WASHINGTON
By George Durso

It's kind of hard these days to keep up with all the new administrations and councils being formed in Washington. They come so fast one gets all started in an alphabetical nightmare.

The latest may have escaped your attention. It is called the National Emergency Council. As advertised by President Roosevelt when it was born the Council represents an effort to set up a single agency that can direct any citizen through the maze of present-day Washington.

Any time you have business with Uncle Sam and don't know which way to turn call on the National Emergency Council. That's the idea.

Fees
There's one purpose back of NEC (if you notice) and another combination of letters that wasn't put in the birth notice.

That is a quiet but determined administration desire to kick a few props from under the politician-lawyers who have been steering harassed business men around town—for exorbitant fees. The President has adopted a policy that no one should have to pay for the privilege of appearing before his own government. NEC is the answer.

A central information bureau is being set up here by the Council that won't do the fat-fee business a bit of good.

Any person needing relief from one of the emergency agencies or having a case to lay before the government is supposed from now on to call on the Council's information bureau. They will route you to the particular man in the particular bureau who can put an immediate finger on the trouble.

It won't cost a dime.

There are a group of politicians performing this kind of service now and charging all the traffic will bear. They use their connection with last year's campaign as proof of their influence.

For some time the White House has been aware of the activities of the "325,000 Club," that being the minimum retain fee that ask from big business and grading down.

To help toward speedy action in the public's dealings with the government, each state will have a director of the Council's work. Under the state director will be county chairmen (these serving without pay but having paid secretaries).

And if it takes a little time to get the idea working smoothly your criticisms will help to mend the weak spots.

Blends
The distillers think a fellow ought to be allowed to get his guard up before he's socked.

Squawks about the high price of legal whisky are reverberating around the country like a lost echo. They implore you to wait until the distributors' problem has been worked out a little better. Then they foresee blend whisky around two dollars a quart. Even less for some cuts.

Doc Doran, new czar of the distilling industry, will tell you the opening prices merely reflected that inevitable yen of handiers to get while the getting is good.

Furthermore he says people

Club Studies International Relationship

Reagan, Francis, Hall Lead Discussion Before Rotary

B. Reagan, chairman of International Relations committee of the Big Spring Rotary club, was in charge of Tuesday's program of the club held in the Settles ballroom. Subject for the day was "International Relations."

Father Theo Francis spoke on this topic, stating that the four circles of Rotary activities, one of which, International Relations, he thought to be the most important, and that it afforded a great field of service for Rotary clubs through its individual members.

"Consider the case of the emigrant, for instance," said the speaker, "coming to a new country, facing new customs, new ideas, new language. His first impression of a new land is going to be gotten by the manner in which he is treated at the outset from its citizens, and this impression will go a long way in making of the newcomer a desirable or non-desirable character. I think that in this particular section of the country we as Rotarians could do a good service for Rotary principles of international relationship by putting into practice good deeds toward the emigrant, not especially recognizing them in our established social order, but giving them an opportunity to learn our customs and to become good and desirable new citizens. I am speaking of the Mexican people."

Trills of Visits
Dr. Granville Hall, a member of the local club's International Relations committee, told the club of visits to Mexican and Canadian points he had made in past years, and the impressions he had gained from them, although they had no special bearing on international relations.

He also related the experience of seeing a group of Mexicans aboard a train enroute to a Century of Progress exposition in Chicago this year, and what reactions they gave to the sights in the United States. He told of visiting the various exhibits of other nations represented at the fair, showing good and desirable new citizens. I am speaking of the Mexican people."

Committed Announced By President; Growth Is Phenomenal

Lions of Big Spring Wednesday blasted the theory that they never come back in resuming activities with a phenomenal membership increase of thirty-nine. Two months ago the club was at low ebb.

District Governor Del Harrington of El Paso rushed here and convoked the faithful remnant in a special session. Lions International sent Vernon Galloway here.

From the smallest in numbers, the Lions club has jumped to the front ranks and has prospects of surging into the lead ahead of two other service organizations in numerical strength.

Announcement of committees at the conclusion of the meeting by Dr. P. W. Malone, president, attested to the fact that the club means business.

Practically every classification among business and professional men was represented at the meeting Wednesday.

After a few peppy songs and a terse welcome address by the president, work of inducting the members got under way.

Raising an objection from the floor, Joe Pickle protested the admission of M. L. Black on the grounds his "past is as dark as his name."

The investigating committee questioned Black, much to the amusement of other members. Having answered all questions and often times out sparring the interrogator in a battle of wits, Black was accepted when the objection was withdrawn and he was accorded a unanimous vote.

Tom Bergin, tall-talker, then reported for the investigating committee, revealing the inmost secrets of each candidate's life. Only Joe Ellis escaped the scathing revelations and Bergin said he would expose him next meeting.

Rev. W. G. Buchschacher, "because somebody thought all preaching should be settled of wits, Black was accepted when the objection was withdrawn and he was accorded a unanimous vote."

After he had reviewed the history of Lionism and disclosed facts about the international organization and its scope, he cited the Lion obligations. When the candidates had affirmed the obligations they were given the creed and old members welcomed them into the fellowship by pinning on the Lion emblem and presenting them with a Lion code of ethics and a hearty shake.

Inducted into the club Wednesday were E. W. Anderson, Dee Davis, D. J. Dooley, Grover Dunham, Ward Hall, L. C. Holdrege, R. J. Hoover, J. E. Huffman, Jack R. Hayes, Gerald Miller, Harry Morris, Dr. C. E. Richardson, C. L. Rowe, Burk T. Summers.

T. C. Thomas, Clyde Tingle, Hollis Webb, M. Wentz, Amos R. Woods, Harry Stalcup, Vernon Logan, Miller Harris, M. L. Black, T. J. Miles, Jr., Bill Turpin, Harry Adams. There were others who were prevented from attending who will be inducted next Wednesday.

Visitors for the day were Vernon Galloway, Lion Phillips of Lubbock and B. F. Robbins.

Tom Bergin and E. W. Potter were announced as co-chairmen of the program committee.

Committees and members announced were:

Fishing Boat Crew Makes Way To Land In Fuel Tender

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Searching boats plowed through seas 5 miles offshore and 85 miles south of here Wednesday in an effort to find possible survivors of a marine disaster which apparently sent a flaming, unidentified boat plunging beneath mountainous waves Tuesday night.

Rough seas prevented a rescue craft from bringing aid. Only three blazing oil tanks were found near the scene of the explosion and sinking.

The Oakland Tribune said at noon Wednesday it had received reports the ship was a fishing boat and that the crew had escaped in a motor tender and made its way safely to land.

Arbitration Of S-P Dispute Is In Prospect

Settlement Reached On Principal Points Of Difference

HOUSTON (UP)—Complete arbitration of the dispute between Southern Pacific Railroad officials and employees of Texas and Louisiana was indicated here.

With a settlement reached on the more important of the 196 enumerated complaints that brought a strike call for November 23, workers and company representatives continued deliberations behind closed doors in an effort to reach an agreement on the remaining points.

The three conferences have been held outside the hearing room of the federal mediation board since overtures were made indicating possibility of settlement.

In their latest agreement the workers were allowed main line pay and working conditions on the Palfurrias branch line. Employees had sought to make it a main line with corresponding pay and hours.

In return for their virtual victory on the Palfurrias question the four associated brotherhoods of employees withdrew their opposition to the railroad's policy of local service between Houston and Port Arthur.

Other major points were settled last week after the federal board had heard arguments for more than a week.

Indications were that the closed conference would continue as long as progress was reported to the board, and complete agreement was expected soon.

THE FACTS OF HISTORY

While verbal warfare continues to rage about the moot points of the recovery program, it is refreshing to look the other direction for a moment and notice that some 3500 members of the Civilian Conservation Corps are going to be at work this winter restoring some of the nation's most famous battlefields.

Four groups of men will work at Yorktown, where Continental and French troops squeezed independence out of Cornwallis' helpless army. Two more groups will work at Morristown, N. J., another historic spot in the Revolutionary struggle.

Some 600 will work at Chickamauga, scene of some of the Civil War's bloodiest fighting; others will be assigned to Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Shiloh, Fredericksburg, Spotsylvania and Chancellorsville.

When the work is finished, a small staff of experts will be installed at each battlefield. Little effort will be made to give visitors guides; instead, maps and leaflets will be prepared so that the visitor can find his own way about and piece the historic story together for himself.

The whole project seems to be one of the most intelligent moves that could be made.

These battlefields of ours, made sacred by the blood that has been shed on them and by the high principles that were at stake there, are national shrines of the greatest value.

A few hours at Gettysburg, for instance, are worth whole volumes on the Civil War; a visit to Lexington and Concord, or to Concord, makes the Revolution seem real as nothing else can.

From such visits comes understanding; and from understanding grows a hardy and unshakable patriotism.

The uncut, highly aged stuff won't last long. In its native state it's more of a liqueur. When things a little more normal most of it will be used to blend with green whisky just as before 1927. That's about his message.

One thing the distillers may be sure of is a liberal rule by Robert H. Choate Jr., chief of the new Federal Alcohol Control Administration.

If Choate were in charge of regulating drinking habits by states he would set up the British system of open bars, strictly policed and subject to limited operating hours.

All of this was revealed in a letter Choate wrote to a New York editor a month before he had any idea President Roosevelt was going to give him a job riding hard on the distillers and importers.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY

By William Byron Howland

CHAPTER 17

Two mornings later, at her camp forty miles up river, Sonya awoke at daybreak, packed the tent, and looked out. Ralph and the two guides were still rolled up in their sleeping bags.

Through the gray smoke mist rising from the cold waters of the Lilluar, pairs of nesting teal and ducks slipped overhead, their swift wings whistling long after the birds were swallowed up in the mist. Overhead in the tall pines little vireos and flame-colored warblers flitted through the branches and darting out into the air, where already busy with the fledging problem.

Stepping down to the water edge, she propped her mirror against a stone, bathed her face and hands, and braided her hair. Back at the campfire, she raked some coals out of the ashes, got a fire going and cooked bacon, trout, scones and coffee. Ralph and the two guides still showed no signs of waking, so she took a small bucket and started up a mountain torrent to a thicket of red raspberries.

Not long after she reached the patch, she happened to glance back at camp and was startled to see a canoe nosing out of the river fog, a canoe with two men in it. They glided ashore, beached the craft and walked up to her fire, with their rifles in the crook of their arms. And then she recognized them as Curt Ralston and his young partner!

They were a welcome surprise, out of the fog. For several reasons she was never gladder to see people than those two. But what were they doing up the Lilluar? They hadn't mentioned that they intended to come north from Russian Lake.

Through a screen of boughs she watched them a minute. They did not wake Ralph or the guides. Curt pointed at her breakfast keeping warm in the ashes, and looked around for her, evidently knowing she was up.

She stepped out to the timber edge. Curt saw her then and came up along the torrent.

"You're awake early," he greeted with his likeable smile.

He was casual enough, as though just meeting some chance acquaintance, but Sonya saw the man's tribute to her in his eyes and noticed how his glance clung to her face and hair. She felt sure he had not come upon her camp by accident but with some definite purpose.

"I couldn't sleep with a morning like this just outside the tent," she answered.

"Your breakfast looked so good that Paul and I almost grabbed it and broke for the woods."

"You will stay and have breakfast with us, won't you?"

"If you'll let me give you a hand with that berry-picking."

"All right."

He took up her bucket and they went back along the torrent to the patch.

"I didn't know Paul and you were intending to come up this way," she remarked, bending down a tall birch.

He answered her unspoken question. "We're prospecting up the Lilluar."

Sonya did not know whether to believe him or not. Ever since meeting him she had been trying to figure him out. He certainly didn't appear to be a prospector. He was miles above the type.

Except for her father, she had never met a man whose quiet efficient power impressed her as much as his. She hated to think that he was just a drifter, leading a carefree existence. That was all right for the most at Russian Lake, but he had better stuff to him.

"Paul and I are going up as far as the pass," he volunteered presently. And then he came out with the purpose of his visit. "If there's no objection on the east side of the fence, our parties could sort of be neighbors. In this country people usually throw in together that way."

His offer, as fine as it was unexpected, nearly took Sonya's breath. She wanted snap it up instantly before he could change his mind. Two days of river travel had showed her how little she and Ralph knew about the Strong-Woods and how worthless those lazy guides were. With Curt leading the party she could feel safe, and if anybody could get on good terms with the Kiosobes, he was the man to do it.

"If the idea doesn't appeal to you," he said, "please don't be so reluctant about saying so. You mustn't let us break into any of your plans."

"Oh, but it does appeal to me!" "You like it, then?"

Sonya hesitated. In Curt tones and his manner she could see that he was interested in her. On a lengthy wilderness trip together where they would be thrown into constant intimate association, he might come to like her a very great deal. It wouldn't be right to allow that.

"But you'll be traveling so much faster than we," she objected.

"Oh no; we'll be taking it leisurely, scouting for float as we go. To be frank, I don't believe you and Ralph are used to water-dogging on a mountain river. Till you get on to the hang of things it mightn't be a bad idea to have a couple of experienced people along. Also, if those guides don't prove dependable, you wouldn't be left in the lurch."

"Your offer is magnanimous, Curt. She stumpled just a little over his first name. "I don't know anybody else who'd have made it. But we'd be a positive nuisance."

"Your company and Ralph's would be a real pleasure to us both. Talk it over with him, won't you?"

Still wavering, Sonya looked down into the torrent, where a number of tiny trout were darting about in a pool like little flashes of sunshine. She knew that the safe unselfish thing was to refuse. But then she thought that if she steered their association carefully she could guide it into a comradeship friendship. And she did need his help so badly. With her it might make all the difference between success and abject failure.

"We might—we could try it," she assented finally. "At least we can start out together, and if it doesn't work we can always split up."

As they went on filling the pall Curt congratulated himself on having neatly solved a tough problem. He would be going up the Lilluar on his own business and at the same time Paul and he could look after Sonya's safety.

And he would have her company for a week, a week of wilderness travel with her. At the pass, when she and Ralph came face to face with the Kiosobee danger and realized how serious it was, they would undoubtedly turn back to Russian Lake. That would free him and Paul, to go on inside and nail Karakhan.

The report to which Karakhan had just listened made him uneasy. His cigarette, forgotten, burned to ashes at his elbow and his fingers, long and sensitive as a musician's, topped the rough table thoughtfully. Looking past LeNoir, he stared out the cabin window at the lake, pondering the "broad story."

The account might be a lie. LeNoir might just be trumping up a non-existent danger in order to jack his pay higher. But then the story might be fact.

With fifty hard canoe-miles behind him since dawn, LeNoir leaned back against the log wall, watching his chief sharply. This man of the steel-cold eyes and calm voice—one could never so much as guess at his thoughts.

One only knew that he was greatly worried by the Yellowstripes, that he had buried himself in these mountains to shake off the police and that he was planning flight away at the end of summer to some new land.

Faces Extradition

The Supreme court has ruled that John "Jake" Barber, Factor, waiting in Chicago to testify in the trial of Roger Touhy and two others for his kidnaping, must return to England for trial on charges of defrauding British investors of $1,500,000. (Associated Press Photo)

Canning Champion

Elena Sheup, 20-year-old girl from Ramona, Okla., was named national 4-H club canning champion at the International Livestock show in Chicago. In nine years she canned 6,212 1/2 of fruits and foods, valued at $976. (Associated Press Photo) with Curt and his shooting up their tent, LeNoir had wisely said nothing. He knew his chief too well. Karakhan would not hesitate to put a bullet into any person who endangered him by going on ahead. In his way LeNoir was altogether loyal to Karakhan, who had been very generous to him in a matter of money. The "broad" had a code, such as it was. He had bargained to protect the Coosack, and he was giving everything he had to that job, for he was hard-set in his loyalties as in his feud.

Local Teacher's Article On How To Teach History Is Run By Texas Outlook

Miss Clara Pool, teacher of History and English for a number of years in the Big Spring High School, in the December copy of the "Texas Outlook" tells how to teach History successfully. She lays out a plan whereby a teacher may organize her work, yet keep it interesting. This was the theme of her talk which she made some time ago to the faculty.

The fact that it was considered of value over the hundreds of other articles received by this magazine, is convincing of the sound and enlightening principles of Miss Pool's article.

Passing Of Rock Piles Recalls Day When Gridsters Were Kept Groggy
John Stripling
What is that enormous grey mound out there, one of the pyramids? asked a new student as he gazed across the school ground at a large white pile. "Yes, that's our local pyramid, although it was hardly meant to be one. It's formed out of the quantity of rocks raked off our high school tennis court and the surrounding boys on those rocks."

Notes From Classrooms
By Margaret Wade
The Physics class has a few bright students, or anyway, ones that are interested in the subject. There is a top steam engine that they have operated to find the horse power. The engine raised 100 grams, 50 centimeters against gravity in 7 seconds, which was equivalent to five hundred-thousandths of a horsepower, or three hundred seventy-five thousandths of a watt. By attaching hither and yon they hope to make the engine lift the average of horsepower. This will be a slower process, however.

Special Letters To Santa Claus
Dear Santa:
It would please me very much if you would bring me a new office force. (Be sure they don't chew gum). Send me a hand-writing detector to help me in my business, dealing with excuses. Also if possible would like a megaphone so that I can be heard in assembly. Santa, you look around and see what you can do for me and I will deeply appreciate it. Thanks a lot, Mr. Gregory.

Dear Santa Klaus:
The depression is on so I won't ask for much. All I want is books, books, and more books. If any where you can find one, please bring me an English class that is composed of "A" students. Sincerely yours, Ralph Houston

Dear Santa Claus:
Hello old friend, I want a few additions to my big ole' football team for next year and a little gift of some kind to help me beat Sweetwater. I would like to have a little shelf for my peanack sack in study hall and please fix those wasebaskets so I can hit them. I would "shore" appreciate these little remembrances. Your Pal, Obie Bristolow.

Dear Santa:
My mother says that I am perfect, my teachers say I am brilliant, but really I'm an extra good little girl, too. Although I am on a paper staff, I'm not snooty, and I don't squeak boards like Bob Flowers and sing songs in class like Mickey Davis, and make love in public like Doyle and Doris; really I am quite unusual.

Dear Santa Claus:
I don't want very much for Xmas, but if you can remember these few little gifts I will thank you very much. I want a beautiful baby doll with hair like Margaret Smith's, blue eyes like Neil Brown's and eyelashes like Eve Mae O'Neal's. She must be able to go to sleep like Alta Taylor does in Miss Bumpass's class and walk like Frances McClellan.

Feature, Directed By Mrs. Frazier, Be Presented December 17

The Choral Club is now putting the finishing touches on the Christmas cantata to be presented at the City Auditorium Sunday afternoon, December 17, at 4:00. The cantata is very pretty, consisting of a number of choruses and several quartets and solos. The director, Mrs. Bruce Frazier, is doing her usual good work. Who's Who Mary Pond—"Colorado is a good place to be from," said Mary on moving to Big Spring 14 or 15 years ago. Her childhood ambition was to be a school teacher but her mind has changed because of the present state, she says, of teachers. Another ambition was at one time was to be a smart student in all classes, but that too has been changed. At present she is a member of the Junior class, indulging in Spanish 2, Plane Geometry, History 3B and English 3B. She has been a member of the pep squad for the past three years, choral club for two years, and Home Economics club. She is going to Texas Tech, study, and make good.

Virginia Cushing Pinch Hits For Wheel Editor, Out With Sore Finger

Dorothy Dublin, editor of The Wheel, and secretary of the senior class, was ill Tuesday because of an infection on one of her fingers. For several weeks Dorothy has been trying to remove a growth from her finger, but reports circulated by students who have been handled severely in Campus Chatter to the effect that she was turning to a wart had not been substantiated by facts.

In Dorothy's absence Virginia Cushing, assistant Wheel editor, is the editor-in-charge.

SPORT SLANTS
By ALAN GOULD

The Rose Bowl in some respects seems to be just another bowl of raspberries for those involved. On the coast they think Southern California is still the "class of the west," which means the class of the court, despite the defeat by Stanford. They probably are correct.

In the East, Columbia's good team is under the shadow of Princeton's unbeaten record. The Lions finished the season as impressively as the Tigers but the fact remains that when they met in October Princeton won, 20 to 0.

SPORTS STILL TOPS

It is all very puzzling to Mark ("Once-a-season") Scarr, who writes up to compare the records of Stanford and Oregon, tied for the Pacific Coast title, with that of Southern California.

"Stanford couldn't score on U. C. L. A. except by field goal," he notes. "Oregon scored a touchdown and kicked. One up for Oregon. Stanford lost to Washington, 6-0. Oregon won, 6-0. Two up for Oregon. "Now we come to the U. C. game. It is just one game on the schedule or it is THE game. Evidently the Rose Bowl selection felt it was THE game. Stanford gets one point for this victory. The committee feels this one point is more important than Oregon's two points. That's tough for Oregon. It is even tougher that they had to play U. S. C. after the Stanford game. They met a Trojan team that was mad and fighting. Probably the other way around would have found Stanford meeting the same kind of defeat."

"Playing no setups or tail-enders, Southern California beat Washington State 33-0, California 6-3, Oregon 26-0, tied with Oregon State 0-0 and lost to Stanford 7-13. Just plain tough competition. I am quite convinced that U. S. C. is the best, anyway. Not that I hold any brief for them. They slipped in my estimation last year when they selected Pitt. We all knew they could make Pitt and so did Howard Jones. There were other teams much stronger."

EXCEPTION

Pitt, on the record may look like a push-over for Southern California or else the Panthers just simply can't do their stuff in the Rose Bowl. They were nevertheless one of the gridiron powers last year and they seemed as powerful as any team I observed from the south, east or middle west this season.

Even Minnesota, the only team to upset Pitt this year, was more impressed with the Panthers than any other squad encountered.

FIFTEEN FOR KRAUSE

Spanish Students Plan To Bring Christmas To Destitute Mexicans

The members of the Spanish classes wish to share Christmas with others.

A committee from each class was sent Monday afternoon to interview a Mexican family assigned to that particular class. This committee was to find out the number of children in the family and their ages so that Spanish students could bring gifts for them.

The Spanish classes wish to make Christmas a period of joy to as many children as possible.

Frank Welch Wed To Miss Porter

It was a beautiful fall morning when Miss Polly Porter became the bride of Frank Welch of Big Spring Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Porter, 300 Twenty-Fifth Street. The ceremony was begun at 8:30 o'clock, with Rev. Philip C. McGabe, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiating in the presence of relatives a few close friends of the couple.

The home was beautifully decorated with white chrysantheums. Miss Edna Marie Jones of Midland, cousin of the bride, played Lohengrin's "Wedding March" as the couple entered the living room unattended, and during the ceremony Miss Jones played softly Schubert's "Serenade."

Mrs. Welch wore a brown woolen swaggar suit with a dusty pink asile blouse and dark brown accessories. She was graduated from Snyder high school with the class of 1928. Later she studied in Texas Technological College, Lubbock, and in Texas University, Austin.

The bridegroom, a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Welch of Sweetwater is employed by the Texas State Highway Department with headquarters at Big Spring. The couple left for Big Spring Sunday afternoon where they will make their home.
