Negroes Admit Attacking, Slaying Girl

CARD CHANGE WOULD BE A COSTLY MOVE

To reduce the size of one small card would cost the local Retail Merchants Credit association about $1,500.

If it were changed, said L. A. Eubanks, manager, the entire filing set-up of the bureau would have to be changed.

All of the more than 25,000 cards on file would have to be re-copied and checked in addition to installing new filing equipment. This operation would cost approximately $1,500, estimated Eubanks.

The bureau keeps tabs on credit records, births, deaths, marriages, water, gas and electric connections, and chattel mortgages. A complete record of mortgages filed since 1926 are on file in the bureau.

Mob Violence Is Threatened In E-Tex Town

Youths Taken To Houston Jail After Confessing Crime

COLUMBUS, Oct. 22. (AP) Bennie Mitchell and Ernest Collins, negro youths, admitted to officers Tuesday that they criminally attacked and killed Geraldine Kollman, 19, honor graduate of Columbus high school.

Tell of Attack

The negroes, charged with criminal attack and murder, were rushed to the Harris county jail at Houston after reports of plans for mob violence were heard here.

The negroes said they pulled the girl from a horse while she was riding, struck her with an elm club and attacked her, then tossed the body into a creek.

The girl's brother found her body floating in a creek on her father's property last Thursday. It was at first believed she had been drowned.

An undertaker found no water in the lungs, however, and discovered bruises on the body.

A quiet investigation that ensued resulted in the arrest of the negroes.

Ft. Worth Man Is Called By Local Church

McConnell Is Expected To Take Presbyterian Pastorate

Announcement was made in Fort Worth Tuesday that the Rev. D. F. McConnell, pastor of the Broadway Presbyterian church there, would accept a call to the pastorate of the First Presbyterian church of Big Spring.

No word had been received here from Rev. McConnell, said T. S. Currie, chairman of the local church pulpits committee, although the minister had indicated he would accept a call which was issued Sunday.

Mr. Currie planned to confer with Rev. McConnell Wednesday at San Angelo, at a meeting of the U. S. Synod of Texas.

Rev. McConnell preached at the local church three weeks ago.

The announcement from Fort Worth said his resignation there is subject to the approval of his members and the Fort Worth Presbytery. He was expected to tender his resignation to the Fort Worth congregation next Sunday.

Jockey Sought For Quizzing In Woman's Death

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 22. (AP) Willie Saunders, jockey who rode Omaha to victory in the 1st Kentucky derby, Tuesday was sought for questioning in the slaying of Mrs. Evelyn Sliwinski, who was killed after a party Sunday.

A witness said another man on the party ran over and killed Mrs. Sliwinski after a man believed to have been Saunders had knocked her down, and later had ordered her out of his car.

Toni Sani, an exercise boy at the race tracks, also was being sought.

The mangled body of Mrs. Sliwinski, 24-year-old wife of a Louisville tailor, was found in the road Sunday morning.

The body had been run over by an automobile, and bore evidence of a brutal beating.

Saunders rode at Churchill Downs last Saturday, and was reported planning to leave late Saturday for Laurel, Md., with Raymond (Sonny) Workman, another well-known jockey.

Hundreds Join In Program At Fair

City Sends Delegation For Observance Of Special Day At Midland Exposition

Hundreds of Big Spring people attended the Midland Fair Monday, to participate in the observance of "Big Spring Day." Preceding the caravan of 50 cars, which left the city at 1 o'clock, were about 30 Rotarians and Rotary Anna, who participated in a joint meeting of the Midland and Big Spring Rotary clubs at the Scharbauer Hotel at noon. The Rotarians joined in the parade of Big Spring people immediately after the luncheon session.

Arriving in Midland at 1:45, the motor caravan took part in a parade on downtown Midland streets. The parade was led by the Big Spring High School Municipal Band and pep squad. Banners were displayed on various cars bearing the inscription, "Big Spring Congratulates Midland."

Automobile horns were blown during the progress of the parade, and the Big Spring boosters, with ribbons, arm bands and skull caps, were the center of attraction.

"Torchy" Bright, drum major of the local band, in his usual antics with the baton, drew repeated applause from the crowds lining the streets.

The parade disbanded after traversing the principal streets of the downtown section, and the crowd, for the most part, continued to the fair grounds east of the city, where the horse races were staged. Many Big Spring people remained for the evening rodeo performance.

Small Crude Supply Cited By Thompson

Heavy Consumption Is To Demand New Production, He Says

Chairman Ernest O. Thompson, of the Texas railroad commission, speaking to the joint meeting of the Big Spring and Midland Rotary and Rotary Ann clubs at Midland Monday drew attention sharply to the low level of storage oil in the United States.

"On Oct. 31, 1929, there were 433 million barrels of oil on hand," he said. "Now on Oct. 1, 1935, there are only 300 million on hand in storage."

"While they were crying chaos and overproduction of oil they were actually taking out of storage 133 million barrels to make up the shortage in production. And that is not all. They were importing an additional 147,000 barrels of oil per day to take the place of our own production."

"These are the facts from the bureau of mines. Oil is going to be needed badly. They cannot take much more from storage. It's only 173 days' supply that they have on hand and that is necessary for working stocks."

"The year 1935 is going to show an all-time high for the consumption of oil and its products. This is going to have to be replaced from new production. An interesting amount of it must come from West Texas. Your tracts should be more intensely developed."

"The more densely you drill the greater will be your recovery and the bigger the income for the land owner and royalty owner."

Ruth Nichols Hurt, Still In Grave Danger

Injuries Are Fatal To Pilot On Big Plane That Crashed

TROY, N. Y., Oct. 22. (AP)—Ruth Nichols, noted aviatrix, was reported "slightly improved" although still in grave danger, following an airplane crash Monday at the airport here.

Capt. Harry Nublitz of New York, pilot, died last night of injuries received in the crash.

Two couples, passengers in the plane that crashed and burned and who had escaped with minor injuries, were married in a double wedding ceremony last night. They were Miss Gladys and Nena Berkinheiser, sisters of New York; and Ray Hanes and William Holt, both of Atlanta, Ga.

Miss Nichols' 20-passenger twin-motor luxury plane faltered on a takeoff from the Troy airport and tore through two trees. The ship exploded and burned as it struck the ground.

Both Miss Nichols and Nublitz were thrown clear of the wreckage.

The aviatrix was suffering from severe burns and numerous fractures. She possibly has internal injuries. Physicians said they could not determine for two or three days whether she will recover.

French Cabinet Meets

Premier Laval of France discussed his peace efforts with the French cabinet, and it was reported the ministerial council would strive tomorrow to modify Mussolini's peace demands.

The increased areas in which the Italian forces occupied Ethiopia were believed to have strengthened Mussolini's bargaining position.

Recurrent heavy rains had halted the Italian advance toward Harar. Il Duce's forces were quiet on the northern front.

Emperor Haile Selassie rushed preparations to leave for the main Ethiopian defense concentration at Dessye, northeast of Addis Ababa. There, if a battle occurs, he will be at the head of his own armies.

The emperor dispatched Ras Mulgueta, Ethiopian minister of war, to Dessye to command the huge concentration of warriors there.

From out of the court room floated the ominous tones of a "magistrate" demanding order. They opened the door to find who could be holding court at such an hour.

A sleep-deprived gentleman stepped from the desk, demanding order and threatened to clear the court room if disturbances did not cease.

Fields was inquisitive to know what was going on. He said as much.

"Get out or I'll have you thrown out," exploded the "magistrate" and continued rapping for order.

"His Honor" finally was persuaded to leave the bench to make an inspection of the Howard county jail.

STEERS POINT FOR IMPORTANT GAME WITH BOBCATS Longhorns, Owls Tie Up In Feature Scrap Of Southwest Conference

WARM UP AGAINST PLAINVIEW

Meet Bulldogs In Non-Title Bout Here Friday Under Lights

Sweetwater remains idle this week as San Angelo and Big Spring take on teams in non-district combat in preparation for the most important clash of the year in sector 3, the traditional battle between the San Angelo Bobcats and Big Spring Steers on Nov. 11.

WHAT HO! Steer mentors found themselves with very little coaching material Monday afternoon. Fourteen of the boys do a practice for the Midland Fair.

show much against Plainview here Friday night, and the Bobcats will not turn loose against North Side of Fort Worth.

Coaches of both teams are polishing their grid machines on highly intricate offensive maneuvers, and practice sessions will probably be barred to the public after this week. Plans are being made to stretch canvas around Steer field, and the Bobcat stadium will be protected likewise from prying eyes when the Cats workout each afternoon on cemetery field.

The Steers used only three plays in beating the Cisco Jobbers here last week. Just straight football, but the mentors plan to show the Cats and Angelo fans some real offensive football here Nov. 11. It will be a day game.

Bristow has a spread play perfected which he plans to shoot against the Conchoans. It was used some against Poly of Fort Worth.

According to reports from the banks of the Concho, Coaches Harry Taylor and Tonto Coleman will rely mainly on a spectacular offense of intercepts to carry them to victory. Although a dangerous procedure at times, the Cats have lateral down to a fine point, and they are difficult to stop.

Harry Hays, key man in the Angelo secondary who was injured several weeks ago and forced to the sidelines, is back in practice again and going better than ever.

Despite the fact that Big Spring has a heavier and more experienced line, top-heavy early season victories here definitely established the Cats as favorites in this district.

Sweetwater Mustangs will play their first conference game Nov. 22 at San Angelo. Idle this week, they play at Ranger Nov. 2, meet Class B Colorado on the 11th and play host to the Breckenridge Bucs on the 16th.

Bulldog Club Well Balanced

Light, Fast Team Shows A Great Deal Of Improvement

PLAINVIEW, Oct. 22.—A light, fast team with a will to win and a determination to bring football out of the doldrums in Plainview carries the scarlet and blue of the Plainview high school into grid action this season.

A capable line which has demonstrated its ability to wreck many a well launched attack and a group of about eight first string backs gives the Bulldogs of Plainview the best balanced club it has had in several years.

Coach Madison Pruitt and his assistant, G. F. (Froggy) Lovvorn, have developed a splendid team spirit and while no district championship is expected, the fans believe that the team is capable of giving any club in the loop a hard battle, and the players themselves are sure that they can.

The Bulldogs have been brought along slowly but steadily and a definite improvement has been noted each week. The inevitable let down came last Friday at Berger where the Bulldogs lost a thrilling game to an inspired band of Berger Bulldogs 12 to 6. General belief is that the defeat was beneficial and the lads have shown a disposition in practice this week that upholds this belief.

Chief cause for worry comes from the scarcity of line replacements. A strong starting group can be put into action but if the going gets too tough there are few to give the boys a rest.

The backfield set up is brighter. Mason, an outstanding star of the district last year, is heavier and more experienced and there are at least three other backs who are every bit as good as the little speed merchant, Chisholm, Covington and Ray have shown equal ability this season and Dean, Joiner, Chambers, Seal, Driver, and others are able to fit into the picture without detracting from the effectiveness.

Pruitt's regular starting line consists of Captain Marlow, Dees and George at guards, both light but very aggressive. Short is a center with Lundy and Thomas at tackle posts. All three are of good size and the two tackles have developed miraculously since the opening of the season. Durrett and Lowry, the starting ends are rugged and smart. Their chief defect so far has been points for the Forsan girls' team.

Forsan Cagers Cop From Elbow

FORSAN, Oct. 22.—Forsan cagers won and lost at Elbow Monday night. The boys won, 23 to 15, but the girls were upset by Berger, 12 to 8.

Lyles was high point man for the Forsan boys' team with 14 points. Prescott scored five and Parker and Prescott scored five of the eight points for the Forsan girls' team.

Tiny Thornhill Becomes A Football 'Repair Man'

Net Candidates Start Practice

Wayne Mathews, high school tennis coach, is stealing the march on other West Texas schools' net instructors by starting his candidates out early in hope of putting out district winners this year.

Mathews called a meet last week, and more than a half dozen players have kept the two high school courts busy until dark each afternoon.

Three veterans are back, Preston Sligh, who played singles last year, and Jim Brigham and Jimmy Ford who formed a double combination. Jimmy Myers is also out for practice each afternoon.

A new boy, William Kirby from Kentucky, is expected to bolster the local net hopes considerably this year.

An inability to handle passes. In the reserve list the Bulldogs have Evans, a fine center, Loring, a tackle who played a jam-up game at Quannah and Umphreys and Hand at ends with a few other utility men of promise.

The Bulldogs started their schedule against a strong Floydada Class B team and nosed out a 6 to 0 win. Against Tulla the next week they turned on the heat for a 39 to 0 victory and then came a sterling performance against Clovia, New Mexico champions, whom they defeated 24 to 9. Quannah beat the locals 13 to 7 and Berger won last Friday, 12 to 6.

Maryland Will Turn Over Game Receipts To Rival

BALTIMORE, Oct. 22. (AP)—In this day of high-pressure football, when the percentage "split" of the gate receipts is a vital point in scheduling a game, the Maryland-Western Maryland match here Dec. 7 will go down in the annals as something unusual.

As an example of the "brotherly" spirit in collegiate competition, the University of Maryland will turn over its entire share of the receipts, minus bare expenses, to Western Maryland.

The reason is that Maryland wants to help its sister institution build a new gymnasium. All the proceeds of the game will be added to a fund for the new building on the Western Maryland campus at Westminster.

Two of the three sophomores half-back prospects have served notice of their ability this season. Vigna put on a three-touchdown scoring exhibition against San Jose State in the season opener. Coffis contributed markedly to the Indian victory over University of San Francisco.

The third, Glenn Hamilton, no relation to "Bones," but rather, to Tom Hamilton, who was quite a passer at College of Pacific recently, remains to be tested under fire. Hamilton is a right half. Coffis is a left half. Vigna can play either wing.

Face Huskies Next Thornhill, of course, is hoping "Bones" Hamilton's leg will heal quickly. If it does, he will lead

Series To Be Renewed On Shreveport Grid This Week

FORT WORTH, Oct. 22.—The Centenary Gentlemen are 1-2 on the T. C. U. Horned Frogs in the football series between the two schools, to be renewed in Shreveport next Saturday afternoon. The Gentlemen have won three games, the Frogs two, and one was a scoreless tie.

The series started back in 1923 when Bo McMillan was at the helm of Centenary. Bo's crimson-jerseyed eleven came to Fort Worth that year and crushed a lighter Frog team 23 to 0. The Christians made it 1-1 in 1926, when the Gentlemen again came to Fort Worth for the second game between the two schools. The score this time was 26 to 14 in favor of T. C. U.

The last four games have all been played in Shreveport, the contests having been made a feature of the Louisiana state fair. Centenary won in 1927 by a score of 7 to 3. In 1929 T. C. U.'s first championship outfit swamped the Gentlemen 28 to 0. The scoreless tie came in 1933. Then last year the Gentlemen came out on top by a 13 to 0 count.

AGS, BEARS MEET IN TITLE GO

Frogs Meet Centenary, Ponies Hardin-Simmons Cowboys

FORT WORTH, Oct. 22.—Next Saturday Austin will not only be the capital of Texas but also the football capital of the Southwest conference. There the Rice Owls will fight the Longhorns for a place in the conference race. The game is by long odds the outstanding tilt of the week, and any depositor who thinks well of his reputation for forecasting would do well to wait until next Saturday night to pick a winner here.

A second conference contest will be played at College Station, between the Aggies and Baylor. Most fans seem to feel the Farmers will dump the Bears from the undefeated class.

S. M. U. and Arkansas have rest-periods coming up on their schedules. The Methodists will journey to neutral territory—Wichita Falls—to meet the Cowboy eleven of Hardin-Simmons. While the latter play good football, they are not conceded much against the strong 1935 Mustangs. Arkansas takes on the College of the Ozarks in Fayetteville, probably using the game to perfect their offense for A. & M. the following week in Little Rock.

The Horned Frogs of T. C. U. play the Centenary Gentlemen at the state fair in Shreveport. The Frogs will probably find themselves pretty well occupied during the afternoon if they maintain their undefeated record. The Gentlemen will still be smarting from the Texas loss, and it is no easy matter to defeat a Centenary eleven two Saturdays in succession.

They have a dependable quality that is as important to us as the comfort King James found in his old shoes. Read the advertisements in this newspapers, and learn more about the things which are part of your daily life. Naturally, you take their quality for granted (advertised products are reliable). But with closer attention to the news in the advertisements, you will be able to effect surprising savings, and find new uses for old favorites.

WE DRIVERS
A Series of Brief Discussions on Driving, Dedicated to the Safety, Comfort and Pleasure of the Motoring Public. Prepared by General Motors

No. 7—SLIPPERY WEATHER

For any snow always bring problems for drivers. These problems are the result of less friction. And that is interesting, because usually we are trying to reduce friction all we can. We use ball and roller bearings to overcome friction. We smooth and polish parts to reduce friction. We put oil in our cars to avoid friction. But we can't get along without friction, just the same.

For, after all, we couldn't start a car, we couldn't stop a car, we couldn't turn a corner, if it weren't for friction. The friction between the road and our rubber tires is what gives us traction.

Most of the time we have plenty of traction. But in certain climates every year, winter comes blowing and blustering down from the North, and the first thing we know we have spread ice and snow over our roads, and our whole traction condition is changed.

But automobiles are pretty well prepared these days to meet any conditions. All we have to do is to adjust ourselves to these changed circumstances.

For instance, many skilful drivers start their cars in high gear on very slippery, icy streets. Ordinarily this would be a bad thing to do. But when our tires have to start us going on slippery ice or snow, starting in second or "high" is harmless and it does help to avoid spinning wheels, side slipping and difficulty in getting under way. If you haven't tried this after stopping at intersections, you may be surprised to find out how much more quickly you get started again. Only remember to engage the clutch very slowly.

This business of starting in slippery weather can be quite a problem. But stopping is even more so. However, most good drivers agree on one method that they find quite satisfactory. First, when they begin to slow their cars down at quite a distance from where they want to stop. They press the brake lightly at first and release it almost at once. Then they press again and release quickly. By a series of brief, moderate brake actions, instead of one continuous pressure, they gradually reduce speed and can usually stop without skidding.

Many of the best drivers always make it a point not to disengage the clutch as soon as they apply their brakes, but to wait until the car has almost stopped. While this is their general practice, they say it is especially important on slippery roads, as they claim it reduces the chances of skidding. But if we use this method there is one thing we must look out for. We have to remember that on a slippery surface it is very easy to stall our engine by using our brakes when the clutch is still engaged.

Outside of starting and stopping, most winter skidding is at turns and curves. Many good drivers tell us that they treat every slippery curve or turn as though it were going to be a stop. In other words, they apply moderate brake actions. The result is that when they reach the curve they are going so slowly that they can actually give the engine a little gas and put some power in the wheels. With power turning the wheels, we are not so likely to skid.

After all, the main thing to do about driving in slippery weather is just what we do about walking in slippery weather. We are all pretty careful about that. The first thing most of us do when we go out on a slippery morning is to put out one foot cautiously and get the feel of the surface to see how careful we have to be. The best drivers we know do practically the same thing with their cars. The first thing they do after they get started, is to test the surface. They make sure that there are no cars too near, and then they gently apply the brakes. If they don't skid they resume speed and apply the brakes again—this time a little more firmly.

In this way they determine the surface and know the degree of caution the most exercise to be safe. This seems like a very sensible idea.

Mrs. Owen Home From Denmark

Visits With Daughter And Granddaughter In Washington

By BESS FURMAN
WASHINGTON, Oct. 22 (AP)—In the intimacy of her own family, "Madame Minister" Ruth Bryan Owen, envoy to Denmark, is one of three Ruths, all writers.

They've been having a brief reunion—and William Jennings Bryan's daughter Ruth, and her daughter Ruth, all had neat and alluring manuscripts to read to each other. Granddaughter Ruth is only 11 years old, but the Children's Page of a Florida paper has been publishing her stories and poems since she was six; and her hand-printed output has a decidedly professional air.

Madame Minister made her travel boozed last year with "Leaves of a Greenland Diary," a vivid, impressionistic tale written day by day as she voyaged about that little-known island.

Its popularity brought a call for another such story—and another sea voyage on her annual leave to America to the quaint Danish church which hops a cock's step every Christmas to get away from a cliff crumbling into the sea; the infant Danish king of medieval times who was carried by a pet monkey to the roof of his castle; Holger Danake, who could bend an iron bar with his hands; and that amazing castle where 20 maiden ladies of the nobility live as guests of a queen who died 300 years ago.

Mrs. Lehman Writes Too
A hundred small sketches by Hedvig Collin, Danish artist, will help these tales introduce young America to the quaint Danish church which hops a cock's step every Christmas to get away from a cliff crumbling into the sea; the infant Danish king of medieval times who was carried by a pet monkey to the roof of his castle; Holger Danake, who could bend an iron bar with his hands; and that amazing castle where 20 maiden ladies of the nobility live as guests of a queen who died 300 years ago.

Most men know their wives have sound and expert opinions on merchandise. Even the husband who would never admit his need for advice usually tries to ferret out HER views, wishes and hopes before buying.

Why? Because most women seem to have an inborn interest in new things and better ways . . . They are curious and alert . . . They ask their friends about this and about that . . . They compare values with great care . . . They read the advertisements eagerly for the latest news.

It pays to keep ahead, by keeping up with advertising. Well-known products are definitely better products—if not, they couldn't be advertised month after month and year after year. HEROES BOTH Death took Sidney Smith, and millions in the United States noted his passing, because they knew the creator of that popular comic strip, "The Gumps," had gone. Smith did much, in his line, to bring brightness to a world that can use it.

But on the same, two other men went on—men whose work was heroic, but which probably will pass unnoticed by the average American.

One of these was Arthur Henderson, British statesman who had devoted many years and much heart-breaking labor in behalf of the cause of world peace—a cause which recurrently seems a hopeless one indeed.

Henderson was all the more valiant because he realized that his task, that of attempting to persuade the nations to disarm, was all but futile; but he labored on for an ideal he hoped others could envision with him.

Another to go from this world was Gen. Adolphus W. Greely, whose labors as an army engineer and explorer outreach all credit which he received. Greely was known, indeed, as the man who led the "farthest north" expedition of more than 50 years ago; and for that he was honored by Congress; but another major achievement of his was the building of the first telegraph line to the Pacific coast. He later had charge of construction of thousands of miles of such lines. We who accept modern-day communication as a matter of course have reason to thank Greely and men like him.

Both Henderson and Greely labored in the cause of Progress. Both were heroes.

★ Man About Manhattan ★ By George Tucker

MAN ABOUT
NEW YORK—More from the hilarious Hollywood comic opera: Swinging into his office one morning, an amiable but somewhat negligent firm magnate (in his youth he had neglected to learn how to read) tossed a book on his associate's desk and entreated him to peruse it carefully. "It's about horses. Max, horses. Maybe we can get a good race track story out of it."

The title of the book, a veterinarian guide, was "The Causes and Cure of Hoof and Mouth Disease."

There is, it seems to me, material for a short story in the personal ad which appeared in the New York papers: "Want young, energetic couple to work on farm. No salary, but opportunity to become self-supporting."

And perhaps, too, a tag line for a play could be fashioned from Francis Wilson's last words: "If I hang around much longer," Wilson said, winking at his wife, "I'll be reading my own obituary notices." Two minutes later he was dead.

Wilson, incidentally, followed one of the strangest hobbies of all. For two decades he kept clipping bureaus scanning the newspapers of the world for references to members of the clergy who, on any pretext, had been hailed into court. He classified these clippings, according to the nature of the crime, and kept them in a series of huge clipping books. He began this at a time when there was much protest of the stage from the pulpit and threatened to publish the complete statistical record of clergymen in error, including all creeds, if the church ever began a concerted drive against the stage. These books have been turned over now to The Players' club, of which he was the last charter member.

A quiet, tall, thin-faced, sandy-haired fellow is N. T. G., whose real name is Nils T. Granlund and who has become perhaps the symbol of the Broadway supper clubs. Although he is young, he is a veteran in the amusement field and has quietly and without telling about it nudged more young talent into stardom than usually falls to the lot of one man, however shrewd and energetic he may be. Joan Crawford is his masterpiece.

For several years now he has been identified with the revues of the Paradise restaurant, and to him alone belongs the credit for that night club's reputation of always having superior entertainment. Although it would be impossible to associate him with any place other than Broadway, he has a curious drawl which might easily identify him as a Texan.

His real value, I think, may be conned from the fact that when the west coast sent Jean Harlow east for a tour of personal appearances—long before she became a star—they looked the field over very carefully and then imported Granlund to ally his revue with her act, so that she would at least have a capably arranged and fitting debut.

His nights, as always, are spent in the flare of the iridescent Broadway lights, but for all his in-town experiences Granlund is really a country man. He has a place in the Jersey foothills, about 30 miles from the city, where he hunts and fishes through the seasons, motoring to and from New York each evening.

The law of averages promises an odd accident for the future; that in which one of the young Roosevelts collides with another.

Italy, which believes it avenged the 1896 defeat at Adowa, has a nasty shock coming when it learns the town is captured by apparently two others named Adwa and Adwa.

News Behind The News

BY WASHINGTON
BY RAY TUCKER

Rising—

With food prices advancing rapidly New Deal agencies are staging a bitter feud over the consumers' problem behind the scenes. It may flare up soon, with President Roosevelt casting his lot on the side of the complainants against the high cost of living.

But no settled policy has been determined yet. Ever so often AAA spokesmen decried criticisms of living costs by pointing out that wage increases are higher than the larger returns to the farmers. They seek to justify further control, benefit payments and processing taxes. But representatives of other agencies—the departments of commerce and labor and the Consumers' Council—shake their heads over the mounting prices of food, rents, clothing. They quietly question the AAA figures.

Louis Bean, AAA economic adviser, recently declared that earnings had increased to within 83 per cent of the 1928 figure, while farm prices were only up to 80 per cent. But the Consumers' Council produce figures that show prices to have soared above wages. According to their records, payrolls in September were only 90 per cent of the 1926 level (generally used as standard), while meats were 90 per cent and more of that year's base.

Inflation—

Administration strategists have been lying awake nights to devise an answer to this problem. They have not found it easy to attack increased living costs in the face of numerous p-lamations and programs which have as their objective a higher return to producers. But now the insiders think they have a perfect out.

Investigations already under way are designed to throw most of the responsibility on processors and middle men. Meantime Lucian Koch has been chosen to organize an aggressive campaign against increased costs. Mr. Koch, one-time director of a labor college in Arkansas, will work with laboring people and housewives. He will "educate" them. He will shift the fight against the h. c. of l. from women's clubs to factories and homes. He will make it vocal and aggressive.

White Housers are secretly worried over these questions. They fear that inflation will make the workers' costs all out of line with his earnings, no matter how much business improves within the next year.

Dormant—

The Rail Pension Act is the perfect example of a New Deal experiment stopped in its tracks, not once but twice. The original law was upset by the supreme court and the revised act took a K. O. when Huey Long's last filibuster killed the measure providing funds for its administration. Although the original board occupied the entire floor of a downtown office building, it is now as silent and empty as a morgue. Only two of the 20 members are pen. & former board members hang on, but he has nothing to do but chat with friends. The same applies to one secretary and one messenger boy. Reports and letters lying on the desks bear dates and concern questions which turn the clock back to the night when the Kingfish sang his legislative swan song. It resembles the scene which archaeologists discovered when they unearthed Pompeii centuries after it was buried by Vesuvius.

But the setback has not been all loss to beneficiaries of the act. Despite many threats the railroads have not yet instituted court action to have the measure declared unconstitutional. It also gives Mr. Roosevelt more time to select a board satisfactory to all concerned—if possible.

Grids—

If anybody thinks the administration intends to let its great power projects—Panamaquoddy, Grand Coulee, Bonneville, the Parker Dam etc.—become political targets as "white elephants" it is just fooling themselves. The power experts are quietly framing definite and detailed programs for use of their hydro-electric production. Nobody will discuss it publicly but President Roosevelt has already suggested a system for tying up the power units in the Far West. Under it he would link Grand Coulee, Bonneville, Boulder Dam and Hatch Ketchy with public power plants in Seattle, Portland, Tacoma, Los Angeles and one which will eventually be built in San Francisco. There would be public manufacture and distribution, and gradual absorption of private systems. It is a program which exceeds his pet TVA. The story will break soon.

Control—

New York sharpshooter learn that high Washington circles are divided on the question of what should be done about inflation. Several of Mr. Roosevelt's key advisers are said to be just as concerned as Jim Ladd and Charles E. Gray about the prospects for a runaway boom. They feel that gold imports and the huge total of excess reserves being loaned to Federal Reserve member banks have created a credit base more than broad enough to take care of all legitimate credit expansion. They favor suspension of all

Federal Reserve activities which tend to increase banking reserves and they also want to make definite plans now for checking any speculative outburst that might develop.

On the other hand, Federal Reserve Governor Marriner Eccles is disposed to foster inflationary tendencies at present—with the idea of hastening the recovery pace—on the premise that there will be plenty of time to clamp down before the situation gets dangerous. Mr. Roosevelt will probably be asked to settle this argument soon after he returns to the capital.

New Deal banking legislation has given the Federal Reserve Board a new method of controlling inflation in addition to the familiar devices of raising the re-discount rate and selling government securities in the open market. It is now possible to jack up the deposit reserve requirements of Federal Reserve member banks any time the Board sees fit. This is a quick and effective method of slashing excess reserves—and experts agree it might work much better than wholesale dumping of federal securities.

Up—

The war scare has brought startling reductions in world stocks of raw materials since the beginning of 1935.

The world stock of cotton was about 10,552,000 bales in January, 1933. By January of this year it had dropped to 7,819,000. The latest figure available (for August) was steeply down to 4,278,000. Wheat stocks amounted to 993,000,000 bushels in January '33 and 509,000,000 in January 1935—a comparatively minor difference. But the August figure this year nose-dived to 340,000,000.

The same phenomenon is apparent in sugar. The world supply was 6,998,000 tons in January two years ago, 7,837,000 this January and 5,487,800 this August. Petroleum stocks on the corresponding dates were 508,000,000 barrels, 484,000,000 and 480,000,000 respectively. No recent figures are available for copper but the supply declined from 551,000 tons in January '35 to 373,000 at the beginning of this year.

The trend indicated in all these items definitely points to a higher world commodity price level. Prices are in fact already ballooning in every major nation except France—and France is undergoing forced deflation.

Averse—

Organized labor has been recently reported both for and against a constitutional amendment giving the federal government greater powers of regulation. Actually labor leaders are on the fence.

They are privately a bit uneasy about the implications of such an amendment. It's all very well for the national government to regulate the affairs of corporations—but the logical sequel to this development might be similar regulation of labor organizations. They are as averse as business to government "meddling"—when it applies to themselves.

Britain Tests Fast Bomber

LONDON, Oct. 22 (U.P.)—Little by little details are coming out of Britain's new wonder plane, a twin-engine medium-sized bomber which can fly at 270 miles an hour, faster than any scout plane now in regular commission.

The machine has been built by the Bristol Company. Tests by Air Force experts have revealed the plane is capable of attaining a speed of 270 miles an hour. This figure will doubtless be reduced when the machine is fitted with machine guns and other war apparatus, but it still gives Britain the fastest long-range bomber in the world.

Having to do nothing to satisfy any requirements but their own the Bristol Company has made a number of startling innovations in planes of the type. The machine is a low-wing monoplane, with a retractable under carriage, fitted with two radial air-cooled engines with a combined horsepower of 1,200. Instead of the usual longer-on type of construction for the fuselage, the fuselage was made on the "monocoque system," thus saving weight and space, and making the machine much less likely to suffer damage by enemy fire.

The machine is of the all-metal type, and the wings have a metal skin covering which takes part of the load and thus permits a lighter construction of the wings.

No official description of the machine has been released, but it is known that in speed, weight-carrying range, especially for gunfire, etc. it exceeds any similar machines now in service in any other air force. Possibly only the latest United States long-range bombers are in the same category.

MORNING STAR

Chapter 42 BAD MOMENT

The horses were tied to trees at the other side of the clearing. Dan's horse nickered softly as he approached.

"This one is yours," he said to Emly, laying a hand upon the flank of a small chestnut next to his own. "He's got a soft mouth and he's as sure-footed as a goat."

She caressed the horse's shoulder, feeling the play of muscles beneath his skin. "I think," she turned impulsively to Dan, "that a good horse is the most beautiful thing in the world."

Dan's face looked queer in the dim, frosty light. "Not quite," he said thickly, and before she could guess his intention, he had her in his arms.

None of Dan's casual caresses had prepared her for this. Not even marriage had warned her of the existence of such sheer animal passion.

She fought against it terrified, aware that Dan's mouth was brushing hers, that one arm crushed her against his hard body, that one hand lay against her breast.

She tore herself away finally and leaned against the horse's warm shoulder, sobbing for breath.

"Dan! What a rotten thing to do!"

He straightened, fighting for composure. "God knows I'm sorry," he said huskily. "I forgot for the moment—what sort you were."

"That's no excuse," she said hotly. "I'm no baby!"

"Yes, you are," he said roughly. And added, "Oh, I know you've been married, and all that, but not to a man."

She stared at him, wondering if Judith—He read her thoughts. "Nobody's been telling tales," he reassured her. "I guessed that for myself. A real man would never have let you go, or if he had, would never have left you so untouched."

She couldn't reply to that; she could only lean against the horse shivering. Dan closed his eyes for an instant and cursed himself.

He came close to her and took her hands, very gently.

"Please forgive me and trust me," Emly begged, and kissed her fingers softly; turned the hands over and laid their palms against his burning face. "Please, Emly."

She relaxed. Perhaps Dan was right, and she was childish and untouched. "I'll try," she almost humbly, and slipping one of her hands through his arm turned once more towards the cabin. At the door he paused, shamefaced.

"Have you got some powder in your pocket?"

She flushed, thinking for the first time of what he must have done to her appearance. She powdered her face; tucked her disheveled hair under the little hat. Together they went into the shack.

The group before the fire greeted them without looking up. Only Judith glanced swiftly at Emly and guessed what had happened.

Dan was a beast, she decided; perhaps after all she had better tell Emly of David's cable of David's speeding across the Mediterranean.

For two weeks now, she had carried the words of David's answer to her heart: "Take a sixty-day option. Home next month. Cheerio! David." (It was like David to have disregarded cost and added that "Cheerio!")

If Emly showed signs of becoming too interested in Dan she'd have to tell her, but she did want it for a surprise.

After seeing Emly settled Dan sank to the fire beside her. "Deal me in," he drawled, his voice normal again. "Emly's not playing. I need her for a mascot."

The game went on. Money changed hands swiftly and in breath-taking sums. Dan lost heavily; recouped; lost again. At eleven he turned to Emly.

"Time for you to sleep for a while."

She wanted to protest, but the thought of sleep was too alluring. One of the girls and the intoxicated gentleman had already succumbed. She laughed apologetically.

"I don't seem to be able to help it."

He drew a dilapidated couch nearer to the fire and found a heavy blanket that smelled strongly of horseflesh. "Lie down," he ordered.

She curled up gratefully and tucked the odorous blanket close about her, then stood for an instant smiling down at her. She returned the smile reassuringly, and his weathered face flushed painfully.

Five minutes later she was asleep.

A hand upon her shoulder awakened her. The room was alive with activity.

"Time to get up," Dan told her briskly. "Mac's cut the pack loose and we'll have to hurry."

He helped her into her coat and they ran for the door. The intoxicated guest snored loudly on the floor.

"Aren't you going to wake him?" she asked.

Dan grinned. "Try and do it. He's never seen a fox hunt in his life; this is as far as he ever gets."

Outside the moon was high and bright. The horses were saddled and waiting and several of the party were already under way. The yapping of the dogs came faintly from a distance.

The rods hung for several minutes along a sandy, uneven road, towards the barking of the dogs.

"Have they struck yet?" Emly asked between breaths.

"Not yet," Dan was close beside her. "They're just making conversation."

They drew up even with Judith and Aubrey, and reined in to listen. The dogs were in the woods to the right of them, uttering those short, purposeless yaps.

"Might as well wait," Aubrey suggested. "They seem to be circling."

Suddenly a new note sounded in the chorus, a deep, prolonged howl.

"That's Lead!" Dan cried. "Wait and see what direction they take!"

The tone of the distant chorus had changed unmistakably, so that even Emly could tell the difference. It grew fainter as the dogs trailed.

Judith said resignedly, "I hope to heaven it's not a red fox."

"Why?" Emly asked.

"A red fox runs straight, for miles and miles. The dogs might not get home until tomorrow night."

They rode slowly forward, reining in occasionally to listen. The rest of the party was a short distance ahead. Emly was unable to judge the distance, but she guessed that already they must have ridden several miles. And then she realized that the dog-throated chorus was growing loud.

Dan reined in quickly. "They're coming back. Must be a gray fox, Jude."

Minutes went by. The entire party was together now, tense and silent, and the chorus was growing gradually louder. Suddenly still a different note was sounded.

"Oh-oh!" Yaller bounced in his saddle. "Tree bark. Hit's a coon, Mist' Dan; hit's a coon, sho's I'm settin' hyah."

Dan turned his horse and rode back toward the rest of the party, followed by the rest of the party. He veered sharply to the left and cut a trail leading into the heart of the pine woods.

They reached the milling dogs at last and Mac flicked on a powerful searchlight. High in the scrub pines crouched a furry animal, his eyes gleaming green in the light.

Yaller began to chortle. "Hit's a coon. Didn't I tell you hit was a coon? Didn't I tell you hit was a coon? Didn't I tell you hit was a coon?"

Scuddenly a shot rang out and the dark furry body hurtled to the ground.

"Oh!" The cry was wrung from Emly, a note of pity and horror. Judith patted her arm.

Slowly, with the aid of the searchlight, they made their way back through the woods. Yaller carried the coon like a banner, as one more example of Win-win's prowess. Dawn was breaking as they reached the horses, and they began the long ride back to the cabin in the dim gray light of a January morning.

Dan looked anxiously at Emly. "Tired?"

She shook her head. "I was too excited to think about it. I can't believe we've been out more than a few minutes."

He smiled. "We've been riding nearly four hours. Was it worth the trouble?"

She nodded eagerly. "Oh, yes, I hated seeing the coon shot, but even then I wouldn't have missed it for anything."

He patted her hand approvingly. "Atta girl!"

She wondered, seeing him now, if she had dreamed the scene after supper, and wished with all her heart that she had.

Breakfast was ready when they reached the shack and they fell upon it ravenously. Afterwards she was vaguely conscious of bidding everyone goodbye. By the time the car reached Morton Hill she was sound asleep on the back seat while Judith slept again with her head in Aubrey's lap. (Copyright, 1935, by Marian Sims)

Southwest At Head Of Prosperity Parade As Farm Income Doubled, Big Gains Shown In Business Lines

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Bumper crops and better livestock markets are the southwest's 1935 answer to America's five years of lean times. Farmers in the southwest have been bringing to market the biggest harvest since 1930. Last year's drought is forgotten. Smiling business men in farm centers report sales rocketing skyward and a building boom is already under way in sections of the area.

selling at $2 a hundredweight more than last year, hogs are up $5, lambs $2. Already filling the farmers' financial skies with sunshine, the southwest's agricultural prosperity is also bringing a renewed optimism to city areas as the ruralists with real money to spend, share their bounty with the rest of the country.

Indicative of the trend in the southwest are the orders retailers from the area are placing at the Merchandise Mart here, wholesale buying center of the nation. Statistics compiled by T. J. Reed, general manager of the Mart, show registrations from the southwest for one mid-summer market alone totaled more than 850, with all buyers making purchases far in excess of their 1934 schedules.

Dorothy Kirby Blasts All Opposition In Play Thus Far

BY HYMAN J. ARONSTAM
United Press Staff Correspondent
ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 22 (U.P.)—A fair-haired, bright-eyed youngster played hokey from school links to the East Lake Country Club and won through the Georgia Women's Golf tournament to win for the second time.

She is 15-year-old Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, who by virtue of her amazing 74 in the final round, has earned a place in the ranks of the greatest women shotmakers.

Displaying the temperament and skill of a great champion, young Dorothy swept through her elder and more experienced opposition with mechanical precision.

Starting with an 86 in the qualifying round to even medal honors the Atlanta schoolgirl speeded up her tempo a beat on each succeeding day, until she turned in her record-shattering card in the final round.

Meets Severe Test

In the finals she was matched against Mrs. Guy Butler, holder of the Atlanta women's crown and runner-up in the state tourney last year. Previously, they had met in a local tournament, and Miss Kirby won, but only after the match had gone to the 19th hole.

Mrs. Butler was given only an outside chance in their return bout. Miss Kirby had been playing a consistently brilliant game, vanquishing her rivals by lopsided scores, but experts were expecting her to crack under the pressure.

However, shortly after they teed off, little Dorothy dispelled any doubts anybody turning out to witness the match might have had.

Mrs. Butler played valiantly, but at the turn she was hopelessly out-distanced. Miss Kirby ended the rout at the 11th hole, eight up on Mrs. Butler, and then played out the bye holes.

The young schoolgirl was out in 36, even men's par, shooting two birdies and going one over par figures on two holes. Rounding the turn, she stayed abreast of par through the 16th, but dropped a stroke apiece on the last two holes for a card of 74.

Mark Set For Course

Thus, young Dorothy set a new mark for the No. 2 course, and equalled the card turned in by Miss Joyce Wethered over the No. 1 course in an exhibition match this summer.

Her card:

Par	543	444	435-36
Miss Kirby	443	545	335-38
Par (in)	444	534	534-36-72
Miss Kirby	444	534	545-38-74

This marked the second time Miss Kirby has won the Georgia title. She scored her first triumph two years ago, when she had hardly entered her teens. Instead of defending her crown last year, Miss Kirby entered the Southern tourney at Louisville, and went to the semi-final round.

LOVE LAUGHS AT AGE

Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall are shown here as they appear in the comedy, "Accent On Youth," which is showing at the Ritz theater

FILM VERSION OF BROADWAY COMEDY HIT AT RITZ TODAY

Love may be for the young—but no man in love is ever old.

That's the theme of Samson Raphaelson's "Accent On Youth," the Broadway hit which has been produced in film form by Paramount, and which is playing at the Ritz theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

Sylvia Sidney and Herbert Marshall head the cast of "Accent On Youth," an amusing story of a middle aged man who dares love a girl half his age and who wins her from a dashing youth by fair means and foul.

Marshall, in the picture, is a playwright. Fortyish, slightly disillusioned, he despairs of ever finding true love. When his secretary, Sylvia Sidney, confesses her love for him, he is so surprised that he gives her the leading role in his new play.

Because Marshall is reticent about admitting his love for Miss Sidney, and feels that she should love a man nearer her age, Phillip Reed, who acts the leading man in the play, makes headway with Miss Sidney.

Miss Sidney despairs of ever winning Marshall and marries Phillip Reed. But instead of marriage ending the picture, amusing complications first begin at this point.

In the supporting cast of "Accent On Youth" are Ernest Cossart, who plays the butler role he created on the stage version and Astrid Allwyn. Wesley Ruggles directed the picture.

Home Economics Club In Meeting

Tuesday morning the Home Economics club held its first meeting. One of the speakers was Mrs. Thomas E. Pierce, the new home economics teacher in the clothing department. Mrs. Pierce, formerly of Abilene, has taken the place of Mrs. George Brown, resigned.

In her brief talk Mrs. Pierce told of the other clubs and the work they were doing. "The purpose of our club should be to promote fellowship among the students," Mrs. Pierce said.

"Most clubs have three fields in which they work a large part of the year. These are the study groups, work with the Red Cross, and the social side of the school."

Miss Fredrick Adkins, food instructor, appointed a nominating committee including Maybelle Bly, Elizabeth Graves, Theima Gene Moore and Marguerite Clendinning. The club meetings will be held on the first and third Tuesdays of each month. Election of officers will be accomplished at the next meeting.

NEW WEATHER FORECASTING AIDS PUT IN USE BY BUREAU

Air mass analysis—the newest weather forecasting aid—is going into general use at the field stations of the U. S. Weather Bureau, including those along the airways, W. R. Gregg, chief of the Bureau, has announced. After several months of preliminary work, specially trained meteorologists in the central office in Washington, D. C., are now able to map the various air masses and their boundaries or "fronts," with greater accuracy than heretofore possible, Mr. Gregg says. These new air mass maps help round out the whole weather picture which the forecaster must have before him as he makes his deductions about coming conditions. Formerly he worked with maps showing only the more general conditions in the atmosphere as wirelessly or wired in each morning to the Weather Bureau from all "blind" the globe.

Under the new arrangement, which goes into effect at once, a summary based on the 8 a. m. weather map and describing existing air masses and their fronts will be transmitted, by airway radio and by teletype, daily, except Sundays and holidays, from the central office. From these summaries, maps will be prepared at the various forecasting centers in the field. Mr. Gregg says the summaries will serve also as a check on the individual deductions of field observers in the practical application of air mass data. The bulletins from the central office will embody the conclusion of the best trained air mass analysts in the Bureau.

Finding and naming the air masses, Mr. Gregg explains, gives the forecaster a third dimension for his study of the conditions that determine weather. As the term is used in forecasting, an air mass is an aggregation of air having fairly definite characteristics, such as pressure, moisture and temperature, throughout, even when it is big enough to cover a whole group of states, or even more of the continent. These air masses constantly move from one part of the earth to another. The boundaries of air masses—their fronts—are not steep walls. They have a gradual slope, which lets the warmer air overrun the colder currents. This causes rain in much the same way as when warm air is forced up a mountain slope. Pronounced weather changes at the earth's surface result to occur near these fronts. To the forecaster, a "warm front" is the line of advance of warm air moving into space formerly occupied by a cold air mass. A "cold front" is the advancing boundary of cold air displacing a mass of warm air.

Weathermen have divided air masses into 13 groups—"polar continental," originating over northern or western Canada; "polar Pacific," air that comes from the northern Pacific Ocean; "tropical Gulf," from the Gulf of Mexico; and so on.

The trick in using air mass analysis for forecasts, Mr. Gregg says, is to know the direction and rate of movement of air masses and, particularly, to figure out just when and where two contrasting masses will interact to produce storms. A small group of meteorologists have been specially trained to track these air masses day by day. They get their most useful information from observations obtained by daily airplane flights at 25 specially equipped stations.

Pageant Honoring Stephen F. Austin

DALLAS, Oct. 22.—Depicting various dramatic episodes in the life of Stephen F. Austin, and summarizing his contribution toward the founding of Texas, a pageant commemorating his birth, Nov. 3, 1773, is being sent to all Texas schools by the public school division of the state publicity department for Texas Centennial celebrations.

The pageant is in five episodes and is based on historical facts. It begins with Stephen Austin's acceptance of the proposal to found a colony in Texas and portray its growth until after the revolution. The final episode is a dramatic summary of Texas' achievement since that time.

This pageant is one of a series of such programs that the department will supply the schools of Texas.

Electric Power Output Reaches All-Time Record

The Edison Electric Institute, successor of the National Electric Light association, reports "an all-time high" in electric power production for the second week of October. Consumption was said to be 1,863,433,000 kilowatt-hours, a record which topped the banner week of December 21, 1929, when the industry produced 1,860,021,000 kilowatt-hours. The report as carried by the Associated Press continued:

"For several weeks power production has been nearing the record of boom years and an increase of three-tenths of one percent last week over the previous week pushed the output over the top. Individual utilities have pushed power to peaks in recent months. The North American Co. reported that during the third quarter of this year its power distribution was the greatest in the history of the company's subsidaries. For the year ended September 30, North American's production was about one percent over the previous 12-month record for the corresponding period in 1929-30."

Peace Pledge Is Made Available For Signatures

Local people Tuesday were being invited to sign a World Peaceways Pledge addressed to the president and congress.

The pledge read: "As a citizen of the United States, I pledge my whole-hearted adherence to the cause of peace, in the firm belief that an end can be put, by honorable means, to the destruction of human life by the merciless machinery of war."

The pledge, available at Cunningham's No. 1 store, is an outgrowth of the peace endowment left by E. R. Squibb, drug products manufacturer. The endowment will also provide for a broadcast over the Columbia system Thursday 8:30 p. m.

Many had signed the pledge Tuesday morning.

Be sure to get your money's worth

It's your money. You've earned it. It will be spent. For fuel, clothes, furniture, food, all sorts of necessities... and if there's any left, for luxuries.

The way to make that hard-earned money go farthest is to purchase products of certain value. Products backed by well-known manufacturers. Products that are widely bought and used, that are carefully and painstakingly kept to high standards of quality, and that have been found over and over again to give full worth. Advertised products!

When you buy a watch or a rake, a set of china or a radio set that is advertised in this paper, you are buying a product whose maker is willing to talk about it, tell about it, put what he knows about it in print and sign his name to it. When you buy advertised merchandise by name, you get the utmost of purchasing value from every dollar.

Because it doesn't pay to advertise poor products, it DOES pay to buy those advertised.
