Simple Recipes Favorites At Cooking School

The Herald Cooking School continued to draw good crowds Wednesday. In spite of the fact that Wednesday is Big Spring's busiest club day, the number at the school was not far below Tuesday's.

Myra Oliver Duggan presided dutifully and deftly over the array of cake-making. From table to cabinet both of which were furnished by the Barrow Furniture Co., she started selecting materials and mixing them and keeping up a running commentary on the various points of cake-making.

The nicest thing about Mrs. Duggan's work, is how simple, practical and original are the recipes she gives. Nothing pleases her more than to hear women say that they have used her recipes ever since she was here year before last.

Better Cotton

The need for a finer quality in the cotton we produce in the South has been pointed out by various spokesmen of the farmer, the banker, the spinner, the buyer and the government bureau. The South's staple has deteriorated in quality over a period of years, we have been assured, and a considerable proportion of each year's crop is called untenantable. The amount of this so-called untenantable cotton runs between three and four million bales annually, one observer has declared.

In this connection it might be well to consider the case of Brazilian coffee. Brazil set out to monopolize the coffee supply of the world, with excellent results for a year or two, but with eventual complete disaster.

Dr. Charles H. Cunningham speaking before the Foreign Trade Club at Dallas this week gave a striking illustration of how the cotton farmer can work his way out of the present price dilemma.

He quoted the Dallas News, "The way to do it says Dr. Cunningham is to produce quality rather than quantity."

There is no question," said Dr. Cunningham, who has been for ten years in the foreign commerce department of the government, "but that Guatemala and certain other Central American countries are today the most prosperous of all Latin America, probably of the entire western hemisphere. The reason is that the coffee they produce is superior to that produced in Brazil."

That Guatemala coffee is bringing 15 cents a pound today while Brazilians are actually carrying millions of pounds of their surplus out to sea and dumping in there."

Low-grade cotton not only is discounted on the market, but every bale of it is counted as a bale of good cotton in the world supply and thereby influences adversely the price of the staple. Advocates of cotton control legislation have argued that much of the present world carryover of cotton is made up of untenantable if not unspinnable cotton. While it is practically worthless in the open market, its presence in the world supply actually sets the price of the finer grades, and brings them down to its own level.

California's amazing progress in the field of cooperative growing and marketing of fruits was made possible by quality, not quantity production. Something of the same method will have to be employed if the Southern cotton planter is to regain his world market.

OPINIONS OF OTHERS

'The Man Of The Hour'

From the Commonwealth:
CONSCIOUSLY or unconsciously the American people are waiting for a strong man to master the depression. As a matter of fact, he has already assumed control. He is so different from the typical spectacular and picturesque strong man that nobody has paid any attention to him. He is extremely modest and unassuming, has played no part in public affairs, is no orator and seldom speaks at all; he has never been interviewed for the newspapers, has never been photographed, has never written for the magazines, has never spoken over the radio, has never been awarded an honorary degree. The strong man in the present emergency is the American working man.

The working man has not solved the problem of the depression nor can he be expected to. But his sanity steadies the country and may easily be the only reason why we are, after a fashion, surviving the present economic crisis.

In spite of acute and widespread suffering caused by the economic stringency, there is no indication of general collapse or catastrophe. Citizens have confidence in the federal government, the state governments and generally in the local governments, although they may not respect individual politicians and the political system; the value of money remains stable; well-dressed, healthy people throng the streets and go about their business—or what is left of it; shops and department stores are open and if they do less business than usual, it cannot be noticed, by the casual observer; railway and elevated trains, street cars and buses run, we get our mail and our telegrams, telephone service is normal, policemen patrol their beats, firemen put out fires, murders and burglaries are apparently not increasing, everybody believes that prosperity will return—some time—and the teams of the American and National League strive for the pennant as merrily as ever. Our institutions undoubtedly call for reforms but it is not likely that they will be destroyed by violence.

All this is true because the working man wills that it should be so. This strong man holds us up in the palm of his hand; we depend upon him for existence. If he refused to do his work the nation would be instantly demoralized.

The working man today does not indulge in destruction, but is strong in patience, self-control and good sense.

WASHINGTON—Random notes in A Washington Day Book:

A handsome young government official in Washington whose voice is bringing him a certain degree of fame is building a reputation in the capital as "The Flying Tenor."

He is Floyd Williams, administrative assistant of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission.

During the week Williams aids in making the 200th anniversary of George Washington in 1922 a success. Nearly every Saturday afternoon he hops a plane out of Washington and flies to New York where he sings over the radio.

Williams, a brother of Miss Lola Williams, secretary to Vice President Curtis, was a member of Curtis' office personnel before going with the bicentennial commission.

While Curtis was senator from Kansas, young Williams worked in his office for six years. At one time he was clerk of the senate rules committee.

JAHNCKE'S CASE
Ernest Jahncke, that tall, erect, distinguished assistant secretary of the navy, tells this story on himself.

Mrs. Jahncke, a granddaughter of Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war under President Lincoln, has as one of her most prized possessions a walking stick which was presented to Lincoln on the battlefield at Gettysburg.

When Roosevelt was president, Jahncke was summoned to the White House for a conference with the president.

He prevailed on his wife to let him carry the Lincoln cane along and show it to the president.

Mrs. Jahncke agreed after cautioning him to treat the treasure with the greatest care.

When ushered into "T. R.'s" presence Jahncke carried the cane with him. After chatting for a while, he called the president's attention to it.

RETREAT
Teddy showed the greatest interest in it," says Jahncke. "He examined it carefully and commented on its historic value."

"It wasn't long before I realized I had made a terrible mistake. Roosevelt—I could see it in his eyes—thought that I was presenting him with that stick."

"As he talked I grew panicky. I knew that I didn't dare return to New Orleans and my wife without that cane—President or no President."

"There was but one thing to do—get out of there and get out quickly."

"So, at the first chance, I jumped up, grabbed Roosevelt's hand, seized my cane, and with a hasty 'Glad to have met you, Mr. President' I made it for the nearest exit."

"BACKFIRING" DISEASES
Backfiring is a widely used method for the control of turf fires. The conflagration is permitted to burn itself out, the rest of the country being protected by the charred ring of backfired territory. In dealing with disease epidemics we are often called on to "backfire" by encircling the disease conflagration with a ring of quarantine.

SAM
BY FREEMAN LINCOLN

He stared, "hat do you mean?"
"I mean that I must have been crazy. You and I aren't going away together—ever. We can't."

SYNOPSIS Problems crowd thickly upon Sam Slater, climaxing in the marriage of her half-brother, Nelson, and their maid. The burden of family finances falls upon Sam, but the disgrace of Nelson's escapade is felt more severely by her stepfather, Fourth Aldersea, who retained his sense of social distinction when he lost the family fortune.

Aldersea has just read Nelson's note, announcing a runaway marriage and the fact that he has taken with him money needed for a mortgage interest. Sam's need of money has made her consider the suggestion of Peak Abbott, wealthy owner of the Express where she works, that she marry him on a business basis. She loves Freddy Munson, also on the Express, and had planned to marry him this evening, but was prevented by Nelson's message. Hearing a car, Sam goes out to meet Freddy, who is angry because she did not meet him at the train.

Chapter 9
EMERGENCY CALL
SHE put her hand on his arm. "I'm sorry, Freddy," she said softly, "but I couldn't help it. Something happened."

He laughed sharply. "No doubt! I can imagine what happened. You changed your mind."

"No," she shook her head. "It wasn't that. It was something else. Something else happened."

"What?"
She looked up at him. "Please don't ask me questions, Freddy. Just trust me. Trust me, and believe that I couldn't help what happened."

"I believe you. Something in the quality of her voice made the anger fade from his face. Anxiety replaced it. "I believe you, Sam," he said gently, taking her hands. "Is there any way I can help?"

"No, Freddy. Nobody can help."

He looked at her, sensing something of what she felt. "And you can't tell me what it is?"

She shook her head wearily. "I will tomorrow, if you still want to know. I can't tonight."

"All right," he nodded thoughtfully. "I'll wait until tomorrow and I'll leave you alone now. But before I pull out, Sam, I must know that you don't feel any differently toward me."

"I don't," she said.

He smiled and squeezed her hands. "Then that's all I care about. We can be married tomorrow night, just as well as tonight."

She pulled away from him. "No, Freddy," she said calmly, "we can't."

"Yes, of course it is." He got to his feet. "I'll go to Elkton, Joan. I'll drive down there now."

"Why? It's only a chance, and you couldn't do anything, anyway."

"I'll go to Elkton," Fourth said. "I'll leave immediately."

She moved across the room. "I'll get your coat."

"No," said Sam definitely, "they won't. You and I ate through for good. I mean it."

He smiled. "I said we wouldn't argue any more tonight. I'll come back in the morning."

"All right," she nodded. "Drive carefully, Fourth. There's apt to be ice on the roads."

He went out. Sam waited until the roar of his motor had died away in the distance, and then she went to the telephone and called Peak.

"There was a buzzing sound and then Peak's voice. "Hello?"

"This is Sam, Peak. I'm sorry to bother you, but I wonder if you can come over for a little while. It's important."

Peak said quietly: "I'll be there in a minute or two."

Sam hung up the receiver. It was like Peak not to be bothered or to ask questions. There were a lot of nice things that were like Peak when you stopped to think of it.

He came into the living room without knocking a few minutes later, and he found Sam still seated by the telephone. He took one brief glance at her face and said sharply: "What's happened?"

Sam said: "Nelson is married. He ran away this afternoon and got married."

"No!" Peak whistled sharply. "Married? The young idiot! Who is the girl?"

"That's the thing. That's the really important thing, Peak. He married Martha Givens. She used to work here. She was our maid."

"Your maid?" Peak again whistled and took a half step toward her, struggling with the idea. "I can't believe it!"

"It's true," said Sam, almost indifferently. "He ran off somewhere and married her. He left a letter that I found when I came home this afternoon. You can read it if you want to. It's on the floor over there."

Peak picked up the letter. He read Nelson's scrawl carefully twice. "This is bad," he said slowly. "I suppose it's too late to do anything about it?"

She shrugged. "We don't even know where they went."

"Does Fourth know about this business?"

"He's on his way to Elkton to see me."

"I'm afraid so," Sam forced herself to walk over to Fourth and pat him on the shoulder.

"It was the girl, of course."

Cooking School Recipes From Wednesday

The following recipes were given to the visitors at the Herald Free Cooking School Wednesday afternoon by Myra Oliver Dougan: Our Lady Cake With Chocolate Frosting

- 1 cup shortening
  - 2-1/2 cups sugar
  - 4 cups Amaryllis flour
  - 5 teaspoons K C baking powder
  - 1 cup Dairyland milk
  - 1 teaspoon almond
  - 1-2 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1-4 teaspoon salt
  - 30 egg whites
- Cream Crisco. Add sifted sugar gradually, beating well. Sift and measure flour and add baking powder, then sift several times. Add flavorings to sugar and shortening. Add flour and milk alternately, beating thoroughly after each addition. Lastly, add beaten egg whites. Bake in three layers at about 375 degrees twenty to twenty five minutes.

CHOCOLATE FROSTING: Beat until very light the yolks of two eggs. Add 1-2 cups of sugar and beat. Add 1-2 cup milk and few grains of salt. Melt 4 squares of chocolate while first mixture is cooking, stirring all the while. When this boils up hard, let cook for a minute or two. Take from fire, add melted chocolate and a teaspoon of vanilla. Beat until ready to spread. Cover each layer separately and let stand a few moments before stacking cake. This will tend to keep cake from "slipping." Frost top and sides. For cake this size you need two batches of frosting, but make them separately. Will not harden, will be glossy and keeps splendidly. Decorate cake with halves of pecans.

- Ribbon Cake
- 3 cups Amaryllis flour
  - 3 teaspoons K C baking powder
  - 2-3 cup shortening
  - 1-2 cups sugar
  - 3 egg yolks
  - 1 cup Dairyland milk
  - 3 egg whites, beaten
  - 2-4 teaspoon cinnamon
  - 1-8 teaspoon cloves
  - 1-4 teaspoon mace
  - 1-4 teaspoon nutmeg
  - 1-2 tablespoons molasses
  - 1-3 cup raisins, finely cut
  - 1-3 cup figs, finely cut
- Sift flour, measure, add baking powder and sift several times. Cream Crisco well, add sugar gradually, and cream until light and fluffy. Add egg yolks and beat well. Add flour and milk alternately. Add desired flavoring to creamed shortening and sugar. Fold in egg whites. Fill 2 greased 9-inch layer pans with 2-3 of the mixture. To the remaining mixture, add spices, molasses and fruit, and pour into same sized pan. Bake layers in moderate oven (375 degrees) 25 minutes. Put layers together with currant jelly. Cover top and sides with boiled frosting that has been tinted pink. Colored cocoanut sprinkled on outside would make a very festive cake of this.

- Chocolate Nut Fudge Cake
- 1-2 cup shortening
  - 2 teaspoons K C Baking Powder
  - 3-4 cup pecan meats
  - 1-2 cups sugar
  - 1-3 cup hot water
  - 4 oz. chocolate (4 squares)
  - 3 eggs
  - 1-2 teaspoon salt
  - 1 teaspoon of vanilla
  - 1-2 cup Dairyland milk
  - 3-4 cups Amaryllis flour
- Blend Crisco, sugar and egg yolks together until very light. Dis-

Behind Amaryllis Scenes

What This Flour Mill Means When It Says That Contents Of Every Sack Is Alike

In name of the hundreds of women who are daily attending the cooking school, the Herald interviewed Mr. Smith, representative for the Amaryllis flour and learned some of the secrets of its success, which it is passing on to its readers.

This is a West Texas mill producing flour from West Texas wheat—selected wheat.

Here's how those tests are conducted:

Throughout the Amarillo wheat-field territory, the Amaryllis company keeps in touch with 18 country elevators. Through the man in charge of each of these they learn what kind of seed each farmer in his territory is planting each year, which, of course, gives them an idea of what kind of wheat to expect.

How They Test It

But they do more than that. They have the elevator manager go out into the fields when the first heads are ripe and select the heads from the best varieties and send them in to the flour laboratory. Each variety of wheat and each crop is tested separately for several things. They analyze it to obtain its protein content and they grind it into flour and bake the flour.

By the time the crops of wheat are ready for the market, the flour mills already know which crops are going to produce the highest grade of wheat to maintain the uniform standard of Amaryllis flour.

When the wheat comes in, that from the specially-selected farms, is kept separate from all others and goes into the making of this brand of flour. These mills buy from 7 to 8 millions of bushels every year, although their total capacity for making flour is only two millions. The two millions represent the flower of the wheat crop. The remainder is sold to millers all over the country from Boston to Los Angeles and because of the high protein content of all of West Texas wheat it is considered especially desirable.

Why?

Mr. Smith has a reason for this high protein content—which in every-day language means that the flour makes especially nourishing bread, etc. He believes that it is because these wheat fields are growing on virgin soil—soil which has never before been planted. As a rule crops are always stronger and better on such land.

To go back to the laboratory, the Amaryllis maintains its uniformity by this constant re-checking from year to year. That is why housewives find that every sack of Amaryllis flour is alike. One sack does not differ from the other.

We also asked Mr. Smith about the name. We thought it was connected with the city of Amarillo. Well, it is and it isn't. It just happened that names of flowers were in vogue at the time this flower was named and the mill thought of this lily and—what better flower name could an Amarillo mill select?

Blended Flours Have Finer Flavor

Mrs. Dougan put her stamp of approval on the flour in this private conference by saying that the best flour for general home baking was a blended flour from both soft and hard wheat. It gives a finer flavor and good cooks require it, who know flour. This is one of the reasons she likes Amaryllis, because it is a blended flour.

Practically all grocers in town carry the flour. It is being selected for the pie and cake contest which the Lone Star Lodge to the B. of R. T. will put on tomorrow. Cooks of course will have to try it out for themselves; but people who test their flour by sampling what is made from it will have a good chance to test Amaryllis Friday and Saturday by purchasing a pie or a cake from B. of R. T. women.

Samples of Amaryllis are also being given away every day at the Herald Cooking School.

Mrs. Harry Hurt Hostess To The Pioneer Members

Mrs. Harry Hurt was hostess for the Pioneer Bridge Club Wednesday morning at her home, running up the hour so that the members could attend the Herald Cooking School.

Mrs. Robert Middleton was the only guest. Mrs. Bernard Fisher made high score.

Delicious refreshments were served to Mrs. Middleton and the following members, Mmes. C. W. Cunningham, John Clarke, E. O. Ellington, Albert Fisher, Bernard Fisher, Joye Fisher, Des Hilliard, W. W. Inkman, R. Homer McNew, Shine Phillips and R. C. Strain.

Mrs. McNew will be the next hostess.

Mrs. Dougan's Uncle Killed Mexican Lion On Site of Midland

A number of Big Spring people became quite excited Wednesday when they discovered that this is not Myra Oliver Dougan's second visit to Big Spring, as everyone had been thinking.

Her first visit was when she was an infant of about one year. Naturally she does not remember it. But there are several men here who recall her father, E. D. Oliver, when he was ticket agent for the T.&P. railroad.

Mrs. Dougan says that her ideas of West Texas, up to these last two visits of hers, have been gleaned from the wild and woolly tales told by her father and her uncle. Her uncle still wears, she says, a Shriner pin made from the claws of a Mexican lion which he killed on the spot where the Midland railway station now is. Little did he dream then that there would ever be enough people living in this country to warrant his niece's coming out to conduct a cooking school.

Mrs. Jess Phillips Is Hostess to The '31 Club Members

Mrs. Jess Phillips entertained the '31 Bridge Club at her home at the McDonald apartments. Mrs. Leslie D. Martin made high score and Mrs. B. P. Franklin second high.

Mrs. Martin is a new member of the club.

Refreshments were served to the following: Mmes. A. M. Ripps, J. E. Hammond, R. S. McDonald, Martin Franklin, James Lee, and Opal Greene.

Mrs. Hammond will be the next hostess.

Informal Fish Fry Given By Mr. And Mrs. Bud Brown

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Brown invited a group of friends in last night for an informal fish fry, to help them eat the last of the sixty-two pound catfish which Mr. Brown caught last week.

The table was spread in the yard and the guests took part in everything from the frying to the entertainment after the supper. John H. and Eddy Ray Lees furnished a large part of the fun with their fancy dancing stunts.

Those present included Mmes. Willard Sullivan, Seth Parsons, Misses Bird and Pyrie Bradshaw.

Ailyn Bunker, Florence Bostick, Lees, Eddy Ray, John H. and the Bonnie Kirby, Mr. and Mrs. Harry baby.

Mrs. Myra Oliver Dougan, Home Economist in charge of the School, has chosen the Hotpoint Automatic Electric Range as the cooking medium for each of her daily lectures.

BUY A CONTEST CAKE OR PIE!

And Help The Convention Fund Of The Ladies Auxiliary of the Brotherhood of RAILWAY TRAINMEN

In the interest of raising the substantial sum needed for the entertainment of delegates and visitors to the State Convention of the organization, to be held in Big Spring this month, the local Ladies' Auxiliary to the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen is sponsoring this contest. In addition to the cakes and pies entered by the members of the Ladies' Auxiliary, scores of other contestants are expected to try for one of the handsome prizes, and also help this convention fund.

Sale Starts After Cooking School

You may purchase your choice of the contest cakes and pies Friday afternoon. The sale starts immediately after the cooking lecture. Prices will be quite reasonable; and you will be helping the convention fund to the extent of the entire amount of your purchase. Cakes and pies remaining unsold will be on display and sale Saturday at Handy-Audy Store.

Any Kind of Cake or Pie You Want!

Made by the finest cooks of Big Spring and vicinity—with AMARYLLIS, the Southwest's finest flour—they're bound to be good! There's a wide selection, but they'll go mighty fast. Come early and get your favorite kind of cake or pie, or both—and do your part to aid the convention fund, which represents a particularly urgent and worthy cause at this time.

Press Conference With Sterling Changes Things

AUSTIN, Oct. 1.—Gov. Ross Sterling's press conference Tuesday, the day that had been set for the legislature to adjourn, turned out to be the historic moment at which the state of Texas was committed to a definite public policy, when it was decided whether the legislature would continue its session, allow another to be called, or force the drilling of river bed oil wells in East Texas by Gov. Sterling for the benefit of the state.

During the few moments the newspapermen were present, the policy of pushing through the riverbed development bill, the executive attitude on the tax penalty moratorium, and on the Brooks bill to assume county bond debts took form and found expression.

The state has 20,000,000 barrels of oil that its school fund owns under the beds of streams in East Texas," Gov. Sterling said.
