State Vs. U. S. Dispute Hits Tidelands Talk

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14. (AP)—Legislation designed to avoid an interruption of oil operations on land under the marginal seas ran into the usual state vs. federal dispute today before the Senate Interior Committee.

Hardly had Chairman O'Mahoney (D-Wyo) called his group into session before it became evident that sharp differences prevail.

O'Mahoney's plan is to give the Interior Department control over oil well drilling in the so-called Tidelands pend-

HST Wonders About Risking Chiang As Friend In Pacific

WASHINGTON-President Truman and Averell Harriman have just been doing an Alphonse and Gaston act designed to create the impression that all questions about Formosa have been answered. The act is accompanied by efforts to portray misgivings aroused by General Mac-Arthur's visit to Chiang Kai-shek as mere mischief-making, Harriman on his return from Tokto Both professed an admiration for General MacArthur normally sufficient to satisfy even the Hearst-McCormick axis.

to a question about whether General MacArthur was satisfied with the limited Truman policy. He thus lent substance to reports in diplomatic circles that the General had recommended that a U. S. military mission and new supplies of material be sent immediately to Formosa.

in Korea.

The Senator frankly says he wants the administration to "get off the dime" in Formosa and take Chiang back as a full partner. He agrees that such action contains the seeds of war with the Chinese Communists but believes it will be a de-

So the Formosa questions will not down. is General MacArthur satisfied with the limited Truman policy or does Senator Knowland more nearly represent his views? If the latter is true, can the President with elections coming on, hold out against the advise of the commander in the field, especially one of General Mac-Arthur's prestige?

International relations are adversely affected by these currents because Britain and the commonwealth nations in Asia. including India, recognize the Communist regime in China. They fear they may be presented with a perilous choice if the President is pushed in the direction of closer cooperation with Chiang.

The President in turn is compelled to look ahead to a situation that will find American alone in the Pacific except for Chiang. It is no wonder that there is an edge to his voice as he intimates that if everyone would stop talking it

He is trying to keep Formosa and the Chinese out of the war by preventing the Communists from invading the taland and Chiang from taking the offensive against the Communists. Korean reverses have shaken the confidence of some people that the first can be attained: the MacArthur-Chiang visit aroused apprehensions about the latter.

There are members of Congress, not sharers of the MacArthur-Knowland admiration for Chiang, who wish they had a clearer idea about what happens if Formosan immobilization fails. Several suggest the United Nations should make Fornibsa a U. N. trusteeship with India

Churchill May Head Western European Defense Ministry

VERSATILE CHURCHILL MAY HAVE talked himself inadvertently into another sob which will rival his historic leadership of Britain during the late war.

The famous statesman last week introduced a formal motion in the European Consultative Assembly at Strassbourg for for a unified European army-"subject to proper democratic control"-to defend West against Russia. He din't say so, but such a historic development natural ly would call for a director of supreme capabilities and possessing the confidence of the whole Western world.

Who could fill that place? Two days earlier former French Premier Paul Reynaud gave the assembly more than a hint of what is in some minds. He declared that what Europe needs is a single defense minister. Then pointing dramatically to Winston Churchill, a few seats away, Reynaud added.

"It would not be necessary to look beyond this assembly to find him."

SHOULD CHURCHILL BE CALLED TO fill such an unprecedented position be would of course bring to it qualities and experience such as few men possess. His experience in world affairs, both military and political, is vast. Churchill also has the leadership necessary to hold together and get cooperation from a group of nations which are jealous of their prerogatives. His gift of leadership has struck me as something of an anomaly.

When I first started watching Churchill at close range more than 30 years ago he was a good deal of a lone wolf politically. As a member of Parliament he exercised his great-gift of oratory and debate rather indiscriminately against his colleagues.

Churchiff's opponents frankly were afraid of his clever, caustic tongue, although they admired his capabilities. He always filled the House of Commons when he spoke. He had held various ministerial posts with distinction. Surely he could be Prime Minister-if he had the gift of lead-

THEN CAME WORLD WAR TWO, AND in the emergency Churchill disclosed a leadership which has recorded his name in history. So now it perhaps isn't strange to find the European Consultative Assembly-lower house of the unofficial Parliament for a United Western Europe-hearing him mentioned in connection with the army proposal is that West Germany be rearmed as an essential for defense against an attack from the East. This idea is a reversal of the mighty oaths the Allies took at the end of the war that Germany shouldn't be allowed again to rearm. France has been particularly hos-"tile to it, and Germany herself has viewed the project with disfavor. German political chiefs haven't forgotten how the military clique took over power in days gone by.

So it is of more than passing interest that West German delegates should have been present in the assembly when Churchill spoke and that he should have welcomed them. He went further, and asked the assembly to "assure our German friends that we shall hold their safety and freedom as sacred as our own." That speech might strike a note which would make Reynaud's suggestion come

Hours Before Attack, During Jump-Off, Are Breathless Ones

BY DON WHITEHEAD For Hal Boyle

WITH U S TROOPS ON THE SOUTH-ERN FRONT IN KOREA - The hours before an attack and during the jump-off are the breathless hours of a war,

Those are the hours when you wonder if it will succeed or fail, if the general has made the right decision, and if the troops will smash the enemy - or be smashed It must be a time of soul-searching and terrible suspense for the general who orders the attack-a more intense strain than we can imagine who never had the decision to make. Such a decision was made here the other day a decision to stop retreating and to attack the enemy. It was the story of a little man who had been cuffed around until he suddenly decided to move in and sock the other guy for a change. Two days before the attack, the general called a few reporters into his maproom and told them of the decision. He told where he would attack and when, UNDER HIS FINGER THE BIG MAP became a battlefield alive with movement of tanks and troops and the maneuvers of battalions and regiments. The man at the map was Maj. Gen, William B. Kean of the 25th Infantry Division, who was in overall command of the attack. And I couldn't help remember that this man who was now shifting battalions and regiments for an attack once made his battle plans with corps and reinforced divisions. That was when Kean was chief of staff of the American First Army in Europe. All night the troops lay in their foxholes while both sides exchanged artillery and mortar fire. And then the dawn touched the hill. Shadows crept from the valleys and the artillery began thundering. Out of the skies came darting American planes lashing at the enemy with bullets and rockets and bombs.

AND THEN THE INFANTRY WALKED into the hills as the guns blazed. ...it rpaily wasn't dramatic. There was no thunderous charge, bugles blowing and clash of arms. There was just the booming of guns, the crash of shells, the infantry plodding toward the enemy.

It was to be the first major American attack of the Korean war. But it was a puny effort compared with the giant forces that were hurled into the European attacks.

All night before the attack the winding dusty road to the front was squirming with tanks, guns, trucks and supplies rolling forward.

The men were in their positions and the artillery had registered on enemy targets some observed and some sought blindly

Independent Survey Reveals A High Accuracy In The 1950 Census Count

By GEORGE GALLUP Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 14 -An independent checkup by the institute on the accuracy of the 1950 Census in making its total count of the population indicates a highly accurate census figure. Although many U. S. conmu nities have complained that the population count in their areas showed too few people, the Institute survey result for the nation as a whole shows that the 1950 Census, conducted under the direction of Dr. Roy V.
