THE SPORTS PARADE

By HANK HART

All eyes turn to Lubbock this weekend where committees of various West Texas cities meet for a round-table discussion on the West Texas-New Mexico baseball situation for the approaching season. Something is going to have to be done and done quickly if the loop hopes to function this season. Only three teams finished their schedules last year.

Six teams, at least, will be needed to go through a season. That many can make it far easier than can eight, especially with the proposed lineup.

Big Spring will be represented but no "angel" has yet appeared on the local horizon to guide the destinies of a local entry. It is hoped that one can be found by next Sunday.

Every club in the loop wants Big Spring in the circuit as much as they want Lubbock. Clovis is reported to be ready and Roswell, Monahan and Midland representatives will be on hand.

There has also been talk of handling the WT-NM league together with the Cactus league but this department believes that can be only idle chatter.

The distance between the teams of the Cactus band (El Paso, El Paso, El Paso, El Paso, El Paso) and those of the other loop should alone kill all chances for one large league.

The Cactus circuit, however, will be represented and something may be worked out.

There may be a county basketball eligibility squabble soon. Doc Froman of the powerful Garner Hill Billies is said to be over age and to have been in school too many semesters but that is yet to be proved.

Captain Floyd Burnett of the Garner quintet has Froman's birth certificates on hand to show that he is within the required age limit and has the word of the principal of the Brown school, where Froman attended school before enrolling at

RIGGS LOOKS TO DAVIS CUP PLAY

TAMPA, Fla., Jan. 24 (AP)—Bob Riggs, young Chicago tennis player who ranks second in the United States for 1937, figures he is virtually sure to be a member of the team which defends the Davis cup in this country next summer. Riggs captured the Dixie tennis championship yesterday with a straight set victory over Wayne Sabin of Los Angeles, conqueror of Bryan M. Grant of Atlanta in the semi-finals, and immediately began planning for the cup tryouts. "They can hardly leave me off this time," Bobby said. "I don't know whether or not I'll play, but I'm sure to be a member of the team."

Garner, that the lad is eligible. However, the case is due to be investigated before the county tournament next month.

To make it more convenient for those paying customers and more convenient for those who did not pay last Friday night, Promoter Ray Simmons is detailing a squad of six men Wednesday night to "work" the gate during the Herald-Cosden Golden Gloves boxing tournament in the municipal auditorium. There were about 150 persons who walked through the gate without paying and Simmons intends to put an abrupt stop to that practice.

"Red" Cunningham, who Friday licked Bob Morris of Wickett in the only heavyweight brawl on the card, announced this morning that he intended to trim himself down to the light heavyweight class and compete for that honor.

He says he might have better luck in trying for the title at Fort Worth should he win here. The 235-pounder would meet in the state finals would simply be too large to go up against.

Raymond Masters, local electrical worker, who has long been an ardent boxing fan and who has managed to see a lot of Golden Gloves tournaments here, said recently that the one he witnessed in the auditorium Friday night topped them all.

Ponies Return To Form With Aggie Win

Baylor And SMU Are Chief Threats Of Arkansas

Limber, Sphinx-faced Bill Dewell, one of the best ball hustlers the Southwest conference has seen in a decade, has his Southern Methodist in the groove again. Feeble at first in defense of the crown they carried away last year, the Methodists are in the thick of it now. Talk of an Arkansas runaway has lessened since Sweet William Dewell started pouring the ginger to his Methodists.

Uncanny was Dewell's performance against a bewildered Texas Aggie team at Dallas Saturday night. Only once did Dewell, alert and tall, fail to grab the rebound off the Aggie backboard.

He was gone with it and the Methodists were in charge again. Dewell found time to pump in 14 points besides starting all the Methodists scoring plays. He led 2. D. (Snyder) Horton, who draged 12 points, and held three Aggie center opponents — Fredberger, Wofford and Bokenkamp — to two scant points. To cap his remarkable performance, Dewell was not charged with a personal foul—and he handled the ball more than any other three men on the court.

The Methodists' 41-20 triumph landed them in their place with two wins and one loss—back of Arkansas and Baylor. Baylor, pushed along by Clarence (Bubba) Gernand, an ailing guard who made his first start against Texas, tripped up the Longhorns, 51-45. Potent enough as they stand, the Bayers will spring all their power for the first time against the Cadets with Wilson White, top

THOMSON TOPS SHOT MAKERS

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 24 (AP)—Professional golfers teed off in the final 18-holes of the $3,000 Pasadena Open golf tournament today. Leading the procession was Jimmy Thomson of Shawnee-On-The-Delaware, who led the par busters in yesterday's third round with a 64, seven under par, to take a one-stroke advantage over Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., with a 71. Thomson's 64-hole total was 69-73-64—206.

Two shots back of the leader was Byron Nelson of Reading, Pa., formerly of Texas, Tex., who duplicated Thomson's amazing 64 yesterday to pull into the front ranks. Breaking par 71 was something 17 others did, but doing it by seven strokes was something no one had ever done before over the local Brookside course.

Three players started four strokes back of Thomson today—Olin Dutra, Los Angeles; Johnny Revoita, Evanston, Ill.; and Al Zimmerman, Portland, Ore.

CUNNINGHAM IS NAMED TO TEAM

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—Old Pop Time still can't do a thing with this Glenn Cunningham fellow.

Despite the rise of younger runner, such as Archie San Romani, his own increasing years—so far as track men go—and his heavy college work, the ex-Kansas cyclone is still Mr. Big among the metric milers. To prove it—if proof is needed—there's his name in the 1,500-meter spot today on Dan Ferris' All-America track team for 1937.

The secretary-treasurer of the National A. A. U., releasing his annual selections of All-America, all-collegiate and all-scholastic track and field performers last night, picked Cunningham over his fellow-Kansas, Archie San Romani, despite the latter's victory in the A. A. U. indoor championships last year.

San Romani also might have won the outdoor title if he hadn't fallen in the last 200 yards, but since Cunningham was the man who broke the tape, Ferris put him on top, and gave San Romani the all-college position in the mile.

Other standouts included: John Woodruff, Pittsburgh's Olympic champion at 500 meters on the all-America, and the half mile on the college list.

Don Lash, Indiana, cross-country led all the way, limiting the opposition to five points during the first half.

Every man in the Foran lineup counted at least one field goal with Fitzgerald taking runnerup scoring honors with ten points.

Cowart, tallying three field goals and a free toss, was high for the Monahans quint.

Magnolia Oilers Of Foran Win Over Monahans; Childress Stars

MONAHAN, Jan. 24—Berl Cramer's powerful Magnolia Oilers of Foran, led by Childress who rolled in 16 points, trampled the Monahans Oilers, 41-24, here Saturday evening.

The team from Howard county led all the way, limiting the opposition to five points during the first half.

Every man in the Foran lineup counted at least one field goal with Fitzgerald taking runnerup scoring honors with ten points.

Bears Lose To Redskins, 13-0

Account For Win—Account or Winning Scores

DALLAS, Jan. 24 (AP)—If Samuel Adrian Baugh, the Texas slinger, hasn't signed his contract with the Washington Redskins, pro football champions, he has an extra headache to slip into salary bickerings with Owner George Marshall.

Yesterday on the rain-soaked Cotton Bowl gridiron he triple-threatened Washington to a smashing 13-0 triumph over the team Owner Marshall really likes to conquer—the burly Chicago Bears.

Baugh's intimates revealed he had not yet signed a contract. Earlier in the week the Sweetwater pigskin pitcher said he would ask for a three-year agreement.

Baugh passed for one touchdown against the Bears, a wide, flat-zone dame Wayne Millner, old Notre Dame star, gathered in across the line. But he also rolled up an amazing 48-yard kicking average with a soggy ball, ran wild on several ground gains and dropped cold any Chicago running threat that came his direction.

The second Washington score came late in the fourth period when George Smith, husky former California center, intercepted one of Keith Molesworth's wild passes and fought his way 48 yards for a score.

The Bears, crippled by the absence of Bronko Nagurski, failed to slash past the Washington 29-yard stripe—and they got that far only by blocking a quick kick Baugh attempted.

Only about 4500 sat in dismal, rainy weather to see the top pro teams play a thriller.

Feller Awaiting Second Contract

The Cleveland Indians' strikeout artist was expecting the mail carrier to bring his revised 1938 contract from the American league club.

Feller had returned the first contract "for minor adjustments," but announced yesterday he had reached an agreement with the Indians on this year's terms, which he refused to divulge.

Boxers In Midst Of Training For Meet

Boys Drawing First Round Byes Vie

Nine Out-of-Town Entrants Compete Here Wednesday

All local survivors of the Herald-Cosden Golden Gloves boxing tournament in last Friday night's preliminaries and those who drew first round byes will go through the first of two training sessions tonight for the Wednesday night fights at the municipal auditorium.

They are due to work again Tuesday night, tapering off with light drills in preparation for the second of the elimination bouts.

Billis Read, James Shalaky, Poppey Cruz, J. L. Lynne, Johnny Lane, John Crew, Tony Garcia, Elmer Dorsett, Foy Galloway, George Beard and Glenn McCullum did not see action opening night but will get their chance two days hence.

Into Training

Growing interest around the "camp" of McCullum was evident. McCullum, a stocky middleweight who has expressed a preference at meeting J. C. "Killer" Wallace. Wallace scored a first round victory by knocking out E. E. Davis of Lamesa in 29 seconds of the first round last Friday. McCullum, who could make the light heavy ranks very easily, will fight Benny Tange, a hefty Kermit lad, in the featured match Wednesday.

Besides eight local boys who emerged victors in their prelim matches last week, Jodie Diatlen, Kermit, R. C. Heister and Clifford Akin, Lamesa; Don Beck, Monahan; and Ray McKinnon, Foran, will return for second round fights.

Nat Foster, McCamey; Ray Prater, J. N. M.; Jack Davis, Balmorhea; Joe Billie Miller, Colorado; and Bob Kneff, Goldsmith, have been matched for the second round. None of that quintet showed on last week's card.

Tickets have been placed on sale in the Scitlan hotel lobby again, Promoter Ray Simmons announced, and will be available until an hour before the first fight.

Billies Have Decided Both Teams

Foran, Power Of '37 Race, Still Potent; Bulldozers Rough

Which of three basketball teams is going to represent this county in the district tournament in Abilene next month?

That question is no nearer settled than it was a month ago when the season opened on all fronts.

Howard county boasts three of the finest cage teams in this sector in the Coahoma Bulldozers, Garner Hill Billies and the Foran Buffaloes and a streak of luck on the part of one team can easily turn the tide in one direction.

One of those three teams is going to draw a bye into the final round when pairings are made for the Feb. 10 tournament and that advantage may help but whichever quintet captures the honors, it is going to have to play an excellent brand of basketball to sweep the other two aside.

Garner At Top

At the present time, Mentor Floyd Burnett of the Garner team, who is serving this season as athletic director of Howard county, is leading his team to the most successful season his school has had in history. Already they have triumphed over Coahoma, Foran, Lamesa, Wayland Jr. college and Courtney.

Burnett recently issued a challenge to the strong Abilene Eagles but was turned down.

Playing for the Billies this year are Dee Froman, Ed Brown, Willard Jones and the Thomas brothers, R. C. and E. V. That quintet led the Billies to a 49-24 victory over Lamesa last Friday night and defeated Foran 10 points two weeks ago.

Foran is not without its threats. The charges of Brady Nix have long been a power in the county race and, although not as strong as in other years, can still be considered as dangerous.

Champions

Nix piloted his team to first place in the Coahoma invitational tournament last weekend, defeating Ackerly easily in the final game and has scored victories over such teams as Lamesa and Wilson this season.

Captain Hollis Parker, a cee guard of the 1937 team who has been moved to center this season, leads the Foranites into action and is assisted by Whetzel and McDonald, forwards, and Creelman and Fleetwood, guards.

Dangerous, too, are the Coahoma Bulldozers. Coach Lloyd Devan is slowly bringing his quintet along and may have a big surprise in store for the other two in the county meeting.

He has Ralph Marshall, best center in Howard county basketball, and Echols, Hunter and Collins to depend upon.

"Comeback" Team

For the last three meetings, the Bulldozers have captured consolation honors after being beaten in first round games. The ability to come back is one of the Devanmen's best assets.

All in all, the county meeting shapes up as about the most interesting in years. Whichever team slips through into the district tournament will have a double burden in the Abilene meeting a week later. It will have to represent Big Spring as well as Howard county in the district wars for the Steers will not be on hand for a shot at regional honors—the first time in ten years that a local high school team will not have taken part.

Hair Arrangement, Rouge And Eye Make-Up Must Be Considered By Women Weighing Over 200

Careless hair arrangement and hurried make-up detract from good appearance as Amanda Snow, radio singer, shows.

Miss Snow, who weighs 257 pounds, combs her hair up and back at the left—to give an effect of height.

She also swirls her hair into a halo-curl at the right and applies rouge and eye make-up carefully.

By BETTY CLARKE

Feature Service Writer

If there's one woman who must look all slicked-up it's the woman who weighs more than 200 pounds.

There's no reason why the words "stout" and "careless" could go together in most people's minds.

All it takes is some bias-free analysis and a little over-time coining.

Three things should get special consideration from stout people: hair arrangement, rouging and eye make-up.

The Hair First

First, about hair-dos: First, most over-weight women's hair faces they never should let their hair in the center because it makes the face appear even wider than it is. However, center is add to height—so it's often a good idea to part the hair as near center as possible, and then let it fall to the sides.

Instead of spreading the hair at the sides it should be combed from the face—and up. True, the top of the face will show, but the overall effect will be to make the girl appear taller. Curls at the top of the head—but not in Kewpie doll effects—will help. Swirling in back also minimizes the effect of breadth.

Wear Rouge High

Rouge should be applied high on the cheeks—in a triangle extending to the corner of the eye (not lower than the mouth-line) and out to the ear, with the heaviest part coming at the lower corner of the eye.

Drawing attention to the eyes often will divert it from a double chin. The trick is to use more eye make-up. That means mascara on the lashes, eye shadow extended a little beyond the eye line, and perhaps, a slight extension of the brows. Too much of the latter will make the face look broader, however, and defeat the purpose.

READING AND WRITING

THE PRODIGAL PARENTS, by Sinclair Lewis (Doubleday, Doran; $2.50).

White Sinclair Lewis was describing the Sackem Falls, N. Y., home of Frederick William Cornplow, this department was wondering where he had seen something similar—a trifle less rococo to be sure.

Well, we finally remembered where this house is. It's in Bronxville, one of the centers of New York's suburbia. It's occupied by the lecturer-novelist Sinclair Lewis and his wife, Dorothy Thompson the lecturer-columnist. (Lewis gets $1,000 apiece for his lectures, it is reported, and his wife does well, too).

And this discovery helped to explain something about the novel in which Frederick William Cornplow is the chief character—"The Prodigal Parents." It is this: when Frederick William Cornplow is speaking there is a lot of pumped up gusto in the prose. And when he stops speaking, there is still a lot of pumped up gusto. In other words, all persons really speaking throughout are the protean Sinclair Lewis, and that's that.

"The Prodigal Parents" is (the jacket says) about "the revolt of the parents against the revolt of youth." These are both phrases which Stuart Chase would question in his latest role of word expert. Neither means anything—there is no "revolt of youth." What the phrase possibly means is that certain boys and girls of the present and recent past have (as always through his story) objected to parental and other influences; that certain parents have objected to the objections and done various things to counter them.

This material has been done in a thousand novels; it is standard literary material and Mr. Lewis himself has said a lot about it in the past. The setting and the observations on business and small city social life are, for example, out of "Habbit" and "Dodsworth." But one must not assume that Mr. Lewis is merely repeating himself; a child can make a filling station and a castle out of the same set of blocks. Frederick William Cornplow is just a fine of feller, and he just has a swell way fer handling children.

There is meaning in the book.

Mr. and Mrs. Frits R. Smith and daughter, Clara Dod, of Brownwood were weekend guests of Smith's mother, Mrs. Clara Smith.

THE POSTAGE RATE FOR NEWSPAPERS

The existing postal rates on newspapers do not constitute a subsidy, as was intimated by Mr. Roosevelt recently when he suggested a higher second class rate as a means of overcoming at least a part of the Post Office Department's usual annual deficit. If, however, the newspapers were now enjoying a direct subsidy from the government the practice could easily be sustained by ample precedent; for the United States has found it expedient to establish their own delivery services rather than to use the mails and with the exception of the small weeklies a vast majority of the newspapers of the country are delivered by other agencies than the Post Office Department.

The cause for the Post Office Department's perennial deficit, it has been well established, is the handling of tons upon tons of unpaid matter, emanating from the government's huge establishment in Washington and its innumerable local agencies throughout the Union. Paying patrons of the Post Office must either defray the cost of handling all this free matter, or the department will fall to balance its books. If the rates on newspapers were doubled, it would make little difference so far as the annual deficit is concerned, because the total amount involved is relatively small.

Another factor that official Washington might well consider, but apparently does not, is that newspapers of the country are the most faithful and dependable and economical servants of the national government. Through no other means can the government and its bureaus, commissions and innumerable agencies of every conceivable kind reach the public with its messages of information which are vital to the orderly progress of affairs. Never is there a dime appropriated to pay for the services of newspapers under the federal or state governments. Never is there proffered the press any measure of compensation for its assistance in the collection of taxes, the enforcement of the laws, the operation and functioning of nationwide programs having their origin in Washington. Postal rates do not constitute a subsidy, but they should.—(Brownwood Bulletin).

WASHINGTON—Japan, made a name for herself by setting up a dummy state in Manchuria, but it remained for an enterprising civil service employe in the interior department to set up a dummy CCC payroll and collect on it two times a month for three years before finally he was caught and pleaded to a string of forgery charges. Interior department officials were rightfully upset and spent much effort passing the buck to the war department, which was tangled in the affair. Witnesses testifying before a senate committee were considerably at variance on dates, but evidently it was some time in the spring of 1934 that Reno E. Stitley, age about 30, began his little game that escaped detection by Secretary Ickes' 325 departmental detectives through all the intervening months until last March.

How It Worked—The evidence came out piece meal and a bit disorganized, but this is a rough pattern of the business as told to the committee: Stitley, chief of the voucher unit of the national parks service, supervised preparation of vouchers and payrolls for several dozen CCC camps. He made out vouchers only for the salaries of foremen and supervisors—about 15 for each camp. For months these lists had been coursing through Stitley's unit. Several clerks and chiefs of section initiated them. It was purely routine. Nobody paid much attention to names.

So one day Stitley inserted a voucher for an entirely fictitious group of employes in Shenandoah national park in Virginia. Everybody initiated it along with the rest. There was conflicting testimony, Interior department witnesses said Stitley sent in a dummy voucher for supervisory employes of a whole CCC camp. War department officials denied they had let a whole camp slip by, insisting instead it was only a fictitious payroll. But at any rate the voucher went through the department of the interior.

The next hurdle was higher. The war department handled all the CCC money. So Stitley wrote a letter to the war department disbursing agent asking that the checks for his fictitious foremen be delivered to Stitley. It bore the forged name of the park superintendent. The war department disbursing clerk handed him the 15 checks and the party was on. Stitley cashed them at local banks, counter-indorsing them with his own name. Ultimately he opened a brokerage account and lost about $9,000 in the market.

Got Nearly $100,000—His salary was only $2,300 a year, but he bought a home and paid about $6,000 on it in 12 months. He threw parties at local hotels, one costing $275 and another $100. He bought a car and last spring paid freight to have it shipped to Florida and back. The scheme brought him about $78,000 in the three years—bigger pay than the Vice President gets. The loss never showed up because Stitley kept the phoney vouchers out of the regular file. Ultimately, Stitley sought to extend his activities to a CCC camp which was outside the park service. He got $6,000 from that and another $13,000 from the bureau of public roads in the department of agriculture, witnesses testified, all through manipulation of CCC payrolls.

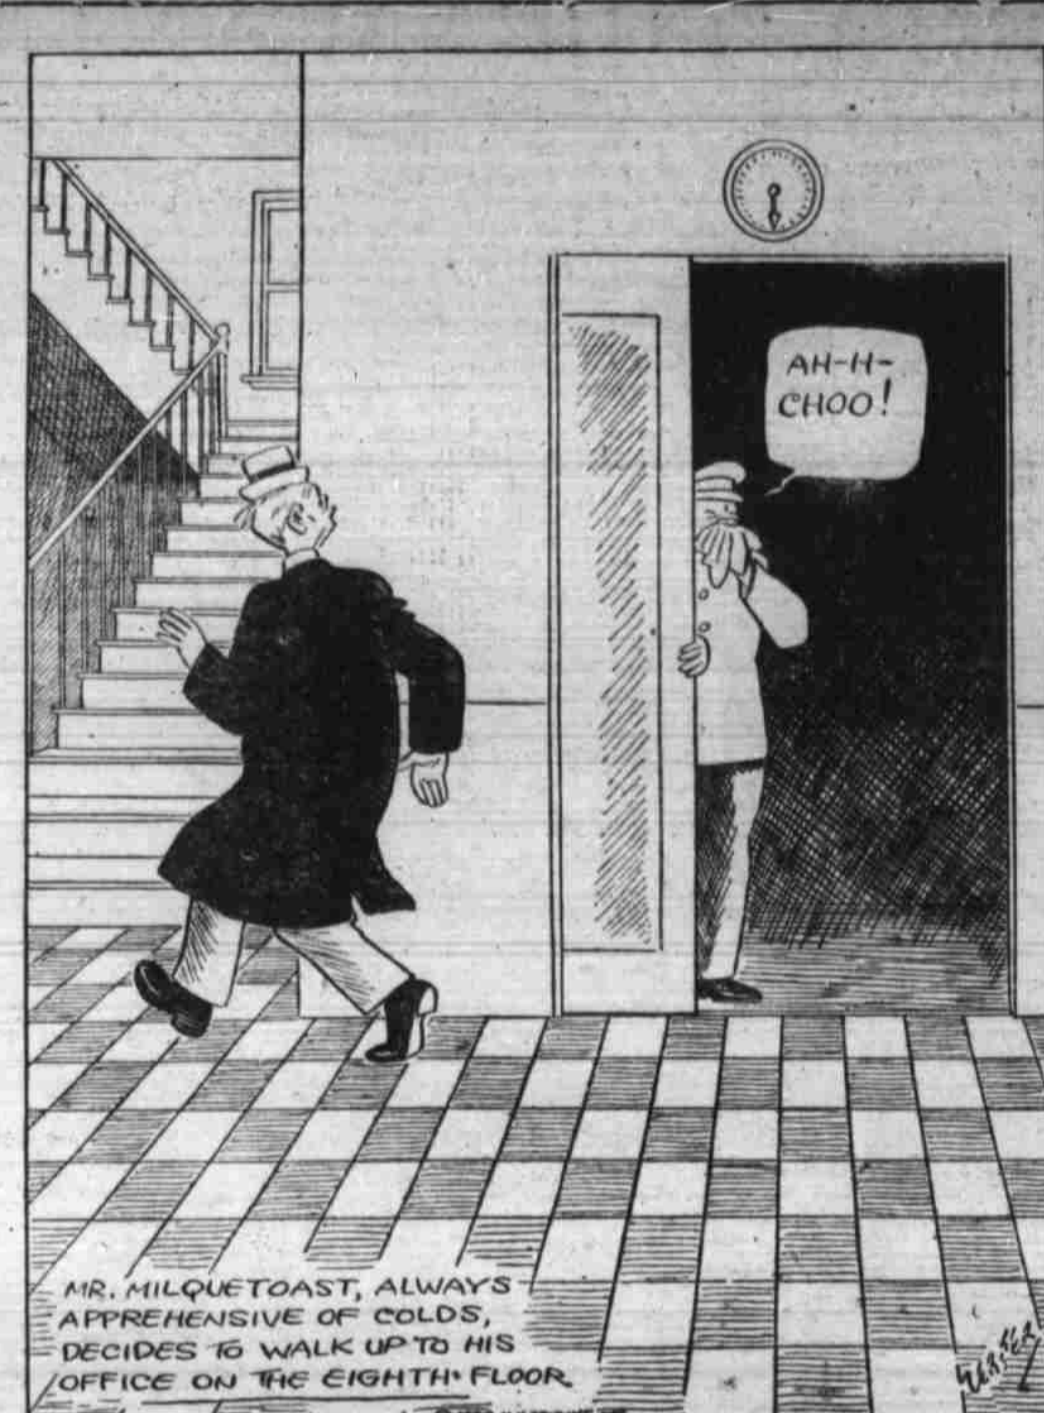

Just who caught up with him is not clear. But when Stitley suspected he was caught, he left the office and went home. That was April 8. A few days ago he pleaded guilty to charges of forgery.

Man About Manhattan

by GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—There is an incredible liar down in the Village, but his fantasies are told with such charming conviction and romantic flavor that one is persuaded to accept them as fact, until—suddenly, you come upon irrefutable proof, that he is fictionizing again. Nevertheless, there is a place for him in this "local fact" world where, as someone has said, adults are the only ones who believe in fairy tales. The story that clings most persistently to memory and falls most melodiously on the ears is the one concerning the clown and his little pet pigeon. My friend, the liar, swore solemnly that this tale was true: There was once a poor clown living in New York whose only possession was a little lame daughter and a pigeon. He loved the child's laughter and he adored the little bird, but poverty and want drove him into the street, flitting to do a thing which seemed to him the very act of a Judo. There was no bread in the cupboard, and bread he must have for his child; so weeping bitterly, he went to the marketplace, with his pigeon in a cage, and offered to let a rich man set it free for a coin. The rich man, pleased with the idea, tossed the poor clown some silver, carefully drew the bird from the cage, and flung it high into the air. The old clown continued to weep bitterly. In his heart he felt that he had betrayed a trust and forsaken a true friend,

Sights And Sounds

by ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Second—guessing on the James Cagney-Warner Bros. peace treaty effected the other day gives us a pretty piece of backstage drama. On the surface, it would appear the boys merely got together and ironed out their troubles, with smiling sweetness all around. Cagney, after making two films for the "independent" Grand National company, goes back to the studio where he became a star in hard-hitting melodramas. His suit to free himself from a 24,000 a week contract was victorious nearly two years ago. The state supreme court, when both contesting parties agreed, reversed that decision.

CAGNEY

The result takes a load off many minds. Cagney won originally, not on his contention that he was overworked, but on a slip of the studio in billing him under Pat O'Brien at one of the Warner's theaters, which was a breach of contract. Had the case gone through to a supreme court test on its merits, many studio contracts with stars would have been endangered in the event of a Cagney victory. Had Cagney lost, on the other hand, he would have been compelled to give up pictures or return to Warner under his old contract. Acute discomfort, in either event, would have resulted, either for Cagney or for Warner and the other major studios. The outlook was sufficiently serious, apparently, to induce the Warner to make concessions, at the same time inducing the actor to change his mind. Cagney's mind, freely spoken during and after his studio fight, was against further relations with those Warner in any circumstances. Insiders credit Bill Cagney, his brother's manager, and Harry Warner, the studio president, with prime responsibility for the peace now-voiced. Bill persuaded fiery Jimmy to talk terms, and Harry smoothed over the ruffled spirits of brother Jack Warner, and the turkey-talk ensued. The whole affair was straightened out in a three-hour conference.

Two-A-Year Now

This was both the studio and the star are winners. Cagney, feeling that Warner could never have worked for a major studio, as major studios have a silent, unofficial agreement about employing each other's rebels. A star of Cagney's importance needs a "major" release—and Warner Bros. needs a star like Cagney. Several potential "Cagney substitutes" did not pan out. If report is true, Cagney will get $100,000 a picture for two pictures yearly. His old deal netted him $160,000 for four pictures. Too many pictures a year was one of Cagney's kicks against the studio. Another was the way he was required, in films, to do ungentlemanly deeds like socking ladies, pushing in their faces, and kicking them about—deeds all unpleasant to Cagney personally. The laugh is that while Cagney was at Grand National playing gentlemanly roles, the rest of the screen went berserk and leading ladies learned to regard slaps and kicks as part of their day's work!

Hundreds of Eyes

When I was not watching my course, my eyes were upon James Clyde's face. He was looking at the Avon. I wanted to turn that way too; but I stiffened, and would not permit it. Watching my uncle's move, when Christine Forrester came to the rail of the Avon, I could not entirely read the veiling of James Clyde's eyes, and the quick droop of one corner of his mouth; but I knew that she was there. So did the rest; every ear in the boat was inevitably very much aware of her. They stroked more cleanly and pulled harder because they knew that a girl was looking out.

EMPIRE FOR A LADY

BY ALAN LE MAY

Chapter Six UP THE SIDERONG That first slow, unceremonious approach into the mouth of the Siderong was like nothing in my past experience in the islands. Since I had been with James Clyde we had felt a few breaths of action. There had been a couple of dark nights in uncertain anchorage, when I waited on watch, suspecting every shadow on the water—with good reason. There can be a great tenacity in that, while you wait, trying to make your eyes do more than they were able to do in the heavy hot dark. A few random shots had come of those nights, followed by a great flurry of defense out of proportion to the actual danger. Or was it out of proportion? We never knew how many enemies there had been; or how easily they might have taken the Linkang. But never before anything like this...

Out here at the anchorage the water was deep and blue, with the living, electric blue that you never see anywhere except in the tropics. But the mouth of the Siderong—It slid brown and heavy into the bay, faintly discoloring the water all about it. It was like the river laid of polished teak. Its first reach was broad and lake-like, ending in a blank turn. After that the river belonged to the jungle. There was something terrible still and empty—something weirdly bleak and unwholesome like the sad, empty anteroom to a tomb, about that vast first reach. We moved with a steady, even rhythm, workmanlike and unhurried. Nondescript scum though they might be called, those men had a firm deep grip upon the essentials of the work that they did. Methodically, they put the whole boat toward the mouth of that unfriendly river—simply because James Clyde told them to do it, and it was James Clyde who paid their wage.

Hundreds of Eyes When I was not watching my course, my eyes were upon James Clyde's face. He was looking at the Avon. I wanted to turn that way too; but I stiffened, and would not permit it. Watching my uncle's move, when Christine Forrester came to the rail of the Avon, I could not entirely read the veiling of James Clyde's eyes, and the quick droop of one corner of his mouth; but I knew that she was there. So did the rest; every ear in the boat was inevitably very much aware of her. They stroked more cleanly and pulled harder because they knew that a girl was looking out.

I kept calculating what we could do to defend ourselves if the Dyaks should close upon us. In actual effect our weapons could not accomplish much. At stern and bow, where Clyde and I could reach them, lay three rifles apiece, muzzle-loading cap-lock guns, good for only a single shot. Once they were fired there would never be time to load them again. With these we could hope to pick off three or four chiefs.

There were also a couple of double-barreled shotguns, loaded with enough lead to blow them up, and eight pairs of the new cap-and-ball six-shooters, slotted in racks under the thwarts so as not to disturb the caps. Most of the Dyaks were getting used to firearms by this time, but a lot of their first dread of them remained, and some of them could be counted on to break and flee before the explosion of the guns.

If they did not break and flee, then we were through. A hundred shots will not clear a river that is suddenly swarming with 100 war praus. Each of our men had between his feet a parang, or a hangar, or a kris, but these were only for that queer comfort which comes from feeling that at least you are not completely helpless as the finish comes. If the Dyak prau closed, bristling with the long barbed, rod - pointed spears, our blades would be no more use than a bunch of mops.

Something Queer And Wrong The first open reach was three-quarters of a mile, though it seemed much more. We reached the end of it at last, and wheeled slowly through the deep turn. After the first bend, the river twisted continuously; and in its second winding we made our first actual contact with the Dyaks. A 20 paddle prau, about three-quarters manned, was drifting along about half way out from shore. They must have known of our approach while we were a long way off; but they appeared to have no plan. At sight of us they turned and shot the canoe against the barbed roots of the pagtapi, where they hung on, watching unflinchingly.

I studied the prau, for it had a queer type of figure-head, never seen in the river Siderong; obviously that prau had come from many days away. As I saw that, I was overwhelmed by an awful sense of the magnitude of this revolt. I was just beginning to realize why the towering jungle held so many drums. Here was a Dyak conspiracy more widespread than any of us would have conceived possible. Nothing short of a miracle can bring even two or three Dyak panglans together; yet here were fighting men from all the north coast of Sumatran.

Once more it was forced in upon me that something was queer and wrong about this whole situation. It was all very well for Clyde to say that what was wrong was that the Avon did not know its business. There was something else—and the people of the Avon knew what it was. Perhaps they did not know their business; and perhaps they did not even understand what they knew. Yet the conviction was firm in my mind that Christine Forrester possessed some all-important information that we did not. "Hold it," my uncle said. The eight oars lifted clear of the water and hung there, while he listened. The uncanny silence that had come over the jungle continued.

Clyde said, "Pull on a little more." The oars dipped, and the boat moved slowly up-stream again, tentative and uncertain. (Copyright, 1936, Alan LeMay)

Vic Schwarz, Rodeo Winner Here, Adds Denver Title To His List

Long, loose-jointed Vic Schwarz, who poles on the hurricane deck of a bucking bronc like he was part of the horse, has added another bronc-busting title to his long string—that of the National Western Stock show at Denver, Colo. This time the title carried with it $200 prize money for the 23-year-old Texan who calls Wichita Falls home. The Denver show was his first major title, although he has fattened his pocket book repeatedly at many of the smaller rodeo events. This year, off to a good start, he plans to make the big time loop, which leads to Madison Square Garden in New York in October.

Vic Schwarz will be remembered as the outstanding rider of the annual Big Spring cowboy rodeo and reunion association for the past several years. In 1936 he was high moneywinner, taking $125 in prize awards for two first places and one second place in both the steer and bronc riding contests. He received cowboy equipment as a special award. Last year he won a first place in both steer and bronc riding, although Buck Jones, Wichita Falls, nosed him out in three day competition.

In 1935 he won a couple of first places and a couple of third places in steer and bronc riding. In fact, he had become one of the local show's big attractions by last July.

But Vic admits he doesn't like to ride because "you get bumped up awful bad." Others may do it for the glory, but Vic does it "for the dough there's in it."

Minor Damage In Hawaiian Quake

HONOLULU, Jan. 24 (AP)—Hawaiian residents today repaired minor damage resulting from an earthquake while scientists kept a close watch for possible eruptions of numerous active volcanoes on the island, southernmost island of the mid-Pacific group.

Possibility that Mauna Loa, one of the three great volcanoes on that island, might have originated the tremor, was expressed by Commander J. H. Peters of the coast geologic survey.

Peters expressed belief the epicenter of the quake, which began at 10:05 p. m. Saturday (3:35 a. m. Sunday, EST), and lasted two minutes, was around Hawaii Island.

The earthquake cracked plaster, tumbled crockery from shelves and frightened island residents, but no casualties were reported.

Weather

A hard freeze predicted for the Panhandle and freezing at least to Dallas.

The weather bureau warned farmers to remove their livestock from Trinity river lowlands from Dallas to Trinidad. The east fork apparently was headed for a 37-foot stage, because of continued weekend rains. The bureau expected a 38-foot stage at Trinidad. Flood stage at Dallas is 23 feet but levees protect the city.

Port Arthur's 42-mile southeast yesterday broke a 20-year January record and brought in much of the 2.4 inches of rain during the weekend. The sun was shining today but temperatures were dropping.

Reports Heard At C-C Meeting

Chamber of commerce directors, in their regular bimonthly meeting, heard reports from Edmund Notestine, chairman of the civic and beautification committee, and Merle J. Stewart, chairman of the housing committee.

Notestine told of plans for a tree and plant sale campaign as well as other beautification activities. Stewart outlined preliminary steps on a cooperative arrangement between financiers and building materials concerns to encourage construction of new homes.

Water Parley To Be Held In City Tomorrow

Representatives from counties in the watershed of the upper Colorado hearing are expected here Tuesday at 10 a. m. for a water re-arrangement, flood control and soil erosion prevention hearing under direction of the U. S. agriculture department.

Fred Keating will represent the chamber of commerce, O. P. Griffin, county agent, the county, and E. V. Spence, city manager, the city. Culberson Deal, San Angelo, and others will represent that city, although not affected in this hearing. Among those expected from Colorado are Carl Blasig, chamber manager, W. W. Porter, rivers committee chairman, and S. J. Baskin, Mitchell county agent.

Louis P. Merrill, Fort Worth, regional conservator of the agriculture department, will be in charge of the hearing.

Highway Workers In Area Attend Safety Classes

Once a week now, highway department maintenance workers "go to school" to learn of safety.

The new policy of weekly safety instruction, designed to benefit the traveling public as well as the individual workers, is the result of the workers' compensation act covering state highway department employees. The act took effect Jan. 1 and since that every highway department employee has voluntarily become safety conscious.

E. J. McCombs, in charge of maintenance work in Howard county, conducts a class each Monday morning for 30 minutes or an hour. Men are taught to take precautions in their work and to act with a thought for the public's safety.

McCombs' classes range from nine to 15 men, depending on the number required to adequately staff the local maintenance unit. Employees do not have to attend the classes, but none has missed yet.

A little later on, said McCombs, a first aid class will be given the workers. This class, he added, will not be restricted to highway department workers, but any person interested in gaining first aid knowledge will be welcomed to the sessions.

FATAL EXPLOSION IS INVESTIGATED

DEEP WATER, N. J., Jan. 24 (AP)—Company investigators searched through twisted metal and blackened bricks today for the cause of an explosion that shattered a four-story unit of the Dupont eye works and killed at least one workman yesterday.

Another worker was missing and the company said today it had abandoned hope of finding him alive in the wreckage.

Four survivors were asked to describe the odor of acetylene gas which they said caused three fellow workmen to remain in the plant during the early-morning lunch period.

While the three were tracing the leak, the first explosion cut loose. Seven or eight other blasts followed.

Charles Forsyah, of Central Park, died of burns in a hospital at Wilmington, Del. Raymond Hale, night shift foreman, of Carney's Point, was taken there in a critical condition, and Earl Hale, of Central Park, could not immediately be found in the plant wreckage.

Rockefeller Center To Be New Home Of Associated Press

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—The future home of the Associated Press will be erected in Rockefeller Center, where general headquarters and the New York office of the world's largest cooperative news and picture gathering organization will be located in a building bearing its own name.

Construction of the Associated Press building will begin shortly after the first of the units included in the program recently announced by Rockefeller Center. The Associated Press will occupy four floors of the 15-story structure, which will be completed in the autumn.

The quarters selected provide for the immediate needs of steadily increasing scope of the Associated Press news, news photo, feature and supplemental services to more than 1,500 newspaper members. The structure of the press association's work, together with the regular news of its mechanical, laboratory and transmission facilities, involved engineering problems that necessitated far reaching solutions. Accommodations have been made for the installation of every phase of the organization's activities, including printing and other equipment used in the production of some departments of the service.

"OUR JOB IS TO CUT TELEPHONE TROUBLES"

The men who head the telephone company have always believed even good service can be better. Their aim has been better and better service at low cost to the user. One result is that today your telephone almost never needs repairs.

In 1926, there were 23 reports of telephone trouble a month for every 100 telephones in the Southwest. Last year there were only 6 reports for every 100.
