Earth Shocks Strike Terror To Two Cities

Lisbon, Portugal; Oaxaca, Mexico, Feel Tremors, Damage Done

(By The Associated Press) Earthshocks frightened the population of two widely separated cities today and last night. Lisbon, Portugal, the capital of that nation, felt two tremors today, as did Oaxaca, Mexico. In Lisbon, panic was created, water mains broken and other damage done. Most of the population of Oaxaca spent the night outdoors, remembering January's disastrous quake, after strong shocks were felt yesterday evening. No casualties were reported at either place.

Proration To Get First Test In U.S. Court

Suit Involves Plan Adopted in East Texas Field

HOUSTON, May 20 (INS)—For the first time in the turbulent history of oil proration in Texas, a federal court will be called upon tomorrow to determine the merits of this type of conservation. A three-judge federal court will sit here Thursday to hear the suit for injunction brought by the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation to restrain enforcement of proration in the East Texas field. Judge J. O. Hutchinson of Houston will preside over the court, and the other two judges are Judge Daniel West of San Antonio, and Judge Randolph Bryant of Sherman.

While proration has been attacked on constitutional grounds many times in state courts, in some cases carried to the highest courts of appeal, the federal judiciary has not been asked to rule upon the question in Texas.

Seeks Settlement
In bringing the suit, Alfred MacMillan, as an individual and as trustee for the MacMillan Petroleum Corporation, attempted to get a final settlement on the entire question, by declaring that proration has such a widespread effect on market conditions in the East Texas field, that in order for the plaintiffs to obtain adequate relief it is necessary that enforcement of said order be enjoined as to all persons and companies subject thereto and affected thereby.

Thus was avoided the mistake of others who have brought injunction suits to them alone and not to all others operating in the field.

The company claimed the proration order was a violation of anti-trust laws, interfered with private contracts, was a violation of the due process clause of the constitution. Was in restraint of interstate commerce.

Contract
A contract with the Toronto Pipe Line company for sale of 200,000 barrels within sixty days, and with other parties for daily deliveries, was claimed by the petitioning corporation.

Attack was also made on the field umpire, the petition stating that A. A. Casper purported to be an umpire for the railroad commission, but in fact had "no official status" and was an employee of "certain major oil companies" which paid his salary. Umpires are paid jointly by operators in the fields in which they operate.

Several other proration suits are pending in state courts at Austin.

Trucks Made To Cut Loads To Ten Bales

New Law Enforced First Time By Highway Patrolman

FORT WORTH, May 20 (UP)—Nine truck drivers stopped by state highway officers for overloading their truck with 100 bales, met state requirements in order to continue to Houston.

Drivers were cutting their loads of 18 to 22 bales to 10 bales each, as required by a newly enacted law. Gov. Ross Sterling last Wednesday signed a bill preventing trucks from carrying more than twenty bales of compressed, or ten bales of uncompressed cotton.

The drivers were stopped by State Highway Officer E. B. Wheeler, after they had just left the Traders Oil Mill Company en route to Houston, where the cotton was to be sent by boat to New York.

The trucks carrying the shipments were loaded by the White Truck company of Houston. According to Wheeler, the drivers are immune from arrest as long as they are in the incorporate limits of a city. He said, however, he would refer to let them continue with the shipments unless they cut down to the 10-bales.

High School Graduate Speakers Present Results of Study of Leisure Time Uses

Less Selfish Action Urged Before Club

No Pockets In Shrouds, Declares Salesmanship Expert

Group thinking rather than individual, community work rather than personal, and services to the masses rather than to the self was urged by Louis E. Diehl, business counselor, LaSalle Extension University, Chicago, who was the principal speaker at the Business Men's Luncheon Club today.

"Constructive Salesmanship of Today" was the theme of Mr. Diehl's talk. Declaring that the success of human endeavor is based on the service it renders, Mr. Diehl said the business world of today needs to know how to serve in order to learn how to sell.

"We can't get over business being lovely," he declared. "We are waiting for it to come back. But it won't come back that way. We need less waiting and more working; more group consciousness and less individualism."

Speaking of proposed building projects within a community, Mr. Diehl declared personal opinion should be formed on the benefit the project will be to the masses rather than how it will selfishly serve the individual.

"Selfish Profit" he said, "when we think in terms of selfish profit. If you are not following the principles of real service, not thinking of the good you can do for your community as a whole, you're not getting much out of life, either in happiness or in profit. We have lost sight of the great issues, and are paying too much attention to petty differences and selfishness. We must put out before we can get very much back. When public leisure comes to the front this hearty cooperation between the masses, the bankers, the business men is needed. Money must be spent. There are no pockets in shrouds."

"Now," he said, "it is not the material things that count, but the things we put in the lives of others. It is not a question of how much you get out of something, but how it will best serve the community. On public programs let us not lose sight of the worthwhile issues."

Speaking of present day business methods, Mr. Diehl declared the day had passed when business was not a profession. The successful business man of today, he said, must study business methods.

These methods, he stated, are to learn more in order to serve better, learn more in order to do better.

Where Is Opportunity?
"Opportunity," he closed, "is where we believe it is. There is no 'hit or miss' road to success. It is based on a careful system of preparation."

Mr. Diehl is past president of the Fort Worth and San Antonio Salesmanship Clubs, and is well known in Texas business circles.

Carmen Compton, valedictorian, and Zillah Mae Ford, salutatorian of the 1931 graduating class of the high school, were guests of the club, and made short talks.

Mrs. Pauline Cantrell Brigham was program chairman.

The resignation of Dr. O. K. Bivings, president, was accepted. Dr. Wofford B. Hardy, vice-president, will fill out the term of Dr. Bivings, according to a motion passed by the club.

Chicago "Broke" Mayor Declares

CHICAGO, May 20 (UP)—The financial condition of Chicago and Cook county became so acute today that bankers and politicians pleaded with each other to "figure some way out quickly before we all collapse together."

While 10 bankers were meeting last night with County Treasurer McDonough and informing him that they had done "absolutely all they could," Mayor Anton J. Cermak was telling a group of politicians that the city really was "broke" and that something had to be done at once.

"Conditions are so bad," the mayor said, "that I wish the newspapers would quit talking about it until we can find a way out."

Cermak said every possible effort was being made to reduce city expenditures but that legislation would be necessary to remedy the situation permanently.

Regulation Of Fees Due Solons Say

So-Called Evils Believed Corrected by 42nd Legislature

AUSTIN, Texas, May 20 (AP)—That something will be done at the next session of the legislature to cure alleged evils of the fee system of remunerating county and certain district officials was deemed certain by members of the 42nd legislature.

Some of the so-called evils were believed corrected by the 42nd legislature but it was generally agreed further action was necessary to wipe out the old system and install one that would be modern and efficient, those opposed to the present plan said.

The legislature passed a bill last week to throw additional safeguards around the state in the matter of fees. Reports from the auditor and comptroller indicated that in some cases officers were not satisfied with fees they were receiving but had forged witness and expense account certificates in an effort to obtain more. The matter was immediately presented to the Travis county grand jury with the result indictments are pending against two former officers while two others who were implicated awaited trial.

Cost Much
Two of the cases were reported to have cost the state approximately $150,000 each.

The comptroller and auditor were highly commended for their work and they announced the investigation would continue in hopes several other cases of fraud might be uncovered.

It was believed that ultimately the state will establish a bureau for the inspection and supervision of public officers, abolish the fee system and place all officials on a salary, the remuneration to be determined by the population and needs of the county.

There were many, however, who argued that the fee system offered an incentive to the officers to work harder at the business of law enforcement and that if their fees were abolished, law enforcement would become more lax. Proponents of the move to abolish the fee system have countered with the statement that the failure of an officer to enforce the laws would be a betrayal of the public trust and could be remedied by action of the grand jury.

Argument was made that it would be just as logical to pay the state highway engineers on the basis of the number of miles of roads paved or the number of bridges built as it would be to pay the officers for the number of arrests made or convictions obtained.

Salary Limit
The 41st legislature reduced the maximum annual remuneration of county and district officials to $12,500. A bill has been passed in the house to limit the maximum to $10,000, with the county general fund to enforce the limit should a mayor or a deputy state auditor in each of the 31 senatorial districts. The proposed bureau would have authority to audit and investigate all subdivisions of the state, including counties, cities, school districts and special subdivisions.

Representative Coke Stevenson of Junction, prospective candidate for speaker of the 42nd legislature, is one of the proponents of the plan to provide for better supervision of public officials. The bureau would act as an impersonal representative, not only of the state, but also the subdivisions.

A check of the procedure followed in other states revealed that a majority have passed laws to provide for protection against fraudulent minor officials. The check also revealed Texas was one of the few states that retained the obsolete fee system.

The fee system originated during a period when there was little law enforcement business and little court proceedings, during a period when an officer was not expected to put in all his time on official duties and was aimed at providing fair compensation for the time he spent on the public's business. It was never intended, according to Representative Dewey Young of Wellington, that an official who spent all his time on the job should be paid under a fee system.

Young, another spokesman of probable speakers of the house, declared:

CORRELATION OF LEISURE AND SCHOOL CITIZENSHIP

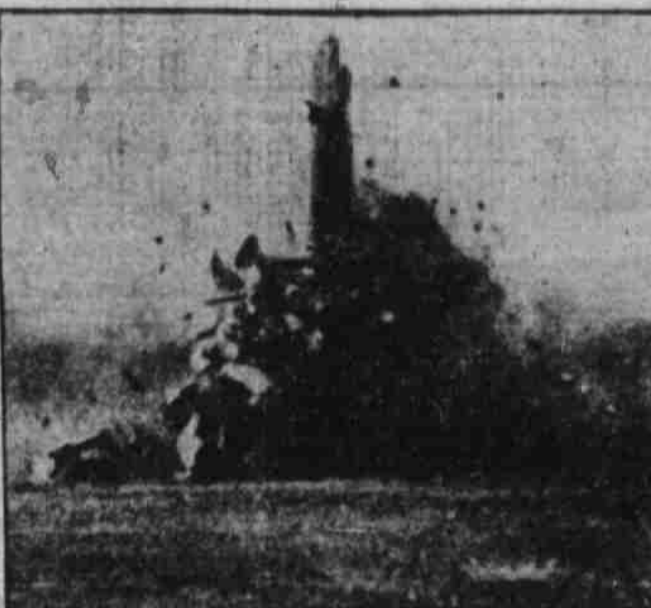

Student leisure has been defined as that time aside from time spent in preparation for and the execution of school work, or those duties assigned by parents, guardians, or employers. School citizenship is the status of a pupil in regard to his rights and privileges as a student and his allegiance to the school for the school offers him protection, and also facilities for self-development. Thus the student's leisure is very closely related to school citizenship.

Just as one citizen's rights should not interfere with the rights of another, the certain rights and privileges accorded any student should not be used in such a way that they would interfere or conflict with the exercise of a fellow-student's rights and privileges. Neither should a person's activities during his leisure time take down any of the standards established or upheld by the school in its participation in school activities.

Through this paper will be pointed out the ways in which students of Big Spring high school are interested in using their leisure time. A comparison will be made showing the ways in which various interests apparently affect the grades and the time spent in these interests. The interests and grades of the seniors will be taken through the four years of their high school life, thus attempting to show the apparent correlation of

New Method Followed In '31 Program

Students Speak; Misses Compton and Ford Honor Graduates

Ninety-nine boys and girls received diplomas at graduation Tuesday evening in the vitalized commencement service of Big Spring high school when four members of the class filled the role usually held by an adult guest speaker.

Carmen Compton was announced by George Gentry, high school principal, as valedictorian of the class. The average of her grades for four years in high school was 91.64. Zillah Mae Ford was named salutatorian, with a four-year average of 91.02.

Robert Kidwell won highest scholarship honors among boys of the class, with a four-year average of 88.60.

Others honored who showed four-year averages of more than 86 will have their names engraved with the other honor students upon a new bronze plaque, adopted for this purpose by the high school. They are Knox Chadd and Vera Frances Cotton.

A crowd that completely jammed the high school auditorium attended the exercises. It was the largest class in history of the school.

Mrs. Omar Pitman played the professional, Rev. Scott Gotten offered the benediction.

Misses Thelma and Evelyn Jackson played as a violin duet "The Dawn of Love" (Theodore Bendix) with Miss Roberta Gray at the piano.

Following the principal address of the evening Nancy Dawes, a member of the graduating class who has earned many honors as a pianist, played "Rondo Capriccioso" (Mendelssohn).

The benediction was given by Rev. H. L. Owen. As recessional Mrs. Pitman played "War March of the Priests" (Mendelssohn).

Introduction
Superintendent W. C. Blankenship introduced the principal speakers. He pointed out that the new plan for the graduation exercises was being followed in a number of schools for the purpose of giving the students opportunity of gaining more from them.

The principal address, said the superintendent, culminated a study by the entire class of the wise use of leisure time, one of the seven cardinal principles of education. This study extended over several weeks.

"There was a time when a man worked most of the 24 hours of each day," said Mr. Blankenship. Science has played the leading role by making possible greater production by human labor, the work day has been shortened to eight hours and we have in prospect shortening it to six hours with a 5-day working week.

"Therefore," he continued, "we actually have much more leisure time. Many of us feel we have very little time for leisure, but in most cases that belief arises from the fact that we have not learned how to use that time."

Speakers
"An Interpretation of Leisure Time" by Robert Kidwell; "The Correlation of Leisure Time and School Citizenship" by Carmen Compton; "The Economic Aspect of Leisure Time" by Vera Frances Cotton; and "The Facilities for Leisure Time in Big Spring and Vicinity" by Louise Fray were the topics of the speakers.

(Full text of the four addresses at the graduation exercises will be found elsewhere in this issue).

Following certification by Principal Gentry and conferring of the term "graduates" upon the class by Supt. Blankenship, Dr. E. O. Ellington, president of the school board, presented the diplomas.

Mr. Gentry announced the names and average grades of honor students.

Mr. Alfred's conduct of his office is above general criticism.
From a standpoint of personality, election of Mr. Alfred as Mr.
Bobbitt made no difference to the newspaper. The only interest it had in the campaign was to help secure for Texas the best possible administration of the office. Therefore, we are just as pleased with the Alfred administration as we could have been with Mr. Bobbitt in office—at least as far as it has gone.

But getting back to Mr. Alfred, the young man from Wichita Falls is daily becoming more of a political factor, and as opined in these columns last summer, he has sparkling chances of climbing to the governor's chair or to the United States senate, before his temples grow gray. A satisfactory tenure in the attorney general's office will "make"
Mr. Alfred for a long time to come.

While Senator Walter Woodward, of Coleman, has faltered politically since his smashing oratory in the second primary campaign snatched the Sterling chestnuts from the fire, Senator Clint Small, of Wellington, is another West Texas who cannot be "counted out." Shelled at the close of the first gubernatorial campaign of 1930, the Wellingtonian has started to beat back and has suffered no recent setback, such as followed Senator Woodward's suggestion of closing schools until adequate maintenance became available. All in all, Mr. Small may yet climb back into the saddle as a dominant leader in West Texas politics.

Looking to the future politically,
West Texas can be assured of greater strength, greater triumphs than the past has delivered to its door.
Better times and more people—plus bravely political strategy—will turn the trick. West Texas' day of playing the political door mat shows signs of unmistakable ending.

Generosity In Dollars

WHEN a generous gesture is made with dollars, instead of words, it deserves to be listed with noble impulses. There are entirely too many cases of flimsy sentimentalism for which laurel wreaths are planted and press notices are given.
But when you get a green-back token of unselfishness it is fairly reliable.

Last year a bank in Vineland, N. J., failed. School children lost $27,000. The money in which they had earned in mowing lawns and shoveling snow and wiping dishes vanished. The round silver dollars that were special birthday gifts, and the quarters that had been saved when they wanted to see a movie and didn't have completely gone.

Colonel Evan O. Kimble, the leader of another financial institution in the same city, knew what the reaction of those youngsters would be. They would decide that you couldn't trust savings accounts. They would buy caramels and gumdrops and go to the movies and ball games, whenever they had any money. They would come to the decision that the wisest thing to do is to spend your money before something happens to it.

Colonel Kimble realized that boys and girls who held this attitude couldn't train for the best citizenship. Therefore, from his own pocket he dragged out the money bags and restored to each child the sum that he had lost.

Certainly the children who had preferred another bank to his didn't expect such largesse. But they are going to remember. They are going to realize that fair play and generosity still make up a big part of life, or else a benefactor would not have made such a gift.

There are those who will say that the bank acted as a benefactor because it is counting on the profits which will accrue from the new accounts that will be opened. But such accounts will be small, at best. It will be a long time until the boys and girls will be making noticeable sums of money. The money which the bank could have loaned would have done more for it financially than the new accounts can do.

Colonel Kimble is representative of the type of business men who are putting a conscience in their work. He realized that it is just as important to teach future citizens that financial backing with which they deal is secure as it is to encourage them to send their coin to India's starving millions.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

West Texas and Politics

Lubbock Avalanche
THE "Texas Editorial Digest," which is compiled to generalize the editorial views of Texas newspapers, comments at length this week upon West Texas' becoming "politically minded." The fact that this great section of the state has learned to "get up on its hind legs" and battle for what it wants seems to have created considerable interest everywhere.

West Texas, the "The Digest" points out, came very near electing a governor last summer and, as the population figures grow, this year is becoming more and more a political factor. "Feeling its oats," after looking over the Federal census reports, West Texas has rightly decided to throw off the "step-child yoke" it has carried so many years. The Morning Avalanche doesn't expect to see West Texas win all or even most of the political fight this year, or next year. But the practice it is getting now will come in handy in the future, when there are even more people and more prominent politicians in this area.

Attorney-General James V. Alfred, of Wichita Falls, is a West Texas political hope for the future. Although The Morning Avalanche supported Mr. Alfred's opponent, R. E. L. Bobbitt, in the campaign of last summer, it is nothing more than fair to publicly admit that so far

Mad Pursuit
BY JESSIE DOUGLAS FOX

SYNOPSIS: Always in a quest of new scenes for his little painting, the shallow artist, Julian Lake, deprives his motherless 20-year-old daughter, Nora, of the home for which she yearns. When, Nicholas Thayer, a young artist, visits him, Nora's instant dislike mounts, when she discovers her father's plans for her marriage to him as a means of ending her wanderings and giving her a place in life. Despite this, she is interested in their guest, because his brother, Jonathan, whom she had met five years before, remains in her fond recollections. Nicholas injures his hand and nearly loses it through blood poison, while Nora, nursing him, detects a strange bitterness in his life. Meanwhile Mrs. Nevins, who had lent them her villa, returns to Florence.

Chapter 7
DESIRES REVEALED
JULIAN LAKE stretched out on two chairs in the garden, seemed to have forgotten his ill temper. He told Nora amiably that Mrs. Nevins insisted on their keeping the villa for several weeks longer. But he was planning something else. Some crazy scheme that might lead to prison this time. For she knew he no longer received that small quarterly check that had allowed them barely to scrape along.

"Julian," she asked, "why did Madalena come back today?"

"She could not live without my charming presence," he said.

"You borrowed the money to pay her," from Nicholas Thayer. Promise me you won't borrow from him again."

"I promise. You shall do it next time," he conceded.

Meanwhile the days went by, filled with this shadow. They had no personality.

Her salary of $25 a week was more than she earned, the studio thought, and she was released.

But she went to M-G-M supported Raymon Navarro in three pictures, made a hit in "Min and Bill," and is vindicated.

The crowning triumph came when Fox recently borrowed her for "Young Sinners" and "The Boat," paying very much more than the $75 that was "too much."

And Constance Cummings. She started in pictures under the worst possible handicap. She too was brought from the stage, with trumpets and fanfare, to support Ronald Colman. She was found wanting.

Instead of going back to New York, exultant, she hung on to show Hollywood. She went to Columbia and played in "The Criminal Code" and other talks. Now she is well launched on her new career.

KNOW WHAT SHE WANTED
Lois Wilson, too, she was a star after "The Covered Wagon," but was damned by the ingenious roles that were given her.

She wanted to create characterizations, and began rejecting all offers to play her old type of heroine. After months of waiting she found what she wanted in "Seed," in which she presented what might be termed justly "a new Lois Wilson."

Her work has won her a contract, with the promise of more and better opportunities.

She asked curiously when they came out.

She shook her head without telling him. He saw her fresh white skin and dark little head and he smiled to think that she should still pray, after all the seamy side of life she must have known, traveling with that tramp of a father.
They wandered on toward the Campanile. It had been raining and now the streets were drying and the very atmosphere seemed washed in gold. Nora was suffocated with beauty as she looked toward the Campanile, now a tower of gold, now a pillar of pearl. They stood watching the color swim away. For the first time he felt an actual kinship with her.

Then they hailed a fiacre that ambled past, behind a meek skinny horse. The old horse clattered over the cobble and was whipped up the hills by the pirate on the driver's seat.

"Tell him not to hurry, please!"
Nora cried. "That horse is soiled."
Nicholas called out his order.

"It's not wise to care so much about others' feelings," he said.

"But you can't help it, can you?"
Nora asked.

"I help it."

The fiacre clattered and jolted along the road.

Nicholas looked at her face, a little troubled, and he asked.

"What are you thinking of?"
"I was thinking of you."
She was so naive that he smiled.
"I was thinking of what you said the other night—that it's all futility.
You couldn't mean that, could you?"

"Yes, I mean it."

It was his bitterness that touched her. But she only said:

"But I wouldn't want to go on living if I felt that that was all there was."

"Wouldn't you?" Nicholas asked with a curious harshness.

"This mood changed and he said, "Sometimes I know that I'm going to do something I'll like, but if I thought I was like all these others who fool themselves I should stop painting."

"I saw the peasant woman that you painted. I thought it was beautiful," she said a little timidly.
They had come to the gate of the Villa Rosa and Nicholas flung some money to the driver. Nicholas opened the gate on its rusty hinges and they went in together.

Once inside she knew she would not see him again until dinner when the conversation would belong to him and her father.

"Let's have tea in the garden,"
Nora said.

He followed her down to the kitchen and stood watching her fill the kettle and put it over the charcoal brazier, cut crusty slices of bread, fill the milk jug.

She carried out the loaded tray
while he followed with the tea pot.
He was still unable to use his right hand. They arranged the chipped cups and Nora poured tea, asking him hopefully if he liked it very strong.

"Very strong!" he said, smiling.
He was pleasant when he smiled
so, with two deep creases down his thin cheeks. His lithe hands made his face seem a little cruel.

"Tell me what it's like where you live," she asked him shyly.
He looked amused, but he began

Child Study Club Sponsors Movie National Parks

The Child Study Club announces that it will sponsor a moving picture showing the two most popular national parks, Yellowstone and Yosemite, at the high school auditorium Saturday evening at 8 o'clock.

The admission fee will be reasonable and school children will be admitted for half-fare. The movie will be unique in that it shows views which the moving picture companies are unable to film, because they are not allowed to make use of the national parks for movie purposes.

The films, most of which have been taken by Miss Irene T. Flynn, show the most popular playgrounds of America in great detail. Mrs. M. R. Showalter, who has seen the pictures, says that they give an accurate estimate of what vacation-seekers may expect. They show the different accommodations for campers from the simplest to the most de luxe. They also portray the beauty spots of the parks and give the traveler an idea of what to seek when he enters.

A percentage of the proceeds from these pictures go to the fund which the Child Study Club is accumulating for the purpose of paying for tonaltonies of needy children. The movie is also of the clean, educational type which the club endorses, says Mrs. R. E. Blount, the president.

Messrs. Floyd Hardesty, Fleming and Elliott head the company.

When A Countess Weds

Capital Heeds Noble Guests' Style Judgment

WASHINGTON (AP)—Fluffy ruffles and filmy lace enhance the springtime beauty of capital brides. Countess Alice Szescheny, daughter of the Hungarian minister, whose marriage to Count Bela Hadik of Hungary was a brilliant event, wore a rare old lace veil which belonged to her mother, Countess Szescheny.

Since Princess Takamatsu of Japan showed her preference for pink during her recent visit to the capital, that dainty shade has become more popular for bridesmaids' gowns.

The maid of honor at a recent wedding wore a filmy pink sleeveless chiffon. For gloves she had long cuffs of pink chiffon ruffles extending from wrists to elbows, with the upper parts of the arms bare.

The bridesmaids wore pink chiffon embroidered with rosebuds, and airy fragile hats of chiffon with gay little nosegays of pink and red flowers tucked under the brims. The upper parts of their long pink gloves were in cut-out embroidery.

Yellow and green were chosen by another bride to deck her attendants. The maid of honor wore yellow crepe-with-green slippers. Two of the bridesmaids wore yellow, and two green. They all had corsage bouquets of yellow snapdragons.

Countess Alice Szescheny wore a bridal veil of rare old lace when she became the bride of Count Bela Hadik.

Down Fashion's Parade Grounds And Bridal Aisles

Simple Gown Smartest For Evening Wear

By DIANA MERWIN (Associated Press Fashion Editor) Paris, May 20. (AP)—Evening gowns for young June brides are as demure as a Quaker bonnet. Tissues, flits and lines of the trowsaun's moonlight frocks are designed to reflect sophisticated simplicity and present a flattering frame for youthful faces and figures.

Tissue paper organdies sweeping into voluminous skirts trimmed with rows of valenciennes lace, net frocks with embroidered ruffles and demure dotted Swiss dresses with gay ribbon belts are among the favorites for the youthful bride.

In color the cotton frocks range from dead white to delicate pastel shades called "drages" after the tints of a type of French candies. There are pale pink organdies embroidered in white flowers, accented with coral spangles, ivory net dresses embroidered in green beads and pale blue dotted Swiss frocks for bridal trowsaun.

The less youthful bride who cannot wear the demure frock may choose evening gowns of shimmering satin designed on sophisticated diagonal lines. White is the favorite shade for these satin gowns, and lemon yellow, lime green and pastel blue smart for the girl who prefers color.

Filmy chiffons and heavy laces designed with draped skirts and worn with little waistlength capes offer another smart addition to the trowsaun, while one dark frock of black, brown or prune triple georgette is almost a necessity to the bride's evening wardrobe.

Evening wraps may be of velvet, so long that they sweep to the hem of the gown and the back. PARISIAN MATRONS DON ROMPER SUITS PARIS (AP)—Romper suits, designed on the lines of small boys' plaything clothes, are a new addition to the modish matron's wardrobe this summer.

The suits are designed with a "Buster Brown" blouse and a short straight jacket, worn with knee-length shorts under a wrap-around skirt.

NEW SPRING FROCKS OF OPALINE GREEN WASHINGTON (AP)—Opaline green is the name of a dainty shade much used in summer dresses.

One of green, dotted net is applied with large green silk flowers running over the full skirt.

LONDON NOW WEARS RINGS ON ITS HATS LONDON (AP)—We have been wearing rings on our fingers and in our ears from time immemorial, but now fashion decrees that we are to wear them in our hats!

White coral is to be popular with black, navy blue and bottle-green suits and gowns, and the star in a recent "talkie" wore two stud earrings of white coral on a closely swathed turban of gleaming black straw.

HOUSE JACKETS BACK IN SPORT GUISSE PARIS (AP)—Bright colored coats resembling old-fashioned house jackets are a new wrinkle for sports wear. They consist of a short straight piece across the back, reaching just below the shoulder and attached to long sleeves. The coats, worn over white sports frocks, are made of bright lightweight wool banded at the wrist in different colors.

Closing Exercises Of Mexican School Held in W.O.W. Hall

The closing exercises of the Mexican public school were held Tuesday afternoon in the Woodman hall in the presence of a large group of patrons and friends. The general tenor of the program was better health and better living. The children of Miss Jones' room rendered a splendid health program. The children of the entire school sang a number of songs to the delight of the audience.

Through the kindness of Mr. E. A. Kelley, local superintendent of the Southern Ice Company, and Mrs. J. H. Delbridge of the home service department, a demonstration on making fruit punch was given and more than 200 people were served to punch and cake. Mrs. Delbridge also lectured on the proper care and refrigeration of foods. In appreciation of the splendid program rendered and the work being done, Mr. Kelley presented the school with a check for ten dollars.

Mrs. M. R. Showalter, county health nurse, delivered a lecture to the mothers on the proper care of children during the summer months. She also stressed the importance of the administration of toxins and vaccination for the preventing of certain diseases. These lectures were translated to the people in Spanish by Mrs. Scott Cotton.

Vatican Withholds Recognition to New Spanish Government

VATICAN CITY, May 20 (AP)—A semi-official Vatican statement today said the Spanish republic had not yet been recognized by the Holy See.

The Vatican expressed good will for the new government but withheld recognition, as King Alfonso XIII and the president of the Republic government is self-assertedly only provisional.

Jimmy Kitts, famous Athens high school basketball coach, will offer a course in that line to high school coaches at Lubbock, August 3-15. The drawing of Kitts should prove a attraction. THE CITY'S WANTS ARE REFLECTED in The Herald

The Water Bucket BY BOBBY CAMPBELL

J. Gordon Bristow, looking fat and sassy, cornered us in Cunningham and Phillips' drug emporium yesterday eve and sipped soda with and on us. The Steer mentor is en route to Lubbock to look over the land. In the grumble seat he has his golf clubs, and in all probability he will enter the West Texas Golf Association tourney at Lubbock this week. Bristow declares he plays a "bully-gully" type of golf. That's a title we've heard looking for all these years for our type of hit and hunt golf. He declared that his golfing at San Angelo the past month had netted him nothing in the way of titles and loving cups, but he had won a couple of second places. At the present he is dividing equally his attention between golf and next fall's football squad. He hopes to win in the latter if not in the former.

Our stool pigeon informs that the playful Dr. Wofford B. Hardy, on recent fishing trip with such personages as Marcus J. Williamson, the high low jack-and-a-game hound, Joe Galbraith, the golfer, and others, amused himself by dropping an eel into the laps of sleepers as they enjoyed slumbering in the early morning air. Imagine the City League president so belittling his position as club prey, as to run around the Coneho with an eel in his hand.

Things were quiet on the dusty front at the city ball park yesterday eve. The Bankers remained at the banks and won a ball game, because Coahoma couldn't make the grade. This afternoon the Tigers are slated to clash with the boys down east, but it is not known at this hour whether the Reds and the Walkers will be able to trek over the miles to play the game.

Spudders Are Downed By Bisons

WICHITA FALLS, May 19.—George Payne and Carey Selph framed up here today to defeat the Spudders, 4-3, for the Houston Buffs. Selph with four hits, drove in all but one of Houston's runs, including the winning marker in the tenth, and fielded brilliantly, starting a doublet play in the ninth after the Spudders had scored twice to tie the count and had the bases full with none out.

Wildcat Coach Issues Challenge To Littlefield for Track Meet

ABILENE, Texas, May 20 (AP)—Believing his track squad, which has taken many honors on south-west and midwestern fields this year, is one of the best in the state, and wishing to demonstrate his belief, Coach Eddie Weems of the Abilene Christian College Wildcats, has issued an invitation to Coach Clyde Littlefield of the University of Texas to participate in a dual meet on the local track.

Weems, to date this year, has been denied the privilege of exhibiting his runners to local followers since all appearances have been on foreign fields. Weems suggested the meet be held the coming week-end.

The Longhorns squad is one of the few in the country that has best the Christian's mark this year. Their best time in the mile relay, made at the Kansas meet, was 3:20 1/2, and in the same meet the Wildcats won the college division in 3:21 1/2.

In the meantime, Coach Weems has announced plans to take at least three of his men, and possibly five, to the annual N.C.C.A. meet at Chicago, Jess Wood and Bulldog Gray crack middle distance runner, and Jimmy Lawrence, long hurdler, are sure of the trip, he said.

Southwest Conference Has Seen One of Most Successful Seasons

FORT WORTH, May 20 (AP)—Pins has settled on one of the finest years of athletics the Southwest conference has ever seen.

The scholastic year 1930-31 has seen the championships of the various major sports well distributed with championship was in basketball. From the outset it was a three-cornered battle between the Rap-rap-raps, Horned Frogs and Mustangs when the race narrowed down to T.C.U. and S.M.U. the Schmidtmann won the title.

Baseball suffered a slight setback as far as individual stars were concerned. From beginning the champion Longhorn, Texas Aggies, and Baylor fought for a title. With Baylor brushed out of the picture by the Longhorns and the count even, the Aggies nosed out the Dischen in the final game of the season to annex their first conference title.

The conference track, held in the Horned Frogs' back yard, was also a sensational affair. Four records were broken and competition in all events was keen. How rare true to form and took first place, with A&M second and third.

Tennis was also sensational, but the Penickmen, featuring Bruce Barnes, continued their reign in spite of a threat by McDiarmid of Texas Christian and Connelley of Baylor.

Hoof didn't create much attention, but O'Hara Watts gave S.M.U. a conference championship.

YETTERAN CYCLIST FALLS. PITTSBURGH, May 19 (INS)—An 80-year-old bicyclist in West Newton, Mass. here, was finally "thrown" after 40 years of reputedly flawless performance with all varieties of cycles. Joe Davenport smashed up his bike when he plunged into a stone wall because, he said, "the brake wouldn't hold." He has ridden a cycle since the days of the tall three-wheelers.

This Game of GOLF

By O. B. Keeler

Fats apparently enjoys being ironical, and it is a useful accomplishment if you can cultivate sufficient philosophy to collect a grin out of these occasional pranks.

There was Bobby Jones' first motion picture, released and on the screen of certain Hollywood and Los Angeles theaters the Sunday he played the exhibition charity match at the Wilshire Country club.

The first episode of the dozen was "The Putter." In it Mr. Jones explained and demonstrated the use of that valuable implement.

On the screen Mr. Jones copped a beautiful 30-foot putt and laid others perfectly stiff.

In spite of the fury of the grid season, the most exciting race for championship was in basketball. From the outset it was a three-cornered battle between the Rap-rap-raps, Horned Frogs and Mustangs when the race narrowed down to T.C.U. and S.M.U. the Schmidtmann won the title.

Athletics Win Eleventh Battle

DETROIT, May 19 (AP)—George Earpshaw was invincible today and held the Detroit Tigers to two hits as the Philadelphia Athletics won the series opener here, 5-0. It was the 11th consecutive victory for the A's.

Al Simmons, league leading hitter, enjoyed a good day at bat, getting a single, double and triple. It was the 17th consecutive game in which he has hit safely. Neither pitcher tossed a page.

YANKS S. CLEVELAND 5. CLEVELAND, May 19.—The Indians lost their 11th straight game today and their first to the New York Yankees this season by an 8-6 count.

Cleveland drove Charley Ruffing from the mound in the second inning, touched him for seven hits, and got five more off Henry Johnson. But they could not overcome the eight runs the Yankees collected off Clint Brown in the first four innings. Pinky Shofner and Fay Thomas pitched good relief ball.

Lou Gehrig hit his seventh homer of the season.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Cal., May 19 (INS)—For 15 years classes in astronomy have journeyed to the Stanford Quad to view the heavens through the telescope which has stood there. But someone unknown has stolen the tripod on which the telescope was placed; it has just been revealed by Prof. S. D. Townley of the astronomy department.

A WATER SPOUT

"He played the shot as all water-shots should be played, when the ball is under the surface, just like a full blast from dry sand, hitting as hard as he could, the nibble-blade taking the water two and a half inches back of the ball.

Water, the physical scientists assure us, is just about the least compressible of material substances, and dry sand is not much more compressible, so the action is practically the same. The ball was literally exploded out of the little stream, the club's face never touching it. Up it rose, sluggishly, in a sort of water-spout; fopped lazily on the green and rolled slowly toward the pin, stopping five feet short.

High School

 their leisure time and the results as manifested in school citizenship.
 The interests of the seniors during all four years of high school life did not vary a great deal. The interests that predominated their Freshman year were also predominant during the other three years of high school life.

The following were the interests in which most of the seniors participated: Reading, dancing, swimming, theaters, hiking, tennis, music, basketball, and socials. Studying was one of the minor interests. However, most students spend a great deal of time studying at school, and spend their hours outside of school in activities not connected with the school.

Time Spent

A survey was also taken of the time spent in these interests. It was found that more time was spent in athletic sports than in any other interest. Eighty minutes was the average time spent in reading, with minor sports, social activities, dancing and hiking taking up from forty minutes to one hour's time per day.

The averages of the seniors for the four years high school work were found to vary greatly according to the way the leisure hours were spent by the students. The students that participated in the school activities were found to have made better grades than those that did not take part in any school affairs.

This reason would not be hard to explain. A student that does nothing but go to school and study does not get the real meaning of school citizenship. He is not actually participating in it. However, a student that takes part in school affairs really learns to love the school more and will do more for it. Consequently, he develops a high type of patriotic loyalty. The spirit of the student makes the school what it is. Mere studying will not convey to the students the true meaning of school citizenship.

Grades

The grades of the seniors ranged from sixty-eight to ninety-two. More grades were approximately eighty than any other average. The students making grades around eighty and higher, and also doing work outside of school to strengthen school citizenship were found to be average students. However, a student that makes only a low average—that is below eighty—and does not take part in any school affairs is not an average student. That student must either spend his leisure time in school citizenship work or study, which is hardly possible because it is difficult to expect to be much higher—or spend his time on things for his own detriment. That student does not think so much of the school or get so much out of it unless the meaning of school citizenship is conveyed to him. The interests of the seniors in their grades were found to be as follows: Seniors participating in athletics, in all but a few instances, made low grades—from seventy to eighty; students that spent a great deal of time reading made an average of seventy-five to ninety-two; and the students' average honors were found to be eighty to ninety-two.

Activities

Latin, French, commercial work, Spanish, trigonometry, and English were found to be the studies that the seniors had spent most of their time on during their high school careers. Being among the more difficult studies these courses naturally needed more attention than the minor studies.

Another meaning of school citizenship is also found intertwined among the honors conferred upon students by both the faculty and the student body. When an honor is to be conferred, a student is sought that is reliable, honest, a hardy worker, and an enthusiastic supporter of the school. The students that have been awarded honors have been found to be the ones that really understood the rights and privileges connected with their high school life. The high school hours so arranged that many students may spend enough time on subjects at school to get all the information needed for classes. Thus the leisure hours after school have to be accounted for. This time could be spent in worth while reading to cultivate a broad mind that is able to grasp the meanings of life. Healthful recreation and the right kind of entertainment help a student live up to the meanings of true citizenship, and help him forge forward at his school until he is at the top. No student is ever selected for any honor or responsible position that cannot take care of himself and pass on to other people the values of leadership.

Among the honors conferred upon a student by the students were the following: President of class, vice-president of class, social committee, play and club. The honors conferred on the seniors by the faculty were the following: Honor roll, office work, committees, May Fete and plays.

Related

Taking into consideration all these things that have been mentioned, it is possible to see just how leisure and school citizenship are related. It can be readily understood then why some students at times take the initiative in progressive, constructive school projects. These students are truly worthwhile members of the class because they understand the meanings of leisure and school citizenship, and seeing their relationship and value, strive to fulfill their positions as the ones that chose them with the position to be filled. Then, too, an example is set that helps many students formulate a decision.

Thus it has been shown through this research that the students who were more interested in worthwhile interests, who made better grades, and upon whom were conferred honors by the faculty and student body were the all-around members of the class.

It is a known fact that the criminal class of people are those who have not learned to use their leisure hours wisely. Therefore there is a strong relation between the wise use of leisure time and school citizenship. The class of 31 stands out in sharp contrast to this. The students that have learned to use their leisure hours wisely are the ones that have succeeded.

As leader of the Democratic forces against Roosevelt and later as the far-fought leader of the American nation, Woodrow Wilson probably suffered more from his load of responsibility and nervous strain than any president since Lincoln.

As a measure of relief against the mental and physical exhaustion which followed each day's work, he took his golf in the late afternoon. He made an effort to disperse the day's work and to take an interest in the sport to which he was naturally drawn. The physical and mental vigor which carried him through the great war and the specially trying ordeal of Versailles.

The value of a careful use of leisure time in keeping mentally and physically fit has been recognized by leading men in the service as well as leaders in American politics. A recent survey made by the economic classes of the high school showed that among the influential professional men of our city the most popular form of recreation is reading. As the success of a lawyer, doctor, teacher, or minister depends largely on his education and training, it is interesting to know that the most successful of these men devote 25 to 40 per cent of their leisure time to increasing their knowledge, not only of strictly professional subjects but of present-day problems of a much broader scope. Among this class of men golf, social contacts, moving pictures, clubs and to a lesser extent, church work, fill the remaining 60 to 75 per cent of their leisure and provide more active forms of recreation, social contacts, necessary for friendships, and mental relaxation made necessary by prolonged mental activity.

Lower

Among business men whose success does not depend on education the percentage of leisure spent on reading is noticeably lower. A few of the business men who read in their spare time read detective stories, novels and current magazines. Some types of literature which provide mental relaxation and inactivity.

The average Big Spring business man spends the greater part of his leisure or approximately 10 hours a week on golf and other sports. The remainder of his leisure time is fairly equally divided among clubs, social contacts, moving pictures and church work.

The average amount spent for recreation by the local business and professional men is about five dollars a week or twenty dollars a month. At this rate this may appear to be a great deal, but it is not. It is not much to spend on leisure but, at such an instance, the man indicated that the returns from money thus invested were great. These men say that it pays to invest wisely in carefully chosen recreations.

Recognized

The great importance of leisure time and particularly of a careful choice of recreational activities has been recognized by several of our recreation presidents.

Washington took part in every form of athletics known during his youth and adulthood. Thackeray said that Washington could jump further, ride harder and fight better than any other young man in Virginia. Disturbing his strenuous years by the English and American armies and later as president of the newly formed republic he remained fit. He is said to have ridden as many as ten or twelve hours in one week. Doubtless his early physical training gave him the iron nerve and constitution without which he could not have been "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

In contrast with the abundance of leisure and recreation which Washington enjoyed, the low cabin laws of Lincoln seem utterly devoid of leisure. The absorbed interest with which he read and studied after his work was over, however, reminds us that few men have their greatest days in that to which they have given the most of their time. Their side issues, their heart's play spell, these give them immortality.

Another of America's brilliant and progressive presidents who loved sports was Roosevelt. While a college and afterward he gave much time to athletic of various sorts and, although seriously handicapped by physical deficiencies, became by sheer force of will and indomitable perseverance, a good boxer, an enthusiastic horseman and an excellent marksman. By frequent living in the open air and persistence in strenuous exertion he got rid of the asthma of his childhood but became a tireless walker and rider and developed a magnificent physique able to respond for years to the exhausting political career which made him for a quarter of a century an outstanding figure in American government.

As leader of the Democratic forces against Roosevelt and later as the far-fought leader of the American nation, Woodrow Wilson probably suffered more from his load of responsibility and nervous strain than any president since Lincoln.

As a measure of relief against the mental and physical exhaustion which followed each day's work, he took his golf in the late afternoon. THE ECONOMIC ASPECT OF LEISURE TIME

By VERA FRANCES COTTEN

The average amount of leisure time has been increased by the rapid extension of the eight-hour day and the effective management of labor-saving machinery.

With this increase in leisure time have come the typical American questions: Is it worthwhile? Does it pay? Is it worth the time and money?

The economic value of leisure depends upon the way in which it is used. There are innumerable ways of using leisure; some profitable, others not so profitable.

Those who, in their leisure time, engage in some form of outdoor sports, see and moving pictures, read clean and interesting books and seek the companionship of attractive, stimulating, thoughtful, provoking men and women done to their work with a renewed determination to succeed. These methods of spending leisure time, therefore, are economically and intelligently profitable because they improve the physical and mental being.

The great importance of leisure time and particularly of a careful choice of recreational activities has been recognized by several of our recreation presidents.

Washington took part in every form of athletics known during his youth and adulthood. Thackeray said that Washington could jump further, ride harder and fight better than any other young man in Virginia. Disturbing his strenuous years by the English and American armies and later as president of the newly formed republic he remained fit. He is said to have ridden as many as ten or twelve hours in one week. Doubtless his early physical training gave him the iron nerve and constitution without which he could not have been "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

In contrast with the abundance of leisure and recreation which Washington enjoyed, the low cabin laws of Lincoln seem utterly devoid of leisure. The absorbed interest with which he read and studied after his work was over, however, reminds us that few men have their greatest days in that to which they have given the most of their time. Their side issues, their heart's play spell, these give them immortality.

Another of America's brilliant and progressive presidents who loved sports was Roosevelt. While a college and afterward he gave private amusement maintained as a hobby, such as five miniature golf courses, two bowling alleys, three swimming pools, three domino parlors, three ball rooms, two theatres, and one stable where we may secure horses for riding.

2. These facilities, primarily recreational, maintained at public expense for public use such as two golf courses, public school facilities including athletic park, gymnasium and all other play-ground facilities; the city park, three scenic drives, one baseball park.

3. Those facilities which exist by virtue of membership and are maintained by the membership fee or dues such as the many bridge clubs, lodges or fraternal organizations, Federated clubs, the gun club and the service and luncheon clubs and Country club.

4. Those facilities, primarily educational, maintained at public expense for public use such as 11 churches, two libraries, and one Boy Scout camp and the Boy Scout troops.

These four divisions of enumerated facilities are the provision which we have access to in this community and its vicinity. We wish to ask whether these are sufficient and of the best type to insure the fullest participation and the widest use of our leisure time.

It appears that the facilities enumerated under groups 1 and 2 are sufficient and adequate provision of this type for the use of our leisure time.

We find in a close study of the question of facilities for recreation, educational and business purposes, that the facilities provided by the public for public use are inadequate. Our school equipment for recreational and educational facilities for the libraries and play ground facilities. We find that the school equipment for all the recreation is insufficient for the proper equipment of even one small school.

Our high school library and the Federated library have only 621 volumes of all types of books and a good percent of which are copies of the same book or reference books. We need a public library adequately supported by the public. And our school library should be supplied with many more books in sufficient number of copies to serve the student body.

It appears that facilities for leisure time could be materially increased by the establishment of an adequate park centrally located so all the people who need such recreational opportunities would have ready access to them. Furthermore, we feel that we need an adequate museum, for bringing the best artist courses and other valuable programs to our citizenship. Our leisure time facilities are sufficient for the present use we are making of them.

Let us use the facilities which we have wisely as provided in the first speaker tonight, and be our part to see that other and better facilities are provided as soon as practicable.

Merger Is Rumored

NEW YORK, May 20 (UP)—Negotiations for a merger of the Tide Water Associated Oil Company and Prairie Oil and Gas Company and the Prairie Pipe Line Company with the Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation have been resumed, it was learned today.

Such a merger has for some time, according to authorities, been considered a logical development in the oil industry, but last fall negotiations were dropped because an agreement on prices could not be reached.

Lubbock To Be Host To Retail Merchants Soon

LUBBOCK, Texas, May 20.—Several hundred of the most successful merchants in Texas are to be in Lubbock May 23, 26 and 27, next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday for the annual convention of the Retail Merchants Association of Texas.

An unusually large number of West Texas merchants are expected here due to the fact that it is the first time in the history of the association to be held this far west in the state and it is the first time in four years that the convention has been held in West Texas.

Carl Mueller of Austin, retail shoe dealer, president of the association will preside. In addition to the merchants organization, the Texas Retail Credit Bureau, Inc., an organization of secretaries of credit bureaus, the Associated Retail Credit Men of Texas, and the Texas Retail Store Association will likewise hold their convention jointly.

Some of the principal speakers in the three day program follow: Arthur H. Fort, Business Research Department, University of Texas, Austin; "An Analysis of Accounting of Profit and Loss," Jay H. Ellis, Business National Retail Credit Association of Louisiana, Mo.; Dr. Paul W. Hovey, Professor, Texas Technological College, Lubbock; "Service with a Smile," Ben F. Conroy, Jr., head department of Economic Business Administration, Texas Technological College, Lubbock; "Why Women Buy."

A number of important matters affecting the various organizations and members of the organization will be brought to the attention of the convention delegates at the time of the convention.

Lubbock has worked out a special program for the delegates at the business hours.

Regulation

 cleared evils of the fee system far outnumbered its advantages and that fee-grabbing officers in some sections of the state, who preyed on tourists and travelers from other portions of the state, had given Texas a bad name. Many of the officers care little or nothing if an arrest is justified, their sole aim being to obtain their fees, he said.

This is especially true with officers charged with enforcement of highway regulations, Young declared.

Fight Frauds

The legislature has passed a bill that was expected to go far toward curbing attempts to defraud the state by means of forged expense accounts and witness certificates. It was drafted as a result of startling disclosures made by the comptroller in investigating witness fees and expense account claims.

It provided subpoenas for witnesses could be issued only on sworn statements from state and defense attorneys and that payment be made only in event they testified. The account will require approval of the trial judge before payment could be made. As a further check, the court clerk will be required to transmit a record of the minutes to the comptroller to be checked against the witness fee certificate.

As a further precaution, the bill provided that a witness could not receive fees in more than one case and had no discretion in declining to testify in any case.

The comptroller also would have authority to disallow any portion of a claim. Under the old law, the comptroller must pay the claim if it is approved by the district judge and had no discretion in declining to testify in any case.

Two Producers, Five Dusters, Five Locations Reported in West Texas

Five locations for new oil tests were staked in four West Texas counties last week, compared with three in as many counties the week before, and two producers, the same number as during the preceding week, were added. New production however, amounted only to 1,414 barrels, 226 barrels less than the combined daily initial yield of the two wells completed the week before. This increased new production for 1931 to 25,969.50 barrels. Upton county finished a well rating 834 barrels daily and Pecos county completed one that flowed 580 barrels of oil in 24 hours.

Mrs. Dave Leatherwood Describes Her Experience in Improving Living Room

Mrs. Dave Leatherwood won first prize in the recent living room contest in the class of those who are improving their living rooms for a sum under $50. She tells in her words how she did it.

"When Mrs. Allgood encouraged me to improve my living room, I hardly knew how to begin. There was so much to be done.

"The walls were a dark ugly green with matching woodwork. The unfinished floors were hopeless. A closet adorned one corner, which I removed and placed in the hall. This gave more needed space. Next to the closet was my library table always littered with objects and not suited to a living room. A cedar chest was on another side under a window. The heater stood almost in the center directly in front of a door.

"Fortunately I possess a good dark brown wicker suite, or it could never have survived the treatment received at the hands (and feet) of my two small boys.

"Having never papered a room I decided it would be better to gain a little knowledge and experience, so with the aid of my husband we papered our dark brown kitchen with a light modernistic kitchen paper. It was not a very good job but it results in a better job on our living room.

"I hardly knew how to continue my work, being short on funds. After 'scouting' around I found an experienced man to paper the ceiling of the living room for payment in butter and buttermilk, which I hardly missed. I had been pouring out the milk. My husband and I finished papering and I painted the dark green woodwork a rich cream.

"Then came the floor. I moved the old worn congoletum rug out and padded the floor about half an inch thick with newspapers. I then moved a 9 by 12 wool rug from my bedroom and purchased congoletum rug border to put around the rug. I made a braided rug of hemp and intend to make another. The result was a pleasing floor.

"My sisters became very interested in my work and helped me. One gave me a good writing desk and chair. It matches my other furniture exactly. Another gave me a picture for my birthday and another a useless old gas heater, for which a second-hand furniture deal made me an attractive table. We added screens on frames to the windows.

"Luck has been with me all the way through. My sister-in-law purchased a radio and sold us an old

Youth Points the Way
TRADITIONAL exhortations of the commencement orator were displaced here Tuesday night by remarks from four members of the high school graduating class, that were loaded with value.

Youth faced the community and pointed spiritedly but wisely to needs for greater facilities for use of leisure time.

Aside from the pride aroused in breasts of their elders the youngsters, just finishing high school, gave promise of a community heritage that is bound to mature with dividends of cultural value beyond computation.

Culminating in a short, pointed talk upon the facilities for use of leisure time in the community, the people were shown clearly that the mind and heart are being neglected, while the physical is being afforded opportunity for recreation that bespeaks community perspective upon life out of kilter with the more beneficial ratio of leisure activity.

These youths told us more books, more music were needed in their home town. Their statements were all supported by an exhaustive survey into the leisure of professional men.

Youth pointing the way to fuller and more beneficial living portends community development that will tomorrow put "first things first."

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

Sweetwater Reporter.

SECRETARY HURLEY has developed plans for the abandonment of twenty to thirty army posts in various sections of the country. He is a sensible and brave man; sensible because war and preparations for war take to cents out of the tax dollar, and if it is the great and logical point of attack for reducing tax burdens; and brave because he is treading on the toes of twenty to thirty communities which are benefitting greatly because of the army posts being there. It is hard for the government to retrench because it always hits somebody in the pocketbook and that's a hurtful place to be hit. It always galvanizes the one hit to vigorous action.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE
The discoverer of the instrument for measuring blood pressure rendered a large service to the medical profession, for the manometer, as the instrument is called, has proved of great value in determining the condition of the patient.

At the same time, however, it has added to the worries of the average man and has made one more topic available for general discussion by the idle and the neurotic.

"I got blood pressure" now runs a close second to "did I ever tell you about my operation?"

High blood pressure is an item of importance, but in most instances is not a disease in itself, but the symptom of or condition associated with certain diseases.

High blood pressure or hypertension may be associated with and may be the result of disease of the kidneys.

Such hypertension usually appears early in life, about the age of 30. It is more common in men than in women. Treatment in this condition, of course, centers primarily on the kidneys.

Hypertension may also be associated with arteriosclerosis, or hardening of the arteries.

This condition appears somewhat later in life. Its existence may not give rise to any symptoms, at least in the early stages, and may be discovered accidentally during a routine or life insurance examination.

Another type of hypertension is called essential hypertension. This type of high blood pressure is not due to either disease of the kidneys or hardening of the arteries.

Its specific cause is as yet undetermined. It occurs most commonly during the midperiod of life.

One may live long and enjoy full mental and physical vigor though suffering from essential hypertension.

Hollywood Sights
By ROBBIN COONS
HOLLYWOOD — This town is full of former stars trying to stage comebacks to the screen or hangaround on desperately old glory, but Mary Astor, virtually a star at 25, is planning a definite retirement by the time she is 28.

She is a different Mary Astor from the overwhelmed, fragile girl who collapsed at the death of her husband, the director Kenneth Hawks, in a movie airplane tragedy little more than a year ago. She rallied then and went ahead with her screen work.

This Mary Astor of today is a practical soul, with a pronounced sense of real value. She is as pretty as ever, and infinitely more poised. Her attitude toward the screen is best explained by herself.

"I don't want to sound melodramatic or appear to be posing—just the sort of thing—but this is how I feel. Pictures have taken away my husband, my health and my eyesight, and all they offer in return is money. Well, I'm going to take the money, enough to be independent, and get out."

HAS "KLEIG EYES"
After the plane tragedy, when Miss Astor's health broke, her physician warned against the hazards of overwork. The old Kleig lights, which the studios finally abandoned, so weakened her eyes that she wears dark glasses when not on the set.

Miss Astor's health is protected now by two rigid clauses in her contract. One provides a two-week vacation after each picture, two weeks in which she may do whatever she pleases. Another allows her to stop work promptly at six every evening, no matter what his scene may be ready to shoot.

"She will take 'enough to be independent.' And how much is that?"

Mad Pursuit
BY JESSIE DOUGLASS FOX

SYNOPSIS: Julian Lake's plan to effect his daughter's marriage to Nicholas Thayer turns the motherless Nora against the young artist. Yet he would, as her penniless artist father declares, provide her a home and end her wandering which has been her lot since her mother died. Now they are living in a villa lent them by a Mrs. Nevers, and Julian has even borrowed from Nicholas to pay the cook! After Nora nurses Thayer and helps prevent the loss of his injured hand, she revealed bitterness of his life draws her closer to him. Perhaps her interest is partly due to his brother, Jonathan, by whom she had once been attracted. At any rate, when he plans to leave she asks him to remain.

Chapter 8
NICHOLAS DECIDES
THE heady sweetness of the wild things that had been steeped all day in the sun, mint, cranberry, floated up to them like the breath of the earth as they stood there in the garden of Villa Roma.

"Why do you want me to stay?" Nicholas answered.
Nora was thoughtful for a moment before she replied. The boy structure of Nicholas' face had been brought out by his illness and there was a touch of cruelty in his saunt cheeks and jutting nose and thin lips.

"There's something in the air," she said. "I feel it."
"Something in the air?" Nicholas questioned, his eyes searching those of the troubled girl before him. "I don't understand what you mean. What is it?"

"If I knew what it were I could face it," Nora continued.
"Julian is planning something. He won't tell me. And I'm frightened. Couldn't you stay? Just that you could stop him?"

In Nora's troubled eyes there was desperate appeal. But Nicholas deliberately broke the emotional thread of her talk.
"I'm going to see a specialist about my hand," he replied.
"There's a good man in Naples. I hear I shall go there."

"He wandered off and Nora felt herself shrinking with humiliation. She had begged him to stay and he had curtly brushed aside her plea.
He simply wanted to be rid of her and her father, though secretly he despised them a little. Yet he had stayed on because it was convenient, accepted her father's hospitality, and allowed her to take care of him when he was ill.

"What's happened to the old man? Look here!" he called.
She followed reluctantly because she did not wish him to see how he had humiliated her.
Some one had twined a garland of laurel leaves about his battered head. Nicholas was leaning down staring into the broken face.
"Whom does he look like?" he asked.

Perhaps it was a trick of the light that made the grins on a fall of mirth and scorn seem for a moment like her father's face.
"You see it too. We must tell him. He would appreciate that!" Nicholas smiled.
"Who's that you're talking about?" her father's voice sounded behind them. He came and peered down and looked from Nora to Nicholas.
"You mean I look like that?" He jerked off the wreath of leaves and thrust it on his own dark head and went capering down the path before them with the very gesture of the statue.
Dinner was waiting, her father announced, and Nora, preceded them into the room that her father called pretentiously saillie a manger. The bare shining table was drawn near the open windows. Candles in twisted stone candlesticks winked against the dusk. Scarlet geraniums made a pool of brightness in the center of the table and the room took on a dim luster.
Julian Lake was in an expansive mood. He still wore the laurel wreath that had slipped to one side of his dark hair. He burst at once into talk.

"If I had my way we should live in some small village like peasant. We should cobble our own shoes and weave our own linen and eat only what we raised with our own hands, wine and oil and green things that grow under the warm summer sun."

"Toked to the oven in the field, I suppose, and working all day through the burning heat," Nicholas said dryly.
"Yes, why not? To feel the sun burning down on your shoulders, the good clean sweat tickling down your back, to return at dusk to black bread and wine and share in the village dances."

He looked extremely handsome, his dark head flung back, his wine-colored eyes glowing, his sensuous lips smiling at them. But Nicholas thought him a fool; and Nora meeting his eyes felt a silent tremor of laughter pass between them.

His eyes lingered on her and she knew he was seeing her between the candle flames, for his expression changed as he somberly stared at her hair, her throat, her hands. The dim old room, her father's mellow voice as he embroidered his theme, the humbling of a heavy beetle knocking against the wire netting of the window all remained in Nora's consciousness as part of the magic of that hour.

Magdalena brought in the dessert, a confection of chestnuts and cream that was her special pride. The dinner was over; Julian was pushing back his chair and saying:
"I want to talk to you, my dear fellow. You'll be gone to-morrow. This is our last chance."

She watched them step out through the window, stood watching them as they paced the garden together, the bright sparks of their cigarettes like iridescence.
She would never see Nicholas Thayer again after to-morrow. He would forget her in his work; and she would forget him. Oh, yes, she would forget him!
Hard as it would be, she would put out of her mind the memory of her humiliation before him. How cruelly he had ignored her plea to remain and thereby protect her against that uncertain something she feared!

She turned away and knew that some one had come noiselessly into the room behind her. It seemed to her almost as though she had spoken the thought aloud and he must hear that silent cry of hers. It was Nicholas.
"Nora, I won't go to-morrow," was all he said.

She felt as though the whole room were listening in the silence to the violence of her heart beats. He was gone before she knew it, back to her father, but the world was rocked to its foundations.

Children's Aid Association Has Field Man Here

D. T. Smith of Abilene, field worker for the West Texas Children's Aid & Welfare Association, which seeks homeless, neglected and destitute children and finds homes for them in intelligent Christian homes, is here soliciting funds for support of the institution.

This organization, headed by Rev. W. A. Nicholas, a familiar figure throughout West Texas as he goes about with his specially designed basket in which he carries infants to their new homes, has been in operation a number of years. C. C. TALE OF WRITER WHO DIED UNHONORED BRINGS WOMAN AUTHOR DRAMA PRIZE

By MARK BARRON
NEW YORK (AP)—Two women of American letters have been honored in the awarding of the Pulitzer drama prize to "Alison House."

One is the author Susan Glaspell, and the other is Emily Dickinson, the poet, on whose life the play is based.

Mrs. Glaspell is a product of the same Greenwich village experimental theaters which gave Eugene O'Neill his first chance. In fact, it was Miss Glaspell, in company with her husband, George Cram Cook, who founded the Provincetown Players in 1915.

Miss Glaspell was born in Davenport, Ia., in 1882. She was educated at Drake and the Universities of Iowa and Chicago. For a time she was a newspaper political reporter, then began writing fiction and moved to the literary colony at Provincetown, Mass., where she still resides.

She has written 14 plays, but the most important heretofore was "Inheritors," which was presented at the Civic Repertory theater in 1927. It was the same group, with Eva Le Gallienne in the leading role, that offered "Alison House" this season.

"Alison House" is a post-mortem appraisal of the life and character of Emily Dickinson, considered as one of the finest women writers of verse.

Miss Dickinson was virtually unknown for many years after her death in 1886, and it was not until 1914 that her works were first published and the world began to learn about this artist who had lived, worked and died in seclusion.

The central character of Miss Glaspell's play is Alison Stanhope (an Emily Dickinson), but when the curtain rises she has been dead 18 years. Only a few poems written by her have been published, but these have made her famous.

Journalists, poets and hero worshippers descend upon the house seeking other of her works and more facts about her life. The conservative Stanhope family is divided about this situation.

The older generation is bewildered and resentful at what it considers curiosity. The younger members of the family have a different view and feel that the life and works of Alison Stanhope belong more to the world than to the family.

Susan Glaspell (below) has been awarded the Pulitzer drama prize for her play "Alison House," in which Eva Le Gallienne (inset) took the leading role in the New York production.

Aunt Agatha, sister of the dead Alison, withholds the poems, saying "she doesn't belong to the world... she belongs to us... I'll keep her from the world getting her."

And when the family tries to make Aunt Agatha move from the old house she says: "Me leave this house... while it's still this house? I shall be the last to step from the door. Leave things for everyone else to pry into..."

And like Miss Ella, last of New York's famous Wendell family, she never leaves the old house until she is carried from it after her death.

Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Matthews are in Dallas, visiting Mrs. Matthews' brother, Dr. J. W. Bourland.

The young couple will be at home 115 Eighty-Fourth Avenue, Kew Gardens, Long Island.

Gasoline Causes Wednesday Blaze

Fire virtually destroyed a negro's shack in the rear of 401 East Second street shortly before 8 p. m. Wednesday, Hattie Bird, one of the residents, was painfully burned.

The blaze, according to Fire Marshal Jess Heffernan, was caused by ignition of gasoline used for cleaning clothing in a room where there was a stove fire. He issued a warning to the public against such a practice.

"Gasoline should not be brought into any house," he declared. Jim Crenshaw was owner of the building.

"An Electric Refrigerator is a wise investment"

...say thousands of thrifty women: Its convenience, comfort and ease of operation are decided daily advantages.

"GOOD food saved through adequate refrigeration is money made," is a motto that should be hung in every woman's kitchen.

"Left-overs" in fact, are frequently even better liked by men than the original food from which they are prepared.

Electric Refrigeration is an excellent way to keep foods fresh and wholesome for serving in these saving ways. Ask any thrifty woman who owns an Electric Refrigerator.

She'll tell you about new delicious frozen salads and desserts that an Electric Refrigerator helps her to make with delightful ease.

She'll refer with joy to the great convenience of an ample supply of ice cubes.

She'll say that milk, cream, butter, meats and vegetables are kept wholesome and fresh for days—that celery and lettuce stay crisp and delicious.

She will tell you, she knows that in temperature below fifty degrees lies safety for her family, and that Electric Refrigeration assures that protection.

Small first payment—easy terms

A small first payment will buy an Electric Refrigerator for your home. Then the balance may be paid on easy terms. There's no need, therefore, to delay the making of this wise investment.

Wherever Electric Refrigerators are sold a complete demonstration will be given gladly, with no obligation on your part. Get the demonstration now, and satisfy yourself.

"My Electric Refrigerator Makes Entertaining a Pleasure"

The popular housewife often finds it necessary to entertain small groups of friends on short notice. A table or two at bridge, a light luncheon or afternoon callers test her ability to provide attractive and tasty refreshments.

The woman who has an electric refrigerator has no doubts or misgivings concerning refreshments. Plenty of fresh foods, delightfully chilled salads and desserts and an ample supply of ice cubes gives her every assurance that she can quickly and easily cope with these emergencies which always occur.

And above all, electric refrigeration is so economical, so healthful and so conveniently purchased in small monthly payments that no family can afford not to own an electric refrigerator.

may be filed in either the special or the regular 32nd district court.

The bill, as finally passed, is a much more desirable one than the original proposal, which would have created an entirely new district—a proposal we supported at the time. Less expense to the state will result from the special district court plan—$5,000 per year for the judge, the same salary as all district judges receive.

The governor has declared a policy opposed to creation of new district courts. Perhaps he will after studying the need for additional terms here and in Nolan county find it possible to sign this bill.
