LABOR DAY

Next Monday is Labor Day. It honors the men who wear overalls. It of the coal mines and of the factories istering. and the men who do the heavy work of every occupation and the men who America to the forefront of the world as a manufacturing nation.

More than a generation ago the labor movement in America enlisted the support of most of America in a fight for decent living conditions. Today many are likely to feel that the wages of certain types of labor are too high. for eight hours a day at back-breaking sweat-producing labor, he has earned more than a night's reposehe has earned some wages. Any man who thinks different should follow skilled workman some day. About! twenty years is considered the life of any man's highest production at skilled labor. Then he is likely to be slowing down so nobody wants him. If he hasn't been able to save enough Latin and English; Mrs. Mary H out of his wages in those productive years so he can live when he can no longer find employment, then he has not even earned a living.

If you find somebody taking a holi day next Monday and are inconvenienced thereby, don't be annoyed, there is a good reason.

TRADE AT HOME

Texas Council of Cement Mill Workers has protested the purchase of cement for Texas roads from out -of Texas mills. We are for them. The State of Texxas should trade at home. And whatever the factors may be that caused the purchase of foreign cement in Texas, they should be corrected. While we should stand for the purchase of Texas materials for Texas roads, it is not to be ex pected that contractors who must make a profit if they are to stay in business should pay unusual profits to Texas producers. People who spend their own money are loyal to those who give them the best service. If home merchants offer service and prices to please, then home merchants will get the business if they will let home people know what they have

WHAT PRICE POULTRY SHOW? A few years ago Slaton adopted the idea that a poultry show would Subsidy Applications be a worthy project for the community. The show was planned and held. The finest birds in the southwest were shown here. Some were brought more than a thousand miles for Pandhndle people to see. The first poultry show was a success from every poin or view., Our city was advertised breeders had a chance to show their fancy birds, and best of all the pro duction of poultry for profit wa stimulated and encouraged.

Now it seems that enthusiasm for a poultry show is waning. If it is there are South Plains Cities tha would gladly take over the projec that once distinguished our city. But we believe only those who have thought superficially on the subject are willing to consider the discontinuance of the annual poultry show. There is no more ideal country in the United States for the production of poultry at a profit than this very same South Plains. Our Poultry Show is too valuable to the producers, to for us to lose what we have in the way have been completed and all details of prestige as poultry country by letting our poultry show die.

New Taxes Sure to Come, Senator Harrison Warns

Another Federal Deficit of Four Billion Dollars Faces Country; New Sources of Revenue Sought; More Persons to Be Hit.

> By WILLIAM BRUCKART WNU Service, National Press Bldg., Washington, D. C.

considerable amount of courage for programs—all have cost billions of an active politician to talk about dollars. more taxes in an election year, and | As everyone knows, when new it is a hopeful sign when one tells taxes are added, a greater percentthe truth about such a politically age of the country's voting inhabi-delicate matter. When Sen. Pat tants are included. Harrison, the veteran Mississippi Democrat, announced the other day that new taxes are coming, therefore, it became a matter of moment. It was significant first that Senator Harrison, speaking as chairman of the powerful senate finance committee, should boldly say there must be new taxes, and it was significant in the second place because Senator Harrison has not always stood shoulder to shoulder with the New Dealers.

But there is another federal treasury deficit of something like $4,000,000,000 staring us in the face, and the size of it indicates that no progress has been made whatsoever in curtailing federal spending. It tells us, too, that the much ballyhooed business recovery of a year ago is yielding less in taxes than had been calculated by the wishful thinkers.

Thirdly, the probable deficit seems to show there was at least some merit in the assertions by Senator Harrison and others in congress last winter that some of the New Deal policies are driving the country further into a hole instead of bringing it out.

Senator Harrison's statements constitute a warning that federal taxes must dig deeper. In effect, he told the country that the government has been taxing to the point where it can not expect any increased returns from the present sources, however heavy the levies, and that the scope of taxes must be extended and expanded.

More Persons to Be Hit by Federal Taxes

What does that mean? Simply, it means that in any new tax laws that are enacted, congress will be remembered to their appearance as government or administration policy. that are enacted, congress will include a greater number of persons within the realm of federal tax sources; people who never have paid taxes to the federal government before are going to pay them hereafter. I am referring to income taxes, directly, but the way the picture looks to me, there will be more taxes that are indirect-and they hit everybody. If congress doesn't ex-tend the scope of federal taxation, there will never be any chance of a balanced budget, and if the future does not bring forth a balanced budget, we may as well kiss our democratic form of government good-by.

The reason I say there must be additional "hidden taxes," levies that are included in the cost to the consumer such as the cigarette tax, is that Senator Harrison's own statement shows there will be insufficient revenue-raised by lowering the personal exemptions under the income taxpayers. Bureau of internal rev-enue statistics prove that about 60 per cent of the country's income earners have less than $2,000 per family. As the laws now stand, a person who is married and has an income of $2,000 or less need pay no tax. So it is seen that only a mere drop in the bucket of new revenue can be obtained in that direction, wholly because if all of them were taxed the amount still would be small. Yet, any serious attempt to taxes that apply generally.

To Search for New Tax Possibilities

Senator Harrison's committee will search through all of the various tax possibilities in the next three or four months. It will have to do that. The house committee on ways and means, which considers tax legislation in the house, will not have the courage to go as far in adding to the tax burden. It never has had that much courage for the reason that its members come up for election every two years-and, again, taxes are unpopular things for a politician. Thus, we will have to look to the Harrison committee if progress is made in bringing the nation's tax receipts into some relation with its spending.

The addition of new taxes is a serious matter, yet it appears that new taxes cannot be avoided. We have had our play time, our fun. We have danced; now, the fiddler must be paid. When new taxes are added, the buying power of every-person paying the tax is reduced by that amount. But through five years, money has been spent by the government in ways that put to shame the famed drunken sailor ashore for the first time in a year.

WASHINGTON. - It requires a | Waste, wreckage, nit-wit plans and

So, maybe the veteran Senator Harrison has a two-fold purpose in mind, and it takes courage for him to have either one of the two ideas because he is in politics. Maybe he sees the necessity for substantial curtailment of federal spending and realizes at the same time that the life of a politician who opposes spending is a hard road. But if the average citizen is touched by some new taxes, he will not be half as anxious to support the candidate who promises pork, projects and patronage—anything that sends money back into the home district. I would just hazard a guess that the amiable and very clever Senator Harrison is going about the latter job in the only way that it can be accomplished.

I give him praise and wish him success, for preservation of our government is of considerably more moment than a few political lives.

This Is No Joke to Bankers of Country

Some time ago, I reported the existence within administration policies of quite contradictory plans. Here is a new one, and one that to me is quite laughable. It probably is not at all humorous to the bankers of the country, whether they be big bankers or little bankers in small towns. Of course, bankers do not always have a sense of humor; nevertheless, I believe they may be forgiven for failing to laugh at this new condition.

To have a clear understanding of the circumstance, it is necessary to line up the several developments in the order of their appearance as President Roosevelt ordered all banks closed (and some stayed closed) at the beginning of his administration. He followed that with legislation by congress that placed new restrictions on how the banks could loan money. It was a pretty good law since it prevented some sharp practices of which some bankers had been guilty.

On top of this law, some 10 or 12 months later, Mr. Roosevelt lambasted the bankers for not making loans to business. He charged them with locking their vaults, called them cowards and what-nots, trying to force money out into the channels of trade when there were few business men doing enough business to pay interest on the money they were using.

Then, the urge came for deposit insurance. Mr. Roosevelt was not enthusiastic about any federal deposit insurance scheme, but Senator income and above. There can not be any very large addition to the revenue gained in that field for the very good and sufficient roots. that there are not enough of those law, but that is neither here nor taxpayers. Bureau of internal revand the federal deposit insurance corporation has a function to see that banks are properly run.

Another Depression

Was the Result There came the time when Mr. Roosevelt's policies failed to work any better than those under President Hoover, and we had another depression on our hands. Mr. Jesse Jones, chairman of the Reconstrucraise revenue to balance federal ex-penses must include levies on the lower incomes as well as other new urging, made several speeches and statements to the bankers as the de-pression got really bad. He sought to stem the tide by persuading the bankers to make more loans. Some of us here got the impression that Mr. Jones wanted the bankers to shove out the money and ask later on whether they could get it back. Anyway, the sum and substance of the situation was that Mr. Jones was urging the banks to find ways to loan money.

Then came the climax, the peak, and the laugh, Hardly had Mr. Jones concluded his series of lectures to the bankers (who, according to the Jones picture, really did not want to make money) when another government agency gets into the play. The Federal Deposit Insurance corporation had something to say about the bankers, and Chairman Crowley issued a statement to all and sundry bankers.

Said Mr. Crowley, in substance: Bankers, the FDIC insures your deposits up to $5,000 per depositor; thus they are protected. But that does not mean you can take a chance on unsound loans. You can't take any greater risk than you would if there was no insurance of the deposits. Just remember that, boys; be careful and don't stub your toes!

Israel had come to the place where the people recognized that they were on the brink of national disaster. They knew they had come to the end of the trail, and were ready to do something about

I. Return Unto the Lord (v 3.). Samuel appears in his first public ministry to call on his people to return to the Lord. Back of that public act is the history of a godly life and devoted service to the Lord and to His nation. Such a man can consistently urge others to turn to God.

The response of the people was wholehearted. They were thoroughly sick of their sin and separation from the favor of God. The earnest of their sincerity was their obedience to the admonition of Samuel that they turn from idolatry.

II. Put Away False Gods (vv. 3, 4). Israel had learned from their heathen neighbors to worship their false gods. These they must put away if God was to be able to bless them. The same prerequisite to spiritual revival exists today. But some may say, we do not worship heathen gods. Perhaps not, and yet one is astonished at the close similarity between the ritual and worship of some secret cults and orders and the ancient religions of

The fact is that we have set up many new gods-money, fashion, social position, and what not. The command needs to go out again through God's messengers, "Put #### away the foreign gods." III. Gather Together and Pray (vv. 5, 6).

Spiritual life thrives on the gathering together of God's people. The crisis in Israel was met by a great convocation of the people. We need to revive the great soul-stirring religious gatherings of a generation

"I will pray," said Samuel. He was a great intercessor. (See I Sam. 15:11; Ps. 99:6; Jer. 15:1.) Revival never comes without a history of faithful intercession on the part of those whose hearts are really burdened. Ask yourself, How much have I really prayed for a revival in my church, my commu-nity, and my nation? If I should begin to pray in earnest, would not God hear me and answer?

IV. God Will Save Us (v. 8).

"Behold, the Lord's hand is not shortened that it cannot save, heither his ear heavy that it cannot hear" (Isa. 59:1). "Thus saith the Lord . . . have I no power to deliver?" (Isa. 50:1, 2). God saved Israel and delivered them out of the hands of their enemies. The Philistines, seeing them gathered together to pray, assumed that they were preparing to fight and at-tacked. In the previous battle at that very spot (I Sam. 4:1-10) Israel had fought with the weapons of men and been disgracefully defeated. Now they fought with the weapon of prayer and faith in God, and great was the victory.

America is valiantly battling against the social and economic problems of these distressing days, but one fears that all too often the weapons are those of the arm of flesh which will fail us. Let us look up instead of to one another. "God will save us" (v. 8).

V. Ebenezer (v. 12). Our forefathers, familiar with the truth of Scripture, used biblical words in naming their children. The present generation all too often know the names simply as the strange signatures on old letters.

The word "Ebenezer" might well merit a bit of a revival itself. Here Israel had met a disastrous defeat. They were broken by it and had become an almost hopeless people. Now God had given them victory in the very same spot and they raised a stone of remembrance of God's help. The word "Ebenezer" means "stone of help," but also carries with it the meaning of Samuel's word, "Hitherto hath the Lord helped us" (v. 12).

There is an inspiring word of hope here for every troubled soul. You may, like Israel, have fallen into sin. Your life may be defeated. You may be utterly discouraged. Return to the Lord, put away sin, gather with God's people, pray, and God will give you victory, even at

"Tropic Holiday" Has Famous Mexican Stars

The background of "Tropic Holiday' is not the only thing about the picture that is pure Mexican! In the cast are some of the most popular entertainers of the Southern Republic, who have been brought to Hollywood to appear in Paramount's gay musical fiesta. They include such favorites of Latin American theatre-goers as Tito Guizar, the handsone troubadour. Elvira Rios, Roberto Soto, who is called the "Charlie Chaplin of Mexico," and the Senoritas Ascencio, the "Boswell Sisters" of the land below the Rio Grande.

The chief players in this story of a young American who tries to "get away from it all" in the tropics, which is coming soon to the Palace Theatre, are Dorothy Lamour, Ray Milland, Bob Burns and Martha Raye, two top film teams.

-Weekly News Review-Hitler Woos Central Europe With Overtures to Hungary By Joseph W. La Bine-

Foreign

At Nickelsdorf, Austria, an imposing triumphal arch was raised. Vienna's railway station was decoratawaited launching. Thus, feeling like a girl with several ardent suitors, Hungary's Regent Nicholas Horthy sped in glory last week from Budapest to Berlin.

Adolf Hitler last spring had Berlin made such plans. Indeed the same trappings that greeted Il Duce now greeted Admiral Horthy. But Adolf Hitler had more than benign friendship in mind.

Hungary lies directly in the path of Germany's "drive to the east" in which she would swallow Czechoslovakia, Rumania and Jugo-Slavia, thereby unifying all central Europe. As Nicholas Horthy closeted himself with Hitler, rumors of proposals began flying. Rumors: (1) Joint proposal by Italy and Germany to incorporate Hungary in the Rome-Berlin axis; (2) proposal that Hungary leave the League of Nations, declaring the Trianon treaty of 1920 void; (3) offer by Italy and Germany for extended Hungarian minority rights in Czechoslovakia, Rumania, Jugo-Slavia; (4) German-Hungarian economic unity.

What made Regent Horthy feel like a sought-after maiden was another offer, this one from foreign ministers of Czechoslovakia, Jugo-Slavia and Rumania, whose Little Entente met at Bled, Jugo-Slavia. Their offers included a nonaggression pact and military equality.

In Paris, Premier Edouard Dala- Politics dier jolted France from its vacation sluggishness to demand abolition of the 40-hour week "in the interests of military and economic defense." In Germany, Adolf Hitler's giant war maneuvers entered their second week. In both Rome and London, eyes focused from distant China to nearby Spain, theaters of 1938's two wars. The war picture:

 Having set Britain's Neville Chamberlain back on his ear by refusing a proposal for evacuating foreign soldiers, Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco opened his drive to end Spain's civil war before a third winter sets in. . Aimed at his Roosevelt opponent, Lawrence loyalist Barcelona were crack Nav- S. Camp. Two days earlier, RFC arese and Italian troops, while overhead rebel planes rained death. Along the Ebro river front, 5,000 government militiamen were captured. But biggest news of the Spansh war came not from Spain, but phone that his commonwealth "will from Switzerland.

At Zurich, Premier Juan Negrin arrived for conferences with the duke of Alba, Franco envoy. After three days of hide-and-seek in which neither Negrin nor Alba could be found, observers wondered whether Spain's two emissaries were hiding from each other or had agreed

While China's Chiang Kai-Shek led his troops in defense of Hankow last week, Former Premier Wang-Ching-Wei threatened to supplant him as leader of what little government now remains in that battlepocked country. Tired of war, Japan mobilized 1,000,000 men and looked to Italy for help.

Britain has already refused negotiations with Japan unless her rights in China are safeguarded. But after two months of secret mediation, Italy came out in the open with a plan to establish Wang Ching-Wei as head of a revised Chinese central government. That Germany belonged in this picture was apparent; one of Wang's chief aims would be adherence to the German-Jap-Italian pact against communism.

Labor

President William Green of the American Federation of Labor had two reasons to be happy last week. Smallest reason was that Franklin Roosevelt agreed the Wagner labor act must be amended. Biggest reason was that John Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization was embroiled in several family quarvice presidents for alleged communistic leanings. Last week these vice presidents called a convention of U. A. W.'s insurgent bloc in Toledo, asking Boss Lewis to end the ed. At Kiel a 10,000-ton battleship fight. Specific requests were (1) appointment of a "dictator" for U. A. W., and (2) an election to let members themselves decide the issue.

Meanwhile, in western Kentucky, Budapest to Berlin.

Not since Benito Mussolini visited gressive Mine Workers of America gave John Lewis another headache. Four thousand miners, who left C. I. O.'s United Mine Workers three years ago, took out membership in A. F. of L.'s Progressive body.

Final quarrel was that between Francis Gorman, United Textile Workers president, and Sidney Hillman, head of Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. Last week Gorman asked his followers to desert C. I. O. because of "dictatorship and communism."

Canada

Fortnight ago, the economic ties linking Canada and the U.S. were forged tighter at Kingston, Ontario. There, Franklin Roosevelt promised U. S. aid should Canada ever find herself at war. There, too, he spoke bravely for the long-argued St. Lawrence waterway project. Last week, as Franklin Roosevelt settled back at Hyde Park, these bits of Canadian-American news made head-

(1) Ontario's Premier Mitchell Hepburn bluntly told Prime Minister MacKenzie King he would oppose the St. Lawrence project until Canada's railroad losses stop.

(2) Observers predicted America's neutrality act would be revised to insert Canada among Western Hemisphere nations excepted from the act's applications.

(3) Washington continued negotiations for an international highway to Alaska, passing through Canadian soil, which would probably be built with $14,000,000 PWA funds.

Domestic

New York rushed to work one morning last week. All subway stations were crowded; at one the crowd was too great. Pulling away from this station a train stopped momentarily to free a woman caught in the door. Behind, u able to stop, rushed a second train piloted by Motorman Salvatore Cota. His train crashed into the rear of the first, telescoping. Then came explosion, darkness, panic. Halfhour later authorities were able to report two dead, 40 injured. As Mayor Fiorella H. LaGuardia looked on, Motorman Cota had his leg amputated before he could be released from the wreckage.

"Purge" crept into John Public's vocabulary last week with devastating speed. More than ever before, U. S. voters looked at New York, Maryland and Georgia where reside Franklin Roosevelt's three favorite 'purgees," Democratic legislators he wants ousted in next month's primaries because they oppose certain New Deal measures. Last week these senators caused this news:

In Georgia, Purgee Walter F. George drew support from James W. Arnold, Republican national committeeman who asked G. O. P. partisans to vote for George against Attorney Edgar B. Dunlap was asked to resign because he was stumping for George's re-election. In Maryland, Purgee Millard E. Tydings thundered into a micro-not permit her star in the flag to be purged from the constellation of the states.'

In New York, Purgee John J. O'Connor picked up "the gage which the President has thrown down," promised to fight Franklin Roosevelt's "invitation to a dictatorship." Three days later Franklin Roosevelt and WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins found themselves embarrassed when New York's Worker's alliance, a WPA union, announced plans to raise a $50,000 war chest to use against Representative O'Con-Several weeks ago, Homer Mar- nor. #### SYNOPSIS

Young Rex Hale calls on Casper Knee-land, friend of his father, in New York, and finds him proudly successful but strangely preoccupied. He tells Hale of his wife's death while insane, invites him for the sum-mer to Halcyon Camp, his home on Long Island, and promises him he will be "useful" as his secretary there.

"This is the first American outfit I've had for several years," Hale told the clerk. "Been living abroad. There's a certain satisfaction in starting from the ground up."

The clerk agreed and led him firmly to the socks, underwear and pajamas. Hale bought a lot of them and threw in a new dressing-gown. He'd give his old one, he decided, to the chap who cleaned his boots at his modest hotel. It was certainly in hand-me-down condition. He paid the bills with undiminished cheerfulness and went to a popular restaurant at one o'clock for needed rest and refreshment. The restaurant was one Kneeland had recommended in the final moments of their interview.

He ate his excellent luncheon with open enjoyment. It was great to eat well-cooked food again.

A hand fell on his shoulder.

"Hello, old man. Maxim ought to keep you here in his restaurant as a permanent exhibit. You look like the cat that gobbled the canary."

"I feel like her. So would you if you had been eating omelets and tough beef in Spain. I got back from there yesterday."

"So Kneeland said." "Oh, you know Mr. Kneeland?" "Rather! He sent me here to look you up. Said he had advised you to lunch here today, and he thought you would." The newcomer dropped into the chair Hale indicated.

"What will you have?" Hale "Nothing but a cordial, thanksapricot brandy. I've had my lunch." Hale summoned his waiter and ordered the liqueur. He was not enthusiastic over the encounter, but it was pleasant to see almost any familiar face. He had had to think a minute to remember who this fellow was. Someone he had known at Chicago? No. At Cornell? Yes-he had him now. Ainsworth, Frederick Ainsworth. He looked exactly as he had looked then-dark, thin, sleek, green-eyed, cat-like, sardonic. "What's on Mr. Kneeland's mind now?" he asked conversationally. Ainsworth's reply showed that he had changed as little in character as in appearance. "A good deal, I fancy," he said lightly, as he sipped his liqueur. "But nothing to pass on to you. That is, he didn't send you any message. I think he told me to look you up because he wanted to get rid of me. I dropped into his office at twelve, and he didn't care to take me out for lunch."

"He's been very successful," Hale murmured.

"Yes." An odd expression fell over Ainsworth's smooth face. It was like a dark mask settling into place. He stared into the small glass he held in his hand. Somewhat ostentatiously he changed the subject. "He tells me you're coming to Halcyon Camp." "Yes, I'm going tomorrow after-

"That's good. I'm out there myself. It will interest me very much," Ainsworth purred, returning to his liqueur, "to see what you make of us. You're in for some surprises."

"That sounds rather cryptic,"

"It's a cryptic place. On the surface, everything is sweetness and light. You'll be charmed tomorrow night by our carefree manner and our sunny faces. But don't scratch the top. You're apt to find some ugly crawling things underneath."

That's a queer way for a guest to talk," Hale said stiffly. His early dislike of Ainsworth was increasing with every word the fellow uttered. Then he pulled himself up, remembering that for the moment he was the fellow's host.

"Mr. Kneeland told me he had three house-guests," he went on more naturally. "Who's there now, besides you and the family?"

"Only two more." Ainsworth had plainly decided not to be offended by the other's criticism. "There's Miss Hosanna's friend, Mrs. Spencer Forbes, an ash-blonde lady with a Past."

'Who's the other guest?" "Doctor Craig, a friend of Bert's. He's another mysterious person, if you ask me. But we're all mysterious, as I've hinted. You'll find us an interesting study, in our romantic setting of sea and sky and woods. Halcyon Camp is quite off the main arteries, as I suppose Kneeland told you." He laughed. "Halcyon Camp!" he quoted ironically. "Kneeland says he wants it to be 'a funny-if he knew it." "Doesn't he?"

"No. He's too absorbed in his own big problem. He's an unhappy wants everyone around him to be contented. He has always seen himself as a benevolent god in the Hale moved abruptly in his chair, and Ainsworth took the hint. He had finished his liqueur. He got up.

"I'll be off now," he said. "See you at Halcyon Camp. Shall I tell

Miss Hosanna you'll join our happy band in time for dinner tomorrow night?'

"Yes, thanks."

"The dinner hour is half past seven, and the run down takes almost two hours. You'd better come on the half-past four train."
"I will. Thanks again."

They shook hands and with a strong sensation of relief Hale

Another extended along the right side. French windows opened on these. There were a number of outbuildings. Several tents were set up on pine board foundations and entered by roughly built steps. There was an impressive outdoor oven for camp cooking. Down on the beach he saw what were evidently private bath-houses, a boat-house and a pier. A goodsized float loomed up some distance from the shore. Yet with all this, Halcyon Camp did not suggest a hospitable home.

Throughout his life Hale had been subject to what, for lack of a better word, he called "hunches." His hunches were sudden and strong Mrs. Nash turned her full attention convictions. Kneeland had told him to leave the train at a certain station, adding that it was three miles from the Camp and that probably he would not be met. Hale left the train at that station shortly after six the next evening and was not surprised to find no one in sight who seemed to be looking for a red-headed stranger. It was a lonely little station and only one passenger had got off with him. This was a slight woman, coolly dressed in blue voile. She had bent a furrowed brow over a note-book during most of her journey. She seemed to be unsuccessfully adding columns of figures that annoyed her. A small sedan car with a youth at the wheel was waiting for her. On her way to it she heard Hale question the station agent, who stood on the platform, as to the direction of Halcyon Camp. She turned and came toward him. She was a woman in her forties, with prematurely white hair, a youngish face and a worldly smile.

"You must be the young man Miss Kneeland is expecting today," she said cheerfully. "Hasn't anyone met Hale jerked off his hat and returned her smile with warmth. He liked her on the instant.

"No, but it isn't far to the Camp. I'll enjoy the walk."

"You won't enjoy three miles of it with all that luggage. Put it in my car and I'll take you to the edge of the camp clearing. I don't like the road that leads to Halcyon Camp itself. I can drop you when we come to that road, within a quarter of a mile from the house."

"That's awfully good of you. My name is Hale.' "I know. You're the young engineer who has just got back from Spain. Miss Kneeland told me about you last night. I'm Mrs. Wilbur Nash, one of her neighbors. This

He lets his guests do it, but he makes himself thoroughly comfortable. You won't catch him ploughing through the underbrush and along muddy country roads to the Camp. Miss Hosanna and Joan do it half the time. Mr. Kneeland keeps his car for his own journeys back and forth. Bert has a four-wheel wreck that he disappears in every day, when he isn't off in his motor-boat. Here we are. Sorry I can't take you to the door. Follow those excavations at the right. They represent a road."

Hale thanked her and jumped out of the sedan. He grasped the bags and his hat-box and started off along the branch road that ran at an angle to the so-called highway.

At a rather unexpected turn in the road, he saw the Camp. He stopped, put down his luggage, and looked it over. It was not a camp or a bungalow, but a big mid-victorian house set in a wide clearing. Seen at that short distance, it had somegray hen with outspread wings, crouched close to the earth, and un-

He approached the strangely silent house. There must be a number of human beings in and around it, but not a sound suggested their presence. Many of the windows were open, and their chintz curtains billowed in the breeze. Not a voice was heard, not a note of music came out to him, not a dog barked. One would think they'd have dogs in a place like this. If they had, the dogs were inside, hidden like the

Hale strode up the wide steps leading to the front veranda, passed through the screen door, reached the double front doors, and pressed a compelling finger against an electric button on a side-panel. Light steps came along the inner hall and the right-hand door swung open. A young and pretty girl, in a maid's uniform, gave him a welcoming smile and stood aside to let him pass, even before he spoke. She was so pleasant to look at, so matter-offactly reassuring, that the newcomer experienced an absurd sense of thing of the effect of a brooding relief. He smiled at her as at a familiar friend.

A kind of swift, one of whose species is the swift-flying small bird that may be seen rising sharply from American chimneys, has at last been identified as the bird that makes the edible nests which Chinese consider a delicacy.

But the business of collecting edible birds' nests will not see any machinery, Canuto G. Manuel, of the Philippine Commonwealth Fish and Game administration, indicates in the Philippine Journal of Science.

For the birds build their nests in all but inaccessible caves, which collectors must reach today in prethe neighborhood as 'the Nash forbears—by climbing patiently cisely the same manner as their chasms. And, once inside, the collectors use the same primitive torches to light their way as they maintain a precarious balance while they carefully remove the nests from hollows in the cavern walls.

Collecting is done by Filipinos who work on their own, selling all they take to the corporation. Each nest weighs less than ten grams (about a third of an ounce) when removed from the cavern wall, and loses a considerable portion of its weight in the drying process. The nests are gelatinous in nature.

Will Your Child Be Ready For School?

Noted Food Authority Outlines a Correct Diet for the Growing Youngster

> By C. HOUSTON GOUDISS 6 East 39th Street, New York City.

WHEN school closed last June, most parents looked forward to the long weeks ahead when their children could play in the sunshine, get plenty of rest, and build up a splendid fund of vitality to last them all through the new school year.

Some mothers resolved to do everything possible to prevent a recurrence of last season's disheartening colds.

Others planned to look into a blood-building diet that would give Mary or Johnnie more pep and rosier cheeks. Perhaps there were teeth that required attention, or a nose or throat condition to be corrected. Now, within a few weeks, the children will be returning to school, or in some cases beginning their school life. Every mother should ask herself whether she has made the most of the opportunities offered by the vacation period. Have you put forth a conscientious effort toward making your children 100 per cent fit for school? If not, there is still time! You cannot finish the job in a few weeks, but you can make a good start. And you owe it to your children to begin at once. For whether they enjoy school or find it tedious, whether they make excellent records or lag behind their fellows, depends in large measure upon their fitness.

Every child is entitled to good health, safeguarded by high resistance. And in this age of amazing scientific discoveries, every child should enjoy these blessings.

Top health and resistance to disease are the result of an intelli- the health of teeth and gums. gently planned and carefully exe- However, tomatoes, or tomato cuted health program. Dried sunshine and fresh air, freedom fruits furnish iron and are high from physical defects, and the in energy values. Fruits and vegeavoidance of fatigue.

Diet-the Key to Health

Perhaps the most important factor of all is the carefully balanced diet. When planned to take full advantage of modern nutritional discoveries, it will insure normal growth and health, and build up high resistance that is like a protecting wall to safeguard your children.

With our present knowledge of the power of food, there should not be one ill-nourished child in our land. Yet the spectre of malnutrition rears its ugly head among children of the well-to-do as well as in homes where money is scarce. For, as a rule, it is not lack of money, but lack of knowledge of food values, or faulty eating habits which are responsible for this tragedy.

Don't Overlook Protective Foods A child's diet should be built upon a foundation of the protective foods-milk, eggs, fruits and vegetables. Milk takes precedence over all of these because it is an absolute necessity if children are to develop strong, straight bones and sound teeth.

The penalty for breaking this fundamental rule is retarded growth, fragile, crooked bones, decayed teeth and possibly nervousness. How dare any mother inflict such punishment upon her children? A fine amount of calcima high grade protein, and some of every known vitamin can be furnished so easily by providing children with a quart of milk daily-either as a beverage, or in soups, cream sauces, puddings, cocoa or with cereals.

Eggs rank next to milk in importance, because of their protein, iron and vitamins. A child's diet should normally include one egg daily, or at least three or four

Green, leafy vegetables must not be neglected, as they supply iron and precious vitamins. Yellow vegetables, such as carrots and sweet potatoes are notable as a source of vitamin A.

Fruits, especially the citrus varieties, are important for their vitamin C, which helps to safeguard tables in general are likewise an important aid to regular elimination. As a rule, school children may have lean meat, fish, chicken or liver once a day, and a second protein food, such as cheese or legumes, is usually introduced at another meal.

Energy Foods in Abundance

There must be plenty of energy foods, such as potatoes, rice, macaroni, bread and butter, and cereals, to help prevent the physical fatigue which lowers resistance. At least one starchy food belongs in every meal.

A well-cooked cereal should be provided once daily; in warm weather a ready-to-eat cereal may be used instead. In order to provide an abundance of minerals, and vitamin B, nutritionists place emphasis upon the whole grain va-For desserts, choose rice, tapioca and bread puddings; gelatine, either plain or with fruit; fresh or stewed fruit; milk sherbets or ice

In planning meals for children, it is important at all times to keep the menus simple, and prepare foods so that they are appetizing and easily digestible.

Aids to Good Nutrition

It is important also to bear in mind that the most perfect diet will not provide sound nutrition unless the food is properly digested and assimilated. Adequate sleep and rest, which do away with fatigue, are therefore essential. However perfect the diet, overexertion and undue fatigue, if continued, will soon bring about a state of lowered resistance.

In planning a program of daily living that will make and keep your children fit for school, put food first. But consider also rest, fresh air and sunshine, and regular habits. It would be well, too, to check up on the child's general health before he returns to school, so that he will not be handicapped by some physical defect, such as bad teeth, diseased tonsils, faulty vision or impaired hearing-all of which hinder the ability to learn. Never forget for a moment that a child's happiness and success are closely related to his health. All mothers should remember this, for it is no exaggeration to say that THE POWER OF A NA-TION DEPENDS UPON THE HEALTH OF ITS CHILDREN.
