Rioting In Paris Apparently Quelled As New French Premier Takes Office

THIS IS WHAT HAPPENS IN A PARIS STREET RIOT

Fears of serious rioting during the latest crises of the Daladier government in France led to heavy police protection in Paris. Sales Tax

The House Ways and Means Committee is having a tough time kicking the revenue bill into shape. Members privately admit that don't see how to raise $200,000,000 by revising the income tax schedules without a roar from the country. "There's no use putting a big tax on profits," said a member of the committee. "There are no profits yet to speak of. Business can't pay heavy taxes till it makes more money. No use taxing big personal incomes when they've shrunk so much."

"Whether we like it or not I believe we must face a sales tax. We've simply got to raise money to keep this program going."

Protests

Workers can't understand how the NRA is their friend when they're thrown out of jobs by NRA orders to suspend production. A big lumber concern in Washington State was forced to close several weeks ago. The workers threatened violence until the management proved that shutdown orders came from the "code authority." Then the workers kicked. Business organizations protested. The Senators protested. The newspapers protested. Nothing doing. Voluntary relief committees had to be organized to feed the workers who must be idle till late in February.

Midnight a Soviet ship arrived from Vladivostok with a cargo of lumber which undersold American lumber in the Seattle market—thanks to high prices ordered by code authority. Local communists hailed their comrades, gave them a banquet, and all hands saluted the red flag and pledge allegiance to Moscow.

Lumbermen in Texas has raised a similar howl against the NRA.

Measure Holds 1934 Production To Nine Million

WASHINGTON (AP)—Support of President Roosevelt for their compulsory cotton control bill was reasserted Thursday by Senator Bankhead of Alabama, author of the measure, after a call at the White House.

"We have assurance of the president's cooperation," Representative Bankhead said. Secretary Wallace Wednesday endorsed the principles of the bill, which would restrict the 1934 cotton crop to 9,000,000 bales, a reduction of 4,000,000 from last year.

Parisians Cheer Premier Doumergue Wildly During Thursday

PARIS (AP)—Premier-designate Doumergue, whose new cabinet may be formed by tonight, seemed Thursday to have ended Paris' two days' rioting and terror.

The former president, France's man of the hour, took only fifteen minutes after his arrival here to tell President Lebrun what he meant to do. He immediately started to carry out his program.

On all sides it was freely admitted France was close to civil war and a revolution in the bitter fighting between rioters and mounted guards, which swept Paris.

Laborers began work Thursday to clean up the debris. The riot dead was counted at twelve and those injured and wounded ran into thousands.

Doumergue was cheered wildly by Parisians Thursday.

Kidnapers Return Missing St. Paul Banker Unharmed; Ransom Is Reported Paid

ST. PAUL (AP)—THE MINNEAPOLIS JOURNAL SAID THURSDAY ADOLPH BREMER, FATHER OF EDWARD BREMER, ABDUCTED BANKER, PAID THE FULL SUM OF $200,000 FOR HIS RELEASE. IT WAS SAID HE SENT A NOTE TO THE KIDNAPERS WITH THE MONEY IN TENS AND FIVES, SAYING: "NOW BOYS, I'M COUNTING ON YOUR HONOR."

ST. PAUL (AP)—Weak and exhausted, Edward Bremer, wealthy St. Paul banker, was freed at midnight by a kidnap gang which had held him twenty-three days for $200,000 ransom.

His captors, who numbered six or seven, friends of the family said, released him near Rochester, Minn., eighty-five miles from home. He was turned loose by three men in a small sedan.

Bremer was uninjured. Whether any of the ransom demanded had been paid was conjectural. His family, happy in being reunited with the banker, was protected from interruption by department of justice agents.

A physician was called to examine Bremer Thursday. He said his physical condition was "good." He had suffered a beating about the head, presumably when seized.

The doctor said Bremer was "very, very nervous" and had been ordered to bed. The banker was blindfolded during his imprisonment. He did not know the vicinity in which he was held captive. The physician said the ransom had been paid, but did not know how much.

Adolph Bremer, father of the abducted man said: "It is my earnest prayer that other fathers and mothers will be spared the agony of a similar ordeal."

Department of justice officials in Washington indicated search for the abductors would be intensified now that Bremer has been returned alive.

John Blomshield Is Now In East Indies

Friends of John Blomshield who visited his brother, Carl, about two years ago, will recall that he set out from Shanghai, China, several months ago in a boat of his own, a Chinese junk to seek adventure. Carl Blomshield reports that he has recently heard from him and that he is still sailing the high seas and having a glorious time. He carried out his plan of going to Hongkong, thence to Manila and is at present on the Celebes Islands, on the River Tondago on the Manado peninsula. The Celebes are part of the Dutch East Indies.

So far his craft has been reasonably close to the numerous islands of that part of the Pacific; he says, however, that he is now planning to sail across to the Hawaiian Islands. He has an experienced crew of navigators to handle the junk, but he will have to cross some big, broad open space before he reaches Hawaii.

IS COMPULSORY CONTROL IN COTTON PRODUCTION NEEDED?

While senators and representatives propose all sorts of measures to control the production of cotton to keep price of the staple up...

Proposals for compulsory control have been caused by the "tendency of some noncooperators to maintain or even expand their cotton production at the same time that reductions are being made by co-operators who act for the best interests of the majority..."

The questionnaire asks point blank: Do you favor a plan of compulsory control of cotton production to compel all producers to cooperate in the cotton adjustment program?

To tell a citizen you shall not plant more than a certain amount of this crop may seem in direct opposition to democracy...

The second question, asking what percentage of farmers favor compulsion, will at the best be guess work with the one answering...

If the "Yes" is answered to the first question, three plans are proposed for consideration. The first is to "impose a tax that would apply to all cotton to be ginned or sold but which in practice would operate to exempt the average production on the acreage permitted to be planted by those who cooperate voluntarily in adjustment programs..."

On the face of it, if compulsion is desired, this plan is not feasible. There is really no compulsion to it. Nor does it guarantee against a surplus mounting despite efforts to control.

A second proposition is to "assign to each cotton producer a definite number of bales that he may gin or sell during any given season and prohibit the ginning or selling of more than that amount."

If we are to combat economic waste, this proposition is to be avoided. No entity outside of the Almighty knows just how many citizen called up the papers with plans to buck the Garden with an athletic plant seating 25,000 or so in which every sport, from ballooning to Jackstraws, could be played. Unfortunately, very few of the gentlemen carried their projects very far. One or two did advance to the blue print and give a party-for-the-press stage, and I remember one fellow who, to prove he meant business, rented a steam shovel, towed it to the outskirts of Brooklyn, and had himself snapped breaking ground. He later was sued for the rental on the shovel.

It is only natural, then, that now, when such a plan is announced, the sports writers give it the old laugh.

Yet today finds me about ready to consider seriously the threat of a Jersey gentleman to cross the river and take a shot at taking charge of sports in general in New York. The gentleman is William H. Cane, an honest to goodness millionaire, a member of the New Jersey State Racing Commission, and one of the foremost sportsmen of these parts.

Mr. Cane is probably best known as the owner of the Good Time Trotting Horse Stable, and the man whose tremendous success in promoting the Humbletonian stake at Goshen revived the harness racing game. He first became interested in boxing when he was engaged by Tex Richard to build Boyle's thirty arces for the Dempsey-Carpentier joust. His urge to promote in New York hit him only recently and was the result of the success of a fight club he built and runs in his home town of Hackensack. He figures it seems that if an arena seating 6,000 can be made to pay in Hackensack, one three times that big should pay in New York, which, if the census figures are on the up and up, is fully three times as large as Hackensack.

Certainly, Mr. Cane, or anybody else for that matter, couldn't ask for a more advantageous time to invade the New York boxing field. The Garden, insofar as fighting is concerned, is flatter than yesterday's lettuce salad. The game itself, however, isn't, as the 14,000 crowd which saw Ross and Petrolle testified. The boxing public was taken a terrific kicking around of late, but they'll still stagger up and lay it on the line to see fighters who fight.

Now this seems to have the critics running around in circles. Their comments have been varied, but mostly they agree that Mr. Lewis himself, is, at bottom, a Babbitt; that this latest effort is simply a pot-boiler, in which he has got down off his artistic pedestal and has given way to his old admiration for the successful money-getter.

In other words, they have been very busy explaining how a writer of Mr. Lewis' caliber could make such an odd mistake.

The one thing that seems not to have occurred to them is that Mr. Lewis' thesis might be quite correct.

There has grown up in American artistic circles in the last decade a queer and illogical notion, to wit: That even the most mediocre and talentless of writing persons is entitled, by the very nature of things, to look down with contempt on the most able and devoted of business men.

We have been assured that the man who follows one of the arts, even if he does it without skill and without spirit, is a more admirable and valuable chap than the man who puts in his licks in the marts of trade.

All that Mr. Lewis has done, in this new novel of his, is to bestow and demonstrate that there is nothing in it.

A Shakespeare, to be sure, is worth more to the race than a Rockefeller. But does it follow that every fourth-rate scribbler is basically a finer and nobler chap than the man who is out on the firing line in the world of business, working his heart out on a job whose rewards won't be anywhere near commensurate with the effort he puts forth?

The business man has been a target for the scribblers almost long enough. It is a lance in his behalf.

Lomax, Courtney Win Cage Games

Courtney boys and girls basketball teams played the Lomax cagers at Lomax last Wednesday, the Lomax boys winning their game 38 to 32 and the Courtney girls taking a thrilling 31 to 30 decision.

made for the past ten or more years. What good are they?

When the Fall rolls round and practice really gets down to hard work, nobody can remember having promised to help the team. That's certainly a poor way to act, worse than not having made any promise at all.

By comparison of records, I would suggest that Coach Haury Taylor of San Angelo trade his Bobcat basketball team for Tonto Coleman's junior squad. Reports tend to show Coleman's team superior to Harry's. Both teams recently participated in the Big Lake tournament. The Cats were eliminated in the first round while the junior Crimson Tide went to the finals.

Hope shouldn't be abandoned, however, as miracles can happen to a team within the span of a week. If the Big Spring youngsters should happen to settle down and start clicking on all cylinders it wouldn't be at all surprising to see them whip down the odds.

Brown is depending on one of his forwards, Flowers, to develop the needed "eye" for the basket. Flowers has shown much promise of late, and if given a chance may show the coach what he has been looking for.

J. Gordon Bristow, who stumbled in from the wilderness a few days ago, informs this department that he will make his supreme bid in the grid world next fall. He promised to stay in town for the rest of the year and leave nothing undone that might aid him in putting out a winning football team. And you can rely on Obie's word. He'll give the best he can.

At the banquet for the Steer graders Monday the business men of Big Spring made their annual promise to back the next year's team to the limit. It seems that these promises have been

NEW YORK, (UP)—If all the gentlemen who have, at one time or another, expressed an intention of invading the New York boxing field and chase Madison Square Garden out of business, were put in uniform and given guns, the standing army of this country would be increased by several battalions.

Several years ago it got so that a day wasn't official until some American business man.

He presents two characters, a hotel man and a playwright, and makes every contrast between them favorable to the former. Babbit is an idealistic, hard-working gentleman who gives himself to his job because he loves it and not because he wants to get rich.

The playwright is a loafer who is interested solely in the money and fame his writing will bring him.

By this contrast, Mr. Lewis says bluntly that the American business man often has much more of the "artistic spirit" than the artist himself.

Now this seems to have the critics running around in circles. Their comments have been varied, but mostly they agree that Mr. Lewis himself, is, at bottom, a Babbitt; that this latest effort is simply a pot-boiler, in which he has got down off his artistic pedestal and has given way to his old admiration for the successful money-getter.

It may be that the Steers will start spring football training within a couple of weeks. At least that's the opinion of Coach George Brown. Brown isn't exactly a pessimist, yet he has been so optimistic about his basketball team, which has failed to measure up to expectations, that he does feel a bit discouraged.

On February 16 and 17 the Bovine hardwood artists are scheduled to compete in the sectional tournament at Colorado. If the Steers lose even one game in that meet, it's all over for the season. The winner of the southern half tourney at Colorado will compete

RIVAL TOWNS VIE FOR SUPREMACY AT SITES NEAR RED BLUFF DAM

RED BLUFF, Tex.—This brand new little city of 100 souls might be characterized as a City of Faith—up to the present, faith and hope represent the two principal resources of the community.

Really, Red Bluff is two cities, rival townships, both claiming the name of the Red Bluff but continually at controversy over the property of the title, have sprung up in the vicinity of the proposed Red Bluff dam.

Even prior to the PWA approval of the $2,600,000 Red Bluff loan last October there was a Red Bluff townsite. It developed in anticipation of success of the loan application. It remained a mere "paper" city, however, until the loan was authorized. Then buildings began to travel overland. Literally, the owners of hotels and store buildings at a half dozen erstwhile boom towns in the vicinity, jacked up their structures, put them on wheels and moved them overland to Red Bluff.

On Pecos Highway

Arch Bell and W. J. Beck are the promoters of one of the Red Bluff townsites. They claim the title "by order of the commissioners court of Reeves county." Their 160-acre townsite extends east and west and within two miles of the site of the dam. It fronts on the state highway 27, the link between Pecos and Carlsbad and is on the Pecos valley branch of the Santa Fe road. In this townsite there are about 75 people, some 20 or 30 buildings and many more lots sold to people who plan to erect structures when the dam's construction is actually under way.

Shakes have been set out on choice lots promising a drug store, hotel, a theater and many other lines of business. At the present time, however, a large tourist camp, restaurants, grocery stores, filling stations and garages constitute the backbone of the business of this little city.

Just north of this Red Bluff city is the 160-acre townsite of which W. Elliott, Mentone druggist, is chief promoter. This town bears the Red Bluff title under the authority of the U. S. patent office. The names of the two townsites, together with their authorization for the same, appear on large sign boards which the tourist may gaze at as he passes by.

100 Persons.

In the Elliott townsite there are present over 100 persons. There are five cafes, two grocery stores, a pool hall, several garages and filling stations, a furniture store, a clothing house and hotel, and other lines of business.

More people are coming every day, they come from the towns of Pecos, Carlsbad, Big Bend, a result of the puncturing of the oil boom; from California, Texas and other states. The people are getting on the ground ready to be on hand when the development starts.

There is an abiding faith that construction of the Red Bluff dam will create a boom and that after the construction the new land placed in farming will be populated sufficiently to support a town. The people believe Red Bluff City will last. They point out, among other things, that there is room for a good town midway between Pecos and Carlsbad. They also point to the proposed east and west state highway for which a survey is now being made. These things, with the Red Bluff and the ever-possible oil development will make a background for a stable city.

It is an interesting community, this little city that waits and hopes. And with start of actual construction on the dam due in 30 days soon it may be more than hope. Some of the dreams of those who rushed to get a location may be realized.

University Of Texas To Get Building Loan

Government To Grant Money For Building Construction

CORPUS CHRISTI.—Beauford H. Jester, chairman of the board of regents of the University of Texas, announced Tuesday receipt of an agreement whereby the federal government will loan more than $2,000,000 for construction of a new building and completion of the university library.

The agreement calls for a loan of $1,200,000, plus a grant not to exceed 30 per cent of the labor and materials cost for the work. Jester said the plan would be signed and executed at a meeting of the regents at Austin Saturday.

The loan and grant is not to exceed $1,633,000 and $467,000 of the $200,000 bond "bequest" left by the late George W. Littlefield will be used in the combined $1,800,000 project.

The plan, Jester said, would call for a four-story administration building replacing the old, main building, completion of the front of the library and completion of the tower at the rear of the present new library unit. Administration offices would be housed in the new structure.

The government will buy the bonds for par and accrued interest and the loan of $1,200,000 is to be repaid beginning in 1935 and extending to 1949 from the grazing and surface leases of university lands.

Water Well For T. U. Observatory Being Completed

A water supply for the W. J. McDonald astronomical observatory being built on Mount Locke in the Davis Mountains has been obtained by A. M. Barnes of Fort Stockton in the first test drilled on the property. The water was struck from 318-20 feet and rated 2.4 gallons per minute, or 3,450 gallons daily.

A pump jack was being installed when Dr. H. P. Bybee of San Angelo, geologist in charge of the University Lands office, left the well late last week. A contract has been awarded to Barnes for the drilling of a second test. It provides that at least 3,000 gallons of water daily must be obtained at a depth not to exceed 300 feet.

The first water well is approximately 2,300 feet east of the observatory site and has an elevation 500 feet lower. Had an ample supply of water not been obtained in drilling it was planned to lay a 3-inch galvanized iron line from a spring on the north side of Spring Mountain to the site of the first well and install storage and pumping equipment there.

The concrete foundation for the observatory and two large supports that form an incomplete arch have been poured by the Warner-Swasey Sales Co. of Cleveland, O., general contractor. The state built a paved road to the site several months ago. It winds around Mount Locke for a mile and a half to reach the summit, 6,800 feet above sea level. The big mirror for the observatory already has been cast.

The observatory site is 17 miles northwest of Fort Davis.

Plans Laid For South Texas Cage Tournament

HOUSTON (UP)—Plans for a South and Southwest Texas high school basketball tournament will be discussed here Friday night by Coach Jimmy Kitts of Rice Institute and Houston Chamber of Commerce executives. It will be known as the Houston Chamber of Commerce basketball meet.

Arch Underwood of Athens, close friend of Kitts who coached there before coming to Rice, suggested the idea, and it was developed here with the business men agreeing to sponsor it.

Teacherless Schools For All

ISTANBUL (UP)—The Turkish government is out to educate all the population—grown-ups as well as children. Every Turkish village will soon be provided with a large school capable of holding all the inhabitants. Each will be equipped with a radio loud-speaker, and from a central town, a professor will address his classes nightly. The schools will have no teachers but will be under a manager.

Named Austin Mentor

SHERMAN (UP)—J. B. Head, former Marshall High School teacher, will be named mentor of the new school building under construction in Sherman.

Under The Dome At Austin

AUSTIN (UP)—The present session of the state legislature will go down in state political history as the "sliding-pole session." Sen. George Purl, Dallas, so named it. The title already is in general use about Austin.

Purl's remarks came after Senator Margie Neal, Carthage, had taken issue on the senate floor with a newspaper editorial commenting on small senate attendance. She pointed out that the hurriedly called session had found one senator, Ill. several out of the state and others with professional and business affairs to arrange. Then Purl took the floor.

"This idea of having sliding-pole sessions started when Former Governor Ross S. Sterling started calling oil sessions," remarked the Dallas Senator.

"Governors used to notify legislators a week or more in advance. Now we are expected to be like firemen, slide down a pole and rush to Austin as though responding to a fire alarm."

Leut. Governor Edgar E. Witt, who was in El Paso, hurried to Austin and arrived just in time to rap the gavel for noon opening on Jan. 25.

Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson got a real kick out of one of her duties last week.

She was delegated by other members of the State Relief Commission to buy a present for the Commission decided to give Col. Lawrence Westbrook, retiring relief director.

She picked a silver tea and coffee service. Before the official presentation she admitted to her fellow donors that she thought she got a bargain in the purchase.

Col. Westbrook, Mrs. Westbrook, and Col. Westbrook's mother from San Angelo all were called in for the presentation. Mrs. Ferguson supplemented the formal presentation by telling Mrs. Westbrook where the silver was purchased so she might take it back and select the monogram for its engraving.

Besides the gift from the entire Commission, Governor Ferguson announced she also had a "jinx" for Col. Westbrook. It was a lucky sevening. Dice spots on it count seven on one side and eleven on the other.

Mrs. Westbrook will remain in Austin until the close of the present school term before going to Washington. Upon Westbrook coming here from Waco as state relief director, the family took a residence in Enfield, an Austin suburb.

Rep. Henry C. Kyle, San Marcos, says the people of the state are being given a wrong impression about Hays county refusing to provide a right-of-way for a new route for State Highway Two which now weaves back and forth across the Katy and Missouri Pacific railway tracks between Austin and San Antonio.

Hays county has been and now is ready to provide a new right-of-way that will eliminate the grade crossings, Kyle said. The difference is that the state highway commission wants a route east of the railroads. Hays county people want it west of the railroads.

Land west of the railroads can be secured for the road for an average of $5 an acre, Kyle said, while that east of the railroad will cost $100. The big difference in cost is due to the west route skirting untillable hills while the east route cuts through some of the highly developed farms. Some of these farms running east from the base of the hills already are cut by the railroads. Another cut east of the railroads will divide them into little tracts, Kyle said.

The unexpected special session of the Texas legislature marred the usual plan of conducting state bar examinations in the state capitol.

No room was available for the tests which were to start Feb. 5. An enterprising drug store proprietor, with a lunch counter service, offered to pay the heat and janitor cost for holding the examinations in either the Labor Temple or a church basement near his stores.

Motors Replace Horses

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UP)—More than 350 horses will be replaced by motor equipment in the 19th Field Artillery at Fort Benjamin Harrison training camp here. It was not immediately revealed what would be done with the horses. The change is in compliance with a general army policy to mobilize artillery and infantry units.

Boy Saves Train

DEBALTZEVO, Donbass, U. S. R. (UP)—This village has a new hero, Alesha Markov, a young Pioneer, who recently was awarded 100 rubles by the Soviet government for preventing a train wreck. Markov, while walking to school along the railroad track, noticed that a rail had been broken. He ran a mile to warn the nearest station-master, who was able to stop an oncoming train.

Drunkard's Law Revived

BOSTON (UP)—Under a recently revived Massachusetts statute, dispensers are prohibited from selling liquor to anyone who is drunk, or is known to have been drunk within six months, or is receiving welfare aid. Twenty-five inspectors have been appointed to enforce the order. The Lynn license commission authorized publication of a list of the city's known drunkards.

BLOND GODDESS

A New Serial by Herbert Jensen

Chapter 16 ADVENTURE BEGINS

At another time, in New York, Frank had been yarning with a chicle buyer he had met at the Explorer's Club.

"Mexico," stated this man, "is old Porto Diaz's time used to dump all their undesirable, all those convicted for this, that and the other thing, down on the Quintana Roo coast. It was sort of the Siberia of Mexico.

"They weren't all politicians either, as they usually were in Russia. I take it the jails got pretty full sometimes in central Mexico, and the gangs they shipped south were fairly well mixed criminal lots.

"Funny, too, these doesn't seem to be more than the usual number of criminal types along the coast

Mexican citizens themselves. That's amusing. There's been companies of Mex soldiers cut up trying to get through that jungle, and they never did succeed.

"I've often thought," he concluded, "that there's something damn interesting in that place—something a white man would like to see—they're so damn anxious to keep 'em out!"

On a Ward liner, sailing south out of Vera Cruz, Grahame thought of these things. The phrase "something interesting . . . something a white man would like to see" kept forming and recurring in his mind, like a bright motto engraved upon a knight's escutcheon.

Frank supposed that the first qualification of every adventurer was curiosity. Curiosity to see what was on the other side of the fence, and I know the fringes there fairly well. Maybe they drifted back home. Or maybe the ones I saw were all second generation. If that's the case, it's a laugh on the heredity boys. I dunno."

The third man was from a man old in the service of the Geographic Office. He had a flair for archæology.

"There are ruins in southern Mexico," he had said, "that have never been located. Quantities of them. The Smithsonian and the Fenby people believe they're there but have never gone after them.

"They've got plenty to do with what they've already found. The Mexicans won't look for 'em, and there's a good reason why. The Indians in Quintana Roo don't like Mexicans, even though they are the other side of the hill, the other side of the world.

This inquisitiveness was as much a part of him as his limbs; it was the basic mental equipment of those who devoted their lives to research of any kind; it sent savants to their laboratories as well as farm lads down to their ships.

While his heart was sore, he realized that it was not Janice Kent who had sent him south. She had simply provided the stimulus by denying him herself and the type of life that was hers. She had been the stimulus; the discovery of Bill Langton's fate was the objective.

Frank's philosophy of existence was not elaborate. One simply intruded oneself into a given set of conditions, and the result was certain to be interesting. In another manner of speaking it was not necessary to choose a certain line of work and devote a quantity of time to it to achieve thereby success in living.

You acknowledged what mental or physical equipment you had and put yourself in circumstances wherein this equipment had a chance to perform something or other. The soldier of fortune went where there were wars, mechanics

Frank begins, tomorrow, a strange journey.

He had passed raw gold from gravel in Alaska, Columbia and Siberia. He had dressed tools in the oil fields of Oklahoma and Tampico, with an eye watchful for the main chance.

He had made a tidy fortune in oil leases, only to lose it in a Central American plantation venture; he had remained in an expedition back of Caracas in search of gold and emeralds.

So, while his memory of Janice was not dimmed, nor the lonely sensation gone from him, it was with some new stirring of anticipation that he arose, dressed, and left his cabin to the sound of the ship's cables running through the awesoles.

His ship had brought him to the point where he jumped off into the unknown.

Don Raul Ortega Rjon y Mendez had dined well. He felt very comfortable with the world.

At least the soul of one half-grown chicken had sped, and quantities of rice had been boiled to make his dish of pollo y arroz. At the moment the excitement was swimming contentedly in a liter of wine, decanted, so the proprietor of the place had assured him, from a Spanish east just through the customs the day before.

He leaned against the doorway of the restaurant, savoring the last pleasures of the meal when a little black dog scampered around the corner of the street and galloped through the dust toward Don Raul. It was evident that the dog would pass the gentleman at a distance of about five yards.

Don Raul drew his revolver from his belt. He cocked and leveled it at the loping dog and pressed the trigger. The report and the yelping of the little animal broke the stillness of the sleepy street.

The dog squirmed in the dust, and began to crawl back to the

Arkansas Star Is Ineligible

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UP)—Eligibility nemesis harassed the University of Arkansas 1934 football team again after school officials announced another player failed to meet scholastic requirements.

James Brennan, 175-pound reserve end from Eufaula, Okla., would be ineligible for next season play because he failed to make satisfactory grades in the required number of subjects during the first semester, officials said.

It was Brennan's brilliant playing that scored a touchdown against Baylor University in the Southwest Conference game at Little Rock last season.

A similar announcement was made several days ago concerning Leo and Al Corroite, brothers from Fort Smith. Coach Fred C. Thomson said he considered Leo the best punter yet developed here and Al as an outstanding defensive back.

Visitors to the 1933 Century of Progress, who return to Chicago to see the new and enlarged Exposition of 1934, will marvel at the changes new colorings and new lighting effects have made in the imposing towers of the Federal Building, the towers representing the three branches of the national government—legislative, administrative and judicial. Not only the towers, but the entire building is being repainted in new and attractive colors, and many of the exhibits are being changed and enlarged.

corner from which it came. Don Raul, in the act of replacing his revolver, made a blinding noise of self reproach, and aimed and fired again. The dog quivered and lay still.

The man nodded thoughtfully, yet with evident satisfaction, and pushed the revolver in his holster. His shoulders straightened. His eyes darted up and down the street swiftly to see if any had witnessed his lapse in marksmanship. He sighed, and lighting a black cigarette strolled down the street to measure to ribbons bit by bit. Unless the White House takes a hand a feeble bill will be reported out of committee and probably will never reach a final vote.

The first few bites that the pain-and-lobby look were anticipated by the Food and Drug Administration, which seems to be standing alone in the fight for the bill. All legislation is a matter of compromise. But those bites have only served to increase the lobby's appetite.

In the original Tugwell bill it was provided that drugs and foodstuffs must have an itemization of their contents printed on the label. As re-written by Senator Coppeland—who will steer the bill if it ever gets out of committee—the provision affecting drugs was eliminated. This was done on the complaint that pa-supposed to induce sleep.

Tugwell—
The bill has detoured far from the road that Professor Tugwell mapped and it's a real issue with him. If he doesn't get some strong White House backing soon insiders wouldn't be surprised if he resigned and went back to his classrooms.

Watch-Dogs—
The House Progressive bloc, which functioned so valiantly under Fiorella LaGuardia in the 72nd Congress, may become articulate again before debate on the tax bill ends.

They, Paul Kvale, Farmer-Laborite of Minnesota, has inherited LaGuardia's mantle as bloc leader. So far Roosevelt policies have been close enough to the Progressive's own to keep them voting aye.

But now there is disappointment in the little band because estate, gift and corporation taxes weren't hiked more.

The Progressives see the merit of Treasury arguments that business should be allowed to recover before being frightened to death with taxes. On the other hand they know that a lot of corporations are dodging taxes through trick book-keeping and they can't see how heavily increased estate and gift taxes will upset the apple cart.

If existing loopholes in the administrative part of the tax law are closed to big business evaders Kvale and his watch-dogs may sit back and wait a year to make their fight.

If not you'll probably hear them bark in a day or so.

Frankfurter—
Felix Frankfurter—professor of the Harvard Law School and one of the original Brain Trusters—came to town the other day without the slightest bit of publicity.

But this time he wasn't in Washington to pull any hidden strings and give impetus to the New Deal. He was guest of honor at a quiet little dinner tendered by 18 or 20 of "his boys."

"His boys" are the men Frankfurter has spotted in key positions throughout the government departments. Few people realize what a power behind the throne Frankfurter is.

Cradle-Song—
Here's the low-down on Senator Hugo L. Black of Alabama, inquirer into air and ocean mail contracts, as revealed by his wife.

"There sits the big, bad Senator," said Mrs. Black to a friend. "All day he browbeats witnesses, uncovers scandal, confers at the White House and gets himself eight-column headlines. Do you know what his home life is?"

"No? Well, I'll tell you. At six o'clock in the evening he comes home and rocks the baby (aged 3 months) and at two in the morning he gets up and makes a necessary change in the baby's apparel."

Notes—
Kingfish Long seems to be waging a losing fight against the one thing he can't survive. . . . Ridicule. . . . Never let it be said our Department of Agriculture isn't resourceful. . . . Chemists for the Food & Drug Administration have developed a "bite" machine that determines to the nth degree the tenderness of canned fruit and vegetables. . . . Insiders say Prof. Roswell Magill, Secretary Morgenthau's tax expert, has done some smooth missionary work in the Ways and Means Committee. . . . The White House ordered that suggestions were NOT to be forthcoming on the tax bill until requested but Magill seems to have gotten ideas over by inference. . . . A big laugh goes up at both ends of Pennsylvania Avenue when Japanese statesmen try to explain they must have a bigger navy in order to cement everlasting peace with the United States. . . . The bills to enlarge the United States Air Corps are greeted by such utterances from Japan.

Goldsborough—
Congressman Goldsborough's sponsorship of the bill to create a Federal Monetary Authority has several inside angles.

New Yorkers close to the project say it came about this way. The administration is in sympathy with the plan but doesn't want to make an issue of it at present. The first thought was that Chairman Steagall of the House Banking and Currency Committee might act as godfather. That was abandoned because a committee chairman is supposed to be close enough to the administration to permit the opposition to assume a direct tie-up.

Then Goldsborough—next senior to Steagall on the committee—discussed the matter with interested parties here and decided to push it on his own initiative. The administration gave purely passive consent and is not officially involved at all. Insiders say the White House raises this as an ideal way to test public sentiment without commitment.

Fisher—
It was natural that Professor Irving Fisher should be the first witness called to support the bill

SCOUTS TO MOBILIZE AT CITY HALL SATURDAY AT 10:45 A. M. TO HEAR ROOSEVELT'S TALK

President Roosevelt who will issue a national "Call to Service" to the Boy Scouts of America by radio from the White House on Saturday, Feb. 10 at noon, Eastern Standard Time, has a record of thirteen years of active connection with the Boy Scouts organization.

Scouts, scouters, parents, ex-scouts and interested parties will mobilize in the city auditorium here Saturday 10:45 a. m. to receive the message.

After his war-time service as Assistant Secretary of the Navy had ended, Franklin D. Roosevelt returned to New York and embarked upon a business career. The Boy Scouts of Greater New York needed a new and vigorous leader and they went to Mr. Roosevelt. He finally agreed to accept the chairmanship of the Greater New York Committee on Scouting organized to reorganize and rehabilitate the organization so that thousands of city boys might have Troops and camps and meeting places.

Once enlisted, he worked tirelessly and by the end of two years had more than a hundred of New York's prominent business and professional men aligned with him. To make their work more effective they organized as the Boy Scout Foundation of Greater New York in 1922 with Mr. Roosevelt as its first president, a post he has since continued to hold. They paid of $50,000 in debts within a year. The Foundation then assumed the responsibility of financing Boy Scout work throughout Greater New York.

From his earliest days as head of the Foundation, Mr. Roosevelt had a vision that the Scouts of New York City should have a great camping space as their own property. The Scouts had used camping space for years in the Bear Mountain Park.

Five years ago the dream became a reality. President Roosevelt gathered about him a large group of men for an intensive campaign. Within a few months they raised a large sum and the vision became an actuality in the purchase of 10,000 acres of woodland in Sullivan County, N. Y.

The Ten Mile River Scout Camps, as they are known, with the beautiful lakes and stretches of woodland are the largest boys' encampment in the world. President Roosevelt likes to visit the camps when opportunity offers. Pressure of his duties as Governor of New York and latterly as President of the United States has prevented frequent trips. One day last summer, however, while at his summer home at Hyde Park, N. Y., he expressed a desire to visit the camp. The visit was quickly arranged.

The appointed day turned out to be one of the stormiest days in 1933 but Mr. Roosevelt was driven the one hundred miles from his home, across the Hudson river and into the Catskill Mountains to the camp. He was given a great welcome by the 2,800 Scouts at camp and they in turn were warmly greeted by their President. His last words were: "I had a great time and hope to come back again next year and see all of you."

Successor—
New Yorkers with good Soviet connections say that Kaganovich is the man to watch as Stalin's probable successor. Kaganovich is Assistant Secretary to the Central Executive Committee of the Communist Party and is practically unknown outside of Russia. He has recently built up a powerful personal following at the Kremlin with Stalin's knowledge and some say with his aid.

Fend—
The feud between Prussian Premier Goering and Propaganda Minister Goebbels grows hotter.

The plan to divide Germany into eighteen provinces—which would strip Goering of his present powerful position—was Goebbels' brain child.

All German papers ran editorials on Goering's recent birthday. The one in Dr. Goebbels' own paper ended with the line: "We hope that Goering will do big things for Germany—always as a faithful vassal of Hitler." The emphasis was by Goebbels' order. The warning could not have been more pointed.

Crime—
"The lass who loved a sailor" is out of luck in Russia. Five Russian maids were recently sent to prison in Archangel for the crime of having accepted silk stockings from foreign gobs. The judge sternly pointed out that the sailors came from capitalist countries and that Soviet girls are not allowed to love capitalists.

Unique Record In Canning Home-Grown Products Made By Howard Co. Women

Just what can be done on what appears to be a barren West Texas hillside during a dry summer has been recently demonstrated by the canning record of Mrs. George W. Overton who resides on the Overton farm near the San Angelo highway. The farm contains several oil wells and belongs to that kind of Howard County land that old-timers say ought to be good for oil, as it isn't good for much of anything else.

The land is better than it looks, but at that Mrs. Overton's canning record is an eye-opener.

During the year 1933 Mrs. Overton raised and put up the following:

Five hundred sixty pounds cured meat, 150 pounds lard, 7 quarts mince meat, 17 quarts sausage, 9 quarts pork, 8 cans chicken, 7 quarts pumpkin, 32 quarts beef, 7 quarts corn salad, 6 quarts black-eyed peas, 4 quarts butter beans, 4 quarts corn on the cob, 11 quarts peach preserves, one 6 1-2 pound cheese, 100 pounds soap, 130 quarts green beans.

All this in one of the driest summers this county has ever known!

Mrs. Overton is a member of the Overton Club, which was named for her. Each year this club grades its members according to the amount of household accomplishments they report, including sewing, canning, cooking and household improvements. Mrs. Overton—who, by the way, is not a young woman—scored higher than any one else in the club, with a percentage of 92.45.

This high percentage was the result of other activities in addition to canning. Mrs. Overton made and quilted three quilts within the year, raised 80 chickens, made a hooked and a braided rug, her own wash dresses and installed a sink and running water into her kitchen.

She maintains that she doesn't work very hard and that any other Howard county woman could do as well. Her present ambition, she says, is to see the county get a home demonstration agent, so that records like hers will be common all over the county.

"The Bowery" At Ritz Friday And Saturday

George Raft, once a bantam weight, fought in the leading clubs of New York without particular success. In twenty-five bouts he was knocked out seven times and after his last beating he quit the game to avoid permanent mutilation.

However, in a scene for "The Bowery," 20th Century Picture showing tomorrow and Saturday at the Ritz Theatre, he had to take some terrific punishment under the direction of Raoul Walsh.
