the Gulf of Mexico, UN-A Texan prepared today to try to slip a steel lasso over the top of two burning gas wells in a ticklish control the roaring multimillion-dollar blaze.

Myron Kinley, a specialist in putting out oil and gas well fires, will try to catch a T-shaped pipe sticking up from the wells and anap it off.

If the pipe is snapped properly, the flames will be directed skyward instead of spewing out each end of the crossbar. Then Kinley's assistant, Mansel Rake of Houston, will place a dynamite charge near the well and set it off, hoping it will blow out the spurting flames. The 54-year-old firefighter from Houston, Tex., postponed the lasso attempt yesterday when shifting winds churned the Gulf into a tempest.

The winds shifted to a more vorable direction last night. The two burning wells are 10 miles from the Louisiana coast and about 90 miles southwest of New

With the fire out, Rake could move in and cap the well and cut off the flow of gas.

The "T" was weakened but not destroyed Tuesday by 30 rounds of high explosive, anti-tank shells fired from a 75 m.m. recoilless rifle by an Army gun crew from Camp Polk, La.

If the lasso attempt fails, the Army has offered to send in ballistics experts to have another try with the 75 m.m. rifle.

Question Of Gas Price Fixing Is One Possessing Many Angles

Natural gas in some instances sells for three cents per thousand cubic feet when that of identical or comparable quality sells at seven or eight cents.

This has given rise to introduction of a measure in the Texas legislature which would empower the state to fix rates on gas at the wellhead.

There are several reasons in support of the idea. One is that royalty owners of low-priced gas feel they are being cheated. Next, the state, which levies taxes on a percentage basis, feels it is not getting it sjust deserts. Finally, there are those who hold that the cheaper gas will be used first, which means that Texas gas in the main might be exhausted prior to those of neighboring states.

Some states-Oklahoma, Kansas-gave their public service commissions authority to fix the price of natural gas at the wellhead, as a conservation measure. The courts have upheld its legality. As a result, some Kansas and Oklahoma gas brings, say, seven or eight cents, where comparable Texas gas may sell for three Naturally, the pipeline companies are going to use up the cheap Texas gas first. That may mean the Oklahoma-

Kansas gas sellers may find a laggard market on their hands. It also is true that the Oklahoma-Kansas gas belt has lost some allied industries,

To equalize the price between Texas Panhandle gas with that in Oklahema and Kansas-much of it from the same general pool-one Texas legislator wants give the Texas Railroad Commission authority to fix the price of gas at the wellhead. Just for the Panhandle, mind Another legislator says why not give the commission power over all pricesettings in Texas, and has introduced legislation to that effect. The same was done two years ago, and after a bitter battle it was defe ted. In general the royalty owners wanted it-they're on the hot end of the poker-and the gas pipeline companies and industrial con-sumers opposed—they naturally want to buy the stuff as cheaply as possible.

Obviously, there exists some waste and inequity in gas pricing. There is a danger that if the state fails to plug the hole, some federal bureau might. Still, there also is the question of the efficacy of price fixing by anybody, government in-

Performance Of Prison System Is Reason To Continue Improvements

of the worst prison systems in the country. There were riots, self-mutilations, wholesale escapes, and an almost continuous uproar.

A new regime brought in O. B. Ellis, with a distinguished record for enlightened and efficient prison operations in Tennessee, as general manager of the system. The prison board asked for funds to remodel and improve the system's physical plant. The Legislature obliged, and for appropriations amounting to about $5 million the system acquired improvements valued at $10 million, thanks to the employment of prison labor and careful management of men and funds.

Of the 31 prison riots that have swept the country in the last ten months, not one has occurred in the Texas system, as French Robertson of Abilene, chairman of the Texas Prison Board, declared in a speech at Austin this week honoring three

Prison officials assert that morale among the prisoners is at the highest peak in many years. Self-mutilation to avoid work prisoner uprisings.

On the basis of past performance, the board and management can be trusted to make the best use of funds appropriated, and their plea for continuance of the improvement program should not go unanswered. There is no room for pampering in prisons, but there is always room for human and elightented practices, many of which must depend on adequate and

Question Of What We Can Do In Defense Of Jap Islands Raised

A week before the inauguration, on Jan. 13, the Japanese government issued a statement, in fact addressed to the Soviet Union, protesting against the frequent violation of the sky over Japanese territory and serving notice that the intruders would be attacked. The warning was supported at once by Gen. Clark's Headquarters and by the American Embassy in Tokyo.

This is an important development in itlso because it raises so many of the unanswered questions connected with our military commitment to protect

First, a few facts. Japan consists of a chain of islands of which the most northern is called Hokkaido, Six miles north of Hokkaido is the first island of another chain, known as the Habomai or Little Kuriles. Beyond them there is the island chain of the Kuriles proper, which reaches right up to the Siberian mainland at the peninsula of Kamchatka. Now the Hobomsi Islands are so close to Hokkaido that the main fishing port in northern Japan, a place called Nemuro, is really under Soviet control in the sense that the Japanese ships have to pass through waters controlled by the Soviet, From the Soviet Kuriles come not only the intruding airplanes, the harassing actions against Japanese fishing vessels, but also an in-filtration across the narrow waters by agents and agitators.

The question has now arisen of how we Ean make good our promise, made last April in the Mutual Security Treaty, for the defense & Japan against external aggression. What, to be specific, should we nd can we do for the security of Hokkaido against intruding aircraft, harassment of the fishing fleet, infiltration and Soviet aggression?

It is evident that the United States cannot do everything. It cannot for example, station Coast Guards around Hokkaido It cannot put American police inside Hokkaide to detect and to round up inflitrating agents. All that, including anti-aircraft ons and interception by airplanes, everything having to do with unfriendly forces inside Japanese territory, must be a Japanese and not an American responsibility. We can help Japan to equip the necessary forces but we cannot ourselves provide the forces.

Our obligation in the defense of Japan is to prevent the Soviet Union and Red is to prevent the Soviet Union and Red China from waging war against Japan, from invading it, bombing it, blockading it. We are pledged, as the Assistant Secretary of State, Mr. Allison, who worked with Mr. Dulies on the treaty, describes it, to "the defense of Japan from external aggression." The italics are mine. The defense against internal aggression, against civil war, rebellion, sedition, subversion, sabotage, espionage fifth columns must be provided by the Japanese themselves — behind the shield which protects them against external aggression.

selves — behind the shield which protects them against external aggression.

This distinction of responsibility is fundamental. Although there are cases where it cannot be made sharply in practice, though there are necessary exceptions, at least for the time being, the fense is the difference between a policy of "containment" - as the term has come to be used in practice - and a policy of redressing the balance of power. The American obligation to protect Japan against external aggression can be made good only by a favorable global balance of power. It cannot be made good very long by the American contributions to the local defense of Japan. There are not enough Americans to provide for the local defense of Japan. And if there were enough, the Japanese people would soon be protesting against having so many Americans

The obligation which we do assume unquestionably is a big one, but it is not too big if we are clear and efficient about the policy and determined not to be distracted from it. Our task is to see to it that the balance of power, which has since 1945 prohibited and deterred the Soviet Union from waging war, is maintained, is not upset against us.

The balance of power has been deterrent wherever, as in Germany, the Balkans, the Middle East but not in Korea our guarantee has been plain and unequivocal. The balance of power has been favorable because (a) the United States itself could not be conquered, paralyzed, or defeated in a general war, and (b) because the United States could inflict tremendous and increasing damage with the atomic weapons of the Strategic Air Force.

This favorable balance of power would be lost if (a) the United States became vulnerable to atomic attack or (b) the U. S. S. R. became invulnerable to it. Either way our power to prohibit military action against Japa:, Germany, or any of our allies, would be radically impaired.

For the longer run the great problems of military policy will turn upon how to allocate the investment of effort as between the defense and the offense. It is evident that if the Soviet defense can be come strong enough to turn back the Strategic Air Force, then the balance of power will turn sharply in favor of the Communist mass armies and of the Soviet tactical air force. The same would happen if the Soviet offensive power became strong enough, which it is not now, to paralyze the United States.

On the other hand, as long as the United States offensive power is kept strong enough to strike deeply and repeatedly to-side the Soviet Union, the offensive arm is itself the primary defense not only of the United States but of all our allies, including Japan, including the island of Hokkaido. It will amost certainly be true that no perfect, indeed no adequate, local defense can be provided throughout the world against external attacks - and that the deterrent power of the offensive is the only reliable global defense.

If this is true, then the highest priority ould be given to the scientific research, the engineering experiments and the dogical preparations most likely to maintain the advantage we now possess in the field of the strategic offensive,

Another Republican, Sen. Mundt, a South Dakota Methodist, drew a bead on Conant from an unexpected direction. "Too bookish" to be high commissioner, Mundt said. When President Truman wanted to reorganize a government agency less either House disapproved, the plan went through. House or Senate could block it by a specified hower. But all 15 Republicans on a House committee voted to make it easier—by lowering the required vote—for the House to block Eisenhower than it was to block Truman in such cases. All 14 Democrats on the committee voted on Eisenhower's side.

The same situation faces Eisen-

Eisenhower's side.

In the Senate a committee approved a bill—with Republicans and Democrats voting for it—to do what the House committee wants. Sen, McCarthy and Sen. McClellan, Arkansas Democrat, pushed this idea.

Since in each case it was only a committee acting, nothing is final until the full membership of both houses vote on the proposal.

Mr. Sokolsky also appears to be more anti-New Deal than pro-anything, which might account for his failure to explore all the possible consequences of his theories that really were originated in the latter days of feudalism. Apparently fearing that the New Deal isn't a thing of the past, despite the "change," Writer Sokolsky still spills his most belittling prose over the late and deceased President Franklin D. Roosevelt. At the same time, perhaps unwittingly, he admits that contemporaries can't be fully objective and that only history will reveal the Rooseveltian era in its true propor-

Says Mr. Sokolsky, in a recent piece: Roosevelt solved (Precident) Hoover's major problem, unemployment, only by war. Payments for idleness, subsidies maintaining 10,000,000 unemployed, doles to the indolent, the reduction of productivity, sharing work and redistributing the wealth are devices as old as Joseph in Egypt, but they did not solve the American problem of unemployment either in the Hoover or the Roosevelt administra-

That's what the Stalinists have been saying all the time. Let capitalism rur hog wild, they urged, and it'll tear itself up; America, Britain, and company will collapse and Russia will dominate the world without having to fight for it.

Roosevelt's blackest sin, according to his critics, was in refusing to let the economy run wild. The critics conveniently overlook the fact that it would scarcely run at all when he took over. FDR didn't succeed perfectly, maybe be-

Washington Calling-Marquis Childs

Sometimes We Seem To Imitate Methods Used By Totalitarians

WASHINGTON .- One of the criticisms leveled at American foreign policy in recent years was that this country was forever reacting to Communist action. Our olicy was shaped by what the other side did. The initiative was left almost entirely to the opposition.

There was merit to this criticism. But many who made the charge have failed to realize that here at home we are reacting to the Communi threat by defensive measures that too often seem to imitate the repression of totalitarian communism.

To many of our friends in the free world it appears that we are losing the initiative of freedom which has made this country what it is. They have looked to us across the years for a positive faith in the ideals of freedom and individual responsibility at the heart of the American form of government. The program to review the loyalty or employees of the federal government was first put into operation by an executive order issued by President Truman in 1947. The loyalty system was an out-growth of the shocking disclosures in the case of Alger Hiss. The public learned in the Hiss case that an American who had had all the advantages of education and opportunity under 'he American system could reject his heritage and become so complete a convert to an alien belief as touse his official position to betray his country's secrets. If there were many more like Hiss, then it should be known as quickly as possible and proper action should be

One who worked for a loyalty program in the Republican 80th Congress was Representative Edward H. Rees (R., Kan.). created a permanent five-man Loyalty Review Board. That bill passed the House in 1947 by a substantial majority. But the Senate never took it up. Now Rees has reintroduced the same measure He believes it will be passed by ent climate of opinion on Capitol Hill he is probably right. This would make lovalty investigation both houses this time. And given the presand review a permanent part of the American governmental system. It is for this reason disturbing to many who believe the phenomenon of disloyalty is a temporary one growing out of the upheaval of the world-wide depression, the threat of Nazi conquest and the alliance with Soviet Russia in World War II. Those who are dubious of a permanent loyalty system point out that only a tiny fraction of one per cent of the government's 2,500,000 employees were found to be disloyal under the current program. They also feel that the ong-term aspects of the problem can be handled by the individual departments with the cooperation of the FBI.

Another concern over passage of such a law is that the new board would have the right to reopen all the 15,586 loyalty cases considered under the present executive order. Rees, who insists he is not looking under the bed for Communists, says these cases would not necessarily be looked into again but the authority would be there if it was desired to do so. He believes the present system has not been sufficiently thorough or efficient and the pressures on such a board would be to go over once again many of the old cases. Some individuals have been under the necessity of proving their loyalty not once but two or three times as the executive order has been tightened to cover "rea-sonable doubt." They have sometimes had to refute idle gossip and malicious rumor.

As has often been said, no one has a right to a government job. But orderly government is difficult, if not impossible, under the demoralization of constant loyalty reviews. Those with independence and imagination will have every incentive to get out of government service.

President Eisenhower shortly after his election pamed a three-man board-Nelon Rockefeller; the President's brother, Dr. Milton Eisenhower: and Arthur Flemming, a Republican who has served in several important offices and is now head of Ohio Weslevan University-to s problems of government reorganization. They are reported to have recommended a top-level commission authorized to determine whether, on the one hand, the present loyalty program has been effective and, on the other hand, whether it has been fair to all concerned. While no official announcement of this has come out, it has already been attacked by those who want the politics of unlimited "red hunting" to continue. If these men who seem to hate freedom have their say, then every shadow of dissenting or even differing opinion will be stamped out. The imitations of the enemy will be to all intents and purposes com-

SIMMONS WAS A GOOD JUDGE OF STRIKES They tell this story on Al Simmons, the great sjugger recently named to baseball's Hall of Fame:

A young hurler was having trouble with his control while facing the Philadelphia immortal. The umpire called three straight balls, which irked the flinger no end. He stalked to the plate to protest.

After he had had his say, the arbiter replied:
"Son, when the ball is in there, Mr. Simmons will let you Al did, on the next pitch, rifling an extra-base rap off the boards.
