Nostalgia

By Fernando Piñón

Nostalgia is back. Recently I saw a teenager at a local grocery store who was a throwback to the late 1950's, flattop and all. It was, in a way, refreshing to see a boy "look like a boy." There was no ring dangling from an earlobe, no flashy clothes, no long, fluffed-up hair style, no gold necklace.

There's a certain magic to being transported back to the time when one was young, to relive - momentarily at least - the simplicity of a life where one did not have to meet problems head-on. Perhaps this is why movies dealing with the 1950s have become so popular. "Back to the Future" and Peggy Sue Got Married" became such box office hits because they sold nostalgia and fantasy.

In the plots, the main characters travel back into their own personal lives and find that their present can be altered if they are allowed to change certain aspects of their past. Viewers vicariously relive their own lives and are enthralled at the possibility that if they could somehow change certain parts of their past, their present would be different - and, of course, for the better.

In his final two years in office, it appears as though President Reagan will continue to try to sell us nostalgia, vintage 1950. His State of the Union message gave us fair warning. His approach was different from the movies only in that we really don't have to go back into history for us to change the present. What we can do is treat the present as if were the past - and our problems will somehow be solved.

This was particularly true when Reagan made reference to the "traditional family values" he so ardently advocates. His "traditional" family is plucked right out of the '50s, like in the movies, and the question which crossed my mind was:

Will the President's promise to revamp the welfare system be based upon the traditional family of the 1950s or the traditional family of the 1980s?

There is a difference, and the effectiveness of the revamping will depend upon the view selected.

When one talks about the welfare system today, one is really talking about Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). Many of the other programs already have disappeared in previous budget cuts. Yet, AFDC was created with the social and economic arrangements of families prevalent in the past. At the time, U.S. Sen. Daniel Moynihan (D-N.Y.) notes, "It was assumed that children lived in two-parent families, that one parent worked, that one parent kept house and, as with most such assumptions, it further was assumed that things would remain so."

It was, in effect, a family of the 1950s.

This program, and thus "welfare," indeed has grown tremendously, but the growth is due to the changing character of the American family. Today, only a minority of children can be expected to reach 18 years of age living continuously with both natural parents. In fact, 60% of children being born will live with a single parent, and nine out of 10 such families will be headed by a female.

In the 1950s, the death of a spouse was seen as the chief way in which children would fall into dependency. Today, only 3% of children's dependency occurs through death. The bulk of children - a full 68% - fall into dependency through divorce and 20% coming through illegitimacy.

While it is true that in terms of money the numbers of the program are growing, it is not taking care of the need. The program serves about 7 million children, and Moynihan estimates that there are 12 million children living in poverty. Accordingly, there are 5 million children who are getting nothing, and their number is growing.

Moynihan, the chairman of the Senate Finance Subcommittee on Social Security and Family Policy, estimates that young children have seven times the poverty rate as that of the elderly.

The statistics that portray today's family are not reassuring, which is perhaps why one welcomes the opportunity to take refuge in the past. But while the nostalgia may offer a welcome relief, it should not obscure our perception of reality.

Welfare reform should not be based upon a version of what ought to be, but on what really is, regardless of how much we may dislike the situation. Today's families, particularly children, are hurting, and whatever national method of assistance is developed ought to respond to their needs.

(Fernando Piñón, of San Antonio, Texas, is editor of the national Spanish-language weekly, El Visitante.)

First, I would like to thank all of the parents and students, for coming to the "We Care for Our Kids Rally." A special thanks to Eliseo Solis and The Night Walkers a great playing group of men that donated their time. These tips are for students that are failing from A.C.C.E.S.S.: Adults Concerned with and Committed to Enhancing Student Success.

Why are you doing poorly in school? Are you bored? Do you have trouble understanding material in school? Are you lazy? Are you manipulating your parents or punishing your parents by making bad grades? Are you afraid of being teased by friends if you do too well? Do you often feel sick? Do you have trouble seeing well? Are problems clouding your thinking? Is your drug or alcohol use causing your grades to drop? Do you need a quiet place to work? Do you need to schedule your time so that you can study more at home? Do you have a conflict with a teacher? Would changing classes or changing seat help? Do you need tutoring? Are you afraid of trying harder and failing? Do you talk too much in class? Do you have trouble listening or paying attention in class? Do you sleep or daydream in class?

For every yes, that you answered in the list above, take action now. School is almost out. Begin to accept responsibility for your school performance rather than giving responsibility to your parents.

The following is a list of proposed constitutional amendments being introduced to the Texas legislature. HJR 33-Perez: Juries in civil cases in district courts shall consist of six persons. (Juries in criminal cases should remain at 12) HJR 32-Moreno: Establish annual legislative sessions. HJR 7-Wilson: Authorizes a state lottery. HJR 1-Schlueter: prohibits a personal or corporate income tax. HJR 24-Hammond: allows persons to borrow money and create a lien upon their homestead. (this is now limited to loan for purchase, construction) improvements, and tax due there on. If you are for or against any of these amendments, you need to talk or write to your representative of the Texas Senate and Texas House of Representatives. The opinion of the people is considered and is vital, for the success of the Texas Legislature 140 day regular session. It will end at midnight June 1st 1987.

Now for a little humor. Knock-knock, come in, said St. Peter. You've had your hell on earth! What can I do when I can't sleep at night? Sleep during the day. What did the banana say to the elephant? Nothing, bananas can't talk. Stopping the jokes is harder than ending this column.

Thought for the week: Show Happiness!

Why Not Public Schools?

Dear Editor:

It recently came to my attention that the President of the School Board, Mr. Gary Boren, sends his children to private schools instead of public schools. I think this is a sign of a lack of faith in our public schools. I think it is a shame that Mr. Boren was elected to the Board of Trustees to serve our school district but he doesn't have faith in it. Isn't it ironic that he talks about doing what is best for public education in Lubbock but has chosen to send his children to private school. I wonder if I am the only citizen who thinks this situation deserves an explanation. Sincerely, Billie, R. Grimes

La Nostalgia

Por Fernando Piñón

La Nostalgia está de regreso.

Recientemente ví a un adolescente en una tienda de viveres local que era una reminiscencia de fines del decenio de 1950, con pelado de "tope raso" y todo. Fué, en cierto modo, refrescante el ver a joven "lucir como un joven." No llevaba ningún arete en sus orejas, ni ropas extravagantes, ni el cabello largo y soplado, ni cadena de oro al cuello.

Hay cierta magia en verse transportado de regreso a la época en que uno era joven, para volver a vivir - por lo menos momentáneamente - la simplicidad de una vida en que uno no tenía que chocar de frente contra los problemas. Quizás si ésta sea la razón de que las películas que tratan de la década de 1950 hayan llegado a ser tan populares. "De Regreso al Futuro" y "Peggy Sue se Casó" se convirtieron en tales éxitos de taquilla porque vendieron nostalgia y fantasía.

En los libretos, los personajes principales viajan de regreso a sus propias vidas personales y hallan que su presente se puede cambiar si se les permite modificar ciertos aspectos de su pasado. Los espectadores vuelven a vivir, a través de otras personas, sus propias vidas, y les emociona la posibilidad de que, si pudieran cambiar de algún modo ciertos aspectos de su pasado, su presente sería distinto - y, desde luego, para mejorar.

En los dos años finales de su mandato, parece como si el Presidente Reagan continuará tratando de vendernos la nostalgia al estilo de 1950. Su mensaje del Estado de la Unión nos dió una advertencia adecuada. Su enfoque fué diferente de las películas solamente en que no tenemos que regresar hacia dentro de la Historia para poder cambiar el presente. Lo que podemos hacer es tratar al presente como si fuera el pasado - y nuestros problemas se resolverán de alguna manera.

Esto resultó especialmente cierto cuando Reagan hizo referencia a los "valores tradicionales de la familia" que él defiende con tanto ardor. Su familia "tradicional" está sacada de los años del decenio de 1950, como en las películas, y la pregunta que me atravesó la mente fué:

Se basará la promesa del Presidente, de reformar al sistema de asistencia económica pública en la familia tradicional del decenio de 1950, o en la familia tradicional de la década de 1980?

Hay diferencia entrabmas, y la eficacia de la reforma dependerá del punto de vista que se elija.

Cuando uno habla hoy sobre el sistema de asistencia económica pública, está hablando realmente de la Ayuda a las Familias con Niños Dependientes (siglas en inglés AFDC). Muchos de los demás programas han desaparecido ya en las desajapadas presupuestarias anteriores. Sin embargo, la AFDC fué creada según los arreglos sociales y económicos de las familias que predominaban en el pasado. En aquella época, el Senador Federal Daniel Moynihan (demócrata por New York) advierte: "Se asumía que los niños vivían en familias que tenían dos padres de familia, que uno de ellos trabajaba, que la madre atendía al hogar y, como sucede con la mayoría de tales presunciones, se asumía también que las cosas permanecerían como estaban."

Era, en efecto, una familia del decenio de 1950.

Este programa, y por lo tanto la "asistencia económica pública", en verdad ha crecido tremendamente, pero el crecimiento se debe a la naturaleza cambiante de la familia estadounidense. Hoy sólo puede esperarse que una minoría de los niños llegue a la edad de 18 años viviendo continuamente con ambos padres naturales. En verdad, el 60% de los niños que nacen hoy vivirán con uno sólo de sus padres, y 9 de cada 10 de esas familias estarán encabezadas por una mujer.

En el decenio de 1950, la muerte de un cónyuge se veía como la forma principal de que los niños cayeran en la situación de dependencia. Hoy, sólo el 3% de la dependencia de los niños ocurre por razón de la muerte. El grueso de los niños -un 68% completo - cae en la dependencia por medio del divorcio y el 20% a través de la ilegitimidad.

Aunque es cierto que, en términos de dinero, las cifras del programa están aumentado, éste no está atendiendo a la necesidad. El programa presta servicios a siete millones de niños, y Moynihan estima que hay 12 millones de niños que viven en la pobreza. Consecuentemente, hay 5 millones de niños que no están recibiendo nada, y su número viene aumentando.

Moynihan, presidente del subcomité de Finanzas del Senado sobre el Seguro Social y los Cursos de Acción Familiares, estima que los niños pequeños tienen una tasa de pobreza siete veces mayor que la de los ancianos.

Las estadísticas que pintan a la familia de hoy no son consoladoras, lo cual es quizás la razón de que uno vea con agrado la oportunidad de refugiarse en el pasado. Pero aunque la nostalgia puede brindar un alivio agradable, no debiera de nublar a nuestra percepción de la realidad.

La reforma de la asistencia económica pública no debiera de fundarse sobre una versión de lo que debería de ser, sino de lo que realmente es, sin perjuicio de la medida en que pueda disgustarnos la situación. Las familias de hoy, especialmente los niños, están perjudicándose, y cualquier método nacional de ayuda que se desarrolle debería de responder a sus necesidades.

The Day Our Teacher Overslept

One sunny morning we went to school and went to our class room 115. Nobody was there. Where was our teacher? This was a mystery. Everytime she leaves the class we go crazy - maybe that's why she went! When the class saw that she was not in the classroom, we wanted to do something. So we did! We went to her house. We looked in the window. "She overslept," said the class. So we found another teacher. The next day she was there! Everybody was good in class, even when she was not there!

The day the teacher overslept we jumped all over the teacher's desk. Then we went outside. We started throwing paper airplanes. All the boys started to fight with the other boys. Meanwhile, the girls were playing outside. Then our teacher came and was aggravated. She made the boys stay after school for two hours. The End.

A Message From Scrubby Bear to Harwell

Recently, L.I.S.D. has presented a program to all primary students in Lubbock introducing them to Scrubby Bear. Scrubby Bear teaches the students how to prevent the spread of colds. After this presentation Harwell kindergarten teachers asked their students to complete this sentence:

Scrubby Bear tells us it is important to wash our hands because:

- We got germs on our hands -

- Lisa Olivarez.
- We won't get germs in our food-Jessica Zapata.
  - We won't get sick-Royce Quintero.
  - We won't get germs on nobody else-Esmi Adame.
  - You won't get sick-T.J. Boyer.

Roberto Carlos y Julio Iglesias triunfaron en NY en 86

ROBERTO CARLOS.

JULIO IGLESIAS

NUEVA YORK, (AP)- Roberto Carlos llenó el Radio City Music Hall, Julio Iglesias hizo otro tanto con el gigantesco Madison Square Garden y el dúo Pimpinela realizó no una, sino dos funciones totalmente vendidas en el teatro de mayor capacidad de Norteamérica.

Esos y otros artistas de España y América Latina fueron este año los principales atractivos para el público de habla hispana en esta ciudad, considerada como la capital del espectáculo en Estados Unidos.

El 13 de junio, el cantante brasileño Roberto Carlos llenó el Radio City Music Hall de Nueva York con un programa movido e interesante, que incluyó canciones en español ("De repente el amor", "Símbolo sexual"), así como temas en inglés y portugués.

Los problemas del concierto de Carlos no fueron artísticos sino de organización: una huelga de músicos de la orquesta regular de del Radio City obligó al cierre de varios sectores del teatro, y un retraso considerable de la estrella en salir al escenario para iniciar el "show" puso al público de mal humor antes del comienzo del espectáculo.

No obstante, el cantante logró con su actuación superar esos problemas y fue premiado con entusiastas aplausos durante la presentación.

El primero de agosto, Julio Iglesias llenó el Madison Square Garden --el mayor estadio cubierto de Estados Unidos, con capacidad para 20.000 personas-- en un concierto en que combinó sus temas clásicos con sus éxitos más recientes.

Las melodías interpretadas por el máximo cancionero romántico español incluyeron "Abrázame", del propio Iglesias, "Begin the Beguine", de Cole Porter, y muchos de sus grandes éxitos discográficos en idioma inglés, entre ellos "Hey", "To all the Girls I've Loved Before" --el tema que hizo famoso en un dúo con Willie Nelson-- y "All of You" --el tema que cantó a dúo con Diana Ross--. El público premió sus interpretaciones con prolongados aplausos.

En entrevista con The Associated Press, el cantante anunció que terminaba por aquellos días un nuevo álbum para el sello discográfico CBS, sin título todavía, y que en los próximos días grabaría un elepé con temas del compositor español Manuel Alejandro.

Los días once y doce de abril, Lucía y Joaquín Galán compartieron el escenario del Radio City

Music Hall para lo que constituyó el debut del dúo Pimpinela en el teatro de casi 6.000 butacas.

"Teníamos programada una sola fecha", dijo a la Associated Press el representante del dúo, Ovidio García. "Pero las entradas se vendieron tan rápidamente que tuvimos que agregar otro concierto".

El escenario de Radio City se convirtió esas dos noches en un bar antiguo con mesas, un mostrador. En torno a las diversas mesas estaban sentados los clientes del bar, que gradualmente se individualizaban y contaban sus historias. Tales historias se convertían en los temas de las canciones.

El programa incluyó "A esa", "Dímelo delante de ella", "Una estúpida más" y su mayor éxito de los últimos tiempos, "Por ese hombre".

El domingo 28 de septiembre, una línea de productos de lavar patrocinó en el Madison Square Garden una "Fiesta Latina" que reunió por primera vez en un mismo escenario a los puertorriqueños Danny Rivera y Yolanda Monge, a la cubana Lisette y al mexicano José José.

Bien sea porque la entrada y salida de cuatro orquestas y cuatro cantantes, en rápida sucesión, resultó un problema logístico difícil, o porque --como se dijo en aquella ocasión-- alguna estrella había llegado demasiado tarde al teatro y había obligado a alterar súbitamente el orden del programa, lo cierto es que la "Fiesta" del Madison estuvo a punto de convertirse en un rotundo fracaso debido a retrasos, fallas técnicas e interminables pausas entre unas presentaciones y otras.

Sólo la energía de Rivera y Monge con sus ritmos tropicales, la fuerza emotiva de José José entre el público asistente salvaron la noche.

Three acts participated in the first Lip Synch contest held this past Friday at the Atlantic Club. The acts were Tina Turner, Club Nuevo and Elvis Presley.

Winner was Julia Aguilar imitating Tina Turner. She gets the right to advance to finals to be held on April 10th. Anyone is eligible to enter every Friday from now until the finals.

Anglicanos y Catolicos Discuten Unificacion De Ambas Iglesias

Londres- Anglicanos y catolicos, en su último esfuerzo por salvar sus 400 años de una división surgida en el siglo XVI, decidieron que la crucial controversia en torno a la salvación ya no debería constituir un obstáculo para llegar a la unificación de ambas iglesias.

"Hemos acordado que no es un sector en el que cualquier diferencia de interpretación aún existente... puede justificar nuestra permanente separación, dijo un acuerdo escrito difundido en esta capital por los representantes de las dos iglesias.

La declaración de 22 páginas, titulada "la Salvación y la Iglesia", es un compejo documento teológico redactado después al cabo de tres años de conversaciones de 28 miembros de la Segunda Comisión Internacional Anglicano-Católica. El documento no será debatido por ambas iglesias.

Los comisionados son clérigos y laicos de las dos iglesias, incluyendo mujeres, procedentes de 10 países, entre ellos, Australia, Barbados, Gran Bretaña, Canadá, Ghana, India, Kenia, Nigeria, Sudáfrica y Estados Unidos, y del Vaticano.

Las diferencias teológicas se remontan a los tiempos del monje alemán Martín Lutero, quien a principios del siglo XVI sostuvo la tesis de que la salvación, apartando al hombre del pecado y confiándole la felicidad eterna, es un don de Dios, justificado solamente por la fe.

La iglesia católica sostenía que el hombre podría salvarse haciendo el trabajo divino en la tierra, incluso donando dinero a la iglesia, a cambio de lo cual ésta le perdonaba los pecados. Los reformistas alegaron que la iglesia estaba con ello restringiendo y comprometiendo la soberanía divina.

Las ideas de Lutero dieron lugar a la Reforma protestante en

Alemania. La doctrina de la justificación por la fe se convirtió en un dogma del movimiento protestante que se esparció por Europa.

La declaración de la comisión dice que Lutero había reaccionado ante el creciente número de abusos existentes en la iglesia medieval, entre ellos la venta de indulgencias. La declaración rechaza la tesis de la "salvación por las buenas acciones" pero subraya que la iglesia católica nunca sostuvo esa posición.

El secretario de la comisión, Christopher Hill, dijo que "los miembros de la comisión han intentado establecer que existe una fe común compatible con las tradiciones de ambas iglesias, pero también lograr un acuerdo real".

Añadió que "durante la reforma existían diferencias fundamentales pero también hubo malentendidos idiomáticos y de definición de palabras. Cuando el Concilio de Trento se reunió en 1545 para analizar la Reforma y realizar reformas en la iglesia, se produjo el cisma".

"Ambas partes admiten ahora que la salvación es un don de Dios pero que, sin embargo, los seres humanos tienen que hacer algo cuando reciben ese don", sostuvo.

Los dirigentes de ambas iglesias esperan lograr algún tipo de unidad en el siglo XXI. La primera comisión internacional anglicano-católica pasó 20 años tratando de resolver diferencias y emitió documentos relativos a la comunión, el sacerdocio y la autoridad de la iglesia. Este último tema fue el que provocó el cisma de la iglesia de Inglaterra en 1509, cuando el rey Enrique VIII no logró la anulación papal de su divorcio y se proclamó cabeza de la Iglesia anglicana, tras desconocer la autoridad de Roma.

La MIGRA

By Jesús Mena

The moon peeked through a veil of high clouds, shedding a soft light that helped us to find the trail to the muddy river bank.

My two brothers and I were both excited and scared.

Excited -- it was our first boat ride ever.

Scared -- we were crossing the Rio Grande, entering the United States illegally.

Though we were born in this country, our parents were natives of Mexico and had no green cards.

We had left the United States a month earlier to tend to some family matters in Mexico. Now it was time to return to South Texas.

My brothers and I were too young to travel on our own. So we too had to sneak into the country like burglars in the night.

Our entry was so different from that of European immigrants who danced and screamed and jumped in ecstasy when they first saw the Statue of Liberty in New York Harbor.

Ours was a subdued, lonely arrival with only the crickets and the muffled oars breaking the silence.

My parents did not legalize their status until I was 6 years old. Until then, we led a shadowy existence, sometimes going to sleep with the sunset out of fear that our night lights would lead the migra -- the Border Patrol -- to our doorsteps.

This is not to say that our lives were all gloom. Our immigrant barrios often were alive with radios blaring vibrant Mexican polkas and playful children screaming and laughing. But the specter of the migra was ever present.

We, the youth, were trained to be on the lookout for the green-clad officials. Whenever we saw their patrol trucks, we would race down the alleys yelling, "La migra! La migra!"

Those words would turn our lively barrios into a somber cluster of dark houses about as quickly as you could blow out a candle. Even toddlers learned to be deathly still as they hid in dark corners with parents who hoped and prayed that tonight would not be their night to be deported.

La migra so plagued our lives that it even penetrated our cultural traditions. My mother's traditional blessing when I left home, for example, included a ritualistic transfer of what she considered my most prized possession -- my birth certificate.

"Always have it at your side," she said reverently. "It will protect you."

She spoke of the document in almost mystical terms. It made me feel as if I were embarking on a journey through a vampire-infested land and that she was handing me a silver crucifix toward off the green-clad demons.

It made me wonder what would happen if I showed the migra the faded blue paper. Would they shriek in horror and run hysterically from me?

Even when our parents became legal residents, our immigrant adventures continued. We became migrant farm workers. I am amazed at how families with five, six and seven children could pack clothes, food, blankets, pillows, pots and pans into raunchy old jalopies and travel thousands of miles throughout the Midwest the way we did.

Because the cars were old and likely to break down, families would travel in groups so they could help each other. You could always spot a migrant caravan by the wet diapers flapping wildly from some of the car windows.

I respect my parents for having the courage to traverse a country whose language they did not speak, crisscrossing states whose names they could not pronounce. Those of us who had learned English in school had to study the road maps to learn that when they talked of going to Arrquenso they meant the state of Arkansas, or that Mishiga was really Michigan.

This country was founded and built by immigrants. Each succeeding wave of newcomers has added to its strength and cultural diversity.

It's sad to note that these immigrants are frequently greeted with a hostility that negates the compassionate words emblazoned on the Statue of Liberty.

I think it is time we took the Lady's message to heart.

Reagan entrevistará con el Papa en su visita a EU

ASSOCIATED PRESS

MIAMI.- El presidente Ronald Reagan vendría a Miami para saludar personalmente al papa Juan Pablo II cuando el pontífice llegue aquí en septiembre para una visita dos días, según un funcionario de la arquidiócesis de Miami.

Monseñor Jude O'Doherty, que esta ayudando en coordinar el viaje, dijo que Reagan esta programando encontrarse con el papa en el aeropuerto internacional de Miami O'Doherty dijo que Reagan y el papa se reunirán en privado, pero dijo que no sabía el tema de la charla.

Un portavoz de la Casa Blanca no hizo comentario, afirmando que los viajes presidenciales son anunciados solo con una o dos semanas de anticipación por razones de seguridad.

El viaje del papa a Miami es la primera escala de una visita de nueve días por ocho ciudades de los Estados Unidos.

También durante su visita a Miami, el papa se reunirá con dirigentes judíos locales y visitará el seminario de St. John Vianney y en sudeste de Miami.

Tyson Outboxes Smith for 2 Titles

Some twenty years ago, a boxer then named Cassius Clay was asked by sports reporters to answer why he flunked a U.S. Army entrance examination that would not challenge a contemporary local high school dropout.

"I said I was the greatest," Clay answered, "not the smartest."

Last Saturday night in Las Vegas, college graduate James (Bonercrusher) Smith proved he was one of the smarter—if not the smartest—of today's heavyweights, but not the greatest.

Smith chose to stay away from Mike Tyson for forty-four minutes and fifty seconds in their unification heavyweight title fight.

As a result, Tyson won an easy 15-round decision over Smith, who did not land a single solid punch until he rocked Tyson with a straight right with ten seconds left to go in the last round.

The dull fight contrasted sharply with the last appearances of Smith and Tyson.

Smith, who entered the ring as World Boxing Council Champion, destroyed Tim Witherspoon December 12.

Tyson, who entered the ring as World Boxing Association champion, slaughtered Trevor Berbick November 22.

Smith held and circled away from Tyson most of the match.

"He didn't want to fight," Tyson said. "He didn't want to win."

"I did the best I could," Smith explained. "I tried to break his concentration."

Chicano Softball Association Meets

by Alan Boese

A recently formed association of Chicano softball players will meet Wednesday with city Parks & Recreation officials in order to see if the association can use the softball field at McKenzie state park on weekends.

The West Texas Mexican-American Softball Association will meet March 18 at the downtown Eagles Lodge to discuss their proposal with city officials, including Sam Gentry, city outdoor recreation supervisor.

Association organizer Steve Carrizales said Wednesday his group want to use the field on weekends "so our association and other non-profit organizations can play games in order to raise funds for travel and for uniforms."

"We're going to try to schedule games every weekend," Carrizales said.

Carrizales said that a possible sticking point might revolve around what percentage of concessions went to the Association and what percentage went to the city."

Gentry acknowledged he had met with "an individual who said he represented a group who wanted to rent the field."

"I'll be at the meeting Wednesday night," Gentry said.

However, Gentry said the city's answer to the Association's request was still in the planning stage and that he did not know if the city would have a yes or no answer by Wednesday.

"We're not on a time-table," Gentry said.

"I'm not at liberty to say what the city's answer will be. We're still in the recommending stage. But the issues involve concessions, insurance, who will be responsible, and a whole lot of other things."

Gentry said he would meet with members of the city's Parks and Recreation board and that board members would make the final decision.

Persons wishing additional information about the March 18 meeting should call Carrizales at 744-0024 or Lalo Ontiveroz at 762-2772.

Gerald Myers cut no nets this year.

Five SWC Teams In Tournaments — Tech Snubbed

While disrespectful comics joked that the Southwest Conference should investigate the National Collegiate Athletic Association, three SWC teams were selected to play in the 64-team NCAA Tournament and two were selected to play in the 32-team National Invitational Tournament (NIT).

For the first time in three years, Texas Tech was not invited to a post-season tournament.

The Texas Aggies, who finished eighth in the regular season SWC round-robin competition but won last week's SWC tournament, received an automatic NCAA invitation.

Conference champion TCU and Houston also got NCAA RSVPs.

The Aggies, seeded 12th, will meet Duke, seeded fifth, in the Midwest Regional playoffs Thursday afternoon in Indianapolis.

The Horned Frogs, seeded 4th in the East Regional, will face 13th-seeded Marshall Thursday evening in Charlotte.

Sunday in Atlanta, the Cougars will meet Kansas. Houston is seeded 12th in the Southeast Regionals and Kansas is seeded fifth.

In the NIT pairings, Baylor, 18-12, will visit Arkansas Little Rock, 23-9 Thursday and Arkansas, 18-13, will host Arkansas State, 21-12, Friday.

Visibly upset by his team's failure to win the post-season Southwest Conference tournament and its snubbing by both the NCAA and NIT tournament selection committees, Texas Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers uncharacteristically threatened nine returning players with loss of Scholarships if they do not try harder to improve during the off-season.

Myers first made his comments Sunday night on his television show and repeated them Monday morning at his last weekly news conference of the season.

"Sixty four and 32 is 96, and we're not among them," Myers said Sunday night, an obvious reference to the number of teams selected to appear in the NCAA and NIT tournaments.

The coach seemed especially upset by his players problems at the free throw line.

"Here are players in a major college basketball program, and they can't make free throws," Myers said Sunday. "We lost so many games this year because of free throws."

Monday, Myers said some players must improve during the off-season or lose their scholarships.

"It's going to be determined a lot by how much they improve, and if they're willing to work," Myers said Monday.

He said "We're going to have three scholarships open but we may bring in five or six players. If I have to tell those guys, 'You didn't work hard enough to hold your spot,' that's what I'm going to do."

Tech breezed past Arkansas in the SWC opener last Friday but then lost to Texas A&M.

The Raiders finished their up-and-down, in-and-out season with 15 wins and 14 losses, a disappointment to Myers, who guided Tech to SWC titles and NCAA berths in 1985 and 1986.

SPORTS WEEK 87

Almaguer Defends Golden Glove Title

Lubbock's Johnny Almaguer drew a first round bye in the annual Texas Golden Gloves Tournament that began Tuesday night in Fort Worth.

The defending state Gold Gloves lightweight champion qualified for the state tournament by winning the regional Odessa Regional Golden Gloves February 16.

Almaguer, whose amateur record to date includes 223 wins and 15 losses, learned last week that he will be heading for Australia next week, regardless of his fortunes in Fort Worth.

The Lubbock lightweight was selected by the United States Amateur Boxing Federation to compete against boxers from Australia in Perth.

Since 1985, Almaguer has won a host of regional, state and national boxing championships.

He is a member of the Lubbock Warriors boxing club and is trained by Edward Hernandez and Joseph Rosendo.

Greg Crowe was selected to 1987 SWC All-Tournament team.

Un Rayito De Luz

Que "no se puede servir a dos señores". Este dicho ya se hizo muy famoso. Todos sabemos que fue Jesucristo quien nos lo recordó. Pero es uno de los dichos que mas nos cuesta entender y aceptar; porque a esos dos señores, Cristo les dio un nombre propio, y porque somos nosotros los que no podemos servirles a los dos: Dios es uno de esos dos señores, y el otro, es el dinero. Y Cristo nos dice que no podemos estar en paz con los dos "porque vamos a amar a uno y vamos a odiar al otro, o nos vamos a apegar a uno y vamos a despreciar al otro". Nos cuesta mucho entenderle a Cristo porque, en verdad, queremos amar a Dios y al dinero y no vemos por que no podemos estar en paz con los dos. Pero Jesus nos pide que tomemos una decision: o con Uno o - con el Otro. Querer amarlos de igual manera a los dos, seria un engaño. Es claro que Jesucristo no condena el dinero; ni condena tampoco el buen uso que hagamos del dinero para vivir honradamente. Lo que si condena es ese "arreglo" que queremos hacer en la practica diciendo que amamos el dinero pero sin dejar de amar a Dios al mismo tiempo o de la misma manera. Y al decir amor, estamos hablando de Entrega, de dar toda la Preferencia, que ese sea Nuestro Dueno y Señor de nuestra vida. (Mt. 6,24-34.) Muchas veces es mas peligroso para los ricos que para los pobres, es deseo del dinero, porque los que tienen mucho dinero estan expuestos a caer en la tentacion, de amarlo, y de querer mucho mas hasta nunca estar satisfechos, y de creer que nunca - tienen bastante o suficiente. Los que no somos ricos enseñamos que tenemos amor al dinero cuando no queremos compartirlo con los que tienen menos o los que no tienen nada. Y creemos que estamos actuando Muy Bien. Decimos que "lo hemos ganado con el sudor de nuestra frente"...Y nos agarramos del señor dinero, tan fuerte, que nadie ni nada nos puede desprender de el. Y cuando leemos las palabras de Cristo: "No Pueden Servir A Dios Y Al Dinero," nos cuesta mucho creerlas. Por eso, podemos estar bien - apegados al dinero olvidandonos de los que No Tienen Nada, pero no dejamos de ir a la Iglesia y le cantamos a Dios y le decimos que le amamos. Debemos de tomar muy en serio las palabras de Cristo, y no hacernos ilusiones falsas; para no caer en la tentacion de dividir nuestro amor entre Dios y el dinero. Debemos de "buscar primero el Reino de Dios y su justicia, luego Dios nos va a dar todo lo que necesitamos". Si buscamos en serio, Primero el Reino de Dios, vamos a sentir la presencia de Dios entre nosotros; una presencia que significa cuidado amoroso, y que es mas grande que el cuidado amoroso que tiene una madre para con su hijo. (Is. 49, 14-15)

Jardines

Los Texanos gastan millones de dolares anualmente en árboles, arbustos y flores para mejorar los céspedes y jardines de sus casas. Con una planificación adecuada, muchos de esos dolares se pueden recobrar por medio de cuentas bajas de utilidad. Varios estudios indican que si se protegen las paredes de los directos rayos de sol, la temperatura de esas paredes se pueden reducir hasta un maximo de 29. Esto puede hacer una gran diferencia en el costo de electricidad de su aire acondicionado. Aunque toma años para que los árboles y arbustos crezcan, es posible disminuir el costo de sus utilidades este verano si usted planta enredaderas en enrejados y espalderas.

Cuando plantan árboles, los dueños de casas deben tambien considerar la posibilidad de reducir el costo de calefacción en el invierno. Considere sembrar árboles que pierden las hojas en los lados este, oeste y especialmente el lado sur de la casa para asi permitir que los rayos del sol lleguen a las paredes y ventanas. Por lo general, el sol es ignorado en dias frios como fuente de luz y calefacción. Haga uso de arboles de hoja perenne en el lado norte de su casa para proteger las puertas y ventanas de la brisa fria del norte.

Para más información sobre el uso eficiente de energía a través de diseños de jardines y otros medios, comuníquese con la Energy Hotline del Texas Public Utility Commission 1-800-643-SAVE.
