News Behind The News THE NATIONAL Whirligig

WASHINGTON By George Durno Shrinkage—The other day a little note appeared in the papers to the effect that President Roosevelt was studying blueprints for an enlargement of the White House Executive Offices.

Steady increases have been made to White House personnel ever since Inauguration Day. Latterly the clerks have been so crowded that extra space in the State Department had to be taken over.

Does this indicate that the President's tremendous personal popularity is waning? Or are the people as a whole satisfied with the way things progress? Have they ceased writing in their approbation only because they are better acquainted with the New Deal?

Primaries—Much ado is being made at present about what may or may not happen to Congressmen this fall who voted against veterans' legislation.

Farley—Handsome, affable Ambrose O'Connell who, as Special Assistant to the Postmaster General, occupies the office next to Jim Farley and handles much of the latter's correspondence.

PRESIDENT'S TOSS OPENS CAPITAL BASEBALL SEASON

President Roosevelt threw out the first ball to open Washington's baseball season as the Senators played the Boston Red Sox. Grouped around the President's box for the ceremonies may be seen Postmaster General Farley, Bernard Baruch, Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators; Joe Cronin, Senator manager, and Bucky Harris, Red Sox manager.

Secrecy Marks Activities Of State Officers

'Inside' Information Is Obtained Concerning Notorious Killer

DALLAS, (AP)—A death blow was aimed Friday at the old Clyde Barrow gang of outlaws as officers acted on "inside" information concerning the notorious killer and his companion, Bonnie Parker.

The latest criminal activities of Hamilton came to a disastrous end late Wednesday while he and a chance acquaintance, T. R. Brooks, were fleeing with loot they obtained in the robbery of the First National bank of Lewisville, amounting to about $500.

Prospects For Proposed Road Are Brighter

All But Three Counties Likely To Furnish Right-Of-Way

Prospects for obtaining state designation at an early date for a proposed road stretching from Claude to Del Rio were brightened materially Thursday in a meeting at Floydada.

That leaves only Borden and Val Verde counties to take favorable action.

Halt Called So Rancher Can Negotiate

Rancher's Daughter, Aged 6, Held For Huge Ransom

TUCSON, Arizona (AP)—Arizona's greatest manhunt was abruptly suspended Friday to permit Fernando Robles to negotiate with kidnapers of his daughter, June, 6, held for $15,000 ransom.

Under-Sheriff Colby Farrar refused to disclose whether Robles attempted to carry out instructions of the ransom note—"Drive along outlying road nightly until contacted."

TUCSON, (AP)—A thousand men ready to shoot it out at the bat of an eyelid—among them the officers to whom John Dillinger and his outlaw gang surrendered here last January—went gunning Thursday for the abductors of 6-year-old June Robles.

While the search gained momentum and a motoring crowd of several hundred persons gathered at the Pima county courthouse spreading the lynch talk, the old cattlemen received a second ransom note in which the abductors said they would accept $10,000 "if you act quickly."

Band Concert At High Auditorium Greatly Praised

A handful of people braved the weather to go up to the high school auditorium Thursday evening to see the high school band a good send off at its first annual concert.

But the few who went came away heartily enthusiastic and many of them surprised at the splendid showing made by the students in such a short time.

City Manager E. V. Spence was present and made an address, directed by Mrs. Bruce Frazier sang three numbers.

The band gave two groups of selections and the orchestra two groups. Mrs. Feden-Deter played the violin.

The band left early this morning for Abilene for the West Texas band contest.

The following pupils took part in the concert: Bill Dehlinger, Jack Cook, Wendal Parks, Wayne Burch, Billy Webb, Cornets; Loren Warren, J. C. Douglas, Joe Johnson, Jimmy Jones, Billie Robinson, Gene Hardy, Fiewellen, Clarinets; Wayne Vance,

Judith Lane

by JEANNE BOWMAN

CHAPTER 34 BLACK GOLD

In the days which followed, Judith sometimes would mingle with the crowds in the streets of Big Tom town, or dine with a crowd of engineers at Hamburger Joe's, or seated on a stool, swinging her booted legs which wouldn't quite reach the footrail, she would join in the conversation of Goodwin and Larson, but her ears would be attuned to the voices of the other men in the place.

Contentment was apparent in the calm, cheerful tones of the men who filled into Hamburger Joe's, or the Elite Cafe, or Gulf Sea Food Restaurant.

The first change in the voices came not in a note of discord, but one of surprised excitement. With the wives of two engineers she was being dinner at the restaurant.

"Oil! Where do you suppose they struck it?"

Task at the table was spirited and Judith was dividing her attention between a tenderloin steak and the conversation, when she caught one word spoken in the room beyond.

"Oil!"

For one distracted moment she thought of Justin Cunard's words as they made their air survey of the basin: "This looks like oil land but I hope it isn't."

Motioning the others to go on talking she slipped close to the next booth.

"They're bringing the derrick and machinery in on tonight's train... got mule teams to drag it on up to their layout... sure thing... don't let on you know; we'll slip up and see if there's any claims we can file on, or buy up, eh?"

Judith returned to the table, eyes wide with anxiety. If oil was found on Scathborne's property, she feared for the Rio Diablo dam.

"Max, I've got to get word to Cunard."

Oil was the one thing that could stampede the dam workers; the one thing Judith feared. Had Scathborne actually found definite trace of oil, or was this just another of Lampere's ideas to destroy the harmony in Big Tom Town?

Still at the table, she confided to Max what had happened and he, sensitive to her foresight, agreed that Cunard should be notified at once so that he, as an investigator.

"We might go down to the train and see if they're telling the truth", suggested Larson, and hurrying through their meal, they proceeded to the camp depot.

This night the engine pulled flats behind her freight cars and on the flats were engines, pipes, lumber, and drums of fuel oil.

Shadow figures jumped from the cars, communicated with shadowy figures on the road side of the depot. Mule teams backed up, their drays even with the flats, then the machinery, oil and lumber were transferred.

"Oil... them's the makin' of all derricks." The whisper went the round at the depot when the train came in. Judith regretted Big Tom's magnanimous insistence that his spur operate as a general carrier.

"Oil... where do you suppose they struck it?"

People began running up from the little town to stand in groups and discuss it, a threat of excitement in their manner, their voices pitched higher than usual.

Some who knew something of the enterprise became the talkative center of a group, ensuring the wide-eyed ignorant ones that no oil could come in "Till they get them derricks up an' drill down a piece."

"How far?"

"Sometimes 1800, sometimes 5000, sometimes they've gone way down beyond that."

Max and his wife and Judith sauntered with apparent unconcern from one group to another, then joined their party and moved uphill to Judith's shack.

"It looks like the real thing, doesn't it?" observed Judith in a defeated voice.

"Sure does," agreed Max Larson. "Even Lampere wouldn't buy expensive machinery like that just to frighten us with. He must have pretty good evidence of a strike."

"How will it effect the dam?" Mrs. Larson questioned.

"It needn't," began Judith, a quiver of apprehension belying her words. "It really needn't, but... I would just as soon have the dam completed before the rush begins. Workmen aren't as efficient when prospect of 'big money' lies just around the corner."

"No need crossing bridges 'till we build them," offered Goodwin and Judith nodded.

"No need," she repeated, looking down on the town from her porch after the others had left. The quietness of harmony lay there. A single figure was plodding uphill with a peculiarly determined gait. Judith watched, expecting him to turn in at one of the camp tents, but he plodded on towards her.

Not until he was even with her porch did she recognize him and when she did, she felt a rush of fear.

"Mr. Scoggins," she cried, and seeing the expression of his face, "what's wrong?"

"I'd like to talk to you, Miss Judith," he said, his voice worried; "like to talk over some business with you."

"Come in," she said, and other chair; you'll find it more comfortable."

"I ain't lookin' for comfort," he answered, slowly, "not for myself. For my wife and my Tommy, that's different."

"Of course," Judith answered quickly. "Your thought has always been for your wife and Tommy. I remember that nice room you built for Tommy on the house the river
