUNIOR TOPIC—On Calvary.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Self-Sacrifice for Others.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Love's Supreme Sacrifice.

Love's Supreme Sacrifice

"A Christianity without a dying Christ is a dying Christianity. History shows us that the expansiveness and elevating power of the Gospel depend upon the prominence given to the sacrifice of the Cross. An old fable says that the only thing that melts adamant is the blood of a lamb. The Gospel reveals the precious blood of Jesus Christ, his death for us as a ransom, as the one power that subdues hostility and binds hearts to Him" (Alexander Maclaren).

We consider today that darkest of all days in the history of the world-when wicked men with cruel hearts and hands crucified the loving Son of God. But, thanks be to God, it was also the day when bright hope shone forth for sinful humanity, for in His death Christ bore our sins upon the tree, the veil was rent, the old sacrifices were set aside, and the "new and living way" was opened into the "holiest by the blood of Jesus" (Heb. 10:20).

I. Crucified-That We Might Live (vv. 22-28).

The details of and circumstances surrounding the crucifixion are of deep interest to every Christian. We stand with Luther and weep as we see Christ's unspeakable agony, not only of body but of spirit, and we cry as did Luther, "For me, for me!" How can any believer contemplate the cross and withhold self, substance, or service from Christ?

Equally earnest and heart-searching is the message of the cross to the unbeliever. He knows he is a sinner (Rom. 3:23), he knows that "the wages of sin is death" (Rom. 6:23), and he knows that "neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12). Here at the cross he meets that one "who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed (I Pet. 2: 24). There were two malefactors who were crucified with Him, and one railed at Him. The other said, "Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom"; and Jesus said to him, "Today thou shalt be with me in Paradise" (Luke 23:39-43). Unbeliever, who reads these lines, will you not just now take the eternal life which Jesus died to make possible for you?

II. Forsaken-That We Might Be Accepted (vv. 29-36).

The railing, head wagging, and other abuse that men heaped upon Jesus as He hung on the cross, must have been a grevious thing for His tender loving heart to bear. But it was as nothing compared with that hour when, covered with all the sin and curse of the world, He who knew no sin "was made sin for us" (II Cor. 5:21), and God turned away from Him.

We cannot fathom the full meaning of that hour, we dare not attempt to explain it, we can only accept it and thank God that because He did become sin for us we may be "made the righteousness of God in him" (II Cor. 5:21).

III. A Veil Rent-That We Might Enter (vv. 37-39).

The death of Jesus was not the pitiful weakening of a human martyr. Here was the Son of God, crying with a loud voice (v. 37), giving up His spirit to the Father (Luke 27:46), declaring that the work of redemption was "finished."
As a visible indication of that part

-and as a declaration that the old dispensation of law had given place to the dispensation of grace, God tore the temple veil in twain. Only He could have done it. No man could have torn this sixty-foot long, twenty-foot wide, and inch-thick curtain from top to bottom. It had hung in the temple to keep all but the High Priest out of the Holy of Holies, and he entered with fear and trembling but once a year as the representative of the people. Now all this is changed. We have now, "brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil." Therefore, let us draw near with a true heart and full as-surance of faith" (Heb. 10:19-22).

House Dress in Large Sizes. With darts at the waistline and Inside tucks on the shoulders, this dress has an unusually good linetrim and slenderizing. Pleats in the short sleeves make them loose and easy to work in. It buttons down the front, and therefore goes on in a jiffy. Gingham, seersucker, percale and broadcloth are the best materials for this. Trim it with bright ricrac braid.

Strange Facts Movies Catch Fire-Rain

A RAIN of fire, thousands of de-grees in temperature, fell upon the surface of the sun. Sprays of flaming atoms shot up 150,000 miles from the sun's surface. A terrific explosion took place in which part of the sun's atmosphere was lifted 600,000 miles above the sun's surface. On the earth there were clear skies and cloudy skies, sunshine and rain. Even the most sensitive radio waves were not disturbed. Yet one instrument, made by man, recorded this rain of fire.

The spectroheliograph is the instrument invented by scientists which has made possible these amazing photographs of fire-rain. This instrument is essentially a spectroscope with a slit which transmits only one line of the spectrum. A photographic plate is moved across the slit at a rate equal to the sun's apparent rate of passage, the sun's light entering the slit through the object glass or mirror of a telescope. On September 17, 1937, the eye of the solar camera received and recorded celestial fireworks in motion pictures.

These solar pictures were shown for the first time in Philadelphia at the recent annual meeting of the American Philosophical society. They are the work of Dr. Robert R. McMath. The rain of hot fire falling upon the sun, revealed for the first time by improved solar photography, presents the greatest mystery. No one knows why it rains fire on the sun, or where the fire-rain comes from. Yet pictures have been taken of it, falling in great curving spirals. It is as mysterious to modern scientists as rain water was to our primitive ancestors.

to remove signs from farm fences and barns. No city home owner thinks of allowing anyone to tack an advertisement on his garage or fence, yet farm people have their premises covered with tin, paper, and cardboard signs. These do not add to the attractiveness of either the farm, home, or the highway. Our program calls for Prominent Lubbock elimination, so far as possible, of this ever-increasing flood of cheap, unpaid advertising that lines our highways from town to town, and to beautify the approaches to the towns and cities with grass, shrubs, and native trees."

Gable, Loy, Tracy And Barrymore At Palace Theatre

Modern motion picture magic has brought a new kind of aviation film to the screen, one that glorifies the man who "lays a floor in the sky so that future generations can go to bed torium. in safety."

It is "Test Pilot," dedicated to those men who gamble their lives against the airworthiness of a designer's dreams. Opening at the Prevue Sat urday and Sunday and Monday at the Palace Theatre, it impressed the audience with spectacular flying scenes, thrilling power dives and a breathtaking romance.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spared nothing in making their first aviation film in more than two years, a saga of civilian flying. They gave it four stars in Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Spencer Tracy and Lionel Barrymore. They provided authentic and realistic flying sequences which could only have been made at legitimate flying fields. They presented a story, by Lieutenant-Commander Frank Wead, which encompassed the life of a typical test pilot.

The directional-producing team of Victor Fleming and Louis D. Lighton, so successful with "Captains Courageous" was reunited to bring another masterful drama to the screen.

Gable, in the title role is completely the daring aviator. Miss Loy is ideally cast in a characterization which allows her to be at once simple and smart, unsophisticated and brilliant. Spencer Tracy, as a roughneck, kindly, gruff mechanic, "the best in the business," as usual gives a performance approaching perfection. Lionel Barrymore once more demon strates the artistry which has made him a dominant figure in the world of stage and screen for almost thirty

C. V. TERRELL STATES CASE

Austin-C. V. Terrell, chairman of the Texas Railroad Commission, today called upon the people of Texas to support the commission in its battle to continue its regulation of the gas companies of the state.

"This is serious business to every Texan, he said. "If the Lone Star Gas Company succeeds in breaking down the commission's gas utilities division as it apparently aims to do, it will ouise Hodges of Lubbock, played set us back 10 years in our program "The Bridal Chorus" from "Lohen- to secure cheaper gas for the homes and factories of Texas.

"It wasn't until 1932 that the Legis Dowell's "To A Wild Rose" then, as lature provided funds sufficient to give us an efficient gas utilities department. Since then, we have been forced through a maze of legal actions

"Despite the opposition, we have effected an actual saving of $500,000 annually to gas consumers, have is sued orders which would save an additional $15,500,000 if sustained by the courts (these are still in litigation) and have secured cash rebates of

"The Lone Star Gas Company inmuch, or asked too much for the consumers, for now the Lone Star is attempting to destroy the Gas Utilities Division by holding up money it collected from the public of Texas to maintain the division. The gas company never owned that money and never will. It is a fixed charge placed by the Legislature to finance the Gas Utilities Division and is paid by the consumer as insurance to protect himself against being exploited by too high gas rates. In other words, the gas company has taken advantage of a joker in the law, and has put a squeeze" play on us.

"As an out to the commission, they ffered a vicious comprimise.

"If we would have agreed to stop our investigations and quit issuing orders designed to cut gas rates, the Lone Star was willing, its representa- ling several of his farm houses since tive said, to continue to pay the gross recent hails. receipts tax in regular order. This would have resulted in a costly department so hamstrung it wouldn't from a short vacation trip to Galveshave been of any use to the people of ton.

"We never have sold out before. We aren't selling out now. We don't need money that badly.

"But we do want the people of Texas to know what is going on and to ask their support if legislative, or other, action is necessary to control these vast gas companies.

Certainly 570,000-odd domestic consumers are vitally interested in this battle."

Mrs. Roosevelt Talks On Unemployment Aid

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt discusses the growing tendency in industry to discharge workers over fortyfive and suggests several possible solutions to the problem on her question and answer page in the June issue of THE DEMOCRATIC DIGEST, National Committee publication.

"I think the answer to this problem of shortened working years will come in a number of ways," she writes "Old age pensions will take a great number of the very much older people out of the working field. As business increases, I hope very much that it will organize itself so that people with experience will be able to obtain jobs for which they are fitted. Then they will automatically vacate jobs which require the particular attributes of youth-greater speed, greater strength, and greater adaptibility."

Mrs. Roosevelt feels, however, that nobody can say that this problem, brought on by the machine age, is satisfactorily solved as yet.

The question, which was asked by Mrs. T. D. Williams of Charlotte, North Carolina, read: "What can be done about the growing tendency shorten working years for men and women and to discharge workers over forty-five?"

The accomplishments of the Social Security Act have thoroughly justi fied the increased taxes under the act the First Lady holds in answer to a question posed by Mrs. Virginia Silver, Toledo, Ohio.

"I think anyone studying the results which have been accomplished in the various states since the Social Security Act has begun to really function will realize that never before has a program brought us returns so quickly," Mrs. Roosevelt writes.

"From my point of view, these re turns amply justify the increase in taxation. I cannot, of course, give you statistics as yet, but I am sure that you will find this so in your own state as time goes on."

Candidate For Attorney General

Was Justice Mann

Dallas-Former Secretary of State, Gerald C. Mann, candidate for attorney general, holds the unique distinction of being the only man who was ever made a justice of the peace for the sole purpose of performing a marriage ceremony.

It happened while Mann was a student at Harvard Law School. At that time he was earning his way through school by acting as pastor of the Union Congregational Church at Magnolia, Mass., a small town some thirty miles from Cambridge.

When he had held this pastorate a few weeks, two youthful members of his small flock decided to get married. Since Mann was their pastor they wanted him to perform the ceremony. As they discussed wedding plans, Mann recalled that under the law marriages may be solemnized only by an ordained minister or justice of the peace. He was neither. He held a lay minister's license in the Methodist Church, but that wasn't enough.

So a request for his appointment as Mrs. J. D. Henderson was slightly justice of the peace was hurried off

> In due time, the appointment came through. Mr. Mann was now Justice

It had come too slowly, however for the impatient lovers. Unable to wait until the law's slow processes were complete, they had sought another minister.

But it was due to them that the community gained a new justice of the peace-a role which Mann filled whenever called upon to do so during the remainder of time he was in that community.

OTHA WEARIN BEATEN

Iowa Democrats Nominate Guy Gillette for Senate, Despite Efforts of New Dealers to Eliminate Him

Scene near the French-Spanish border where bombing planes, supposedly from Franco's forces, invaded France to attack the railroad that carries supplies from Toulouse to the Loyalists in Barcelona.

SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

Wearin Loses in Iowa

OTHA WEARIN, Iowa representative favored by the Roosevelt administration for the Democratic senatorial nomination, was defeated in the primaries. Running far ahead of him was Senator Guy M. Gillette, who had been marked for elimination because he voted against the court packing bill. Gillette supporters said President Roosevelt maintained neutrality in the contest, but Wearin had received the approval of Harry Hopkins, WPA administrator, and of James Roosevelt, the President's son and secretary. Also, Thomas G. Corcoran, the President's political adviser, was known to have worked for Wearin's cause, or perhaps it should be put, against Gillette.

Otha Wearin

Gillette sought renomination for the senate on a platform of loyalty to President Roosevelt, but said he would retain the right to judge each New Deal proposal on its individual merits if he is re-elected. He was one of the foes of the President's court reform plan, but supported the reorganization bill and other administration measures.

Labor split as usual in this contest. President Green of the A. F. of L. favored the renomination of Gillette on his labor record. The C. I. O. groups, especially in the counties along the Mississippi river, were strong for Wearin.

In the Republican side of the primary Former Senator L. J. Dickinson, uncompromising foe of the New Deal, defeated Representative Lloyd Thurston.

Canton Made a Shambles

TTERLY ignoring emphatic protests by the United States and Great Britain against the bombing of civilians, the Japanese continued their daily raids on the great city of Canton, southern China port, Their squadrons of planes rained death on the city ruthlessly, until it was a veritable shambles. Probably as many as 5,000 persons were killed and the wounded were much more numerous. The attacks were directed mainly at government buildings, railway stations and power plants, the purpose being to destroy Canton's usefulness as a gateway for Chinese war supplies.

In Spain, also, there was no cessation of the air attacks by Franco's forces on loyalist cities and towns. America's condemnation of the bombing of civilians was contained in a statement by Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles which was issued with the approval of President Roosevelt. It asserted that the American public considers such warfare barbarous and appealed for an immediate end of the practice in China and Spain. Britain officially protested against the bombings and strikes. Collective bargaining is leasked the United States to co-operate in the formation of a neutral commission to decide whether the objectives of Spanish rebel air raids on loyalist territory have any military character.

About the same time Secretary of State Hull in a speech at Nashville, Tenn., expressed the hope of the United States for disarmament and the humanizing of war. Summaries of this address were broadcast throughout Europe by radio.

Planes from Spain Raid France

V INE war, planes flew across the bombs near towns about 15 miles number of dead and injured was the government. Electric power lines were blasted and the tracks of the trans-Pyrenees railroad from Toulouse to Barcelona were damaged. The second raid was stopped by an anti-aircraft battery at Ur. The government spoke of the planes as of "unknown nationality," but it was publicly presumed they came from Franco's "Condor Legion" of planes manned by Ger-Premier Edouard Daladier ordered French aviators to begin a systematic patrol of the French border and bring down any foreign planes crossing the Spanish frontier into France. France's military forces along the frontier were immediately rein-

Franco's general staff at Burgos issued a statement that no rebel planes had been in the air near the French border, adding that all their activity had been confined to the south Barcelona parallel.

In Paris it was believed Franco was opposed to the bombing of civilians but could not control the actions of his German and Italian helpers.

Senate Passes Priming Bill

BY A vote of 60 to 10 the senate passed the President's $3,617,-905,000 pump-priming bell and sent it back to the house, after which it went to conference.

Seven Republicans and three Democrats were recorded against the measure. The opponents of the spendinglending program lost every attempt to earmark the funds or impose other restrictions. By very close votes the senate rejected two proposals to forbid political activities by employees in emergency agencies. One of these was offered by Sen. Carl M. Hatch of New Mexico. It would have insulated WPA officials and administrative employees from politics, either in connection with primaries, general elections, or national conventions. It would have prohibited public utterances such as the one recently made by WPA Administrator Harry L. Hopkins indorsing the candidacy of Rep. Otha D. Wearin of Iowa against Sen. Guy M. Gillette. Smart Republican politicians were not sorry this was defeated for it left in their hands a potent weapon for the fall campaign.

Lewis Bans Labor Survey

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT is going to send a commission to England to study the British trade union act. At a press conference he said any suggestions that he had in view the modification of our labor relations law were "cockeyed." But John Lewis was suspicious and wrote to Secretary of Labor Perkins that he would permit no members of the C. I. O. to serve on the

The British trades union act, enacted after the British general strike of 1926, prohibits general galized, but some forms of sympathetic strikes and strikes which inflict undue hardship on the public are banned.

Labor Riot in Moscow

FROM Riga, that rather unreliable source of news concerning Russia, comes the information that there was a bloody riot at the Josef Stalin automobile works in Moscow. Workers barricaded the streets, demolished machinery and set fire to the factory and then fought with troops. The Soviet secret police and the city fire department were called Pyrenees frontier into France out and crushed the revolt with macessive days and scattered chine guns and hand grenades. C. Houston Goudiss, who writes our "WHAT TO EAT AND WHY" series, reports that the Cake Recipe Contest which he recently conducted through the columns of this newspaper was a gratifying success.

A tremendous number of recipes were submitted and the home economists on the staff of his Experimental Kitchen Laboratory in New York city have been busy for days testing and tasting almost every imaginable kind of cake. They report that our town has some very fine cake bakers! They regret that it was impossipes submitted, they will require a little while longer to complete their tests and to arrive at their decision as to the winners of the $25.00 first prize, the five second prizes of $10.00 each, and the ten third prizes of $5.00 each. Prize winners will be reported in these columns in the near future, and as announced at the beginning of the contest, prize winning recipes, together with those receiving honorable mention from the judges, will be printed in a booklet to be distributed nation- and capacity for burning 1,125,790

Ruth guessed he was proud of his reputation for evil.

"They say there is honor among thieves," she said. "You would stand by a friend, wouldn't you?"

"How do you know a friend?" he wanted to know, with a curl of the

"I know mine," she answered.
"What about the sapheads you've flirted with off and on for the past two years? Would you call them friends, when you were making thera think they were ace high with you and they only stacked up as deuces?"

She shook her head, smiling at him faintly. "Don't quote Ruth Chiswick to me. I don't set her up as an example. But I do think I have more sense now than I had then." "Lemme see. How long is it since you ran off with Lou Howard and then jilted him?" "I'm a reformed character," she

"Don't you think kindness might work better sometimes?" Ruth inquired, rather casually.

His crooked smile chilled her. "All these lads tried kindness with you. How far did they get? I wouldn't know that. Some of 'em farther than others, I reckon." He waited to give her a chance to pro-test, but she did not do so. "Some need the whip. You can lash sense into them quicker than you can teach it any other way.'

"That's a confession of failure, Ruth said. "I've noticed it often in horse-breakers. The poorer ones, those not in the front rank, lose patience and get vicious with the colts; but top hands keep their heads and break the animals wisely. From what I've heard about you, I'd think you were a top hand, one who would use his brains with horses-and women too.'

Her words stung him. "I didn't say you had to keep quirting after they learn to answer their master's voice. I make 'em know who is in the saddle."

"Brute force is one way," Ruth agreed, a touch of contempt in her voice. "I suppose it's good enough for those who don't know a better one . . . How far are we going

"You trying to pick on me, fellow?" Norris demanded, his mouth an ugly slit.

"Nothing like that, Morg. Seemed to me this was a good place to roost. Good feed for the horses. Filled with absentees, as you might say. I'll bet outside of some of our crowd there aren't half a dozen folks in the world know about this place. Nobody would find us in a thousand years. No, sir. What's the idea in moving on?"

"Kinda like this place, Kansas, don't you?" the other outlaw asked with silky suavity.

"Looks all right to me," Kansas said stubbornly. He added hastily, reading suspicion in the narrowed eyes of his companion, "But hell! I don't care where we camp."

"Maybe we could agree for you to stay here and for us to go on," suggested Norris significantly.

"What you mean, Morg? 'Course I'll go on if you do."

"You're so fond of me you'd hate to split up," Norris jeered. He lay face down, motionless.
turned to Ruth. "One of these Ruth caught at the sade

The look in the eyes of the killer had been venomous. Could he have discovered in any possible way that Kansas had told Nelly where they would camp?

Norris watched the wretched man. And Ruth watched first one and then

"No, you wouldn't annoy me, Kansaid Norris, low and soft. "You'd be for me every way from the ace, wouldn't you?"

"Yes," Kansas pleaded, his voice parched and dry. "I sure would, Morg."

"You wouldn't want me to stay here where nobody could find us in a thousand years, would you?" grinned the killer.

"Not if you didn't want to stay." "Good old Kansas, faithful as Old Dog Tray," jeered the other.

"You-you got me wrong, Morg," burst out Kansas.

"Maybe so." Norris continued to smile, the mocking grin on his face something dreadful to see. "Well, I'm going to the spring to fix up this scratch on my arm while you unsaddle and picket.

Ruth offered timidly to dress and tie up the wound. She did not want to do it, for there was something

"Yep. Lemme do the talkin." I got my back to that devil and he can't see my lips move. Keep him here long as you can. I'm going back to hurry up yore friends."

Ruth wanted to beg him not to leave her alone with Norris. She would be safer if another man was with them. But his next words stopped her. "Morg must be headin' for Wild Horse basin," the man went on. "I'll have Lee comb that country thorough. I got to light out now. Morg is fixin' to kill me." The man was pallid with fear. His eyes darted toward the spring. Now was the time. "I'll be sayin' adios, Miss." Without touching the stirrup he flung himself into the saddle and lifted the horse to a gallop. Not an expert rider, one of his feet failed to find its stirrup. He clung to the horn to steady himself, his fingers dragging on one of the reins. The pony swerved sharply and the man lost his seat. A shoulder plowed into the ground when he struck. Almost instantly he was on his feet. The eyes in his chalk face were glazed with fear. For a fraction of a second he hesitated, uncertain what to do. He started for the horse Norris had been riding.

Before he had taken two steps a rifle cracked. The body of the running man plunged forward as if it had been flung from a catapult. He

Upon it was stamped the horrid sadistic lust that comes to the habitual killer who has made his kill.

"You . . . you've killed him," Ruth cried, covering her eyes. He laughed, triumphantly. "Surest thing you know. He was aiming to run out on me, to sell me for a peace offering to Chiswick." Callously he pushed the body over with his toe to make sure his victim was lifeless. "Dead as a stuck shote," he pronounced cheerfully. "When yore Uncle Morg cuts loose they don't even squeal.'

His Satanic good humor appalled Ruth. He was immensely pleased with himself. The thing he had done no more distressed him than if he had shot a rattlesnake. The girl looked down at the huddled body which had been quick with life only a moment since, and a sick tremor ran through her. She felt panic rising to her throat-had to shut her mouth tight to keep from

The killer began to laugh. "I told him we might agree for him to stay here and for us to go on. It will be that way. I'll saddle yore bronc and we'll be off."

As Ruth watched him resaddle, she pulled herself out of the hopeless conviction that she was lost. It would never do to give up. In what way could she help herself? There must be something she could do. She held her quirt tight in both hands twisting it, while her thoughts darted here and there. If she could leave a message-

The man's back was toward her as he cinched her mount. She slipped the quirt from her wrist and wrote on the ground with the heavy end of it, making sure he did not see. The leather dragged through door there came another knock. the dust.

"Wild Horse." Abruptly she stopped, flicking the whip idly. He was bringing the horse to her. "Hold this while I get Ginger." He gave her a mocking word of warning. "And see you don't try to make a getaway like he did."

The instant he turned to walk to his own straying horse Ruth's quirt was busy. She added the word "basin" to the message and signed witt the initial "R." There was time for no more.

"All aboard the Honeymoon Express," he called, grinning at her. She played for time. "Are we going to-to leave him like that?"

"Y'betcha!" He added indifferently: "Fellows of his kind don't count with me. I like men with guts and women with jingle."

He moved toward Ruth, to help her mount. Hurriedly she pulled herself to the saddle.

Norris led the way to the rim of the park. He was in villainous good humor, and it expressed itself in a snatch of tuneless song-

"You bet I'll go to Frisco, a-kit-ing, a-kiting."

On the door of Sherm Howard's house someone was knocking impatiently. The big man playing solitaire at the table put down the ten of diamonds and made sure his forty-four was loose in the scabbard. He hoisted himself out of the armchair and waddled to the door.

"Who's there?" he asked. "Me. Mile High. Lemme in, Sherm." The voice held a note of excitement.

Howard shoved back the bolt and threw open the door. The tall, shambling puncher pushed his way into the house.

"Gimme a drink," he said hoarse-

His host closed and bolted the door, walked to a closet, and brought out a bottle and a glass.

"Hell to pay," he said. "What's wrong?" asked Howard, his opaque eyes fixed on the man. "Lee Chiswick bushwhacked us."

"When? Where?" "In Live Oak canyon, right after ve held up the smugglers."

"Spill it." Mile High told all he knew, which was not much. "You don't know whether the other boys got away," Howard said. "Didn't see any of them down? Didn't notice Lou?"

"No, sir. I saw two fellows on one horse. They were coming lickety-split behind me. But I lost track of them later. They didn't show up at the other end of the canyon. Maybe Lee's men got them. I wouldn't know. It sure was every man for himself."

"It seems to have been Mile High for himself," Howard said bitterly. Howard drummed with the tips of his pudgy fingers on the table. "Someone else ought to be in soon with news," he said. "Some of the boys must have got away." "I reckon, but I wouldn't bet none on it," Mile High replied. "It's sure a mess."

"How did Lee find out what the boys meant to do?" Howard demanded, frowning at the cards in front of him. "Did you tell anyone, Mile High?"

"Not a soul. I don't believe any of the boys did. Kansas made a crack down at the corral about us going to Live Oak canyon. I heard Sid blowing him up about it."

"Do you know who heard him?"
"No, I don't."

"Go down and ask Jim Reynolds to come see me. He might know." Mile High uncoiled his long legs and rose. As he turned toward the

"Who's there?" snapped Howard. "Dan Brand," a voice answered. "Anyone with you?"

Howard told Mile High to open the

When Brand walked in, he faced two men with drawn revolvers. The foreman said tranquilly, "Put 'em up boys. I didn't come a-smokin'."

Howard pushed the weapon back into its holster. Mile High hesitated. He had been in a battle recently with Brand on the other side.

"Maybe so," the lank puncher said. "But I can listen just as well with my gun out." Brand said definitely: "I'll not talk to a man with his gun out; that is, not unless it's fightin' talk, with mine out too." "Put up your hogleg, Mile High,"

Howard told his companion. "Don't you see that Dan is here on a peaceable mission?" After the gun had disappeared, Brand made a correction. "Peaceable or not, Sherm, depending on how you take it. I'll give it to you short and sweet. What I'm here to say is that Lee aims to hang yore son Lou to a live oak unless you get Miss Ruth back to the L C muy pronto, without a hair of her head

The fat man stared blankly at the foreman. "Good God, man, what d'you mean? If you are talkin' about the Chiswick girl, I haven't seen her since that day you-all were in town together."

"I didn't suppose they had brought her to town. The scoundrels who took her are holed up in the hills somewhere. We don't know where they are roostin'. Maybe you do. Anyhow, you better find out immediate if you want to see Lou again alive.'

THERE was a time when overweight was indulgently tolerated and even respected. It was believed that width and wisdom went together and that fat people had the best dispositions. The modern point of view, backed by medical science, is that overweight destroys beauty, multiplies the chances of disease and subtracts years from your life.

overstrained. Heart disease and high blood kidney disease. And when fat weight, creeps around the abdominal muscles, it may interfere with normal elimination.

Life May Be Shortened

Furthermore, life insurance companies estimate that the more overweight the body becomes, the slighter the chances for longevity. All the data that have been assembled indicate that as age and weight increase, the death rate rapidly accelerates. Gross overweight may shorten life by as much as ten years.

What Should You Weigh? It is generally held that under the age of thirty, it is advisable to weigh from five to ten pounds more than the average for one's height and age. But after thirty, a weight of ten to twenty pounds below the average is desirable. In fact, leading authorities now agree that it is an excellent plan to endeavor after thirty to maintain the normal weight for one's height at age thirty.

Reducing Methods to Avoid If you have allowed yourself to become overweight, you should and can reduce. But you must go about it in a scientific manner. Do not put your faith in worthless or dangerous methods that either fail to reduce or may cause you to lose your health faster than you lose weight.

Never take any sort of drugs for the purpose of reducing, except under the advice of your physician. Many drugs which are said to speed up bodily activities and burn up fat may injure the heart, produce cataracts of the eyes, and

> Rational Weight Control The one scientific method of maintaining normal weight or getting rid of a surplus is to recog> nize the fundamental fact that all body fat originates as surplus fuel. Thus weight control is chiefly a matter of regulating the diet so that the food intake does not exceed the energy expenditure.

> > Counting Calories

The person who has become markedly overweight as a result of overeating should put himself in the hands of a physician, but the maintenance of normal weight depends largely upon learning to count calories. Many people are puzzled by the word "calorie," which is a term of measurement used to measure both the fuel value of foods and the body's energy needs.

For example, a tablespoon of sugar furnishes 50 calories; a tablespoon of butter, 100 calories; one-fourth of a large head of lettuce only 12 calories.

The energy requirement for a normal adult man engaged in a sedentary occupation is from 2,200 to 2,800 calories daily; work done standing or walking requires up to 3,000 calories daily. A woman requires from 2,000 to 2,500 calories daily, depending upon her activities.

By becoming familiar with the caloric value of foods, it is possible to construct a well-balanced diet, and at the same time to cut down on fuel values so that you consume less energy foods each day than the body requires. This will force the body to burn some of its own fat for fuel and result in a safe, scientific gradual weight reduction.

I shall gladly send readers of this column a chart showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods.

You will find that by eating 500 calories less each day than the body expends, you can reduce your weight a pound a week. And with the chart before you, you can cut out 500 calories without even missing them.

Sample Reducing Menus In planning a reducing program, it is essential to include in each day's diet adequate amounts of the protective foods. To help you plan a balanced diet, a week's sample menus have been included in my Reducing Bulletin. By keeping your weight down, you may have at least ten years longer in which to enjoy life. In becoming master of your lat, you will truly become master of your
