More Liberal Policy On Indian Fighters' Pensions Expected

WASHINGTON—A more liberal interpretation of the law regarding pensions for old Indian fighters is expected here now following the appearance of General Frank T. Hines, veterans administrator, before the House committee on pensions when a number of Texas congressmen, including R. E. Thomsen of the sixteenth district, spoke in behalf of the old veterans. Following the talks of the Texas, General Hines declared that he would give his personal attention to the situation.

It was explained that prior to the enactment of the law of March 8, 1927 governing Indian War pensions, the House committee considering special bills would accept the affidavits of two comrades of the veteran as proof of service. The act of 1927 provided that in certain cases the applicant "may make proof of service by furnishing evidence satisfactory to the commissioner of pensions." Texas congressmen had never defined what it considered "satisfactory evidence" and that because many of the old muster rolls were destroyed, Indian fighters were unable to get their pensions.

"It was evidently the intention of congress to liberalize the Indian War pension act," said Congressman Thomsen in his address to the committee, "and to permit bona fide Indian War veterans who could not show complete records of service except through the testimony of comrades to come under the law and receive its benefits. The records show these claims have been denied."

"The Comanche Indians of the southwest were among the boldest and fiercest of the tribes and the settlers there were compelled in many cases to defend themselves first and pay attention to the records afterward."

"The capitol at Austin was destroyed by fire about 1880 and many records were lost. It is for this reason that the Indian war fighters of my section have such difficulty in establishing their claims to the satisfaction of the authorities."

The meeting was called at the request of Texas congressmen who said that officials here had little conception of the conditions existing on the Texas frontier in the days when Indians were a menace. They had no criticism of General Hines, under whose administration the pension bureau is now governed, but they did insist that lesser officials were following the letter of the law instead of its spirit. They explained in detail why records of many of the old companies of Indian fighters were destroyed. Five other representatives appeared with Congressman Thomsen and urged a liberal interpretation of the law.

The Thrill That Comes Once In A Lifetime

IMPRESSING ONE OF THE YOKELS WITH YOUR CARD, WRITTEN FOR YOU BY AN EXPERT PENMAN

BOY CRAZY
by GRACE PERKINS

SYNOPSIS: Hope Ross finds her marriage with Dickey Dale in ruins through her father's tactics. Mr. Ross "convinces" her that Dickey is not standing by her, and keeps Dickey away from her. After the marriage is annulled, Hope goes to Dickey's college and is very gay to save her pride.

Chapter 24 PRICING A COUNT

Ten days after the Harmouth scandal, Hope and Sassy found themselves headed for Cherbourg, with Mama Ross bravely facing seasickness, and delicately raising her eyebrows at the hot polloi that were her fellow passengers. To certain people a trip to Europe seems to be the only answer to every emotional upheaval.

But nobody on the boat was quite good enough for Mama Ross, who kept magnificently aloof as she paced the deck in her English tweeds, and confined herself otherwise to her five-room suite. Never once did Mama appear in the dining-salon or attend the evening gaieties which the ship proffered to guests which the cultured souls of the southwest were among the boldest and fiercest of the tribes and the settlers there were compelled in many cases to defend themselves first and pay attention to the records afterward.

The capitol at Austin was destroyed by fire about 1880 and many records were lost. It is for this reason that the Indian war fighters of my section have such difficulty in establishing their claims to the satisfaction of the authorities. The meeting was called at the request of Texas congressmen who said that officials here had little conception of the conditions existing on the Texas frontier in the days when Indians were a menace. They had no criticism of General Hines, under whose administration the pension bureau is now governed, but they did insist that lesser officials were following the letter of the law instead of its spirit. he married, certainly fate had sent her the best. A God-sent answer to the old alternative of Rusty Cray dial back home or mummifying in illness and restlessness.

County, as she insisted upon calling him, was agreeable and could tango; and he would let her do as she pleased and had suggested to Hope that after marriage each could go or come as was desirable, each could have their separate friends, and they could make dates with each other when it appealed to them. It sounded intriguingly and surprisingly fair-minded for an Italian; but it left Hope with just a wee spasm of nostalgia, and with a sharper tongue, a growing scream, and a quiver in her left nostril that made her feel as if the whole thing were distasteful. It was, for that matter, but aside from her private opinion of her fiancé, he offered a new freedom. Didn't he promise freedom from himself—and in addition, there would be freedom from Mama and Papa, and the sight of Goody's contentment, from more pleading on Rusty's part—from the whole United States that held Dickey Dale.

Mama had agreed—without being the slightest degree impressed. Presentations at Courts were old whoopees to Mama Ross, and what she to raise an eyebrow over was an aristocracy that happened to equal her own? What was a mere Count? Still, however, she did agree. So Papa was summoned, and for three weeks went to do and what-all was made over the meeting of the two unctuous, overpoweringly polite and tremulously concerned families. Business of looking into and being locked into caused magnificent pastime, and finally both American and Italian Papas and Mamas came to a delightful agreement of hitching up names, matching titles and assigning chattel; a great and refreshing little game, especially

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth. Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs. Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

Sandstorms And Earthquakes

They Have Their Resemblances In West Texas: Which Ever One Prefers Depends On The Limit Of His Endurance

By O.R.P.
Somebody page Dorothy Scarborough! This has been a day after her own heart. If she couldn't find inspiration enough in today's sandstorms, the one that blew up about midnight should have provided her with material enough for the most fiendish of wind novels—one gruesome enough to make a good midnight matinee for the Ritz.

Last night's sandstorm was a real old-fashioned stemwinder. Visitors to our fair city, who survive it, have something to go home and talk about. To an old West Texan it was just another sandstorm; the years have laid a gloss over them that even a sandstorm can't pierce. If the gloss were just as hard on the buried walnut furniture for which these old-timers have traded in their pine tables and chairs the wind could blow its head off and housekeepers would not worry so much. As it is, there's simply no place in today's houses for layers of sand.

Prefer Earthquakes
Anyway, sandstorms are just a trifle passé. The latest fall in weather out here is earthquakes. The difference between a sandstorm and an earthquake—as it is registered in Howard County—is in the length of time that the house, the bed, the furniture in general, shakes and quivers.

when played with Duces wild. It so happened, however, as soon as complete arrangements were made, that Hope decided to change her mind. But Hope said no word of the real reason. She put it down, and truthfully too—a little matter of a fiancé who despised cats. Her decision was prompt and irrevocable; yet that was hardly a fit explanation, and left Papa and Mama Ross with a new pastime that was neither entertaining nor comforting, of undoing and unpromising, and dodging a payment for discomfited noble feelings.

Be that as it may, Hope sailed home to America with her nerve-racked parents, and her shrewd and plume-tailed Sassy early in December. To spend Christmas Eve in Goody's bravely furnished new home, set near one of the dotting lakes of Westchester, in a new residential section that seemed to be a sort of barnacle of a golf club. The house itself was a stolid eight-room monument to the opinion Charlie's parents had held of the union of the entire furnishings and equipment from the black-and-rose tiled kitchen down to the monogrammed door mat outside the heavy green painted front-door, were the contribution of the two who had once been bitterly disappointed because Goody was not a boy.

Ice Business Grows
The ice business in the United States last year was better than ever before. The National Association of Ice Industries estimates that operations in 1931 resulted in a tonnage gain of about 6 per cent over 1930, which was a record year. Consumption in Chicago was up 10 per cent.

Thus for the second consecutive year poor general business conditions failed to arrest the upward trend which began five years ago. A. J. Autherth, vice president of Middle West Utilities company, and E. L. Bennett, president of the national association, at a recent meeting predicted that the market for ice would be doubled in a few years by the development of additional uses for this product in cooling homes, offices, stores and passenger trains.

Will Concentrate Efforts
So enthusiastic are the ice people about the prospect of increasing sales in this way that they have decided to concentrate the efforts of their national association in this field. The manufacturers of equipment are likewise aware of this potential demand. The American Foundry and Furnace company at Bloomington and the Moncrief Furnace company at Atlanta have started to make furnaces that will cool the home in the summer as well as heat it in the winter. Other concerns are experimenting with similar equipment.

Smaller cooling units for individual rooms or small offices are also on the market. Some of these are ice boxes built to resemble radio cabinets, with an electric fan to blow cool air into warm rooms. The idea of air conditioning on passenger cars seems to be taking hold. The Pullman company has tested various types, including refrigeration with mechanical devices and with ice, in addition to a water spray system. Makes Experiment In September the Boston and

Maine railroad placed in operation an ice cooled single shaded passenger coach. On its initial run the temperature of the air in this car was maintained 14 to 19 degrees cooler than the air in other cars in the same train and 12 to 14 degrees cooler than the air outside. A slight positive air pressure kept dirt and dust from entering the coach. Less energy was used by the water pump and fan than was required to run two electric fans in the ordinary passenger car.

The F. L. Moore and Ohio and Pennsylvania railroads have been experimenting with air conditioning. The latter now has ice cooled dining cars on several eastern runs. Several other lines are considering trying out various types of air cooling apparatus with the hope of making passenger trains cleaner and more comfortable.

On the Pennsylvania line is placed in compartments under the car and cold water is pumped from these compartments through a coil above the ceiling of the car. A small fan throws filtered air thru the coil an' into the car. The windows are kept tightly closed.

Quote Monthly Rates
Some ice companies have boosted their profits considerably by adopting more economical delivery methods. One western concern quotes its domestic consumers a flat monthly rate of $3.50 for keeping their refrigerators filled. In this way it finds use for odd pieces of ice and saves the time formerly consumed in weighing.

An ice company in Georgia stimulates new business by offering its customers a flat monthly rate of $7.70 on two year contracts, this price to include time payments on a refrigerator. C. S. Holmes and E. Reagan spent Saturday in Barkdale where with other officials of the Buffalo Trails Area they looked over a location for a Boy Scout summer camp.

In town. She even joined the young mothers club. We don't have any children, but she was studying—and between playing bridge and going to clubs, she was never at home.

We got stuck up and hifalutin. We even took down the old family bed and bought a set of twin beds on the installment.

When I would come home at night, if my wife was at home, she would already be in her bed and I would crawl in mine. If she came in first, it was via, versa.

Beds and Clubs

We like the depression. We have come down off our pedestal and are really living at my house now. The twin beds are stored in the garage and the old family affair is being used. We are enjoying life. Instead of taking a hotwater bottle to bed these cold nights, she sticks her heels in my back, just like she did before Hoover was elected.

I haven't been out on a party in 18 months. I have lost my book of telephone numbers. My wife has dropped all the clubs. I believe we are falling in love all over again. I am pretty well satisfied with my wife. Think I will keep her, at least until she is forty and then if I feel like I do now, I may trade her for two twenties.

I am feeling better since the depression. I take more exercise. I walk to town and a lot of folks who used to drive Cadillacs are walking with me. I like the depression.

My digestion is better. I haven't been to see a doctor in a year. I can eat anything I want to.

Food—and Food

I am getting real, honest-to-goodness food. Three years ago, we had flit mignon once a week, now we have round steak with flour gravy. Then, we had roast breast of guinea hen, now we are glad to get saw-bosom with the buttons on it.

I like the depression. My salary has been cut to where I can't afford to buy lettuce and spinach and parley and I can't afford to have sandwiches and frozen deserts and all that damfoolness which has killed more good men than the World War.

I like the depression. Three years ago, I never had time to go to church, I played golf all-day Sunday and besides I was so darned smart that there wasn't a preacher in West Texas who could tell me nothing.

Now, I am going to church regularly, never miss a Sunday. And if this depression keeps on, I will be going to prayer meetings before long.

I like the depression.

Olton Holds County Seat

5,101 Votes In Lamb County's Three-Cornered Fight

OLTON (AP)—In an election which drew an unofficial total of 5,101 votes, this city retained the Lamb county seat Saturday although it mustered only 936 ballots. Despite intense interest in the outcome and large crowds in all three towns interested, no disturbances were reported. Today's election is the second to be held in the past three years to change the site of the county capital.

Littlefield, polling 2,925 votes, fell about 470 short of the required two-thirds majority to win the coveted county seat.

Amherst, drawing 1,240 ballots, missed victory by about 1,300. Amherst could have secured the election with a majority because it is within the five-mile radius of the county center.

Lamb county's voting strength, not including exemptions, is reported to be 4,754 votes.

guilt of those who lifted him to the cross. We find foremost in this group those who crucified him with the sin of indifference. If the crowd which followed him had been with him in spirit, the Pharisees would never have dared to have laid hands on him. They crucified him with that devilish type of indifference which would not have crucified him had they been given their choice, but who did not care enough to do anything about it. When he suffered they were unmoved, unresponsive, indifferent. But their sin was not only that they were ungrateful that it was for them that he died. That was what broke his heart. And that is what is crucifying him afresh today, the fact that so many have not enough gratitude that He died for them that they are willing to live for Him."

Duplication Of Efforts At Cutting Government Costs Warned Against By Leader Of West Texas Chamber

The West Texas chamber of commerce warns against duplication of efforts in the movement, rife in Texas, to reduce governmental costs. Big Spring directors of the WTCC have received a news letter from Houston Harter, president, saying, "We are of the opinion that the creation of separate taxpayers' leagues for this, that and every purpose of a local nature or of a state nature is a waste and duplication of organization effort."

"We are of the opinion that this work should be a chamber of commerce activity in every locality and should be handled through an organization already in existence rather than creating a new one. Governmental costs have risen because of the creation of new departments and bureaus for everything, and when we are setting out to cure that waste, we shouldn't begin by practicing a similar one."

The Home Plan

"I urge our directors to resist the affiliation of your town with any of these outside tax organizations, and I urge you to see to it that your town adheres to the West Texas plan. Our plan is void of duplication and waste, and keeps good faith with our chamber of commerce, an organization which is already fundamentally a taxpayers' organization. In addition, our plan is securing results, for already a number of our local communities have reported savings of over a million and a half dollars, and already our central committee, in brief submitted at Austin, has made the demand that the state's budget be balanced by curtailing expenditures rather than by imposing new taxes."

As to the West Texas chamber of commerce plan, Harter wrote: "Immediately after the Lubbock convention held May, 1931, this organization started a study of governmental expenditures. The results of this study we sent to you last September, wherein we called upon each of our affiliated towns to appoint, through their local chambers of commerce, a public expenditure and tax committee. Since the announcement of our plans, there has been quite an epidemic in the state of organizing various kinds of taxpayers' associations. These proposed statewide organizations have various and sundry objectives, but none as fundamental as our own objectives, namely, the curtailment of public expenditures as the way to cure the tax problem. None of these organizations has as sound organizational plans as we have, namely, the creation of local committees to be affiliated with our local chambers of commerce and federated with our West Texas central committee."

Silica Deposit Near Tahoka May Soon Be Developed

TAHOKA—A lake of silica, said to be between 400 and 500 acres in extent, is located along state highway No. 9 about six or seven miles south of Tahoka and when conditions are "right" it is believed by residents here that a development program will be started.

The location is owned by J. B. Nance, formerly of Tahoka, who is living now at Winnsboro and V. S. Castle, of Lubbock. The vein is said to be from one to eight and ten feet thick and the vein is near the surface.

Requires Little Work

Very little work will be needed to strip off the top layer of soil, as the dirt is not over five or six feet deep. A steam shovel could strip the acreage very easily.

Within the past few years a number of prospects have visited the place and made surveys and tests. The silica is said to be of a very high quality and is easy in mining.

Several years ago rumors of plans for development were common. Of late there has not been many rumors, although engineers have visited the location at frequent intervals.

Close To Highway

The lake where the deposit is, is close to the highway. Formerly the highway ran through the property but in May of 1930 a heavy rain fell and filled the lake.

Several miles east is the Lamesa branch of the P. and S. F. In the event of a development program it is expected the railroad would build a branch or spur track from its line to the site of the plant.

"Love your neighbors." One of my neighbors has one of the best looking wives I have ever seen. She is a dandy. I am getting acquainted with my neighbors and learning to love them.

Three years ago, I ordered my clothes from a merchant tailor—and two free suits at a time. All my clothes were good ones. I was always dressed up. But now, haven't bought a suit in two years. I am mighty proud of my Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes. When I dress up, I am dressed up and I don't mean maybe. I like the depression.

The Wife

Three years ago I was so busy and my wife was so busy that we didn't see much of each other, consequently we sort of lost interest in each other. I never went home to lunch. About twice a week I went home for dinner—at 6:30 o'clock. I never had time to go anywhere with her. If I did go on a party, I could never locate our place, since there was always a "blonde" or a "red-head" available. I didn't much worry about it.

Refiner Holds Currency Basis Demands Study

Questions Ability To Produce Enough Gold For World Needs

By F. H. BROWNELL
(Chairman, American Smelting & Refining Co.)

NEW YORK (AP)—The present outlook is that during the year 1932 the world will give increasing attention to the all-important problem of monetary systems.

Whether the gold production of the world can meet the increasing monetary demands of all the nations of the world, if solely on a gold basis without the use of silver, is seriously questioned.

Even if adequately production is assumed, present distribution of gold stocks of the world is such as to make difficult, if not impossible, the use of gold alone.

Silver Use Declines

The monetary use of silver by European nations was greatly lessened at the war. Many nations, including even India, sold the silver obtained from coins. It was this sale of silver formerly used as money that caused the unprecedented fall in the price of silver during the last two years.

But half the people of the world still use silver more than gold in their monetary transactions.

Doubt still exists as to the perpetuity and solvency of many existing nations, and doubt will probably always exist as to the financial wisdom and integrity which may be exercised by frequency changing administrations and governments. Hence, paper money has sufficient stability only when it rests upon an adequate metallic basis—gold or silver or both.

Britain Shows Problem

Much greater attention throughout the world has been given to the status of silver as money since Great Britain went off the gold standard and since most of the remaining nations of the world (except France and the United States) began to weaken in maintaining their monetary systems at theoretical parity.

Revival trade demands stabilized currencies throughout the world, and as the question of the failure of the moneys of so many nations receives attention the status of silver will become one of growing importance.

The German Election

London, March 14.—While Hitler did not make good his claims, he has made spectacular gains since the elections of 1930. He has nearly doubled the absolute number of Nazi voters and has increased their percentage of the total vote cast from eighteen and a half to thirty. The Communists show a slight loss since 1930 and so do the Nationalists, but their combined loss is not nearly enough to account for Hitler's gains at the expense of the Socialists and of the other Republican parties. In the net result the Weimar republic, aided by Hindenburg's almost legendary prestige, has mustered the support of only half the German people.

There are two ways of interpreting this result. If the present moment is to be regarded as the bottom of Germany's depression, if we may believe that Europe is setting itself toward reconstruction at Lausanne and elsewhere, then one may say it is immensely reassuring that after eighteen months of the deepest despair and suffering the intransigent vote has increased only from 39 to 49 per cent. This is evidence of the deep resistance of the German people, to policies of denigration. On the other hand, if no improvement is in sight, if the governments and their public opinion are going to continue in a deadlock over reparations and debts, if the economic war of tariffs, embargoes, quotas, exchange controls is to go right on, then this vote is ominous. If in the next year Hitler gains followers at the rate which he has been gaining them in the last year, the German republic is doomed. For when Hitler's following approaches 50 per cent of the voters he will not hesitate to seize by force.

The Suicide of Ivar Kreuger

At the very moment when Ivar Kreuger lay dead in his Paris flat, M. Tardieu and Sir John Simon were talking at the Foreign Office perhaps a mile away and making a little progress towards getting ready to begin relieving the conditions in central Europe which had brought M. Kreuger to despair. The whole tragedy of the present state of the world is illustrated here. The statesmen on the whole see what needs to be done and in a vague way mean to do it. But the tempo of political progress has little relation to the tempo of the financial decay. The statesmen are almost impotent to take constructive measures to prevent disasters. They have to see the disaster right in front of them before they really will to act.

This truth comes home to me with peculiar force, because for the last month I have been hearing from many sources about plans to save the Danubian states by uniting them under preferential tariffs. There is clearly no other salvation for them. Under the present regime where each state tries to protect itself by destroying the trade of its neighbors, there can be only one outcome and that is bankruptcy. That is not a theory. It is the fact, uncontroverted as to Hungary and Bulgaria, somewhat disguised as to the others. These little nations can not live in a state of economic war and there is no hope for them unless they manage somehow to end it.

M. Kreuger's troubles are the result apparently of his attempt to treat central Europe as if it were financially sound. The loans which he made to central European countries in return for the match monopolies would no doubt have been good enough and may some day still be good enough if sufficient international trade is permitted to make possible international payments. That much trade can come only from the stabilization and reduction of tariffs.

The plan for such a tariff arrangement has existed and been talked about for ten years. But among the five Danubian states there were irreconcilable political differences between Hungary on the one hand and the Little Entente on the other. Also there was a rivalry among the great powers which kept the Hitler Danubian countries divided. Thus France dominated Czechoslovakia, Rumania, and Yugoslavia. Italy dominated Hungary and Germany dominated Austria. This double complication of political interests has until quite recently prevented any progress toward economic unification.

If there is some hope of progress

Rise of Vines Chief Interest In Net Circles

By GAYLE TALBOT

(Associated Press Sports Writer)
NEW YORK (AP)—Failure of the United States to reach the Davis Cup challenge round and the meteoric rise of Ellsworth Vines, Jr., to the crest of American tennis, bringing heightened hopes for the future, caused conflicting emotions as net fans of this country look back on the 1931 season.

There was great disappointment when Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, Jr., youthful singles stars were swept to defeat by England's forces in the inter-zone final at Auteuil, France.

But, three months later, all that was forgotten. A lean, long-striding, serious-faced youngster had swarmed in from the west to batter down every opponent sent against him in a whirlwind campaign and to set the tennis fans again dreaming of world conquests. Virtually unknown six months ago, Vines will lead the assault against France's tiring forces next summer.

Vines, barely 20 and still a student at the University of Southern California, waged a spectacular campaign that brought him at most every title of consequence on this side, including the national championship and national clay courts. Vines beat everything in sight decisively, including the British star, Frederick Perry, who with H. W. "Bunny" Austin, turned out back the American Davis Cuppers.

Today Vines is ranked as one of the world's three greatest players. The other two are Henry Crochet, France's aging ace, and the peerless Tilden, king of the professionals.

Clay Courts First Step
The coast phenom started his remarkable drive by winning the clay court crown at Kansas City. He then paired with his coast playmate, Keith Gledhill, to capture the doubles.

A little later he came east and quickly leaped into the spotlight proper by trimming John Hope Deeg, then national champion, in the final both at Longwood and Seabright. He was forced to default to Perry after reaching the semi-finals at Southampton, but came right back a week later to beat the Englishman in the Newport final.

Tired In Big Tourney

It was a tired Vines who entered the "big" tournament at Forest Hills. He had a blister on one heel and he was homesick, but he stuck it out to fight his way through and beat George Lott, Jr., Davis Cup doubles veteran, in the finals, 7-5, 3-2, 6-7, 7-5.

Lott, the real surprise of the tournament, played possibly the finest tennis of his career in the finals, but he wasn't a match for the new champion.

After the national, Vines twice beat Perry on the West Coast, in the Pacific Coast and Pacific Southwest finals, one of their sets going to 21-19 in games before the American youngster won.

Gledhill, the same lad who accompanied Vines on his wild ride through the east, beat the champion in the finals of the Santa Barbara invitation, but the feat was not taken too seriously.

Helen Still Queen.
While our Davis Cuppers were firing and falling back and Vines was coming to the fore, another prominent citizen of California continued to rule her part of the tennis kingdom by a sort of divine right. Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, occupied with her art and housework, broke away just long enough to put the other girls in their places and then went right on back home.

Just as she has dominated women's tennis since 1923, she dominated the national tournament at Forest Hills from the first ball she hit over the net until she erased the comely Mrs. Eileen Bennett Whittingstall of England, 6-4, 6-1, in the finals.

In the absence of Mrs. Moody, who did not play abroad, Cille Aussem of Germany carried off the lion's share of honors overseas winning both in the French championships and at Wimbledon. Betty Nuthall of England, who held the American title last year, when Mrs. Moody did not compete, never did regain her 1930 form.

An informal international ranking at the close of 1931, giving the leader in each division, might look like this:

Men's singles: Ellsworth Vines, Jr., U. S. and Henri Cochet, France, (Equal).

Men's doubles: John Van Ryn and George Lott, Jr., U. S. A.

Women's singles: Mrs. Helen Willis Moody, U. S.

Women's doubles: Betty Nuthall and Mrs. Eileen B. Whittingstall, England.

Men's indoor: Jean Borotra, France.

Mixed doubles: George Lott, Jr., and Betty Nuthall.

Professional: William T. Tilden II.

Better tobaccos—that's the reason. Ripe, mellow tobaccos—Turkish and Domestic.

Not just blended, but cross-blended—that is, one kind of leaf blended with another kind—not merely mixed with it. And just enough Turkish tobacco to give the right aroma—to make the taste better.
