Will Rogers Caught By Camera At Airport Here

When Will Rogers, world-famous humorist, actor and philanthropist, stopped 20 minutes at Big Spring airport Thursday on the final leg of his trip from his California home to Niagara and return, the camera caught him in these characteristic poses. At the left, in the yanking picture (he really was saying he wouldn't talk but he did and how) he is advancing from the American Airways ship toward a large crowd held behind a barrier. In the center, Will, hat and eyes cocked, is letting the folks about his trip, the picture he is to begin right away and other things that made 'em laugh. At the right, W. T. Strang Jr., is attempting to get Will to take a "West Texas nightgale," a baby o'possum, with him to Beverly Hills. Will wouldn't take it away from his mother and when the camera clicked was sort of shaking the "presenters" "jump the rails" in his welcoming remarks, with his own wisecracks. Big Spring's foremost humorist, Mr. Strang, however, succeeded in getting off of his own "through the Rogers barrier."

Believes Tax Sources Now Satisfy Need

Texas Expert Points Out Substitutes For New State Levies.

AUSTIN, May 2 (INS)—No further tax sources are needed by the state to meet its deficiencies, in the opinion of John T. Smith, veteran tax expert and publisher of the Texas Tax Journal of Austin.

In the current issue of his magazine, Smith points out what steps he believes the state should take in lieu of passing further tax measures. Some of these are:

Investigation into the amount of interest in delinquent bonds on the $8 million dollar school fund held by the permanent school fund.

Efforts to collect delinquent interest on school land that has been sold and is now unpatented.

Enactment of the bill to raise the scholastic census age from 6 years to 7 years.

Investigation into whether school money spent to maintain buses used by schools.

Effort to ascertain the number of escheated estates and their value, which is due to the school fund.

His suggestions were concerned principally with schools because a threatened shortage in the school fund has led to current efforts of the legislature to find new revenue sources.

Many of the national resources and business interests, he declares, are paying high taxes, including ad valorem, gross receipts and franchise. Set there seems to be a continuous effort on the part of many to create the impression that these interests pay no taxes, while no one seems to make any effort to tax property now escaping taxation altogether.

Flights Countries

The states have fought counties for the last two years in the collection of delinquent taxes and in spite of that fact, these special collectors have assisted very materially in keeping the state on a cash basis, but the state is about to win the state.

Chapter 35 IN GAULDAN AGAIN

SAVE for the sound of our footsteps, all was as silent as the grave, and within about a couple of hours of John Wayne St. Clair's entry into the town of Gaoldan.

Here were clothes, food, drink, as well as money, and a high-class automobile.

I had been very badly injured, and I was very tired.

It was a strange thing that I did not know what day it was.

No actor on any stage ever gave a finer performance than did William H. Williams in the part of a drunken British Officer, the diplomatist Colonel Campbell, self-interested for cure, in a certain Nursing-Home of which I shall tell later.

I personally did my best to give them reason to bless the day whereon they made the decision.

Upton Seat Location Fight Centers Around County Clerk Jackson

RANKIN, Texas, May 2 (AP)—The battle over the location of the Upton county courthouse centers around County Clerk T. H. Jackson, who was called upon Wednesday to decide between two election counts, that of County Judge Maburn Harris, favoring McCamey, and that of the county commission, favoring Rankin.

A short time later, Pearce Rankin, R. E. Windham and David Eldon canvassed the retina, decided the McCamey votes were irregular and threw out the entire box. This defeated removal by a large majority, the county found itself with two election counts this week.

Harris made a personal count, claiming for removal by a large majority. He registered 808 of the 902 votes cast for removal and 426 for leaving it at Rankin.

The commission's alleged irregularities in the box in be: 1. Incomplete returns, 2. Lack of list of mutilated ballots, 3. Broken seal on the box containing the ballots, 4. Discrepancies in the total vote.

This the courthouse situation is now surrounded by a vote, applying solely favoring the change from McCamey to Rankin, an injunction restraining such procedure and two counts, one of which has been held illegal.

The county clerk based his action on investigation of the district attorney, which discloses no authority for accepting the personal canvass of election returns by the county judge only.

Panhandle Wheat Crop Expected To Amount To 45,000,000 Bushels

AMARILLO, May 2 (AP)—The Amarillo News-Globe today says the Panhandle's 1931 wheat crop is estimated at 45,000,000 bushels, the figures being based on interviews with prominent grain men of the territory.

Every section of the wheat area has reported an abundance of moisture during the week past and no part of the area has suffered for rain since the crop was planted last fall, the paper says. Late snows put the wheat in good condition, and recent rains are said to have assured a good yield, except for some unforeseen catastrophes.

The acreage is said to be the largest ever sown in the Panhandle, and is estimated at 2,000,000 acres. Thirty-five per cent of the increase of the more than 400,000 acres over last year is credited to Moore and Sherman counties, whose new land is being cultivated. Much of the increase also is due to sowings for winter pasture.

The estimated value of the crop was placed at $16,000,000 on the basis of a price of 40 cents a bushel, an average of predictions made by the grain men interviewed. Early wheat was damaged in some localities by the late March freezes. Estimates of the damage range from 10 to 50 per cent, but it is generally accepted that the loss from this source will be small. The Panhandle produced 30,000,000 bushels last year. The record crop was 42 million bushels in 1923 when conditions were not so favorable and the acreage was smaller, the estimate said.

Zillah Mae Ford Crowned Queen Of High School May Fete

Three Hundred High School Girls Take Part In Lovely Pageant Honoring Queen

Coronation Ceremonies Followed by Colorful and Original Pantomimes Ending in Three Maypole Dances

BY O. R. P.

A beautiful custom originated Friday evening when, in the High School auditorium, the pupils of the Big Spring high school crowned their May queen and spent the evening in a May fete of spring dances and sports review, before her majesty.

Zillah Mae Ford was the pretty and popular queen, whose identity was kept a secret until the programs were distributed just before the ceremonies commenced.

She and her princesses were selected by a vote of the faculty as representative Senior girls. Miss Kitty Wingo was the faculty member responsible for most of the hard work behind the scenes and the planning beforehand.

The lower and upper halls of the high school building were crowded with eager parents and impatient school children almost an hour before the doors were opened. The chairs of the auditorium, which in reality, nothing more than a gymnasium, were arranged around the walls of the room with the space in the center devoted to the performers. The auditorium was far too small to hold the crowd. It is hoped that some arrangement can be made for the May Fete, if it does become an annual custom, to be held out of doors. It would be a lovely and colorful picture and would become an increasingly popular attraction.

Informal Variety

The charm of the Friday evening's performance lay partly in its informality. The numbers consisted of a variety of pastiches, would have been monotonous if they had remained on the same level, either of beauty, dignity or attractiveness. They did not and the audience had no chance to grow tired before the end.

The ballad of Robin Hood in his Sherwood Forest of four easily-upset trees, was improved by the obvious fun of the players in singing it. The solemnity of the Indian Song of 1820 was enhanced by the lowered lights and the dignity of the players, in addition to the beautiful rendering of "By The Waters of Minnetonka," by Pauline Melton.

Whether the best number on the program was the Scotch Highland Ring of the Military Buff, was hard to decide. The dancing in both was excellent and above the average of the evening. It was plain to see, also, that the physical education class had had the most practice of any group on the floor. Its drill movements had an army-like precision.

His highness, the Archbishop, William Clayton of the House of Blankenship, was the only uncomfortable-looking member of the cast. He stuck it out, for the honor of the school, though he will probably never get as much sympathy as he deserves.

The little flower girls, Ruby Joyce and Dixie Ann Blankenship, De Lya Davenport and Camille Inkman, were the most original performers of the evening. Their purpose was more to be seen than to see, but they lost no opportunity in staking up the parents as they proceeded leisurely down the auditorium.

Of all the difficult roles well performed, we want to give credit to the trainbearers, Anna Bell Edwards, Robbie Louise Piner, Jaggie Todd, Josephine Timmons, Jett Edwards, Louise Ann Bennett, Mary Gene Lee, Lorena Brooks and Mary Nell Edwards. Handling well one of these heavy trains without separating it from the queen and without falling to properly display it to all onlookers speaks well for the cooperation of these youngsters. The gracious queen also showed poise and tact that will be of value to her in the future, in her dealings with her trainbearers.

Queen's Costume
The queen was beautifully dressed in a sea-green costume, symbolic of spring, with slippers to match. Her train, of chiffon embroidered with sequins in a large fish design of soft harmonizing colors, was lent for the occasion by Mrs. Wilburn Barcus, who wore it as the queen of the Cotton Palace in Waco. The queen's crown was a lovely and becoming headpiece of white and green rhinestones, eggs.

Southern Review
The spring issue of this quarterly is made more attractive with pen and ink drawings, the frontispiece being a sketch of Sam Houston's home in Independence. The other illustrations represent stage settings for Kathleen Witherpoon's prize-winning play, "Jigs."

The permission to reprint the story of "Jigs" is full provided "The Southwest Review" with a headline or that is no small distinction in itself. Flora Lowrey's introduction on the work of the Dallas negro players give the play a background in the Southwest that makes it vivid reading.

The contents of this number have a wide range—Bowie knives to architecture. Bowie knives speak for themselves, unless one is rather curious as to their origin, in which case we refer him to this article. The articles of architecture are strictly native to the Southwest and therefore strictly out of the ordinary. They grew out of an article "An Indigenous Architecture" by David R. Williams, a Dallas architect, published in this magazine several months ago.

Adjournment Date Brought Before House

AUSTIN, May 2. (AP)—As legislators keep hammering away at their work they occasionally glance at the calendar and wonder when they will be able to quit and go home.

The 120-day period ends May 12, which is near at hand—too near to suit a number of the lawmakers. Representative Anderson of San Antonio offered a resolution to provide for adjournment on that day. He called it up last Tuesday but a majority of his colleagues voted to postpone action until Monday.

It was not long enough, however, for two counter propositions to be offered. Representative Savage of Dallas suggested adjournment May 16. Representative Johnson of Carrizo Springs recommended that May 22 be fixed as quitting time.

Regardless of what the house does, the senate must agree to it in order for it to be effective.

Representative Satterwhite of Odessa made the motion to postpone the vote on the adjournment resolution until Monday. Satterwhite said he was hopeful the legislature could quit on May 12, but the date depended to a large extent on progress this week.

Proponents of Anderson's resolution stated that when the people voted in November to increase the legislative session from 60 to 120 days, they intended for the legislature to wind up its business in the time. Others wanted to know whether the people want their lawmakers down here for 120 days or "to do anything."

Saves remarked the legislature could stay in session until the fourth of July and still have work left to do. "The people do not want us to stay here that long, however," they stated.

Others said the people already were tired of the legislature and the wheels of legislation could not turn any more to suit them.

The progress of the appropriations and perhaps the revenue bills may determine the quitting date. The bills making appropriations for state schools, elementary institutions, and departments must be passed and some central additional revenue is necessary for the Members of the Texas committee said special representatives from California, Ohio, Kansas and Oklahoma had met in Oklahoma City and drawn up a code which should be presented to the Texas committee Monday's meeting. Texas committeemen said that they expected most of Monday's meeting to be devoted to submission and consideration of working plans to be followed on the conservation program.

Players Meet Adventure In Filming Of 'Trader Horn'

Result Great Contribution To the Screen

Company Battles Jungles For Weeks to Bring Picture Home

In bridging "Trader Horn," a popular story of African adventure, to the talking screen, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer recruited what is said to have been the biggest photographic expedition ever to penetrate Africa to film a narrative motion picture.

The troupe of forty odd players, staff officials and technicians that sailed from New York for Africa were under the leadership of Director W. S. Van Dyke, Harry Carey, Edwin Booth, Duncan Renaldo, Olive Golden and the technical staff of the picture coached Mombasa, British North Africa, after an arduous journey of twenty-five days. There the film brigade joined an advance unit, and made preparations to invade the jungle.

It is difficult, perhaps, for the average person to realize the difficulties confronting the Van Dyke party in obtaining scenes to be incorporated in this picture which will be shown to Ritz audiences today, Monday and Tuesday.

Eighty Tons of Equipment

In the first place more than eighty tons of equipment had to be moved through a territory that was at times almost impenetrable. The camera adventurers took with them a complete miniature studio, with every facility for housing and feeding the troops, and the most up-to-date sound recording apparatus.

Among the accessories carried by the Van Dyke party into the heart of Africa were a nine-ton portable generator, truck, an endless refrigerator, a complete wireless and radio outfit, and more than several thousand individual items that ranged from chicken wire and cosmetics to hares' exterminator. Members of the expedition were inoculated against fever and sleeping sickness before starting from Mombasa Island toward Nairobi, and a British staff physician accompanied the party.

When the "Trader Horn" brigade had reached Nairobi and set up camp there to make camera sequences the adventure had barely begun. Diplomatic negotiations with government officials—Belgian, English, French—had to be completed.

Hardships Begin

Interpreters, native boys, hunters and divers had to be obtained and further preparations made to protect the health and well-being of the travelers. Travel had been comparatively easy so far, but now it was necessary to dismount the railroad in favor of ox-carts and native wagon boys and foot trails.

Director Van Dyke, who had led his "The Pagan" and "White Shadows in the South Seas" in the south Pacific, was familiar with some of the difficulties and dangers of the venture, but none that he had experienced compared with those prevailing in east central Africa.

From Nairobi and the shores of Lake Victoria the "Trader Horn" adventurers struck out for the dangerous fastnesses of Tanganyika Territory, with its heavy jungles of a tropical climate. From there the "Trader Horn" party traveled to the wildest parts of the United Kingdom and to the heart of the Belgian Congo, with its famous

'The Bat Whispers' Coming To Ritz Friday and Saturday

Acting in 'The Bat Whispers,' Robert West's mystery melodrama for United Artists, coming to the Ritz theatre Friday and Saturday, was like being initiated into a secret society, according to Chester Morris featured player.

The entire subplot of the thriller depends in its secrecy. West therefore, asked every member of the cast to take an oath not to reveal "The Bat" identity or what he whispered. As a further precaution the climax of the picture was neither recorded in the script of the working synopsis prepared for advertising the picture.

None of the hundreds of workmen who built the set knew what they were for. The stages on which the filming was done were kept under lock and key. Visitors were barred. Even employees at United Artists studios were denied admission.

All the filming was done at night after the studio gates had been locked.

The significance of various conditions in the plot and of earlier things had never been known only to West. Even the cameramen were not taken into his confidence.

According to all the players in the cast, acting in the production was a stirring adventure. The cast includes Una Merkel, Grayce Hampton, Maude Eburne, Charles Dow Clark, Ben Bard, Gustav Von Seyffertitz, Spencer Charters, William Bakewell, S. E. Jennings and Hugh Huntley.

Those who see the picture are requested to keep the secret of "The Bat Whispers" even from their closest friends. West believes they'll enjoy it more if they have to find out for themselves.

Norma Talmadge Has Title Role In Queen Picture

When a king throws a wild party in Hollywood it means work for everyone who attends.

The guests who least mind luxurious surroundings get paid for it. At United Artists studios several hundred players in gorgeous costumes spent three days pretending to have a good time for the benefit of a battery of cameras.

The scene revealed a magnificent fête given by King Louis XV of France in honor of his lady love, Comtesse Du Barry. Norma Talmadge portrays "Du Barry, Woman of Passion," the title role, and William Farnum, looking by contract. The picture is to be shown at the Queen theatre Wednesday and Thursday.

The background occupied an entire giant stage, showing the side of a palace, vast gardens, marble fountains and a decorative moat filled with plants and water lilies. A dozen fight shops were stripped to provide for the huge gowns.

William Cameron Menzies, supervising art director, designed the setting for the fête.

Miss Talmadge's starring picture, a Sam Taylor production, has a strong supporting cast, including Conrad Nagel, William Farnum, Ulrich Haupt, Hobart Bosworth, Edgar Norton, Tom Ricketts, Allan Shipway, E. Alyn Warren, Edwin Maxwell, Henry Kolker, Cissy

ZOOMING CAMERA USED FOR 'THE BAT WHISPERS'

The "zoom" shot has been perfected for talking pictures.

It is a contrivance that sends a heavy camera whizzing from a long shot to a close-up as though released by a trigger.

The invention is credited to Charles Cline, a technical man at United Artists studios. It was sponsored and paid for by Roland West, producer-director, who needed it for only a single brief scene in his production, "The Bat Whispers," featuring Chester Morris, coming to the Ritz theatre.

Sequel to 'Beau Geste' Has Full Supply of Great Drama

The curtain will be raised Wednesday at the Ritz theatre on the long-awaited sequel in talk to Herbert Brenson's silent classic, "Beau Geste." That grand masterpiece of desert drama, forerunner of all the hot, fevered screen plays stirring talking production, "Beau Ideal," sequel to "Beau Geste," original tale of the Geste brothers' original tale of the Geste brothers.

Follows Story of Geste
"Beau Ideal" is a follow-up to "Beau Geste." You will recall that in "Beau Geste" one of the Geste brothers escaped the massacre of the Legion troops. His fate was left in doubt at the close of the picture. In retrospect, we are told in "Beau Ideal" that this brother returned to England and to his sweetheart Isabel Brandon; that he was captured, tried and sentenced to the Penal Battalion of the Foreign Legion for the murder of a brutal sergeant.

Ralph Forbes plays this role as he did in "Beau Geste." The story continues in "Beau Ideal" with an American boy, Tom Madison, who falls in love with Isabel and persuades to join the Legion to find John Geste, because of his love. Madison has himself sentenced to the Penal Battalion on the chance that he may encounter John and bring home a happy message. He endures through this program after a series of arduous and magnificent blood-soaked scenes that guarantee to hold your interest.

Thrills and Genuine Drama
None can deny its thrilling, its sweeping drama and genuine romance. Mr. Brenson is a past master at the art of delineating the desert and its heroic warriors, the Arabs and the French Foreign Legion. With the vast background of "Beau Geste" to draw on, and a superlative story in its successful "Beau Ideal," he has fashioned a knowingly dramatic tale of the Foreign Legion and its numbers. Nevertheless it is keeping with Mr. Brenson's skill that this is not merely a Foreign Legion film. The director of "The Case of Sergeant Griseh," "Lumina," and other screen masterpieces, is too shrewd and careful of screen material for that. "Beau Ideal" is stirring stuff. It is a hash, and its story brings

Surprise Ending
A surprise ending, which, of course, it would be unfair to divulge here, makes of "Beau Ideal" a fine entertainment and a superior successor to the classic "Beau Geste." By all means don't miss "Beau Ideal" if you liked "Beau Geste."

At the bottom Roland West in "The Bat Whispers," "Beau Ideal" will show Wednesday and Thursday and "The Bat Whispers" Friday and Saturday.

motion picture sound film were thought taken from the jungle of Africa. In the film, the jungle of level, wetted scenes and wild beasts the cinema squares always played the scenes of its original scene about everything that captured the attention of the audience. A terrific scene shows how the blood that followed away from the "Bat Whispers" of the scene.

Film World
"Beau Ideal" is a magnificent rush for the world motion picture film, and now, though some of the scenes were lost, in the eyes, not a single ray of hope film was destroyed.

The picture, told in the widely-veiled narrative of African wilds by Richard Lewis and Alan Hays, has a full, exciting and original detail of the romance of the desert. The picture is the death of the desert and the final attempt of a contract to capture the power of a great cross-section of the narrow escape of the "Beau Ideal" the picture. Don't miss the chance to see a great picture and numerous other beautiful scenes bring a new thrill to the picture screen.

Charles Delancy
Versatile Player

Charles Delancy's screen work, who fought his way from the rank to the now being called of the most popular actor on the screen today. His first important part in some of the smaller pictures he has advanced until today he is picked as the central character in that thrilling story of the desert, "Beau Ideal" and "Beau Geste."

Delancy has had very good handlers who first featured him in a series of actor pictures. He next advanced to a starring part in pictures released by Republic Pictures. Each picture has been better than the last, which in turn has built for him a tremendous following which places him at the front rank today.

His latest starring picture, "The Lonesome Trail," comes to the Ritz theatre on Friday for a two days engagement. Be sure and see this popular young favorite in his latest all-talking picture.

Believe It or Not!

-this puts it all over the cigarette

BLINDFOLD

TEST!

The expert smoker, who is able to tell the identity of a cigarette while blindfolded, has at his command the two senses one would deem most essential in checking tobaccos.

The housewife, who deliberately blindfolds herself by listening seriously to a salesman's claims of "just as good," has to be able to tell the flavor of a coffee by the feel of the can in which it is contained; the quality of a face cream by the texture of its label; and the purity of a pharmaceutical by the corrugations in the container top.

In the case of the cigarette test, where both taste and smell are at the tester's assistance, the percentage of error runs rather high. In case of error no one suffers anything other than a slight chagrin.

In the case of the housewife, she not only has to pay for the materials used in the test, but has to use them after she has made her blindfolded selection, to see whether or not she has received her money's worth.

In the case of the cigarette tester, the tobacco companies are willing and eager to bear all costs. There is nothing at stake, and it is freely admitted that the selection could be more easily made if the tester had his eyes wide open and could read the labels.

In the case of the shopper, she pays all expenses herself; scorns the use of eye-sight to recognize standard labels and has to pay for, carry home and use the product foisted upon her before she has a recognition of her selection.

Do not permit any salesman to deliberately blindfold you in your purchasing by his idle claims of "just as good and cheaper." If it's not more than "just as good," why not stay with your original selection? How can you tell whether or not it is cheaper, if you do not know what it is, how it is made or who made it?

Garden Setting
When the doors were opened, the guests of the evening found the auditorium stage transformed into a spring garden scene with trellises of roses, garden furniture, chairs and a bench in the center for her majesty, the May Queen. The steps leading to it were covered with grass cloth and on these the princesses stood until the queen arrived and there they were seated.

The ELIZABETH ARDEN method— which keeps your skin healthy— will keep it lovely too

No cream transforms the skin. But scientific care, which encourages swift circulation through the tissues and keeps the skin cells vividly healthy, will make your skin clear, soft and firm. This is the foundation of the Elizabeth Arden method. Cleansing the skin with Elizabeth Arden's Venetian Creaming Cream—removes impurities which clog the pores and cause blackheads. Bright patting with Arden's Skin Tonic and Special Astringent—tones the skin and firms the contours. Nourishing—with Orange Skin Food or the delicate Veolia Cream—fills out the skin cells and so corrects lines and wrinkles. Follow this same method in the care of your skin at home.
