Clinton Kennedy, County Supervisor for the local Farmers' Home Administration, has issued statistics that show nearly a 300 percent increase in total loan funds granted to Bailey County residents since the 1975-1976 fiscal year. $8,101,660 was loaned by the administration in 1977-1978

Greatest increase in the amount loaned in a particular category was in the area of emergency farm loans. This type of loan is granted to farmers who have suffered crop production losses because of natural disasters. During the last two years, the total loaned by the FmHA for this type of loss has climbed from $688,900 in 1976 to $4,781,000 to May 31 of this year.

Farmer's Home Administration offers over thirty types of loans to individuals who qualify for financial assistance. Among the most frequently used loans in Bailey County are those granted for operating expenses for farm equipment, home operation, livestock, feed, fertilizer and seed. This type of loan is also granted to farmers who want to establish nonfarm enterprises that will supplement farm irrigation systems. This type of loan is in much greater demand this year than during the last two fiscal years. In 1976-1977, $85,000 was loaned for soil and purchase of circular sprinkler water development purposes. To date this year, $897,540 has been granted in loans. Rural housing loans for modest homes containing 1200 to 1300 square feet are available to the individual family whose income qualifies them for such assistance. This type of loan is also made for the construction of apartment units.

Another kind of loan is that available for labor housing. A 48-unit housing complex is now under construction in east Muleshoe. Costs for this project were financed under the labor housing provision of the Farmers' Home Administration. $90,000 in loan funds were allocated by the FmHA and $810,000 came from a federal government grant in 1976 making the total cost $900,000. Tushi Buildings, Inc., a Lubbock contractor, is in charge of the project and is being assisted by local sub-contractors. A Lubbock architec-

Wet Weather Brings Some Cotton Blight

Spencer Tanksley, Bailey County Extension agent, reports that wet-weather cotton blight is damaging a large number of cotton acres after up to three weeks of rainy, sunless weather in Bailey County. The blight is caused by a fungus disease technically referred to as ascochyta gossypii. It is a seed-borne disease which accounts for its widespread distribution.

Symptoms of Ascochyta gossypii are small, round, brownish spots on the seed leaves and small true leaves of the seedlings. At the later stages of growth, spots on the leaves become more numerous and ash-colored. Brownish, elongated cankers may also develope on

In conferring with Dr. James Supak, area Cotton specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Tanksley learned that control of the blight can be best exercised by plowing and aereating the soil a-Recent turbulent weather has caused water, sand and hail damage that may convince more Bailey County farmers to seek assistance from the ASCS (soil conservation service) crop disaster funds this year than in most years since the dust bowl of the 1970's. Terry Hill, director of the County Executive Director of ASCS reports that payment rates for such disasters based on several factors including previous acre-income, extent of damage and appraised land value will bring the weatherbeaten farmer to normal income if he has been severely enough affected by a natural weather disaster. REPLACEMENT HEIFERS FOR EARLY CALVING--Select replacement heifers that will calve early their first year and reproduce regularly, advises a livestock specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Heifers that calve early normally have fewer rebreeding problems, produce more calves during their lifetimes, and wean more pounds of calf per year than late-calving cows. To calve near two years of age, a heifer will have to reach puberty by 13 to 16 months. Heifers of most breeds will reach puberty by this age provided they have sufficient weight.

Soda Lake Archaelogical "Dig" Shows Activity From 1800's

Eddie Guffee knows where he is digging-the only problem is, he doesn't know what he is digging!! The Wayland Baptist College archaelogical curator for the school's Llano Estacado Museum is near Earth these days working under a grant from the Texas Historical Foundation.

His latest dig is still too shallow because of recent heavy rains which have hampered operations. The ruins he is seeking to excavate have already yielded artifacts showing activity in the 1870's at the site.

But at the present, he says there are more questions than answers. "I just don't know what I am digging.

Eventually, he hopes to separate folklore from fact. He wants to know what really happened in Lamb County at the site which may have housed early settlers, Army troops, cowboys herding their cattle, or the somewhat mysterious Comancheros, and maybe all of them at one time or another in the development of this part of the Texas Panhandle.

Guffee first looked at the project as another Spanish-Mexican site. Then, he considered it a possible Comanchero site.

One apparent problem already is the discovery of a large, stone corral. "It would be out of place if this is a Comanchero site.

Guffee says he also found what appears to be a room, but cannot find a corner. The corner is the traditional starting place for excavation

"Ole timers in the area say it was an Army picket post," explained Guffee. "However, there were no known picket posts in these sand hills.

He seems as puzzled at this point, perhaps, as did early settlers who found various surfaced objects in the area through the last century. "It is very possible that what these settlers took with them is what I need at this point."

Identification of the rock ruins of Soda Lakes as they are now called in Texas' western Lamb County is Guffee's primary goal. Three sand dunes with rock ruins may hold the key and unlock the secrets so long protected by Mother Nature.

"There are some positive things we do know," added Guffee who is making a reputation for himself as a Texas archaeologist with the rediscovery last year of the Plainview Killsite and the early Merrill-Taylor excavation near Quitaque and the subsequent published re-

His crew is "a bit short at this time" since most crews have been picked by other colleges and universities long before now. He explained that the number of qualified helpers

Such phrases as "zeroing out the cotton acreage" and "counting the skips" can mean money in the pocket for a farmer whose land has been in the wrong place when the hailstones, winds, rain or flood land was passed out. Diggings last week before the rains found Guffee's crew "about six, or eight centimeters deep at one point in the corral wall". His work has already uncovered a buffalo tooth, a piece of brass with a patented 1878 date, and two, .45 long Colt cartridges.

Guffee explained that archaeologists know that "these cartridges were manufactured in 1872, issued to the Army a year later, and, finally, in 1875, they were made available to civilians.'

The Debt

The national debt, which Mr. Carter finally seems to have become concerned about, cannot continue to increase at the rate of recent years. Big deficits which increase it, and which have come one after another in recent years, are the cause of today's inflation, the weak dollar and spiraling wage and price levels.

Here is the record how politicians have escalated the debt in very recent years: Until World War II, the total U.S. debt was under $50 billions. Understandably, huge spending during the war upped it to $269 billions.

An effort was made after the war to reduce it (no one even suggests this today) and by 1950 it had been reduced to $256,000,000,000. Then it began to climb again though not rapidly. By 1955 it was $274 billions, by 1960 $291, by 1965 $323, by 1970 $383. The huge, most irresponsible increases, occurred in this decade.

From 1970's $383 billion, the debt has zoomed to about $750,000,000,000 today--about doubled in less than a decade. The rate of increase in the last two or three years has been the biggest in history. Obviously, foreign governments and banks see this undisciplined behavior by U.S. politicians and the government in Washington as irresponsible.

Until there's a President and a Congress which exhibits the intestional fortitude to live within the nation's means; that is, balance the budget--which taxpayers must do or perhaps go to jail, serious economic trouble and inflation will persist, and rob every American of the fruit of his labor.

It's late in a critical situation; our politicians must now bite the bullet and spend only what the country has--and not condemn the next generation to the payment of this generation's excesses.

Defense Contracts

With defense spending absorbing some $120 billions annually, the largest single federal expense, more careful attention should be paid to the way defense contracts are let.

The late President Eisenhower warned, in his farewell speech to the American people, about the cozy relationship between defense contractors and the Pentagon, And, while some officers are currently barred from intimate relationships and goodies acceptance from defense contracts, others are not.

The traditional system through which key Armed Services and Appropriations committees in the Senate and House are staffed also causes concern. The committees frequently hire military personnel upon retirement, or before retirement. Committee personnel regularly accept lush jobs from defense contractors after serving on these committees.

High defense officers regularly accept board memberships, vice presidencies and other nice jobs with big defense contractors upon resignation or retirement. The whole process is susceptible to abuse and personal empire building.

First, the committees should depend largely upon civilians, not ex-military personnel, who almost invariably have strong ties to their former service. Committee personnel should be barred from accepting jobs with defense contractors for a specified period of years after they leave their committee jobs. (Many are in a position to swing funds and decisions to one contractor or another.)

And all military officers involved in purchase decisions, not merely procurement officers, who often don't make the key decisions, should be barred from accepting jobs with defense contractors for a specified number of years after leaving military service.

A glance at the list of former top officers now getting nice contractor salaries, and a list of ex committee staffers in similar high-paying jobs, is not reassuring. The practice of hiring committee staffers directly from the services, who could be "planted," and who might have been involved with contractors, is also undesirable.

AUSTIN--Most Texans may have heard by now of a federal policy requiring new industrial sources of air pollution to reduce an existing source before being allowed to commence production. It is called the emissions offset policy.

It seems sane enough at first until one realizes that the areas with the best records for fighting pollution will have the least trade for offsetting new industrial growth We will see these areas have their industrial growth stymied while the inefficient polluter will be rewarded for having plenty of "chips" in this new

Foreign Policy in Dissaray

WASHINGTON-America's foreign policy has become a laughing stock.

We have no one to blame but those who conduct it. Because of the Administration's inexperienced and inept leadership, our ability to defend America is being compromised, and if this course is continued, it could

Such a critical assessment by all 38 of my Republican colleagues in the U.S. Senate was not made lightly.

Consistent with a bipartisan spirit that has characterized American foreign policy since World War II, engaging in needless partisan carping or succumbing to the temptation to politicize difficulties confronting any Administration is not in the interest of world peace or stability.

Having acted with restraint up to now, however, we are compelled to articulate growing national concern over the current state of that policy and what we view as a mounting threat to American national security.

To do less would be a dereliction of duty Republicans are deeply troubled by the changing trends in the military balance and the growing Soviet military threat to the United States posed by these threats. Recent national surveys show a deepening concern by the American people over Soviet power and behavior and rising skepticism about the future adequacy of U.S. defenses to deal with this growing threat. Republicans share this concern and believe it is time to speak out. The Administration appears to view Soviet intentions as it would like to see them. However, decisions affecting the security of the free world cannot be based on wishful thinking, but must be influenced by the hard realities of Soviet behavior.

As Soviet military power continues its unprecedented growth, America's military strength is being degraded by Presidential decisions to cancel unilaterally major weapons systems without seeking reciprocation from the Soviet Union.

In 15 short months of incoherence, inconsistency and ineptitude, our foreign policy and national security objectives are confused and we are being challenged around the globe by Soviet arrogance.

The policy of human rights advocacy is in the best American tradition; but pragmatism in our international relationships is the keystone of an effective foreign policy. This administration has failed to grasp the significant

Although we believe that a rough strategic balance still exists between the United States and the Soviet Union, we are deeply disturbed that the Soviet strategic buildup has continued far beyond those levels necessary for defensive

Those who advocate unilateral steps on our part toward disarmament, however honestly motivated, proceed from premises based on perceptions of the Soviets that we believe are dangerously naive and unrealistic.

We believe the time has come for the U.S. to measure the Soviet Union by its actions and not by its words.

WHY SPS MUST HAVE A RATE INCREASE

The costs of labor, materials and other items necessary to the company's operations continue to skyrocket. Despite the fact that we have adopted programs for cutting expenses and capital expenditures, it becomes increasingly difficult for us to keep up with these rapidly rising costs

Although we have been operating in a highly inflationary atmosphere for the past several years, there has been no general increase in SPS electric rates since 1974. Now, however, we are forced to seek rate relief if we are to continue to provide the electric service needs of our customers.

Our goal is to provide the best possible service at lowest possible cost, now and in the future. The increase in our rates that we have requested will allow us to realize that goal.

I read the article in the Sunday Journal about the Wednesday road meeting with the Bula residents and members of the Commissioners Court. The article was accurate and facatual article was accurate and factual as far as it went, but I feel a very important fact was omitted. The people in favor of the east road (Bula North) asked that it be settled by a democratic processby a vote of the people directly concerned. Mr. Harlan brought the school bus issue up at the meeting. As Sudan busses are presently routed, 5 miles of the east road are designated as school bus route and only 4 miles of the west road. Even if the west road was paved it would only increase its usage 1 mile. The highlight of Mr. Harlan's testimony (if you can call it that) was omitted in the article. According to Mr. Harlan, Jeryl Bellar, who lives 3 miles west of Bula, on a paved road, wishes to transfer his son to the Sudan School. If the west road was paved it would facilitate meeting the Sudan school

At the time the west road was selected to be paved only 4 miles were graded in a standard manner, an additional mile was graded narrow guage for the school bus, 2 miles were field turnrow, and 1 mile was in wheat pasture. At present the west road dead ends 2 miles south of Circle Back. The east road has been in use, graded and maintained from end to end, for around 50 years.

If you believe in the democratic process, believe a road should be constructed on the most economical route, where it would do the greatest amount of good for the greatest number of people, suggest to your Comissioner and your County judge to support the east road

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill Attorney General

AUSTIN-If you are among the number of Texas citizens operating a personal passenger motor vehicle in this state which is not insured for bodily injury and property damage liability, you have assumed an awesome financial and personal risk.

According to the most recent statistics compiled by the State Board of Insurance, approximately 30% of all motor vehicles registered in Texas are not covered by this kind of liability insurance.

Although no Texas law requires liability coverage, attorneys in our Insurance, Banking and Securities and Consumer Protection Divisions urge you to consider the penalties you may incur should you be involved in an accident and are uninsured.

First, regardless of whether you are found ultimately to liable for any damages, the Texas financial responsibility statute, commonly known as the Safety Responsibility Law, requires the uninsured motorist to post bond or other proof of financial responsibility in an amount up to $25,000. Bond must be posted immediately and, if you are unable to prove your ability to pay, your driver's license may be suspended for as long as two years. Unless you are able to pay all expenses you may incur from injury or damage, for your own protection you should also consider buying additional insurance such as comprehensive or collision.

In purchasing both liability and comprehensive automobile insurance, you should

During the last 10 years, much research has been underway to better understand the immune system and how it might be strengthened or manipulated to prevent cancer cells from intruding upon normal cells of the body.

Much of the success in cancer immunotherapy has involved the use of nonspecific bacterial agents that produce a mild infection in the patient that in turn stimulates the immune system to attack and destroy cancer cells.

The most successfully tested of these bacterial agents is BCG, a strain of bacilli used to vaccinate against tubercu-

The Scientists Tell Me . . . Some Food Research is Out of This World

By Robert L. Haney TAES Science Writer

Did you ever wonder what factors make one steak tender and another tough? Or why some pinto beans are so hard when cooked that they rattle

Well, so do a lot of other consumers, and finding the answers to these and other such questions stimulates much of the research of food scientists with The Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

Meat tenderness is one of the most important characteristics that consumers want. In-depth research on beef tenderness is wide ranging, including a genetics approach; and use of carcass aging and high-temperature aging, enzymatic (digestive juice) tenderization, Texas A&M Tenderstretch method, elevated temperature conditioning, tenderization. mechanical electrical stimulation of the carcass, and identification of naturally tender carcasses.

The consumer also wants beef of good color and fresh odor, with the right amount of fat and juiciness. When cooked, beef should be tasty and nutritious and have desirable aroma.

Scientists are working to preserve or enhance these characteristics after slaughter and during processing, shipment, and marketing.

As to the hard pinto beans that seemed to boil forever without getting tender, scientists found it mostly a matter of heredity - "they were just born that way." Selections of tender pinto bean varieties solved the tough bean prob-

New disease-resistant varieties have been surveyed for extractable color and processing characteristics desired by the spice industry. The flavor of the fresh jalapeno, aside from the heat, is identical to the bell pepper.

The tomato and sweet potato are checked to insure proper flavor and consumer acceptance.

Use of cottonseed from glandless varieties for food products greatly enhances the value of the seed, while expanding our food supply. Breeding, agronomic and entomological research by the Station is helping put the production of glandless cotton on a sound footing.

Cotton Exports Show Increase

Overseas visits by the Maid of Cotton were cited as another important factor in U.S. cotton's bid for foreign markets. James T. Hazelwood, Council promotion manager, pointed out that the Maid's tour not only provides a peg for getting year-round promotion programs underway for U.S. cotton overseas but also helps establish relationships between textile industry leaders, foreign government officials, and U.S. representatives. Maid of Cotton Ruth Harman also reported on highlights of her recently completed tour to Europe and the Far East.

This season's strong export sales are a key factor behind the 8-cent rise in cotton prices since early February, Council Economist Arlie Bowling said. While the price increase is providing much-needed improvement in farm income prospects, it is not expected to result in serious market losses unless the price gap continues to widen between cotton and its major synthetic fiber competitors.

With this season's domestic consumption expected to be about 6.6 million bales, total offtake for the current crop will probably equal 11.9 million.

Regarding the 1978-79 outlook, Bowling said a survey of Extension Service leaders indicated production could range from 11.5 million bales to 12.1 million. Prospects are promising for exports reasonable close to thie season's level, and domestic consumption between 6.5 and 7 million bales. If this develops, it could result in a somewhat lower carryover than the 5.4 million bales projected for the current season.

Board members were warned, however, that the impending cotton dust standard could adversely affect cotton's demand outlook. Gaylon Booker, Council economist, and Dr. Phillip Wakelyn, staff technology manager, said the final standard-expected to be published earlier this year--has been delayed pending a review by the President's economic advisors of its inflationary aspect. The review followed a series of meetings and communications by Council and industry leaders with key Administration officials.

While the Occupational Safety and Health Administration has estimated the capital cost of its draft final standard at $625 million compared with $2.7 billion for the standard it initially proposed, Council staff members questioned the figures. They said the current proposal's lower cost is partially explained by liberalized exposure limits in some work areas. OSHA's initial proposal specified a cotton dust exposure limit of 0.2 milligrams in all work areas in every industry sector. In contrast, the draft final standard calls for textile mill exposure limits of 0.2 only in yarn production areas; 0.75 for weaving; and 0.5 for all non-textile industries except ginning. Council staff members noted that capital cost at the textile mill level would run $1.1 billion in yarn production alone. This raises doubts concerning OSHA's $625 million estimate for all industry sectors. Indications are the biggest economic impact under the draft final standard would fall on textile mills, cottonseed oil mills, and waste cotton sectors.

Regardless of the final standard's outcome, staff members emphasized that research on cotton dust and byssinosis must be continued at a high level to provide a solution to the pro-A report by Dr. Andrew Jordan detailed Council and industry efforts to relieve the severe freight car shortage affecting shipments of baled cotton as well as oil mill products. While the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Interstate Commerce Commission are "cautiously optimistic" that more cars will gradually become available for loading cotton, he said the situation could get worse in view of next month's grain harvest in Texas unless more cars come on line and existing equipment is better utilized.

Council board members also heard reports on pesticides, trade negotiations and textile imports, farm legislation, Washington activities, and the United Nations Committee on Trade and Development pro-

Texas Farmland Up 11%

COLLEGE STATION----The value of Texas farmland went up 11 percent for the year ending Feb 1, slightly outdistancing the nationwide increase of 9 percent. The increase raised the national average from $450 to $490 per acre, noted Mr. William E. Black, economist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, citing figures from a U.S. Department of Agriculture report.

"Although the rate of increase has slowed, land markets still can generally be called strong," said Black.

While Texas surpassed the national average increase, a number of states showed an even greater increase in farmland values. Wisconsin had the steepest gain, 18 percent, followed by South Dakota, 17 percent; Maryland, 16 percent; Louisiana and Mississippi, 15 percent; Missouri, 14 percent; California, Ohio and Kentucky, 13 percent; and Minnesota, Indiana, Tennessee, Michigan, Pennsylvania and Delaware, 12 percent.

Nebraska was the only state showing a decline in farmland values for the year, down 4 percent. Increases of 3 and 4 percent were common in the Southwest, Southeast and Texas farmland is currently valued at $316 an acre compared to $285 in February, 1977, and $195 in February, 1976, pointed out Black.

States with the highest farmland values at this time are New Jersey, $2,057 per acre; Connecticut, $1,962 and Rhode Island, $1,939. New Mexico and Nevada farmland is currently valued under $100 per acre.

On Wall Street By Bob Hill

There has been a dramatic shift in the way consumers spend their money. It is because inflation in the prices of necessities such as housing and food has forced us to decide just what is important to us in material things.

The increase in the general level of prices keeps jacking us up into higher tax brackets so the decision must be made--just what are the important things which we need? Our spending patterns are changing. American consumers are cutting back on purchases of nonessential items such as cosmetics, cars and vacations. Instead we are substituting lower-quality products for higher-quality ones, such as hamburger for steak.

Another development is the 'buy now-pay-later" philosophy as a hedge against inflation. Big ticket items such as homes and appliances can be financed with easily available consumer financing and paid off over a period of time with "inflating" dollars. We know that whatever it is, it will cost more in years to

The "buy now-pay later" spree by consumers has been a real prop under the economy for the last three years. But economists now worry that the consumers cannot continue at this rate as a constant hedge against inflation. Somewhere along the line they fear that the consumer will start cutting back on purchases in order to build savings in case there is an economic slowdown. Such cutbacks would slow down the economy at a much faster rate than normal.

There is one bright spot if the consumer starts cutting back sharply on the current buying spree. A drop in big-ticket spending would be a boon to the entertainment and fast-food industries because consumers would have more to spend on these type of pleasures.

It looks as if the labor reform legislation proposed by the administration is a dead duck, a victim of other priorities.

A long filibuster will probabforce the bill sponsors to make a tough choice between labor law and other more pressing Senate business. There have been 400 amendments introduced to $2467, the bill designed to speed unior representation at elections and to toughen up the penalties for violators of the National Labor Relations Act.

Almost all of the amendments were proposed by business-backed legislators who seem determined to bring up each one of them for a vote. Amendments are a newly devised tactic for delaying action on a bill. Acting just on amendments could take two or more hours for each one. It is estimated that acting on each of the amendments would take three months even if the Senate went to 24 hour sessions. The use of amendments was steamrollered down by Vice President Mondale who called them "repetitive." But that maneuver alarmed many senators and there is a general agreement that such a method of bypassing amendments will not be used again.

Dear editor: According to an article I read the other day, Washington politcians, when they get up in the morning, first glance at the headlines on the front page of their paper--I guess to see if any new war has broken out or if any of their friends have been caught red-handed--and then turn to a gossip column on an inside page.

WILDLIFE NOT GAME
LUBBOCK--Mention wildlife and most Texans envision deer, and most Texans envision deer, quail, turkey, and other game animals and birds, but the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department also has the responsibility for managing non-game in our state.

Under the heading of nongame are 17 mammals, 13 birds, 24 reptiles, 13 amphibians and 14 fishes. The P&WD has established limitations on the taking, possession, transportation, exportation, sale and offering for sale of these species which the department considers necessary to manage the species.

"The impact of increasing human development and habitat destruction are continuing to have a drastic affect on Texas wildlife," said Bill Brownlee, non-game biologist.

"It is likely more species will be placed on the present endangered or threatened list if habitat continues to decrease at the present rate," Brownlee continued.

Endangered species on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service list and present in Texas are also on the P&WD endangered list. Some 46 mammals, birds, reptiles, amphibians and fishes are included on the list in Texas.

Fish and wildlife classified as endangered are species threatened with statewide extinction when the department finds that the continued existence of the species is determined by destruction, drastic modification, or severe curtailment of it's habitat; its overutilization for commercial or sporting purposes; disease or predation; or other natural or man-made fact-

The Non-game Act established by the Texas legislature in September 1973 is operated from General Revenue Funds with five field specialists and one secretary statewide.

One non-game study completed by this section of the P&WD in January 1978 is entitled "Supporting Information Initial Species Listing for Non-Game Regulations" and is available by writing the P&WD, 4200 Smith School Road, Austin, Texas. 78744

This repost lists 81 species with information on each including scientific name, range, feeding habits, reproduction, documented sightings and possible reasons for increase or decrease in population.

The P&WD must, in addition to non-game management, investigate the affect of the different species of aquatic plants on human life, navigation and recreational uses of public waters.

The P&WD has found 12 plants including hydrilla to be potentially harmful in Texas. These plants are classified as "noxious aquatic plants" meanint the plant thrives in water, marshes or swamps.

Private ownership of individual specimens identified as "noxious aquatic plants" may not be disposed of except by means that will prevent their introduction into marshes, swamps, or waters of the state.

Also, the P&WD regulates the importation, possession, sale or release of all species of fish, or fish eggs which are harmful or potentially harmful to human or animal life as determined by the department studies.

On this list are eight fish including certain piranha and carp.

As the wildlife observer can see, there are certain species of wildlife that are endangered, non-game, noxious or harmful. Through regulation and study by the P&WD, the residents of Texas may enjoy our abundant resources with a decent chance of viewing species whose numbers are often less than a hundred.

ANIMAL DAMAGE STUDY

LUBBOCK--San Angelo has been selected as one of four public hearing sites in the United States by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service to receive testimony on it's Animal Damage Control Policy.

The hearing will be at 9 a.m.
May 25 in the Main Ballroom of the Houston-Harte Center, San Angelo State University.

Similar hearings have been slated during May in Idaho, Wyoming and Washington, D.C.

The animal study is an examination of the predation problems affecting the western livestock industry and the environmental concerns and impacts associated with predator damage control.

age control.

The study will present options, including the consequences of various levels and methods of predator control.

The first draft report of the study may be obtained from the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, P.O. Box 1306, Albuquerque, N.M. 87103.

CHICKENS HAD HARD WIN-TER

WHEELER--A significant decrease in the number of prairie chickens counted on the strutting grounds in the Panhandle and on the South Plains are indicative of the record cold, dry winter experienced across Texas.

Records have been kept for 26 years concerning the fluxuations of the prairie chicken populations in northwest Texas and a 24 percent decrease on all the counts this spring were recorded by the species project leader Richard DeArment.

"The Panhandle counties of Wheeler and Hemphill faired better than the South Plains counties along the New Mexico border which recorded a 42 percent decrease in the number of breeding prairie chickens," said DeArment.

"Normally, hunters bag about seven percent of the birds during the two-day hunt each fall and last year, a check of birds taken by hunters showed that 60 percent were young which is good,"DeArment continued to the continued to

Prairie chickens depend upon natural cover such as native grasses and weeds for winter protection. The Panhandle grasslands were in good shape last fall, but the South Plains grasslands were less than desirable plus more and more of the native grasses are being placed under for farmland.

plowed under for farmland.
Good rains this spring should help the nesting chickens produce a good crop of young birds. The continued growth of these young chickens, however, will depend upon weather this summer with hail storms, high water or drought taking a toll of

CHECK FISHING LICENSE

DUBBOCK--While you are packing the picnic lunch and arranging the fishing gear in the camper, be sure to check the expiration date on your fishing license.

If you bought your license on June 1, 1977, or before, you may need a new license. If you bought it after that date, your license will be good until August 31.

The reason for such doublechecking is that 1977-78 was the first year of a changeover to a system based on August 31 expiration. Previously, the licenses expired one year from the date of purchase.

A resident fishing license is $4.50 and is required of all persons who fish in the waters of Texas with the exception of those: 17 years of age; over 65 years of age; fishing in private waters; fishing in county of residence with trotline, throwline or ordinary pole and line having no reel or winding device attached; holding a valid Texas commercial fishing license or holder of an exempt fishing license ($1.25) available to disabled veterans or the blind.

An annual non-resident fishing license is $10.50 and a non-resident five-day fishing license is $4.50.

W.I.F.E. Organized

The organizational meeting for the local chapter of the national and state organization known as W.I.F.E. ("Women Involved in Farm Economics") was held Thursday evening at 7:30 p.m., June 8, 1978 at the 16th and Ave. D. Church of Christ meeting room.

With seventeen eager women in session, the following slate of officers and representatives were elected for a one-year

President- Jo. McCrea: Vice-President- Sandy Turner; Sec.treasurer-Careleon Hamilton; Spokeswoman-June Saylor; Historian-Reporter-Judy Watson; Project Chairman-Florene Flatt; Representatives to Steering Committee - Sue Holt - Pleasant Valley Community; Suzanne Wheeler- West Camp Community: Debbie Kittrell-Needmore Community; Donna Glover -Lazbuddie Community; Eunice Bales-Muleshoe; Loretta Layton-Three Way, Bula, Maple and Enochs Communities.

The group discussed possible immediate projects, and it was decided to investigate the possibilities of wrapping area cotton in cotton bagging. This is a most worthwhile endeavor for our area. It would benefit every cotton producer, creating yet one more market for our products. The group desires to educate each producer of this possibility and help coordinate efforts to acheive this goal.

The meeting time for this chapter has been set at 8 p.m. every second and fourth Monday nights. This Monday night, June 12, the meeting will again be held in the 16th and Avenue D Church of Christ meeting

The ladies in the organization stress that membership is open to anyone who has an interest in farm economics. The membership is not limited to farmers; any woman in thie area would be affected and she is certainly needed to aid in thie work. If you feed you could be interested, please contact one of the members, or come to the meeting Monday night.

Wildlife Gets "Cooperative Help"

A cooperative agreement between the National Park Service and the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is helping to improve the habitat around Lake Meredith in the Texas Panhandle.

At the present time, eight projects are being completed by members of the park service and the Young Adult Conservation Corp (YACC) at sites on park land around the huge lake.

"We have 110 members of the YACC presently repairing recreational facilities, landscaping, fencing native areas such as wild plum and planting trees and shrubs with technical assistance from the P&WD extension biologist Richard DeArment," said Ted Bedwell, camp direct-

Over 11,000 plants including Russian olive, honeysuckle bush, buffalo berry and june berry, are being placed in areas either void of natural wildlife food and cover or areas which show promise as ideal habitat for deer, turkey, quail or other non-game species.

The YACC program, initiated by the U.S. Interior Department, is furnishing conservation projects for young people unfamiliar with outdoor jobs dealing with wildlife and habitat conservation. The goal of the program is to help protect and develop the natural resources of America while furnishing jobs to young Americans.

Results of the wildlife plantings should become noticeable by next year as the various species of wildlife near Lake Meredith find and utilize the improved habitat sites.
