A WEEK AT A TIME

by J. M. RANKIN

GOING TO HURRY
Cotton growers have been hearing news last fall that government payments were going to be rushed to those who co-operated in the soil conservation program of last year. They still hear that the government is going to rush. It seems that the procedure is something like this: In July plans will be carefully made to hurry; in August the proper departments will be advised to hurry; in September hurrying will begin; and by Christmas, 1938, payments for compliance with the 1937 crop will begin.

FOUR OR THREE HURRAYS
Some people will jibe at the candidates who this week will get some mighty important decisions from the voters of Texas. But so far we have found a better way to select officers to carry on the work of our government. We still believe that democracy was right when he said, "democracy may not be the best way, but it is the safest." We are willing to stay with our style of Democracy until we are convinced a better substitute is offered. Most candidates for public office have good reputations, they hadn't, we'd find it out in the primary. Any candidate will of necessity recommend himself—nobody has time to look after that. Only does a candidate make a pest of himself. Of course, if you already like a man or if you fear he will hurt your man, he is a pest already. Political campaigns are inevitable in our democracy. We wouldn't swap them for what they have in Russia or Germany or China or Japan. Also whatever they have in wherever they go outside America. Hurray for democracy and political campaigns.

TELL FORTUNES
No, no, no, please, we mean we can study stars and your character and personality and give you good advice about love and business and so forth. I could tell you that there will be wars and rumors of wars. We could tell you that some southwest city will be blown away next summer. I could put on a smock or a motherboard and wrap a towel around our waist and sit around in a half-lighted room and speak in a deep voice—if we had a bad cold—and we might impress a few people. Even scare them. We will be everlastingly double-buffed if we could ever get much about Rose Dawn's reported—thoroughly denied—prophecy that neighboring city would be swept by July ninth. But some got excited and what a break for Rosie. I read all over the front page of a reputable daily newspaper! But it was news; and it was publicity. We tell fortunes, and here's one: when one is like that, everything will be all right.

FOR YOUNG PEOPLE
END YOUTH CONFERENCE
A following young people returned to their homes in Slaton Sunday having spent a most enjoyable inspirational week attending the 1st Youth Conference of Disciples, held near Big Springs: Virginia and Mary Brasfield, Mae Joplin and Mr. Gilbert Wilcox, Jr. These young people were taken from the First Christian Church of Slaton, and were met at their return by a group of older people of the church.

Mon Nichols visited his parents, and Mrs. G. C. Nichols, at Fort Worth last week end. Mrs. Nichols returned home with him and will spend a few weeks here. They all visited home of Dr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith, Sunday.

FOR THE WEEK:
My father's house are many names.—John 14:1.
I am from the theme of Rev. J. Stevens' last Sunday sermon. Rev. Mr. Stevens will not preach morning or evening hour at the Presbyterian Church, since he is away on Young People's Encampment to Glen in Randall County for a week.

Lubbock County Boys Are Contest Winners

TWO of three high point men in the State Meat Identification contest at the annual short course at Texas A&M college were from Lubbock county. They are Douthitt Grinstead, of Posey community, left; Norman Smith, of the Cooper community, center. Third young man in the picture is Elton Reynolds, from Ft. Bend county. In the competition Grinstead was first; Smith was second and Reynolds was third.

Heavy Rains Fall In Past Week

Frequent rains on the South Plains have not left Slaton and surrounding communities dry. Heavy showers have been reported during the last week. North of the city estimates put the fall last Friday at three inches.

Slow rains last Saturday night and Sunday morning put .90 inches down in the city, similar precipitation in the immediate vicinity, but only light showers southwest of town. No crops are suffering.

Ed Allen Asks For Re-election

Ed D. Allen, county clerk who is running for reelection and whose candidacy is subject to action of the democratic party in primary elections this summer, Saturday made his formal statement.

To the voters of Lubbock county, he said:

Statement Is Made
"In asking that you reelect me as your county clerk, I do so with the realization that I am better qualified by experience in the office to give efficient service.

"My first thought in selecting the personnel of the office was to employ only those who were qualified in the school of experience to perform the duties of the office and at the same time be courteous to the public. I shall endeavor to continue this policy.

"Again thanking you for the honor and opportunity of having served you in the past, and with the desire to further serve you if it be your wishes, I am yours for reelection, Ed D. Allen for county clerk."

Eastern Star Plans Party

There will be an old time party and box supper at the Old Hay Shed on the hill west of town (Club House) at 8:30 p. m., July 29th.

All the girls from 6 to 60 will be there with a good dinner in a box like we had long ago and dressed like we did long ago so that a little hay and fodder went hurt. If you can't find your overalls and gingham come as you are.

The most shy girl with the prettiest box will be given a prize. Of course the prize for the boys will be the buying of the favorite box from the auctioneer. Elaborate prizes will be given for winners of contests and games.

We will be entertained with lively old time games, all to be sponsored by the ladies of the OES.

The public is cordially invited. Be prepared to have an old fashioned good time.

J. N. LANDRETH.

PETTY MAKES BAND.

FORT SILL, Okla.—W. E. Petty, of Slaton, Texas, has been selected as a member of the Citizen's Military Training Camp band, according to Major Ralph C. Smith, 29th Infantry, Camp Commander. Petty will play the bass.

This band, composed of 40 pieces, will play for all parades, stunt nights, and other entertainments at the camp which lasts from July 5 to August 3.

County Clubhouse Is Much Improved

Landscaping And Decorating Done

Due to the insistence of County Commissioner Ben Mansker, the County Commissioner's Court has this year authorized the expenditure of considerable sums of money for the improvement of the County Clubhouse and Park, a place maintained so that all the people of Lubbock County may come to rest and play and enjoy the beauty and conveniences there being developed.

The whole park has been re-landscaped. Many of the old locust trees have been removed and replaced with more suitable varieties or the space has been devoted to bermuda grass which cannot thrive under dense shade.

Lawns have been extended and areas that formerly grew up in unsightly weeds have been sodded and carefully tended so the approaches to the house are most inviting. The driveways within the park have been caliche so as to present a better appearance and be more easily traveled in wet weather.

The building itself has received attention and improvement. A new roof has been put on and the interior has been redecorated. Fresh paint has freshened up walls and ceilings, and caretaker Cavener works daily without and within to make the Clubhouse a place where we can take Slaton visitors without having to make apologies for its appearance.

Marriott Honored At Philco Meet

At the Philco Dealers Convention and Sales School held recently at Lubbock, Chas. F. Marriott was honored because of the fact that he was the oldest dealer in point of service at the convention of some one hundred dealers. Marriott has handled the Philco line in Slaton for over 13 years, and is enthusiastic over the line. He is especially breathless about a new development in radio to be offered by Philco the first of August.

TRAVIS FERGUSON WILL PLAY

Travis Ferguson, son of Rev. W. F. Ferguson, has just returned from Milano, where he has been assisting in a revival meeting by playing the piano. Sunday morning he will contribute to the services at the local Baptist Church by playing and again at the evening services he will give several numbers, Gospel songs in his own arrangement.

CHILDREN LEAVE FOR ENCAMPMENT

Rev. Paul Stephens left Monday morning to attend the Presbyterian Young People's Conference in Ceta Canyon. Accompanying him were Billy Lokey, Wilda Ruth Hanna, Mary Ann Schmidt and Jean Bechtel. They will return Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Woolever, of Sunray, spent last week-end visiting in the homes of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Woolever and Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Custer. Accompanied by Miss Adelle Custer, they left Monday for Carlsbad, Taos, and other points in New Mexico. They are expected back in Slaton the last of this week.

Local Concern Has Rapid Growth

Spring-Air Mattress Popular In The West

Either this new Spring-Air mattress company has something in its widely advertised product, or the local plant has a hustling sort of a manager. Maybe both. Coming into this section almost unheralded a few weeks ago, G. M. Blackwell, local manager, rented a building, moved machinery in, organized his crew for manufacturing the mattresses, then got out on the road.

Up to date he has listed distributors of the Spring-Air line in the Panhandle as follows: J. E. Norris and Co., Paducah; Empire Furniture Company, Plainview; F. C. Harmon, Floydada; Clarendon Furniture Company, Clarendon; Hilliard Furniture, Childress; Wey Furniture, Quanah; E. B. Black, Hereford; Dyer Furniture, Lockney; Blackwell Hardware and Furniture, Friona; Davis-Mason, Levelland; Watson Furniture, Lubbock; Hammons Furniture, Littlefield; O. D. McClintock, Slaton; Home Furniture Company, Anson; Lunn Furniture Co., Olney; Morrison-McKinley Company, Graham; McConnell Furniture Company, Wichita Falls; Owens and Brumley, Burkburnett; and Marr Furniture Company, Ralls.

Blackwell modestly declines any personal credit for the expansion of his line here in the Panhandle. . . . He says it takes little talking to sell the Spring-Air line to distributors as the merits of the goods are so apparent that retailers are glad to be able to offer them to people who want comfort and durability, and luxury even, in sleeping equipment.

City Improvements Are Being Made

Much activity is noted around the City Hall recently. Improvements long needed have been made and additions to our civic conveniences have been made.

A new roof has been finished this week on the City Hall so the city officers won't have to get out under the trees to keep dry when it rains. Fireproof houses have been built over the diesel engines recently installed over the city wells. The ten-block paving project is completely organized and actual work tearing up the streets will begin Monday.

Mayor Hood announced also on Tuesday that plans have been made to install three lights on Ninth Street, which is the state and federal highway. The locations will be on the intersections at Lynn, Garza and Lubbock streets.

CASTLEBERRYS GO EAST AND WEST

Mrs. B. B. Castleberry and son, Harley Glenn, left Wednesday for Stephenville, where they will visit with Mrs. Castleberry's parents. B. B. himself plans to leave for California Saturday, where he will visit his brothers who live at Bakersfield and Fresno. He plans also to make other points of interest on the West Coast.

CHAMPION HOME BEING REMODELED

R. M. Champion is making an extensive addition to his home at 725 South Ninth Street. Two new rooms are being added to the house, after which the entire building will be stuccoed and re-dashed.

ATTENTION BAND STUDENTS.

All band students, beginners and advanced players included, are to meet at the band house at 10:00 o'clock Monday, July 25, with their instruments.

Miss Omega Taylor, bookkeeper for Slaton Motor, has just returned from a vacation trip to Hot Springs and other points in Arkansas.

Vincent Nesbitt and his mother have been visiting his sister, Mrs. L. A. Stahl, in San Angelo. While down that way, Vincent found it convenient to get out to Cristoval, go swimming, assist at a mutton barbecue, and have a good time in general.

EVERYBODY INVITED TO SLATON'S ELECTION PARTY SATURDAY EVE.

HUGE BOARD BEING ERECTED TO SHOW COMPLETE RETURNS

P. O. Official Surveys Sites

Inspector Makes Report On Proposed Locations

A. S. Page, Building Inspector for the Post Office Department, was in Slaton last week for a two-day inspection of proposed quarters for the post office or the next five years. Five sites were proposed, the present building, three on Texas Avenue, and one on Ninth street. Complete surveys were made of all five proposals, and reports and recommendations of the Inspector were forwarded to Washington.

Postmaster Scudder reports that he has received invoice for a new office safe which will add needed room to his storage space, and he hopes the Inspector's report will result in an appropriation of some new fixtures that are badly needed for efficient management of the local postal business.

Kessels To Market.

Mr. and Mrs. Abe Kessel and Mrs. Hennington, of Slaton, and Julian Kessel, of Roswell, will go to market next week; the Slaton people to buy ready-to-wear and men's furnishings for the Slaton store and Julian Kessel to buy a stock for the Variety store in Roswell that was burned out a few weeks ago.

Mr. Kessel reports the store in Roswell was robbed a few nights ago, when prowlers pulled off the boards that made emergency closing of the burned building and took some fifty dollars worth of merchandise.

LUTHER POWERS POST.

Luther Powers Post No. 438 American Legion, met in Regular session Friday, July 15, with Commander J. M. Hannah presiding.

At that time it was decided to install newly elected officers Friday, July 22, and the ceremonies will be held in the County Clubhouse and not in the Legion Hall. Ceremonies will start at 8 o'clock.

A program has been arranged and all ex-service men are cordially invited to attend and bring their families, and after the installation ceremonies, watermelons will be served on the clubhouse lawn.

MISS KNIGHT IS WED TO JUDGE C. SMITH

Miss Elizabeth Knight, daughter of Mrs. A. B. Knight, 2406-A Main St., Lubbock, and Judge C. Smith, Jr., of Lubbock, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, of Slaton, were married Sunday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Lott, with Rev. W. F. Ferguson, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiating with a single ring ceremony.

The bride wore a blue crepe frock with light blue hat and a corsage of gladioli.

Fern and cut flowers were decorations. The couple was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Lott.

Leaving Wednesday for Ruidoso, N. M., by way of Roswell, the couple will be at home in Lubbock at 1809 Main street, after Monday. Return will be by way of Carlsbad.

Mrs. Smith is a junior student at Texas Technological college. Mr. Smith is county farm supervisor.

DONALDS ARE IN NEW MEX.

The Donalds are having a convention and joint vacation in New Mexico. Mrs. Bessie Donald, of this city, with her sons, W. D. of Slaton, Reese of Lubbock, and Walter of Hobbs, are all scattered out in the mountains there. From the type of gear packed, it is deduced that W. D., Slatonite foreman, had designs on the peace and safety of certain fishes known to inhabit the streams. Other members of the party made no announcements of their ultimate aims.

Everybody is invited to spend an evening with the business men of Slaton who are sponsoring an election board Saturday night. The board is being erected on the City Lawn and complete service will be maintained so Slatonites who wish may be as well informed about the election at midnight as anybody else in Texas.

Come out and see and hear. Some of your favorites will win and some will lose, but finding out about it Saturday night can't make any difference in the final count. Half the fun of voting is finding out how the race came out.

H. A. Tait Dies In Michigan

Mr. H. A. Tait, 60, died suddenly at his home in Birmingham, Michigan, July 12, and was buried there July 15. He was at one time trainmaster at Slaton, and served many years in the Santa Fe System at Slaton and Amarillo. He is survived by his wife and two sons, Herbert of Pontiac, Michigan, and Garland of Detroit. Many friends in Slaton will regret his going.

O. D. Kenney Builds On Burned Site

O. D. Kenney has purchased the burned-out hull on the west side of Ninth Street and is restoring it to a modern 40x90-foot store building, which will house his tire and accessory business after it is finished. Kenney hopes to get into his new business home by August twentieth.

CARTERS HOME FROM VACATION

Nick Carter, manager of Sherrod Bros. and Carter Hardware, with his family, has just returned from a two-weeks vacation. On the way home, Nick dropped by San Angelo so Mrs. Carter could visit relatives in that city, and was inadvertently drawn into a golf tournament that happened to be in progress there. He did not win any first places, but was, in the true spirit of sportsmanship, content with the pleasure of the game and the competition.

MERCY HOSPITAL REPORTER

Mrs. T. O. Petty was released Tuesday, after surgery ten days ago.

Mrs. W. T. Norwood, of Wilson, is a surgery patient since the fourteenth. Guy Wesley Strickland submitted to surgery July 16.

Mrs. Dave Houston was released Monday.

Buster Shumard was released the fourteenth after several weeks in the hospital due to a ruptured appendix.

Mrs. Albert Pinkert, Route 1, Slaton, was a patient July 15.

Joe Stone, 17, of Lubbock was a patient the 17th.

Mrs. E. R. Legg and Miss Gertrude, with general roustabouts M. G. Davis and Wallace Cooper, returned from a trip to Trenton, Texas and Hot Springs and Little Rock, Arkansas, where they have been visiting relatives for the past two weeks.

President Boosts Favorites in Kentucky, Oklahoma and Elsewhere in His Trip to the West Coast

Edward W. Pickard SUMMARIZES THE WORLD'S WEEK

President on Tour

MARIETTA, Ohio, was the first stop in President Roosevelt's transcontinental tour. There he dedicated a memorial to "the start westward of the nation," in his address paying tribute to the pioneers and, rather incidentally, to Senator Robert J. Bulkley, who seeks re-nomination and is opposed by George White.

With this off his mind, the President assumed his other role of head of the Democratic party and jumped into the primary campaign with both feet. His avowed purpose was to further the election of members of congress, especially senators, whom he terms liberals.

Crossing from Ohio into Kentucky, where Senator Barkley, staunch New Deal supporter, is engaged in a hot fight with Gov. A. B. Chandler for his senate seat, Mr. Roosevelt found it advisable not to utterly squelch the ambition of "Happy" as the governor is known.

The special train raced through Tennessee in the night without a stop and this was taken as inferential disapproval of Senator George Berry, whose marble claims caused the TVA so much trouble.

Oklahoma City came next, and there Mr. Roosevelt told an enormous crowd what a help Senator Elmer Thomas had been to him and how much the senator had done for the state. His commendation of Thomas was called lukewarm, however, and much of his speech was devoted to criticizing the senator's rivals, Representative Gomer Smith and Gov. E. W. Marland.

McAlester and Wister heard the President from the back platform, and then at Booneville, Ark., he found time to speak kind words about Senator Hattie Caraway, who seeks another term.

The Chief Executive spent the week-end resting at the ranch of his son Elliot 17 miles from Fort Worth, Texas. Then his special rolled northward to Amarillo, where he stopped long enough to make an auto trip about the city.

During a brief stop at Wichita Falls, Texas, the President announced that he was appointing Gov. James V. Allred to a vacancy in the federal court for the southern district of Texas. This was a complete surprise to Senators Tom Connally and Morris Sheppard.

TVA Inquiry Opens

INVESTIGATION of the activities of the TVA by a congressional joint committee was opened in Knoxville, Tenn., with Chairman Vic Donahey presiding.

gram, and Donahey said these would continue "until we run out of money."

It was indicated that former Chairman A. E. Morgan would be the first witness called. He was granted permission to go into TVA files to prepare his testimony.

Shortly before the inquiry began, Dr. Morgan filed a mandamus suit in a Knoxville court asking that he be reinstated as member and chairman of the TVA and be paid back salary. He never has recognized the President's right to remove him from the chairmanship.

Hughes Flies the Atlantic

HOWARD HUGHES, wealthy young sportsman and aviator, with four companions made successfully the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris since Lindbergh's epochal feat in 1927. His time was 16 hours and 38 minutes, less than half the time made by Lindbergh.

The big plane, named "New York World's Fair 1939," appeared over Le Bourget field long before it was expected by Ambassador Bullitt and a big crowd were waiting to greet the daring aviators. As the twin-motored machine rolled to a stop, Bullitt ran forward, opened the door and shouted: "Congratulations; did you have a good trip?"

Hughes and his fellow adventurers, Ed Lund, Harry Connor, T. L. Thurlow and Richard Stoddart, weary and cramped, climbed out of the cockpit and were eagerly taken in hand by the enthusiastic French.

After resting and refueling their plane, the fliers took off on the second leg of their projected flight around the world, reaching Moscow in less than eight hours. Their hope was to beat the record made in 1933 by Wiley Post.

Hughes' big plane, specially rebuilt and equipped with a multitude of gadgets, carried a gross weight of 25,000 pounds. It had three radios and was in communication with the ground practically all the time. The only worry the fliers had was the danger of running out of fuel before Paris was reached.

Justice Cardozo Dies

BENJAMIN N. CARDOZO, associate justice of the United States Supreme court, died at Port Chester, N. Y., of a chronic heart ailment that had kept him from work on the bench since last December. He was sixty-eight years old. Descended from Spanish Jews who came to America in 1750, he was born in New York city and educated at Columbia university. He was appointed to the Supreme court by President Hoover in 1932 and lined up with the liberal minority. His scholarship and hard work won the highest respect. Chief Justice Hughes, informed of Cardozo's death in Italy said: "It is an irreparable loss to the court and the nation. He was a jurist of the highest rank and noble spirit."

Probably President Roosevelt will not appoint Cardozo's successor before fall, for the court is in recess until October. But speculation as to his choice began immediately. The name most frequently heard in the discussions in Washington was that of Sen. Robert Wagner of New York, one of the President's chief lieutenants in the field of social legislation. Other New Yorkers mentioned are Ferdinand Pecora and Samuel Rosenman, state Supreme court justices, and Solicitor General Robert H. Jackson. The Far West is not now represented on the court.

Men of the Mounted

by Captain G. Elliott-Nightingale Copyright, WNU

A GORILLA VS. A HALF-PINT MOUNTIE

A MORE contemptible black-guard never lived than "Bully" R. He was everything despicable and stood suspected of just about every crime in the Dominion calendar from murdering Indians on hinterland trails, to kicking a child out of his path. He stood about six foot even, and weighed about 250 pounds, all of it muscle, sinew, and unadulterated meanness. He was a big, strong, giant of a man, and he knew it, and he was always picking on someone half his size. He was a handsome devil, to boot, although he wasn't quite so handsome when, one fine morning in northern Ontario, he attacked the writer of this epistle and had an ax-handle wrapped around his head for his trouble.

Of all his tremendous stock of mean tricks and criminal pastimes, however, there were two that caused even the most hardened and capable wilderness men to gasp and keep out of "Bully" R's clutches. One of his pastimes was that of honing his two-pound hand-ax until it had an edge like a razor. Then he would throw it at the first dog that chanced to come within forty or fifty feet. Moreover, "Bully" R. seldom missed. With an axe, he was a marksman, and as his favorite two-pounder whizzed through the air, witnesses knew they were looking at a dead dog.

Another of his most despicable tricks was to pick a quarrel with some fire ranger, surveyor, timber-cruiser or lumberjack, or prospector who might stand about five foot eight or ten and weigh about one hundred and fifty or sixty pounds. He might start an argument over anything at all, and then, instead of using his fists and fighting like a man, he would close in on his victim, grab him by the collar and also by the belt, or seat of the pants, and then lift the struggling victim up at arm's length over his head. This was quite easy work for "Bully" R. for he had the build and strength of a grizzly bear.

At any rate, having raised his man above his head, he would let out a bellow and begin moving rapidly toward the nearest big tree, probably a hemlock with a diameter of about three feet. Then, when but a few feet away he would throw his victim at the tree, and he crippled a few men before others were wise enough to keep out of his clutches by any means possible. This writer used a nice maple ax-handle, and escaped injury, but a few others were not so fortunate. At any rate, "Bully" R. went on for some considerable time and he was just about due for assassination either by Indian or white, when he conceived the idea of heading to the Canadian Northwest to work during the harvest season there. Special harvester's excursions were running about every ten days or so, and finally "Bully" R. left the train at a flag-station in a district near Saskatoon, in Saskatchewan.

A dozen other harvesters alighted at this point, too, and they pitched camp alongside the railroad track, planning to camp until they hired out, which might be next day. At any rate, the first thing that caught "Bully" R's attention was a rather fine looking husky dog, evidently a sled dog. Not having his two-pound ax handy, "Bully" called and coaxed the more or less friendly dog to come to him, and just as the unsuspecting animal got close, "Bully's" right foot shot out like a piston rod and the dog went sailing through the air, to fall dead ten or twelve feet away. Just at that particular moment a Man of the Mounted appeared, seemingly from nowhere, but in time to witness "Bully's" fatal footwork. Not more than five foot six, and weighing less than 150 pounds, the Man of the Mounted walked right up to "Bully" R. and arrested him for killing a dog worth $50, and also cruelty to an animal that was absolutely friendly and had not attacked. "Bully" threw his shoulders back, took a deep breath, and in a flash he had grabbed the Man of the Mounted and was raising his load up high. In mid-air, the Man of the Mounted broke loose and came down astraddle the "Bully's" shoulders and back. Then something happened. The Mountie's hands were seen to be doing something to a spot somewhere behind "Bully's" left ear, and all of a sudden "Bully" R. went down in a limp heap. Before he could recover, the man of the Mounted had the handcuffs on him, and the "Bully" for the first time in his life was a prisoner, and helpless. Not a blow had been struck. Moreover, the Man of the Mounted didn't even muss his hair or lose his hat. It all happened just like that. Later, it was learned that the lightly built Man of the Mounted knew just about all there was to know about jujitsu. Pressure on certain nerves in "Bully" R's gorilla-like neck had caused him to crumple. At any rate, quite a few of "Bully's" old crimes were dug up and the Canadians gave him several years to think things over.

Brute strength versus science. And science won hands down.

SEEN and HEARD around the NATIONAL CAPITAL By Carter Field

FAMOUS WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENT

WASHINGTON. — Cordell Hull, President Roosevelt's secretary of state, stands in the position of being the most acceptable compromise candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, assuming there is any compromise candidate.

This is a strange bit of politics. It is an entirely new twist on the political history of the United States. For the fact stands out that it has been held, up until now, an unbreakable political law that whoever monkeys with the tariff structure courts trouble.

One does not have to go way back for examples. Most of Herbert Hoover's troubles dated from the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill, rushed through as the second big piece of legislation in his administration. As so often happens to a President, he was "shown up" in the fight around that bill. He had announced from Miami Beach, just before his inauguration, that he would permit only certain small revisions, to cover changes, in the then tariff law. Actually congress rode over him, passing a bill which was sharply up all the way down the line.

Democratic spokesmen made much of this. They played hard the argument that because of this bill, with its high rates, various foreign countries shut out American products. In fact, time and again Democratic spokesmen have insisted that the world depression that began in 1929 grew out of the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill.

The last tariff bill before that was the Fordney-McCumber bill. It was passed in the early days of the Harding administration. It brought nothing but grief to all who had to do with it. Senator Porter J. McCumber was beaten in the next election, and Representative Joseph W. Fordney never figured again.

War Saved Wilson

The one before that was the Underwood-Simmons bill, at the outset of Woodrow Wilson's administration. It is generally admitted by observers that this bill would have defeated Wilson for re-election had it not been for the outbreak of war in Europe so speedily after its passage, resulting in such demand for American goods, especially food and war supplies, that no tariff law would have made any difference. Examination of business conditions during the months after the passage of the act and before the outbreak of the war, however, shows very clearly that this tariff changing would have spelled disaster, first economically and then politically, had not the war changed the picture.

Yet Cordell Hull has been tinkering with the tariff for five years now, and he is the one man whose name can be mentioned in any gathering of Democrats without provoking violent denunciations. He is loved and admired by every one of the conservative southern senators, most of whom, if not all, Roosevelt would like to see retired to private life.

He has thrown man after man out of public office, starting off with Ray Moley and including George Peek. He has been ruthless when opposed, yet there is no important opposition to him. Constantly his policies are peppered by representatives or senators whose districts and states are hurt by his tariff changes, effected through his reciprocal trade treaties.

Hull's Strength

The extraordinary strength of Cordell Hull among such widely opposed and bitterly hating groups of the Democratic party is difficult to explain. His successful tinkering with the tariff without disaster to his political standing is already a matter of wonder among observers and historians. No one ever did it before.

Perhaps the real explanation lies in the old friendship between Hull and the President. Hull was an outstanding tariff expert, so bitter against high schedules that he was regarded as a free trading fanatic, in the eight years that Roosevelt spent in Washington as assistant secretary of the navy during the Wilson administration. The President is noted for his loyalty to old friends. Despite what critics may say of him, he changes very little. If he disliked a man 10 years ago that man is still in disfavor. If he liked a man 10 years ago, and especially 20 years ago, that man would have to do something really dreadful, in the Roosevelt eyes, to get relegated to outer darkness today.

Witness his secretariat! Marvin McIntyre and Steve Early became his fast friends in the years between 1913 and 1917, when they were newspaper men covering the navy department.

Cordell Hull captured Roosevelt's imagination back in those same years. Roosevelt watched his rise later with interest and pleasure. Hull came to the senate. Naturally, being a tariff expert, he did some of the most effective pounding on Hoover's tariff bill while Roosevelt was governor of New York. Roosevelt knew the feeling was reciprocated. He knew, long before the convention of 1932, that Hull was ardently for his nomination, and was pulling Tennessee along with him.

Banked on Hull

But it came as a tremendous surprise to Jim Farley, Arthur Mullen, the late Thomas Walsh, senator from Montana, and other Roosevelt leaders when they got the last word from Hyde Park just before the convention opened. That word, in effect, was this: If any emergency should arise at the convention, which required action before Roosevelt himself could be consulted, the judgment of Cordell Hull should be followed!

Which may explain—what some people have never understood—why Ray Moley and George Peek and certain other important gentry hit such a stone wall when they attempted to do battle with the secretary of state.

Roosevelt doesn't change very easily. Meanwhile, Hull has had little to do with most of the pullings and haulings within the New Deal. It is taken for granted that he approves what the administration does on matters outside his own province. That is taken for granted by New Dealers. Hull's conservative friends on Capitol Hill take it for granted that he does not!

In one way Hull has been particularly fortunate. With this tariff specialty so developed, and so generally recognized, plus the additional fact that there is never a week in which he is not facing a stiff fight with foreign interests over some phase of some new treaty under negotiation, no one tries to drag him into any other controversies.

Chandler Irked

Southern employers of labor, from big magnates down to share croppers, are going to find a changed situation when it comes to employing workers from now on, as a result of the big increase for the southern states just put into effect by Harry L. Hopkins' Works Progress administration.

It may be fly-specking, critics admit, but Governor Albert B. Chandler's rage at the method of "breaking" the story is something to talk about. It seems that the WPA gave Senator Alben W. Barkley, who is fighting Governor Chandler for re-nomination, a "scoop" on the story. So Senator Barkley announced the pay raise for "Kentucky WPA workers" for Sunday morning's newspapers, while the general story, applying to the whole South, was given out for publication in Monday morning's newspapers.

The natural result, in all the Kentucky papers, was that the Kentucky story was big local news on Sunday morning, and the general raise of WPA rates all over the South was a comparatively unimportant general news story the next day. So that Barkley naturally got all the credit for the boost for Kentucky workers.

But the effects of this raise are going to be interesting. An immediate effect of the increase in WPA wages in the 13 southern states is to establish hourly rates for common labor higher in all counties with more than 25,000 population than the statutory minimum of 25 cents prescribed by the wages and hours regulation law.

No Politics in It

Denying there was any politics in the raises, Deputy WPA Administrator Aubrey Williams insisted the adjustments were made to bring levels more nearly into line with schedules of other states.

The new monthly wages, on WPA's 140-hour basis, are equivalent to hourly rates of 25.7 cents in counties with 25,000 to 50,000 population, to 27.1 cents an hour in counties from 50,000 to 100,000 population, and 28.5 cents an hour in counties of more than 100,000 population. Heretofore WPA's wages reached an hourly rate of 25 cents only in those counties which had a population of more than 100,000. New hourly rates in rural areas in the South still fall short of 25 cents, figuring 18.5 cents an hour in counties under 5,000 and 21.4 cents an hour in counties from 5,000 to 25,000, as compared with 15 cents and 17.1 cents an hour in the past.

Differentials between North and South—the bone of contention in the wages and hours regulation fight on Capitol Hill—are narrowed for unskilled labor by the boost in the South to a point where the highest rate in the South converges with the lowest rate in the North at 28.5 cents an hour. The increases in the South have reduced the spread in rates between the North and the South from 14.2 cents an hour to 16.7 cents an hour in counties with more than 100,000 population; from 13.6 cents to 10 cents an hour in counties from 50,000 to 100,000 population; from 13.5 cents to 8.5 cents an hour in counties from 25,000 to 50,000 population; from 14.3 cents to 10 cents an hour in counties from 5,000 to 25,000 population, and from 13.5 cents to 10 cents in counties having less than 5,000 population.

Second Race
FOR

Tax Assessor-Collector LUBBOCK COUNTY

A. G. Hunt made his first political campaign two years ago when he asked for this same office and polled over 42% of the total votes cast, at which time he announced his intention of making the race again at this time.

As you know, his only opponent two years ago, who was successful in the race, resigned, and due to this fact, Mr. Hunt will especially appreciate your consideration and support for this office to which almost half of you favored his election two years ago.

A. G. Hunt's friends feel that his thirty years of actual office experience fully qualify him to handle efficiently the affairs of this important office, and you may be assured that he will feel obligated to serve you for a full two-year term if elected.

Since this is Mr. Hunt's second race, it is perhaps his LAST OPPORTUNITY to be honored with a first term to this office, as he has no desire to continue offering himself as a candidate not favored by a majority of voters.

If A. G. Hunt is elected, the people of Slaton and surrounding territory may be assured of satisfactory representation in the office personnel and conveniently available service.

BOARD of CITY DEVELOPMENT and CHAMBER of COMMERCE NEWS

A. J. PAYNE, SECRETARY

Fred H. Schmidt, President of the 4th of July celebration called a special meeting of all the committee chairmen of that organization to have a final report of all business done, to hear the Sec.-Treas. A. J. Payne's financial report and to transact any other business that might come before the meeting.

Sec.-Treas. Payne presented his financial report, which was approved, and on motion it was ordered that the cash balance remaining in the bank be transferred to the B. C. D. account in a special account for the 4th of July celebrations or other similar celebration.

Motion was then made that this organization be and is hereby disbanded, and this motion was carried.

President Schmidt called a special meeting of the Industry Committee for Thursday night at 8 o'clock at the B. C. D. office to talk over the proposition of the Veterans Hospital to be located somewhere in Texas, and from this meeting, a committee will be appointed to go to Lubbock the 27th, to meet C. H. Stratton, Engineer from Washington, D. C.

We have a letter from Fort Worth Chamber of Commerce in which they are to open the Casa Manana July 29. And asking for information as to any honors that we have given, or one who has been in local festivities. We have one in mind whose name we shall send in, as they wish to honor her.

Directors meeting next Tuesday night, July 26.

COOLING PLANT SIZE FIGURED

Patrons Helped to Choose Systems
Intelligently for Service

Don't close your eyes to the facts. Evaporative coolers will do the job for you and that is what you are interested in. West Texas firms are making every effort to give you information that will assist you to choose intelligently for your needs. Here are some of the things prospective buyers will probably want to know.

Question—What does an evaporative cooler consist of?

Answer—Casing, pads, water connection, drain, sheet metal, blower, bearings, motor, etc.

Q.—How does an evaporative cooler operate?

A.—Dry warm air is pulled in by blower through water soaked pads. The air is filtered and drops in temperature.

Q.—How do I know what size equipment I need?

A.—Engineers connected with firms selling this equipment can answer this question for you when they know the size of your home. Ordinarily a complete air change is required every three minutes.

Q.—What will an evaporative cooler do for me?

A.—If properly installed it will provide comfort, air filtering and ventilation as well as eliminate odors. Is beneficial for certain types of respiratory diseases as hay fever and asthma.

"As for the type of installation desired that must be decided according to the layout of the home. The best location for the unit must be determined. You should know how best to route the air and be perfectly sure that you understand the installation method. There are various types of installation and it isn't necessary to have an unsightly or sloppy one. It will pay you in the long run to have a sturdy, neat and practical installation that will not be an "eye-sore" to an otherwise attractive home.

McCraw Speaks On Poll Tax Issue

Quitman.—Warning Texans that "if we go to sleep on our rights, we may wake up some day and find ourselves ruled by a despot," Attorney General William McCraw digressed from a political to a patriotic theme when he spoke here this week.

"In this democratic government," McCraw said, "voting is our most precious privilege and our most important duty. It is the only bulwark between us and the bondage of tyrants such as wield the power of life and death over the people of Germany, Italy and Russia."

McCraw described the poll tax as the "passport to sovereignty" in Texas and added that "those who do not pay it, unless entitled to exemption are disfranchised, shorn of that priceless privilege of voting, and have no more legal voice in selecting their governing officials than a convict or an adjudged lunatic. And they have deprived the school children of Texas of the $1 of the poll tax which the law gives to education."

The attorney general carried his campaign for governor to Central West Texas and North Texas this week, then went into East Texas for another hard week of campaigning.

The "horseless-carriage" was modern. The same may be said of many ranges in use today. It is surprising how many families—so particular about every detail of their home—completely overlook their ugly, old-fashioned and inefficient kitchens.

This is unforgivable. Any woman can now afford to glorify her kitchen with a new Westinghouse Electric Range—the key to a more attractive, modern kitchen. It takes mighty little money to put your kitchen ahead in style and convenience with a Westinghouse Range. Be modern—cook electrically!

The marshal put him through an exhaustive quiz. As Gray had already suspected, Curly and one or two others were rustlers but not bandits. Reynolds was not really one of the gang, but he assisted them with horses. Young Howard contradicted himself frequently, twisted this way and that, made futile explanations of his lies. But before his inquisitor had finished with him, the facts were clear.

Gray nodded to Frank. "That's all," he said.

Young Chiswick took his prisoner away.

The officer stood before the table absorbed in thought. A light, hurried step sounded in the passage. Gray looked up, to see Ruth at his elbow.

"You're not going to Tail Holt—alone!" she broke out.

He frowned at her, slowly dragging back his thoughts to meet the interruption. "Yes. Why not?"

"Father told me so. You can't do that. Don't you see you can't? Sperm Howard knows it was you who told Father about the Live Oak expedition. He must know, since he's not a fool. You won't last there an hour."

It surprised Gray that he did not resent her impulsive entrance into his affairs. Indeed, the distress of the girl sent a warm glow through him.

"Sperm Howard may be a bad man," he told her quietly. "But I'm leaving a hostage here at the ranch. He can't hurt me if he thinks yore father would retaliate on his son."

"I don't know anything about that!" she cried wildly. "Maybe some of his men would shoot you without waiting to ask him. Can't you see how dangerous it is?"

"Most things aren't dangerous if you walk straight up to them," he explained. "It's when you run away from them they get you."

"Father will let you have some of his men as a guard," she insisted.

"That will be fine. By and by I'll need them, but not yet."

"You haven't any right to throw your life away. Haven't you a mother—or sisters?"

"No. I'm a lone wolf."

"There must be a woman somewhere who—cares."

He flung away discretion and caught her in his arms. "I wonder about that," he said, and looked into her deep, lustrous eyes.

They told him, plainer far than words, that she was sealed to him for all time.

He kissed her lips, pushed her away abruptly, and strode out of the room.

CHAPTER XII

"Now why did I do that?" Gray asked himself reproachfully as he rode to town. "Here I've watched my step all these years so as not to get tied up with a girl, and then I go to acting like a kid because she is pretty as a painted wagon and is made to be loved. I don't aim to get married. I'm a lone wolf and I figure on traveling alone. So there won't be any more nonsense from you, Jeff Gray."

It was all very well to decide this, but it was quite another thing to banish Ruth from his mind.

As he drew nearer Tail Holt, he brought his attention back strictly to the business of the hour. While he was in the balliwick of the enemy there must not be any dreaming. To survive he would have to keep his senses focused upon the immediate present.

It was growing dark, but there was still too much light for his purpose. He drew aside from the road and guided his horse through the mesquite and the prickly pears until he came to a more open space where Spanish bayonets were scattered. Here he rested until stars began to prick through the sky roof.

He remounted, but did not return to the road. Winding in and out among the brush, he came to a barbed-wire fence and followed it to a gate. Through this he passed into a large pasture. At the far side of this he stopped and looked down upon the lights of the town. He unsaddled, then picketed the horse. The saddle he hid in a clump of mesquite.

His approach to the village brought him to the rear of Ma Presnall's boarding-house. The chances were that the man he wanted to speak with first was staying there, but it was important to make sure.

For several minutes he watched the house. There were lights in two of the bedroom windows upstairs.

He slipped through the back door into a hall. From the kitchen he heard the clatter of dishes. The Mexican funky was washing those that had been used for supper. Jeff took the narrow stairway to the second story. He placed his feet on the treads softly, to make as little noise as possible. On the landing he waited a moment listening for sounds to guide him. Two of the rooms had someone in them probably, since it was not usual to leave without blowing out the lamp.

Out of one of the rooms a man walked. There was no light in the hall. The man walked toward the front stairs. Jeff called a question after him.

"Say, which is Curly's room?" The lodger stopped. "The one on yore right," he said.

"Obliged," Gray told him, and watched the other go downstairs. Again the officer listened. There was no murmur of voices inside the room indicated. He opened the door, walked in, and pushed the bolt home.

Curly was in bed reading by the light of a lamp beside him. He looked up, marking with a finger the place in the book where he had been interrupted. His eyes gleamed.

"Mr. Jeff Gray made a short visit to Tail Holt Tuesday," he said in the singsong voice of an uneducated man reading from a newspaper.

"The boys were certainly glad to see him and gave him a warm welcome. The obsequies will be at Boot Hill this afternoon."

"Which one of the boys are you interring?" Gray asked.

"I wouldn't know who else beside you," Curly answered. "You're a cool customer, Jeff. Don't you know this town is mighty unhealthy for you?"

"It doesn't seem to have been healthy for you either, Curly. How's yore wound getting along?"

"Fine and dandy. Morg was in some hurry when he handed me this pill, and didn't plant it where he wanted."

"He sent one to my address, too, a few days earlier, but I wasn't where he mailed it."

"How come you to let the rattlesnake get away when you had him under yore heel?" Curly asked.

Gray told him the circumstances. The wounded man meditated over the strange ways of women.

"Funny the way they act," he said. "All day she had been scared to death of the hell-hound, don't you reckon? Yet she butts in and prevents you from killing him."

"Yes. She couldn't stand any more bloodshed."

"He didn't harm her any, did he?"

"No." Gray asked a question. "Know where Norris is, Curly?"

The black-haired man shook his head. "If I knew I'd tell you. Maybe he's clear out the country. While he was in town he held up Sperm Howard and took five hundred dollars from him."

"That distresses me," Jeff said dryly.

Curly grinned. "I thought it might. The scalawag was just lighting out when we bumped into him."

"Sperm done any talking about me?" Gray asked casually.

The man in the bed looked at him. "You're sure a cool cuss. Yes, he's talked considerable, and that's all I aim to tell you—except that Tail Holt is a good place for you to be an absentee from." The face of Curly had taken on a stiff harshness.

"I'm no sidekick of yours, fellow. I'll throw in with you or anyone else to stomp out that villain Morg Norris. Then I'm through. Understand? I've got no information for you—or any other government man. You came here to us with a lie, claiming to be Clint Duke. That washes you up with me."

"How do you know I'm not Clint Duke?" the officer queried.

"Because Clint Duke—"

Abruptly Connor broke off what he had started to say. He remembered that he was talking to a man said to be a deputy United States marshal.

"Don't get excited, Curly. You wouldn't want to start a fever!"

I'm a government man, as you say, I didn't come here to get you."

"There's nothing you can get me for," Curly answered hardily. "What you came to see me for was to get me to throw down my friends. Nothing doing. I'll tell you another thing. Some of the boys usually drop in during the evening. Better not let them find you here."

"That's good medicine," Gray said, and reached for his hat. "Only you're wrong about why I came. I thought there was a chance you might tell me where Morgan Norris is hiding, if he hasn't slipped across the border yet. I had another reason too. Sperm Howard's day is over. Don't let him draw you into any of his schemes deeper than you are now. He's coming to the end of the trail."

Footsteps sounded in the hall. Someone tried the door-handle and found the door bolted.

Curly drew a long blue-nosed revolver from beneath his pillow. He looked at Gray. The narrowed eyes of the detective were like half-scabbed steel. In them shone a cold, fierce wariness. His lithe body was crouched, the tense muscles catlike.

"Don't start anything," Curly warned, a rasp in his low command. "Better tell yore friends that," Gray said, almost in a murmur, his gaze fixed on the door.

A fist thumped on a panel. "Do we get in—or don't we?" a cheerful voice demanded. "What's the idea of bolting us out, unless—?"

Through the door came a jovial chuckle.

"Who's with you, Mile High?" Curly asked.

"Sperm Howard. Let us in, fellow, and give us a knockdown to her."

"Might as well let them in," Gray said quietly.

"All right, but don't you go reaching for yore gun. I'll be watching you every minute."

Gray trod softly to the door and drew back the bolt, then stepped across to a far corner.

"Come in," Curly said.

Howard waddled in, Mile High at his heels. They stared blankly at Gray. The fingers of Mile High's right hand closed spasmodically, but his arm did not move toward the weapon at his side. It was not time for that yet. Gray had not drawn a gun.

"Keep yore shirts on, boys," Curly snapped. "I don't aim for you to have any Fourth of July in here." One of his hands was under the sheet.

The opaque eyes of Howard shifted to the man in the bed. "What does this mean, Curly? You throwing in with this spy?"

"No, Sperm. He says he drapped in to ask me where is Morg. And don't make any more cracks like that. There's dynamite in them. It's liable to go off and blow someone up. It might be you," Curly spoke softly, but his mouth was a thin straight line not reassuring.

"Don't get on the prod, Curly," answered Howard crustily. "When I find you locked in a room with this fellow who is here trying to make us trouble, I'm entitled to ask questions."

"Sure, but ask 'em gentle, Sperm."

The lank cowpuncher flung out abrupt inquiries. "When did this bird come to town, Curly? What's he doing here? I'll say he can't get away with any such shenanigan. He tipped off Lee Chiswick about the Live Oak business, and he can't tell me anything different."

"Blame yoreself and Sperm and Morg for that, Mile High," said Curly. "You rode out asking for trouble."

The blank eyes of Howard rested on the marshal. "Nothing to that, Curly. The boys were attacked by these smugglers while riding peacefully through the canyon. I don't know whether Lee Chiswick incited that or not, but he was right there to cut off the retreat of our friends. Looks to me like he was in with the greasers to fix up the ambush. This fellow Gray too. We don't know a thing about him even now. He has lied about himself and abused our kindness from the start. But we're not looking for trouble. Come on, Mile High. We'll go where we are welcome. I'm disappointed in Curly."

His manner of reproachful resignation annoyed the wounded man. "Don't pull that line, Sperm. You knew all along where I stood about these holdups. I stayed out of them, and I'm still doing that. I'm not throwin' in with this fellow here, whoever he is, but I'm not going to let Uncle Sam jump me for what I didn't do. You nor nobody else can pass the buck to me."

"There's no buck to pass, Curly, and if there was you ought to know me better than that," Howard said, shaking his head sadly, a picture of a good man misunderstood. "Let's go, Mile High."

He reached for the doorknob.

"One moment, Howard," interposed the crook-nosed man. "Get this right. I'm here on a little visit, and yore son Lou is at the L C on one. Think that over carefully."

The fat hand of Sperm Howard made a gesture repudiating any lawless intent. "I'm not lookin' for trouble," he said again mildly.

But for an instant, before he vanished from sight, the curtain lifted in front of the blank eyes, to show a venomous glare behind which the lust of murder lay crouched.

Gray laughed mockingly. "Too bad to misjudge such a fine upstanding citizen."

Curly did not laugh. "Fellow, you're in a tight," he said acridly. "Don't let him fool you."

"He's not foolin' me a minute," the officer replied. "Mr. Howard means to blast me soon as it is safe."

Gray said good-by to Curly and walked out of the room. He tipped down the same back stairway up which he had come a short time earlier. Slipping round the house, he crossed the road to the cottonwood grove opposite. At the other side of the clump of trees was a path which angled back to a small adobe house built on the edge of a creek. Through a window he saw a man in his stocking feet sitting at a table reading a newspaper. The man wore spectacles. He was past fifty, a heavy-set, tough-looking customer whose arm muscles bulged beneath the shirt-sleeves.

The man outside circled the house and knocked on the front door.

"Evening, Hank," he said a moment later, smiling at the blacksmith. "Can I stay with you for a while?"

Ransom stared at him in surprise. "Lord love ye, man, where did you blow from?" the old soldier asked. "Come in and rest your weary bones."

Gray walked in and closed the door. "I came from having a talk with Sperm Howard, Mile High, and Curly," he said.

"And they didn't shoot you into a rag doll? Man, don't you know Tail Holt is plain poison for you?"

"So Curly says. Sperm doesn't want any trouble, he claims."

"Where did you leave your horse?"

"In Mack Willard's pasture."

"I'd better rope it and turn it loose outside, so they won't know you haven't left town."

Gray told him where he had left the saddle, and Ransom left to recover it and free the horse.

Frosting a Cake for Judges to Sample

A professional cake baker, frosting one of the hundreds of cakes which were made up in the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory, maintained by C. Houston Goudiss in New York City, in the course of selecting the winners in his recent Cake Recipe Contest.

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

NATURALLY, I am accustomed to seeing exhibits of delicious and interesting foods in the Experimental Kitchen Laboratory that I maintain in New York City. But in all the years of its existence, it has never been a busier nor a more inviting place than during the last few weeks when the home economists on my staff have been busily testing and judging the many fine cake recipes submitted by readers of this paper in our recent Cake Recipe Contest.

Imagine, if you can, a big cheerful and colorful kitchen filled with long tables upon which row after row of handsome cakes were arranged—proudly testifying to the skill of the homemakers who cherish the recipes from which they were made.

Every Type of Cake Entered.

A whole tableful of white cakes, with and without icing. Chocolate and cocoa cakes of every possible type. All manner of cakes, fragrant and delicious—spice, cream, honey, caramel, maple syrup, nut, date, pineapple, orange, lemon, butterscotch, jam, banana, raisin, oatmeal, coconut and marble cakes. Cakes baked in long sheets, square cakes, round cakes, layer cakes. Old-fashioned cakes from grandmothers' recipe books. Very modern and up-to-date cakes. And even one that was said to have been a favorite with General Robert E. Lee. I've never seen anything to compare with the collection, even at the biggest State Fair!

Do you wonder that the home economists on my staff required several weeks to pick the winners? For with such a wealth of exceptional cakes from which to choose, selecting those for top honors, was indeed difficult.

The cake bakers were trained for their work. They followed the recipes precisely. They measured accurately. They checked oven temperatures.

The scoring system was highly scientific. And we can say with conviction that no matter how close the race, the winners definitely outpointed even their closest rivals.

First Prize Winner.

The first prize of $25.00 went to Mrs. D. F. Kelly, 1004 Charles St., Whitewater, Wis.

Second Prize Winners.

The five second prizes were awarded to Mrs. H. Harshbarger of 2427 Fifth Ave., Altoona, Pa.; R. A. Williams, 12075 Rosemary Ave., Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. C. A. Burns, Box 788, Oakland, Miss.; Miss Sadie Cunningham, Avonmore, Pa.; and Mrs. Laura Meyer, 107 Pleasant St., Plymouth, Wis.

Third Prize Winners.

Mrs. T. H. Fjone, Flaxville, Mont.; Mrs. Lester Ralston, 127

Send for the Free Bulletin Offered by C. Houston Goudiss

When the temperature mounts, fat hinders heat loss. The body temperature of the overweight individual is more likely to rise than that of the thin person, and he therefore more liable to heat prostration.

For greater comfort, better appearance and for improved health, the man or woman who is overweight should send for the reducing bulletin offered free by C. Houston Goudiss, and reduce by the safe and sane method of counting calories.

The bulletin is complete with a chart, showing the caloric value of all the commonly used foods and it contains sample menus that you can use as a guide to scientific weight reduction.

Just send a postcard to C. Houston Goudiss at 6 East 39th Street, New York City, asking for his reducing bulletin.

HELP KIDNEYS

To Get Rid of Acid and Poisonous Waste

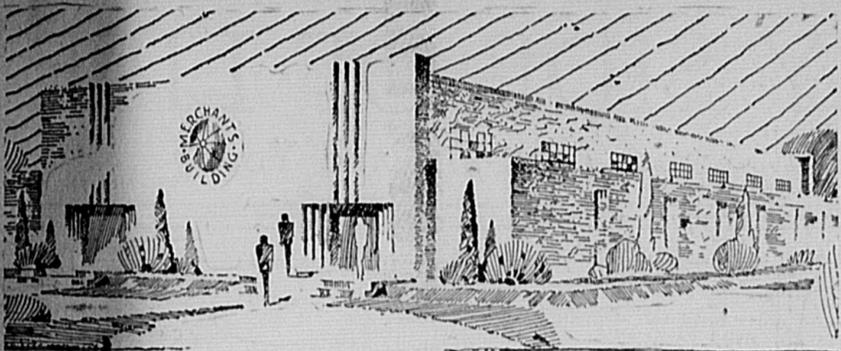

Your kidneys help to keep you well by constantly filtering waste matter from the blood. If your kidneys get functionally disordered and fail to remove excess impurities, there may be poisoning of the whole system and body-wide distress.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination may be a warning of some kidney or bladder disturbance.

You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous; all played out.

In such cases it is better to rely on a medicine that has won country-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Use Doan's Pills. A multitude of grateful people recommend Doan's. Ask your neighbor!

To The Voters Of Lubbock County

ON SATURDAY, July 23rd, the citizens of this county will vote for a man to serve them as Sheriff for the next two years. Every thinking man and woman knows that experience and ability are two essentials.

In determining your choice, investigate an applicant's past service as an officer and how he lived up to his former trust.

IS HE EXPERIENCED? IS HE CAPABLE?

Can he handle the many problems that confront a Sheriff in this complicated day and time?

Can he temper justice with mercy when your erring boy gets involved with the law for the first time?

I invite an inspection of my past record as a peace officer.

I refer you not only to my men friends, but to the many Christian women of this county who have known me for years and are interested in having a competent man guide the destinies of their families for the next two years.

Think this over carefully. After doing so and investigating my past record, you will cast your vote for me. It will be greatly appreciated and I will not betray your trust or try to remain in office indefinitely.

Thanking you for consideration, I am
SID CARAWAY.

ELECT Vaughn E. Wilson DISTRICT ATTORNEY

When I announced as a candidate for the office of District Attorney for the 72nd Judicial District I did so believing that my record as County Attorney for six years was one of untinted service to the people. And I express publicly to you my deep gratitude for the fine co-operation and support I have received in Slaton and surrounding communities.

My aim was then and shall continue to be, if elected District Attorney, to render throughout this district the type of representation affording to every citizen the full measure of protection given by the laws of Texas to be administered through that office.

I am fully acquainted with the difficulties encountered by law enforcement officers. I have always had and can continue to get their fullest co-operation. And I seek your co-operation and your vote not only that I may be elected but that your continued co-operation shall make my administration as District Attorney of outstanding value to every citizen. I shall sincerely appreciate your support for a first term as District Attorney.

Lesson for July 24

GIDEON: FOLLOWING GOD'S PLAN

LESSON TEXT—Judges 7:4-7, 15-23. GOLDEN TEXT—Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage. Joshua 1:9. PRIMARY TOPIC—Why Gideon Won. JUNIOR TOPIC—Gideon's Band. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—The Lord's Three Hundred. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—A Wise General.

Who is he? What are his connections? How large an organization does he represent? These are the measures of the greatness of a man which are common in the world. Even in religious circles there is a seeking for the men with "big names" when something is to be done. Our lesson for today reiterates the principle which we all know but which we practice so little, namely, that whatever is accomplished that is really worth while is done by God and that He uses only humble instruments—the "foolish things," the "weak things," the "base things," and "things which are despised" (1 Cor. 1:26-29). No flesh is to have any opportunity to glory in His presence. If men who are accounted great by this world are useful to God it is only because they are themselves humble in spirit and service.

Gideon came from an obscure family in a small tribe in Israel—and was astonished when God called him (Judges 6:15). He asked God for several signs to assure him that he was the chosen instrument of the Lord (read Judges 6), but once he was certain he went forward, nothing doubting.

I. An Insignificant Army (vv. 4-7). At first thought it seems almost foolish to comment on this story of repeated reductions in the size of Gideon's army in these hectic days when the nations of the earth are living for but one objective—to create a fighting machine bigger and more fully manned than that of any other nation.

But on second thought it is just the time for such comment, because what the nations are doing is a perfect example of the hopeless philosophy of men, while what Gideon did is a presentation of God's way. These notes are being prepared in a city distant from the writer's home, where he is attending a conference of national leaders in a field of great and international importance. A long session just concluded was addressed by a number of brilliant and capable men and women—and the conclusion they reached was that America was a badly befuddled nation, lost without a sense of direction in a wilderness of incoherent and inherently contradictory theories and about to lose its dearly bought freedom, unless someone points the way out. The only solutions offered were bigger and better human programs, and when a suggestion was made that our need might be spiritual the discussion was promptly directed in another direction.

We need the lesson today that it is by the seemingly insignificant Gideon's band that victory is to be obtained. Take courage, ye 300, rid yourselves of the 22,000 fearful ones, let God sift out the 9,700 who are not alert to the danger of the enemy, and then, under some Gideon who is obedient to the command of God, go forward to victory. You are the hope, and the only hope of our nation. Do not fail God in this crucial hour.

II. Obedience to God's Command (vv. 15-23).

After the Lord had encouraged the heart of Gideon by the account of the dream of the Midianite (vv. 3-14), he and his band are sent forward with strange weapons and even stranger instructions.

It is not ours to question "Why?" when God tells us to move forward. When will we learn that He knows more than we do, and that obedience is all we need to render unto Him? "Behold, to obey is better than to sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams" (1 Sam. 15:22).

III. The Sword of the Lord and of Gideon (vv. 18, 20).

While some folk err in counting the Lord out and making everything depend on man, there are a few who make the opposite error and become fatalistic in spirit and relatively useless to both God and man—because they hold an improper view of the manner in which the Lord works through human agencies.

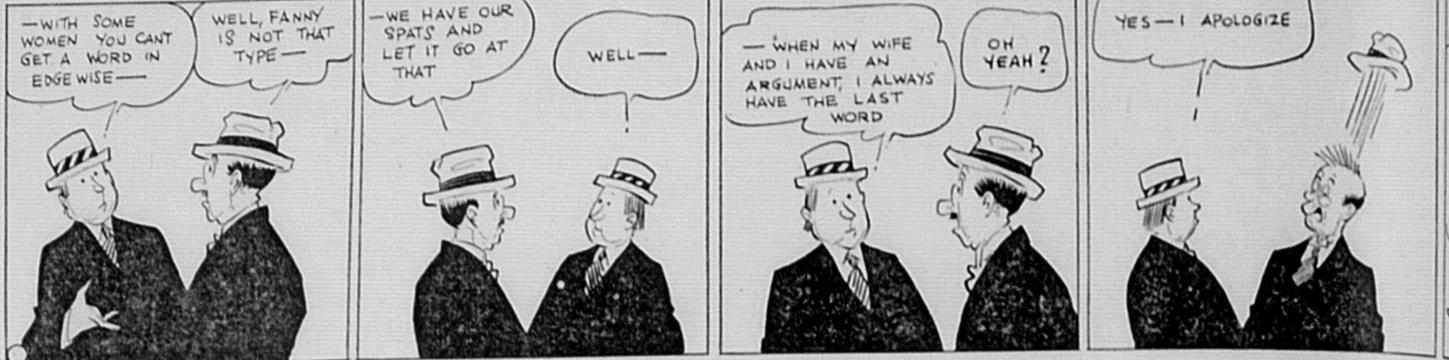

A man who objected to soul-winning efforts, and especially personal work, said that he believed "God could save a man if he were alone on the top of the Alps." Of course He could, but God does not ordinarily work that way. It is the "sword of the Lord"—yes, but do not forget that it is "the sword of the Lord and of Gideon." God has graciously condescended to do His work on earth through human agencies. Let us be ready and subservient instruments for His use, but let us at the same time be alert and active in His service. The two are not at all inconsistent, in fact the one whom God chooses to use is usually the one who is already busy about His work.

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Wide Brim Hat With Chic Silk Print

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

A word about black and pink. As the season advances costume after costume favors this combination. It gives a pretty effect indeed, when the dress of pink and black print is enhanced with pink costume jewelry, perhaps adding a girly sash of soft pink suede with possibly a pink suede bolero.

WINSOME frock of chic silk print that makes you look your prettiest, hat big of brim that brings romance into the picture, it's the twosome that "does something for you" and it's exactly the type costume that is holding the spotlight in the midsummer fashion scene.

Special emphasis is being placed on the vogue of picturesque hats that have a sentimental air that tunes in charmingly with the witchery of a brightly colorful, flattering print gown. Which goes to show that there is a trend to dress in lovely-lady fashion. You will find more and more as the summer comes on that the "be pretty" mood prevails throughout the mode.

The trio of charming summer costumes illustrated is convincing as to the "prettiness" of current fashions. The dress to the right interprets a new version of the dirndl in black and pink print silk crepe. It is shirred at each side to give moderate skirt fullness in front with a slim back line. The box shoulders emphasize smallness of waistline, a feature especially indicated in the newer dresses. Wear black accents with this gown for town and change to touches of pink when you go to your country club. The black hair hat posed far back on the head and flaring far up in front is a foremost millinery fashion. Even the new white felt tailored shapes have this upward off-face movement.

A lovely midsummer sheer centers the group. This printed blue and white silk chiffon day dress has the new square neckline. Watch necklines! Designers are giving a lot of attention to them, introducing novelty in lowcut fanciful outlines that impart an entirely new character to the styling of blouses and gowns. Note also the horizontal tucked bodice and the skirt pleats released below the hips. And the big flower-trimmed leghorn hat. Wide brims and colorfully patterned prints play a charming duet in the fashion picture.

For an afternoon ensemble select a bayadere silk chiffon dress in rainbow colors, together with a navy wool full-length unlined coat, such as pictured to the left. Take note of the hatpin on the merry widow black straw hat with its crown of taffeta bows and horsehair brim.

Speaking of wide brim hats to wear with print silks the latest models are taking on tremendously high crowns that taper toward the top in early Pilgrim fashion. The leghorns of this type are especially attractive. For the most part their trimming is confined to ribbon bands with streamers down the back.

ACCENTS OF SUEDE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Now that designers have sensed the vast possibilities suede offers to the fashion field and now that suede has been so scientifically treated that it is rendered thoroughly fabriclike, there's just no end to the exciting things being done with it. For instance, this lovely silk print summer costume, posed by Lucille Ball, radio player, is greatly enhanced with a girly sash of grape colored suede with streamers of matching suede on the attractive wide-brim hat.

Milliners Are Featuring

Button Bonnets Just Now

Milliners are featuring "button bonnets" this season. They are as fashionable for "big sisters" to wear as they are for the tiny members of the family. They are made of pique, sharkskin, printed linens and such. While the new button bonnets are as pretty as a picture and as chic as can be, they are something more than mere eye teasers for they are practical to the nth degree, in that they are made to unbutton at will so as to lay out perfectly flat. Which means you can launder them easily and when buttoned back into shape they look like brand new millinery. Flatten them out by unbuttoning and they pack without taking up room—ideal for week-end trips.

STRAPLESS BRA IS GOOD STYLE NEWS

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Here is good news, it's about the strapless brassiere designed to wear with the very fashionable strapless evening gown. It is made of net or lace with drawing at the top and is boned just enough to keep it up without the aid of straps over the shoulders. Solves the problem of what to wear under that transparent blouse or dress in the daytime where one must do away with unsightly straps to look well groomed. Try the new strapless bra under your costume slip in the daytime and you will be delighted at the nicety and neatness it affords.

White for "Undies" Latest

On Calendar of Fashions

If you are casting about for "undies" that express the ultimate in chic, be style-alert by asking to see the latest creations in white "nighties" and slips or foundation garments and corsetry. A vogue for pure white is down on the calendar of new fashions.

Also there is a sentiment gaining to use fine wash materials, such as choicest of nainsooks and batistes and handkerchief linens, dimities and a whole list of the quaint, beautiful wash fabrics that again have come into their own.

You will have joyous surprises, too, in the styling of the various garments. For instance a dainty bed-jacket is made of white batiste with vertical rows of embroidery being with the traditional "baby ribbon" run through and val lace edgings for trim.

White rayon satin corsets and foundations that slenderize one to a finish are also in promise.

Terry Cloth Retains Its

Popularity on the Beach

The introduction of many new cotton fabrics fails to check the popularity of terry cloth when it comes to beach attire. Coats and capes of the toweling continue to be featured, the most striking version being a two-toned striped pattern. Bold contrasts such as bright navy or black with white present the theme to best advantage. Jacket-like blouses that have been dubbed "night shirts," are made of white terry cloth and take the place of longer coats for beach wear.

WHAT to EAT and WHY

C. Houston Goudiss Offers Practical Advice on How to

Keep Cool With Food

By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS

6 East 39th Street, New York City.

FROM the standpoint of health, the summer months constitute the most important period of the entire year. They should be used to build stamina and vitality that will fortify your body against disease. But to many people, the warm weather means merely a succession of exhausting days and restless nights. And hardly a week passes without reports of heat prostrations.

Meeting the Challenge of Hot Weather

While abnormal heat or humidity may be a secondary cause, the real reason behind much warm-weather suffering is a failure to meet the challenge of summer with a judicious diet.

Automobile owners know that no car is better than its engine, and in warm weather, careful drivers watch the gauge on the dashboard to be sure the engine does not become overheated. But most people give little thought to that most remarkable of all engines—the human digestive machinery.

Compared to the engine in your body, the one in your car is a crude, rough affair that can stand no end of punishment. Moreover, the automobile is driven for a certain length of time and then permitted to rest. But the marvelous mechanism which transforms your food into blood, bone, muscle, and your capacity for thought and action is never wholly at rest.

Importance of the Right Food

If the automobile engine requires special attention, how much more important to stoke your body engine with food suited to the weather!

No one would think of going about in midsummer wearing the same garments that were worn all winter. Yet many women continue to serve the same type of meals which were required to keep the body warm in winter. Such a practice is sure to make you miserable. But more than that, it lowers resistance and may, therefore, lead to illness.

Beating the Heat

There are several factors to bear in mind when planning the hot-weather diet. The first secret of keeping cool is to supply the body machinery with food fuel that can be utilized with the least expenditure of energy.

Warm weather is responsible for muscular relaxation in the digestive tract, as well as other parts of the body. And you run the risk of digestive upsets, with their discomfort and health hazards, unless you make every effort to lessen the work of your digestive system.

Eat lightly of rich fatty meats, pastries, rich cakes, sauces and gravies. At all times, choose easily digestible foods.

Overeating Saps Vitality

Don't overeat. The task of handling excess food is a burden to the body at any season. In hot weather, it will cause the body temperature to mount along with the thermometer, and may result in a serious upset. It is also advisable to cut down somewhat on the quantity of heat and energy producing foods consumed—that is the carbohydrates and fats.

Need for Body-Building Foods

The protein requirement remains the same summer and winter. Some people think that meat should not be eaten in summer, or should be reduced to a minimum. But there is no closed season for growth in children, and moreover, they play so constantly and indulge in such strenuous exercise that they break down body tissue very rapidly. Adults also have a constant need for protein to rebuild the millions of cells that are worn out daily.

It is desirable, however, to avoid rich, fatty meats and to select protein foods that are more easily digestible, as chicken, lamb, lean beef and lean fish. Special emphasis should be placed on milk, cheese and eggs. These splendid foods not only supply Grade A protein, in an easily digested form, but also fortify the diet with minerals and vitamins.

Liquids Essential

To help you keep cool, the summer diet must include an abundance of liquids. These are necessary to make up for the large amounts of moisture lost from the body through increased perspiration.

Liquids may be taken in the form of milk, fruit juices and cooling drinks made from pure water and packaged beverage crystals containing dextrose, fruit acid, flavoring and coloring.

Hot Weather and Vitamin C

Two European investigators recently found that exposure to high temperatures causes a 50 per cent loss in vitamin C from the body tissues. And lowered vitamin C reserves are partially responsible for that tired feeling so often experienced in warm weather. Their research indicates that drinking orange or lemon juice, which are rich in vitamin C, actually helps to mitigate the effect of the heat.

Choose Cold Drinks Carefully

A cold drink is comforting on a hot day. And in addition, sweetened beverages help to relieve fatigue, for their carbohydrate content supplies available energy. Sugar is the least heating of the energy producing foods, for less than one-sixteenth of the energy it supplies to the body is converted into heat. The rest goes into brain and muscle power.

Therefore, one good way to prevent needless fatigue in summer is to take a cool, moderately sweetened drink whenever you feel tired during the day. This will satisfy thirst and ward off exhaustion like a rest by the road after a long hard tramp.

Too highly sweetened beverages, however, may be heating to the body, though they are cooling to the palate. For this reason, it is advisable for homemakers to mix their own cool drinks so that they can control the amount of sweetening used. It is possible to buy inexpensive packaged beverage crystals in a variety of flavors, which make delicious, refreshing and cooling drinks for general family use. One of these contains added vitamin D, and as the sugar is added by the homemaker, you can be the judge of how much to use. This is an excellent idea, especially in households where there are children, for the home-made drink satisfies thirst, provides needed energy and discourages them from buying bottled beverages of doubtful purity.

The HOUSEWIFE... "RESEARCH PROFESSOR OF ECONOMY"

SHE'S not a Ph.D. or an L.L.D. She hasn't a diploma or a cap and gown. Her research is not done in the laboratory or the library. As a matter of fact, her findings are made, usually, in the street car, in the subway, in the suburban commuter's train.

She reads the advertisements in this paper with care and consideration. They form her research data. By means of them she makes her purchases so that she well deserves the title of "Research Professor of Economy." She discovers item after item, as the year rolls on, combining high quality with low.

It is clear at once that all who make and keep a home have the same opportunity. With the help of newspaper advertising you, too, can graduate from the school of indiscriminate buying into the faculty of fastidious purchases!

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

The following communication was received by the Slatonite this week. In much abridged form it is offered for consideration of those who are interested in the proposed project, which we think highly worthy.—THE EDITOR.

I noticed in last week's issue of the Slatonite under the column, "A WEEK AT A TIME," a citation of the delorable condition of our streets, alleys and vacant lots. Mr. Rankin advocated cutting and hauling off weeds and rubbish.

Mr. Rankin's "hint" that, cleaning up is needed, is both timely and commendable. I am wondering if I too might add a "pet" of mine. Not for an anticipated presidential visit, but for everyday homefolks.

Our Memorial or burial park is a weary, dreary, desolate, pitifully forgotten place, grown up in weeds, wild grass and tares of every description.

How hard it must be for those who must some day lay our loved ones there, to leave them amid tin cans, weeds, and, as Mr. Rankin puts it, rubbish.

I have no loved ones there yet, but I have seen friends placed there. I have shuddered as I turned from those new-made graves and scanned the pitifully neglected surroundings.

There is no reason I can see why a fair and progressive little city such as Slaton, where there is so much civic pride and a wide-awake populace could not boast a beautifully landscaped and well-kept Burial Park.

I am informed that there is, or was, a cemetery association here. If so, where is it?

If there is not such an organization here, won't some of the clubs of the city . . . start a treasury and organize one.

(Suggested details for organization are omitted here or lack for of space, but will be submitted to any interested gathering. Editor.)

Not all the knowing the death angel will sooner or later visit our home can soften the blow when it strikes, but to have our loved ones, and ourselves to go bearing a picture of a beautiful resting place would be a comforting thought to us all.

Due to my limited abilities and health, I am unable to get a start of such a plan as I have tried to describe. But I am ready to help at any and all times.

Signed: Mary (Mrs. Dave) Owens.

MISS CRITTENDEN KEEPS MOVING

Little Miss Mary Ruth Crittenden, who made the front page a few weeks ago with her unreserved expressions, has been visiting her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cherry of Slaton, and other relatives in San Angelo recently. She is gone this week to Carlsbad and other New Mexico points, after which she will go to Amarillo with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Crittenden.

Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Blanton, of Ralls, were guests in the home of their daughter, Mrs. Hubert Wylie, Sunday.

Mrs. W. D. Adkins and Rita Jo and Mrs. W. A. Marr and Cleo Joyce visited in Petersburg last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Haddock and little son, Mike, spent Sunday in Lubbock at the home of Mrs. Haddock's uncle, Bode Adams.

Mrs. Guy Brown and son, Jack, have just returned from a two weeks visit in the heart of the Rocky Mountains at Marsyvale, Utah. Mrs. Brown visited while there with friends, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Taylor. She found the mountain country beautiful and inspiring.

"Three Comrades" At The Palace

Adapted from Erich Maria Remarque's best-seller novel of European post-war chaos, "Three Comrades," which opens at the Palace Theatre Saturday night prevue, Sunday and Monday, presents Robert Taylor, Margaret Sullavan, Franchot Tone and Robert Young, in one of the most touching love stories to reach the screen.

Although the Remarque story is placed against a background of the turbulent days succeeding the world conflict in Europe, it is primarily the drama of the devout love between a man and woman. Taylor brings an increased acting over to his role of Erich, youngest of the three comrades, who returns from the front embittered and disillusioned to find new hope in his love for Patricia, stirring enacted by Miss Sullavan.

Tone has his best part in years as Koster, who sacrifices his one love, a racing car, in order to raise the funds for Patricia's operation. Robert Young also scores in a memorable part as Lenz, the comrade who becomes embroiled in a political demonstration and is killed.

The picture faithfully follows the narrative of the novel, intermingling its moods of laughter and heartrending climax with Miss Sullavan's closing speech—"It's right for me to die, darling, when I'm so full of love."

Incidentally, "Three Comrades" disproves the theory of those who believe Robert Taylor cannot be "mussed up," or in the realistic street fight scenes, he throws his fists like a ring veteran and frequently stops terrific jolts with his chin.

Frank Borzage can take a bow for his direction of the picture. Once again he displays his genius for conceiving warmth and tenderness in love scenes, his flair for naturalness and authenticity, and his ability to make his action at all times arresting and significant.

"Three Comrades" is recommended as one of the new movie season's outstanding pictures. Put it on your "must" list.

Mrs. J. B. Stallings left last week to visit relatives in Austin, San Antonio and Dallas.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bostick and Mrs. William Bostick, of Childress, visited with Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Bostick and daughter, Elizabeth, of Slaton, this week.
