WASHINGTON By GEORGE DURNO

Permanent—

On February 1 the President's Federal Aviation Commission, headed by Clark Howell, will make recommendations to congress through the White House.

Already it has made a preliminary report but the public will not be taken into confidence until the first of the month. The commission is running on a per diem basis and it is easier for the bookkeepers to wind up on that date.

One major proposal will suggest establishment of a permanent government commission to control all commercial air activities, including air mail. It is understood the report will recommend a commission of five members.

There are five members on the Federal Aviation commission but their closest friends deny indignantly there was any idea of perpetuating the five investigators as government officers for the duration of the Roosevelt administration.

Clark Howell is an Atlanta publisher who was "For Roosevelt Before Chicago". Other members are vice chairman Edward P. Warner, who was Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics under Calvin Coolidge; Franklin K. Lane, Jr., son of the former secretary of interior under Woodrow Wilson; Albert J. Berres, labor official, and Jerome C. Hunsaker, aeronautical engineer with 15 years experience in the U. S. Navy.

Insiders say they all have their own affairs to look after as soon as the final report is in.

Base—

On the subject of national defense the Howell commission is expected to recommend construction of a series of coastal defense air bases at a cost of approximately $100,000,000.

One would be in Florida, the second in New England, and the third at Langley Field (already constructed). On the West Coast, one would be in Southern California, one in central California, and the third in the Northwest. (A base already exists at San Diego, in Southern California, which would be expanded.) A new base would be built in Alaska, any necessary work done on the existing ones in Hawaii, Panama and Puerto Rico.

Rep. J. Mark Wilcox of Florida already has introduced a bill to this effect. It has the backing of chambers of commerce in interested cities on both coasts. The Wilcox bill calls for 150 planes at each base but does not appropriate money for any new plane construction.

The Howell-Wilcox plan is designed to supplement and complete the system of aerial defense laid down by an earlier commission headed by Newton D. Baker. The Baker board proposed a mobile air force for the interior under a central command from general headquarters, which has since been adopted.

Havoc—

Despite all the hard-to-answer questions asked from the bench by Chief Justice Hughes and his Associate Justices, betting in Washington is two to one that the supreme court will find some way to give the government a minimum of embarrassment in its decision on the gold case.

This, of course, is a straight gamble, almost as pure as it is simple. There is never and is never was any "inside lowdown" on what the supreme court might do. In the past there have been several alleged "leaks" but investigation always resulted in exoneration of everyone connected with the court.

The fact that Chief Justice Hughes, while a member of the Hague Tribunal, handed down a decision against Brazil which forced that country to pay on a basis of its original monetary-base promise hasn't deterred the New Deal "win" bettors. The gambling boys are laying their money that the high court would hesitate a long time in rendering a decision that might have with the nation's credit in these perilous times.

Reed—

In connection with those hard-to-answer questions, it is interesting to note that J. Crawford Biggs, Solicitor General of the United States, was NOT in court. The case was of such importance that Attorney General Cummings personally headed the crew of government attorneys, but under ordinary circumstances the solicitor general would be on hand. Arguing Supreme court cases is his principal job.

Biggs made a rather poor impression on the high court last year in one of his first cases. The rumor is almost widely that he will be superseded as the nation's chief law exponent.

BRADY MAN FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

BRADY (CP)—D. E. Bell, 41, son of the late J. E. Bell, and executor of the large Bell estate, was found shot to death Friday on the Bell farm a mile south of Brady.

A shotgun was beside the body. A charge of shot penetrated his chest.

An inquest was called for Saturday.

Schools Get $1,052.50

Third Payment On Current Apportionment Received By Common Schools

Payment of 65 cents per scholar on the 1934-35 apportionment brought $1,052.50 to common school districts of Howard county Friday.

Williams To Speak Twice Here Sunday

Dr. J. Howard Williams, secretary of the General Baptist convention of Texas, will speak from the First Baptist church twice Sunday.

Corn-Hog Contract Papers Forwarded

Final compliance papers on the 1934 corn-hog contracts have been received here and forwarded to Washington.

There likely will be one other payment due the 18 participants in this county for the 1934 contracts. Forms for the 1935 contracts have arrived, County Agent O. P. Griffin said.

Tri-State Gang Members Held In New York City

NEW YORK (AP)—Robert Maitz, 29, Walter Legenza, 41, Martin Farrell, 28, Edwin Gale, 23, and Mary McKeever, members of the "Tri-State gang," were arrested in New York Friday, the department of justice announced.

"Arrest of these five eradicates, as far as we know, all members of the 'Tri-State Gang' with a record of robbery and murder behind it," said Frank Fay, chief of the department operatives for this district.

Maitz and Legenza shot their way out of a Richmond, Va., prison last September 29, killing one prison guard and seriously wounding two others.

They are under sentence of death for slaying a custodian of a United States mail truck.

Baptist Church Is Refinanced Successfully

Successful refinancing of the First Baptist church debt was announced here Friday.

Completion of the debt adjustment was assured Friday morning when the Union Fidelity Life Insurance company of Dallas advanced a loan of $26,000 to the church here.

This money, together with more than $4,000 cash raised by the church membership and friends of the church, will be used to retire all outstanding indebtedness.

Little Hope Held For Lois McCoy

Lois, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan McCoy, is resting well in the Scott and White hospital at Temple, it was learned Friday.

However, attending physicians hold no hope for her recovery. Rev. J. J. Shetterworth, pastor of the First Christian church, accompanied Mrs. McCoy and the child to Temple.

Lois was stricken nearly a year ago and her condition has steadily grown worse. A recent rally here raised hopes for her recovery.

Hearings Are Set Monday By Leaders

Ickes Calls On State And Municipal Authorities For Inventory

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The administration and congress Friday sped President Roosevelt's immense work-relief and social security programs.

First house hearings on the omnibus social aid bill with its old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, were set for Monday expediting preliminaries for spending $4,000,000,000 putting 3,500,000 unemployed to work.

Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, called upon state and municipal authorities for national inventory of feasible construction projects.

Bill Would Establish A State Board

Gov. Allred Backs Legislation Regarded As Base For State Recovery

AUSTIN (AP)—A bill to establish a state planning board of seven backed by Governor Allred and regarded as the base upon which state recovery will be laid, was introduced in the house Friday.

The secretary of state would be an ex-officio member and six to be appointed by the governor for two, four and six-year terms.

Members are to receive no salary, but will be paid expenses.

AAA Ruling Will Change Committee

New AAA rulings in reference to community and county committees will upset the present arrangement in Howard county.

County Agent O. P. Griffin made known Friday.

Most important is the change in designation of "community" districts. Instead of 12 communities, the county will be divided into 500 producer units.

In the case of Howard county, it will mean two districts of approximately 600 producers each.

Three committees will be chosen from each of the districts. District A will include these school districts: Chalk, Coahoma, Midway, Center Point, R-Bar, Morgan, Richland, Gay Hill, Morris, Green Valley, and Vincent.

District B will include these school districts: Lomax, Elbow, Hartwell, Moore, Fairview, Highway, Blaco, Knott, Soash and Vealmoor.

Instead of 12 community committees, there will now be only six, three for each district. Alternate B will be elected also. County committees, of which there will still be three, will also have alternates elected and in event of incapacitation or resignation, the alternate will serve.

In order to be a committeeman under the new ruling, a person must be a contract signer, must be a cotton producer on the farm under contract and be deriving the major portion of his income from the farm under contract. Moreover, no man who holds office, who has held office within the past year or who becomes a candidate for office, whether it be appointive or elective county, state or federal, is ineligible to serve as committeeman.

The county committee is supposed to be composed of two hold-over members, the disqualification of E. Reagan under the producer ruling will probably leave the status of the Howard county committee unchanged. However, that is for the six new community committees to decide. The procedure is for the two old county committees receiving the highest vote to remain and the third to be succeeded by a new committeeman.

Griffin said Friday that the new community committeemen would be elected January 25. District B will convene in the district court room here at 11:30 a. m. on that date and District A will meet at 1:30 p. m. in the same place on the same day.

FISCH INNOCENT, SAY RELATIVES

Prosecution attorneys in the trial of Bruno Hauptmann said they were prepared to trace the life of leader Fisch (above), former business associate of Hauptmann, "from A to Z" in refutation of claims that Fisch was connected with the Lindbergh kidnaping.

Hauptmann said he received $14,000 of Lindbergh ransom money from Fisch. A sister, sister-in-law and a brother of Fisch have come to the trial to testify for the state. Fisch died of tuberculosis last March in Germany. (Associated Press Photo)

Mrs. Dall Married To Newspaperman

NEW YORK (AP)—In a simple ceremony without flowers or attendants, Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Dall, daughter of the president, and John Boettlinger, former Washington correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, were married Friday at the Roosevelt town house, on E. Sixty-Fifth street.

Judge J. Frederick Kernochan, New York, performed the ceremony.

"They had parental blessings and the president telephoned congratulations from Washington," Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said after the wedding.

The couple left by automobile for an unannounced destination.

Mrs. Dall was divorced from her first husband, Curtis B. Dall, last July 30th at Minden, Nevada.

Rain Or Snow Is Promised

Much colder weather also predicted for this area during week-end.

Promise of rain and perhaps snow was contained in the weather forecast for Big Spring and vicinity Friday.

Prevailing cloudy condition with rain forecast for a large portion of the state gave hopes that the surrounding drought area would be benefited by the precipitation.

Much colder weather is also predicted for the week end. Drizzling rain here Friday extended east but got very little heavier. At Santo and Fort Worth light rains were reported. Only slight moisture was reported in Howard and adjacent counties.

Gov. Allred Wore Tech-Made Suit At Inaugural Ceremony

LUBBOCK—Another Tech-made suit is adorning a political top-notch. When James V. Allred was sworn in as governor of Texas he was wearing a dark grey suit made from the wool of sheep on Texas Technological College campus, spun and manufactured in the textile department under the supervision of C. D. Brandt, head professor of textile engineering. It is similar to the suits presented President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Vice-president John Nance Garner last year.

Congressman George Mahon also wore a Tech-made suit when he took the oath of office. According to Charlie Guy, editor of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal, another Tech-made suit will enter politics in Washington soon when the suit he is having made for Senator Tom Connally is delivered.

SHOUTS IT'S A LIE TO WITNESS

Court Adjourns Over Saturday At Request Of Both Attorneys

FLEMINGTON, (AP)—Upon request of the prosecution and defense counsel, Justice Trenehard decided to adjourn court over Saturday.

FLEMINGTON, N. J. (AP)—Anna Hauptmann's nerve broke Friday at the trial of her husband for life.

"It's a lie," she shouted to Mrs. Ella Achenbach, Bronx neighbor and "surprise witness" for the state, who testified Mrs. Hauptmann came to her two days after the Lindbergh kidnaping and said she and her husband had just returned from a trip.

"You lie, Mrs. Achenbach, you lie," Mrs. Hauptmann flared.

"I want that in the record," Attorney General David T. Wilentz demanded.

Justice Hoas W. Trenehard asked Mrs. Hauptmann to promise "you won't do it again."

"I like to try but sometimes I can't help it," she apologized.

As the trial went into the thirty-seventh day the prosecution announced they felt that they had built up a sufficient case to send Hauptmann to the electric chair.

The state said they had sixty more witnesses ready to testify if necessary.

Sergeant John Wallace of the state police, related again the story of Hauptmann's arrest last September 19th. He substantiated previous testimony that a $20 gold note, part of the Lindbergh ransom, was found on Hauptmann when officers overtook him.

Poll Tax Payment Is Lagging Here

Indications Friday were that the 1935 potential vote of Howard county would be only one-third of 1934 potential vote.

Friday only 400 poll taxes had been paid and 14 exemptions obtained. During 1934 there were more than 4500 poll taxes and exemptions issued, according to Tax Collector-Assessor John Wolcott.

Wholesale, Retail Grocers To Stage Code Meetings Here

One of a series of code meetings for West Texas will be held here Tuesday from the Settles for food and grocery distributors, wholesalers and retail. Joe Kuykendall said Friday.

He said he had received notice that the district code authority had called a district meeting here for 4 p. m. All food handlers are urged to attend.

medium of Warm Springs' healing waters and also by their sympathy for the large numbers of persons,
a majority of them, children of tender years, whose hope of being able to walk again after an attack of polio, was to stay at Warm Springs.

The idea spread like a prairie fire. The larger cities put on elaborate affairs. Some of them were costume costume affairs, with Pierrots and Columbines, Turks, Tartars, and latter-day pirates and noble lords, tricked out in appropriate bravery, while others were sober-sided affairs, in which the conventional swallow-tail and filmy tulle or satin were the accepted garb.

The smaller cities and towns entered emulously into the spirit of the affair, and it was a night of merriment from ocean to ocean.

It seemed an easy way to raise more than a million dollars, and everybody had a good time.

The Warm Springs Foundation is now pretty well provided for, but this does not mean that there is not an ample field for assisting those afflicted with infantile paralysis, and a still broader one for research to find out how the disease
may be prevented.

When Jan. 30 comes and the President celebrates his fifty-third birthday, the slogan will be, "On with the dance, let joy be unconfined."

REMEDYING OLD OBJECTIONS

Sen. Ben Oneal has reintroduced his resolution to change the constitution so as to permit classifying property for taxation.

Incoming Governor, Alford campaigned for that amendment in original form last year. It would have been adopted, on its merits, except that it was dragged down to defeat by other objectionable amendments on which a broad fight was made.

In reoffering it, Sen. Oneal has met all the chief objections of those who attacked his amendment.
Its purpose is to permit the state,
cities and counties, to bring on their tax rolls the great volume of wealth now entirely escaping taxation, out of about fifty billion dollars of wealth in Texas, the tax rolls carry a scant three billions.
The rest—the actual, productive wealth of Texas—escapes taxation, while non-productive homes and land bear the burden.

Sen. Oneal has written in now these protective reservations, so as to meet the objections and to further the purpose of his original plan:

1. Taxation shall be equal and uniform as to real estate, and equal and uniform as to all reasonable classifications of property.
2. Not to affect exemptions of property from taxation, including homestead exemptions.
3. Shall not reduce power of boards of equalization.
4. "Shall not have any other effect on the constitution . . . than to give the legislature power to make reasonable classifications of all property other than real prop-

Don Cossacks, Former Members Of Wrangel's White Army, Practiced During Internment In Bulgaria

Give the Don your faith and hope
As your fathers did of old,
God protects the Cossack hero,
Stalwart, hardy, fearless, bold,
From early times the Cossack
mother has wont to lull her infant son to sleep with this lullaby—as far back as the days of the famous Russian Robin Hood, Stenka Rasin,
the wild Cossack hero who plundered the rich merchants of the Volga basin, later to distribute the booty among the poor.

As the boy grew up, other tales were told him—tales of ancestral daring and exploits of brother Cossacks that had passed into folklore. For instance, there was the story of Bopdan Chmelnicki, leader of the Dnieper Cossacks, and how he freed the Ukraine from the Polish yoke and gave it to his Czar. There was also the Cos-sack, Pugatchev of the Urals, the bold 'attaman' (or leader) who fought for a free Cossack life and was veritable terror in the flesh to Catherine the Great, with his claim to the throne as the lost Czar, Peter III.

Pushkin has written a touching romance around this romantic leader, whose fate, like that of Stenka Rasin, was finally to be captured and quartered alive.

Russian folk-lore abounds in these tales of derring-do, and the Cossack was looked upon as the daring hero of adventure. He was always the symbol of invincibility, Early in his history, he was the named 'savage'. Turn as the Tartar did before him. In fact, his very name, originally taken from the Turkish 'kasak', means a pillaging warrior.

Later, under the firm hand of Peter the Great, the Cossacks were organized as a military unit, and in turn became the terror of Russia's foes.

The Russian painter Rejkin has depicted the Cossack, a fearsome
being astride his foaming horse,
with tall shaggy cap on head, dagger in his teeth, and the nagaiika clutched in hand—a sabre-rattling swash-buckler, who even when at peace never lays aside his weapons, but is ready at a moment's notice to spring to the defense of his Czar.

The late czar drew his bodyguard from these superb giants who struck wonder in the onlooker. They were called 'Kubantsov', from the fact that they hailed from the territory of the Kuban.

But all this is now past. The Cossacks have ceased to be a military organization. The broad sweep of the Steppes still greets
the eye, but the Cossack is no longer to be seen dashing over its plains. The Cossack settlements, or 'stanitsa', with their rows of white houses, no longer ring with the shouts and songs of valiant returning warriors in clanking boots. The Cossack is no more a voyak (soldier). He now grows wheat, cotton, alfalfa, sugar beets, for collective farms. He has made him his prisoner.

The Don Cossacks, so-named from that particular territory that spreads through the Don basin
southward to the Sea of Azoff,
made up one of the units of General Wrangel's White Army. With him they fought the Russian Civil War, and later dispersed as refugees to various European governments.

The present members of the Don Cossack chorus were among those sent to Bulgaria. During their interment in the prison camp, they had formed a small chorus under the leadership of a young officer, Serge Jaroff. With their transport to Bulgaria, they continued their chorus work, though under trying circumstances. During the day they worked in factory or mine, devoting their evenings to choral practice.

Gradually their fame spread abroad. Their singing of the ritual in the Russian Embassy church in Sofia drew crowds to hear them.
A concert was arranged in which they sided secular songs—songs of their homeland, doubly dear to the exiled Russian. With their first concert, the Don Cossack Male chorus entered upon a career of triumphs that has carried it far abroad—to England, Australia, North America.

The songs are the soul of the Russian people—songs from the Siberian taiga, raucous, melancholy; from the Ukraine, full of laughter and life; from the Kuban rich in heroic exploits. As sung by the Don Cossacks with their marvelous bass and tenors, it is an experience never to be forgotten. Sometimes one of the men will sing the solo part, while the rest of the chorus accompanies him, illustrating the song. One will hear the roar of the waves, the prattling of the brook, the moan
of the wind (as in "Volga, Volga"),
the churchbells ringing, or an imitation of the 'bandura', the string instrument used for accompaniment in the Ukraine. And what cries and whistling when the Cossacks sing their dance song
"Plajassowja," that usually marks
the exciting climax of a Don Cos-sack program.

Thrilling—stupendous—unforgettable—such is an evening of songs
as sung by the Don Cossacks.

Tickets for the Russian Male chorus performance, here Monday evening January 21st, in the Municipal Auditorium under auspices of the Ray E. Fuller Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, went on sale today and Anderson Music

ON WITH THE DANCE

Robert Louis Stevenson solemnly drew up a deed by which he gave his birthday to a little American girl who was born on February 29, and therefore could celebrate the happy anniversary only once in four years.

President Roosevelt announced that he had agreed, for the second time, to "lend his birthday" Jan.
30, for a series of birthday balls to raise funds with which to fight infantile paralysis. He made public correspondence with Col. Henry L.
Doherty of New York, who headed the nation-wide movement last January and agreed to do so again.

Under the present arrangement,
none of the money will go to the Warm Spring Foundation, as was the case last Winter when approximately $1,000,000 was raised. Instead, 70 per cent will be spent for orthopedic services in localities making the contribution and 30 per cent for research.

The novel idea of having a birthday ball in practically every city and many of the small towns of the United States in celebration of the President's natal day kindled the imagination and stirred the enthusiasm of tens of thousands of persons all over the country. They were inspired by their affection for the genial President of the United States, who fought a brave fight to win back his health, through the

HOW TO HAVE A GAME SUPPLY

Sportmen of Texas, both those who wish a hunt and those who enjoy fishing have come to the choice of avoiding a modest license fee and having no game, or of paying it and having splendid hunting and fishing.

The state's game and game fish resources no longer are adequate,
except by carefully planned protection and propagation. Limited efforts so far, with about one-eighth the money per capita spent in some states, deer and turkey hunting has been improved until steadily growing throngs of hunters again
are getting ahead of the supply.

So the state game department has asked that a universal hunting license of $1.50 or $2 a year, and a universal fishing license of a modest sum be levied upon all adults who hunt or fish.

In this way, hatcheries, game preserves and sanctuaries and breeding grounds may be maintained and a steady supply of game produced and the spare regions stocked or re-stocked with appropriate game.

Without such license, existing hatcheries and breeding grounds can not be kept up properly and can not serve existing or future needs.

Game conservation and development has many true friends in the legislature.

Chemical Tests Advocated For Drunken Drivers

One of the outstanding needs of the public safety officials in dealing with the drinking drivers is a simple scientific method of measuring inebriety that will stand as evidence before a court or jury.

This method, the National Safety Council says, should be accurate, easily administered and inexpensive. In order to be of the widest possible benefit, unfortunately, while most authorities agree that one does not have to be "drunk" to be a menace when driving, and even small amounts of alcohol may measurably impair efficiency, they are not all in full accord as to what this amount of alcohol shall be. Nor have they standardized a test as yet, which can be used to determine the degree of intoxication.

Numerous tests, both chemical and visual, have been advocated and some have been selected. Most of the chemical tests, however, must be administered by doctors or skilled technicians, while some call for elaborate, expensive equipment. Both these factors tend to place them beyond reach of the average police department.

Individuals React Differently
One of the difficulties, of course, is the variability with which individuals react to alcohol. One person may absorb a given dose of alcohol more readily and more thoroughly than another and with different results. The alcohol may have been consumed under different physical conditions, as for example, on a full and an empty stomach. These variables, of course, are important.

The chemical test for determining the amount of alcohol in the system may be applied to the blood, saliva, urine, spinal fluid, exhaled breath, and in post mortem cases, tissues from the liver, kidneys and brain. Obviously most of these are beyond the skill of police officers and some are impractical for the smaller communities because of expense involved. The visual or "common sense" tests which are usually given by police cover such matters as breath, co-ordination, speech, manner, vision and general appearance. For example, can the suspect stand without aid? Can he walk a straight line, turn around and walk back again? Is his speech "thickened and blurred"? Is he blasphemous or abusive? Loud and boisterous? Is he violent, abusive, excited? Can he read? There are many variations of course and the foregoing are typical of the questions asked.

Problem Receives Study
Many authorities have been and are devoting considerable study to the problem, among them Professor Alexander O. Gettler of New York University; Professor R. N. Harger of the Indiana University School of Medicine; Dr. E. E. Bogen of Los Angeles; Professor C. W. Muehlberger of Northwestern University and Dr. W. L. Miles of Yale Institute of Human Relations. Much research has also been done in foreign countries, particularly in Sweden, Germany and England.

All of the authorities agree that alcohol blurs the vision, dulls the senses and slows down normal reaction time. Also they are generally agreed that it is the amount of alcohol present in the body fluids that actually registers the degree of intoxication, rather than the amount that may have been consumed, because of the "variables" previously mentioned. It also seems to be the consensus that even as little as .02 per cent of alcohol in body fluids will show that the suspect has been drinking when other signs may fall altogether. That when there is 1 per cent of alcohol in the body fluids there is sure to be a measurable loss of control; and that when there is 2 per cent of alcohol there is real intoxication with its irresponsibility, general helplessness and lack of control of mental and physical functions. In other words when such amount or more is to be found in the blood or urine there here can be reasonable doubt about the person being drunk.

When these tests shall have been standardized so that the findings will stand as shatter-proof legal evidence the enforcement problem in this many-sided subject of the drunken driver will be much nearer solution.

Menus Of The Day

According to the kitchen-sages and astrologers, the signs for January point to simplicity! Holiday decorations have been boxed away for another eleven months; Dad has sheepishly abandoned the gift-slippers in favor of those he has already "broken in"; Sister already has denied her new bicycle; Junior has hidden his too-gaudy tie. And Mother, proud of her holiday record of fancy dishes, turns once more to the simple fare of everyday. Not until the February holidays will party "deeds" be done again. But although in the meantime, the food will be simple, nourishing and inexpensive, it need not lack for flavor and interest as long as our pantry staples may be turned into a multitude of interesting dishes. One of the oldest of our staples is rice, and yet it becomes one of the newest with the hundreds of new recipes created for its use. Its mild flavor is a welcome contrast to the highly flavored foods of the holidays, and to cooks who have been busy with the preparation of fruit cakes, pies and fancy dishes, there's an added virtue in the fact that it needs no peeling, paring or other preliminaries before cooking. Pound for pound, it provides more stick-to-the-ribs nourishment than almost any of our basic foods, and it is as easy on the budget as is a rainbow on the eyes!

In the selection of recipes given here, rice proves it can take its place at more than one meal and in more than one place on the menu. (L.P.'s in menus marked with asterisks are given.)

BREAKFAST MENU

Grapefruit
*Scrambled Eggs and Rice
Cinnamon Toast
Milk Coffee

1-2 tsp. salt, 2 cups hot, cooked rice, 1 tsp. butter, 3 eggs, 1-4 tsp. black pepper.

Beat the eggs. Add the hot rice and seasonings. Mix well. Heat butter in a heavy frying pan and add rice and egg mixture. Fry until dry, stir with a broad spatula or pancake turner to prevent burning. Serve hot.

LUNCHEON MENU

Tomato Bouillon
Muffin Crisps
Escalloped Tuna Fish
Hot Rolls, Butter
*Coffee Rice Pudding
Coffee Rice Pudding

1-2 cup rice, 1 1/2 cups strong coffee, 1-2 tsp. salt, 2 1/2 cups milk, 3-4 cup brown sugar.

Wash rice and place in baking dish. Add remaining ingredients and cook in moderate oven (325 degrees F.) from two to three hours or until rice is soft and mixture is thick and creamy. Stir occasionally during first hour of baking to prevent rice from sticking to the bottom. If desired, a few chopped pasteurized dates may be added about half an hour before pudding is removed from oven. 6 servings.

SUPPER MENU

*Main-Dish Cheese Souffle
Jellied Vegetable Salad
Muffin Crisps
Gingerbread, Whipped Cream
Beverage

Main-Dish Cheese Souffle
1 1/2 cups cooked rice, 1 1/2 cups white sauce, 3 eggs, salt and paprika, 1-4 cups American cheese.

Season white sauce highly with paprika, then add cheese, which has been put through food chopper, stir constantly until melted, and turn in rice. Beat the egg yolks, stir in the cheese mixture, and then fold in egg whites which have been beaten stiff. Transfer to well-oiled baking dish, set in pan of hot water, and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 minutes. 6 servings.

SIMPLE DINNER MENU

Cranberry Juice Cocktail
*Pork Chops a la Dallas
Shredded Lettuce and Carrot Salad
French Dressing
Rolls
Cottage Pudding
Beverage

Pork Chops a la Dallas
1 cup rice, 4 pork chops, 1 onion, 1 can tomato soup, 2 tbsps. minced parsley, 2 tbsps. chopped celery.

Brown pork chops in frying pan, then remove and add the onion and celery to the pan and brown. Return the chops to the pan on top of the onion. Put a mound of rice on top of each chop. Pour the tomato soup around the chops and on top. Scatter the parsley over all and bake for about an hour in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.)

"Sugar and spice and everything nice" is what good desserts and confections are made of, just the same as are the good little girls of nursery fame. If you would have them (the foods, not the little girls) very, very good—don't spare the spice!

There is a spice for every dish, from the redolent clove to the nose-tickling mustard. For meats and salads, vegetable dishes and relishes, we have sage, thyme, bay, mace and a dozen others, not to mention the near-relatives of the seasoning family, such as chili powder and celery salt. Our favorites for sweet dishes are mainly ginger, cloves, and cinnamon, but there are also cardamon, allspice and nutmeg.

Our grandmothers used spices more freely than do we partly, it is true, because preservatives often substituted for refrigeration in the old days, but also because the good old days, cooks knew how to use them! Modern cooks rely upon recipes instead of intuition but if you are clever you will let imagination suggest and guide you when and what to spice! Don't use too much spice; be cautious until you find out what varieties your family likes; be sparing with it when you cook for children; but do learn your spice story!

See how spice helps give a zest and tang to these good things:

Cinnamon Fudge Frosting
2 cups chocolate, 2 cups sugar, 1 tsp. cinnamon, 2 tbsps. white karo, 2-3 cup milk, 1-4 tsp. salt, 2 tbsps. butter, 1 tsp. vanilla.

Cut chocolate into small pieces and cook with sugar, cinnamon, karo, salt and milk to soft ball stage (235 degrees F.) Add butter without stirring. Allow mixture to cool until lukewarm (110 degrees F.) Then add the vanilla and beat until the frosting is creamy. If necessary, frosting may be thinned with a little cream.

Spiced Tea Bars
1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup water, 1-2 cup butter, 2 cups pasteurized dates, 1 tsp. flour, 2 tbsps. baking powder, 2 cups flour, 2 tsp. salt, 1-2 tsp. nutmeg, 1-4 tsp. allspice, 1-4 tsp. cloves, 1 cup nutsmeats, 1-2 tsp. lemon extract, 1 tsp. vanilla.

Place dates (pitted), butter, sugar and water in a large saucepan; bring slowly to boiling point; cook until thick or about 5 minutes. Cool. Sift flour, salt, bakings powder and spices. Stir the sifted dry ingredients, nutsmeats (chopped) and flavorings, into date mixture. Spread mixture in a layer at least 2 inches deep in a pan which has been oiled and lined with heavy waxed paper. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 45 to 60 minutes. When cool cut into bars and store in tightly covered box. May be frosted when ready to serve. 24 bars.

Spiced Bridge Beverages

1 1/2 cups water, 1-2 cup sugar, 1-2 cup white karo, 1 cup orange juice, 4 cups pineapple juice, 12

The parts of the beef that may be used for cornering are the brisket, plate, navel, rump, flank, boneless chuck and the round (comparatively inexpensive cuts and therein lies one of the virtues of cornered beef). The beef is kept in the pickle, salt, sweetening and water from three to four weeks. A mild cure is best and this is accomplished by determining accurately the proper amounts of ingredients in the pickle. The pickle is kept fresh. During the curing process it is changed two to three times.

Now that you know something of how the cornered beef is prepared, the next step is to learn what to do with it once you have given your spare change to your meat dealer and the cornered beef is "at rest" on the kitchen table.

Although my method of preparation may not differ materially from yours, assuming that you too enjoy cornered beef, I shall give it to you and we can compare notes. Sometimes little details of preparation make a world of difference.

After washing it with cold water, I cover it with more cold water, put it on the stove and let it come to a boil. Then I reduce the temperature and let it cook slowly for three or four hours, until it is tender. About 15 minutes before it is done, I add the cabbage, a nice solid head cut in sixths or fourths (that depends upon the size of the head). A reminder here—Cook the cabbage only long enough to make it tender. Many persons cook it for so long a time that it not only loses some of its wealth of mineral salts and vitamins, but it loses its distinctive flavor and becomes just a mushy indistinguishable vegetable of the same flavor as the beef. It loses all its color too and becomes unattractive.

Cornered beef looks its best if sliced in thin slices. Arrange these slices attractively on a hot platter, surround them with the cabbage sections, and garnish with parsley sprigs or pickle rings. The pink of the beef, the delicate green and white of the cabbage, the darker green of the garnish make the dish a most tempting one.

Cabbage and cornered beef are cooked so often in combination that just like Pat and Mike or Mr. Gallagher and Mr. Shean we expect them to be always together. Spinach is just as good as cabbage, to my way of thinking, and so are green string beans. Try these combinations.

Now very possibly you won't eat all the meat at one meal. That which is left over and that which wouldn't slice—what can we do with it? You guessed it—cornered beef hash. Someone, I shan't tell who, said that hash was never made, it accumulated. But he was wrong. One makes cornered beef hash and to make it brown two tablespoons of minced onion for three minutes in one tablespoon of butter or margarine. Add two cups of chopped cornered beef, two cups of chopped boiled potatoes and one-fourth teaspoon of pepper, which have been well mixed. Spread evenly in the pan and cook over a slow fire for about thirty minutes or until mixture is thoroughly heated. If hash is too dry, add some hot water, milk or stock. One can fry it in individual cakes and serve each cake topped with a poached egg, or one can make the hash in the oven. Add about 2-3 cup of milk. Bake about thirty minutes. Add two tablespoons of minced parsley and a dash of nutmeg to cornered beef hash the next time you make it. I believe you might like the variation.

Does your family like New England boiled dinners? Next time you plan one, use cornered beef for the meat. It's delicious.

I have mentioned the best known methods for preparing cornered beef, so now for a few of the less known dishes.

Stuff tomatoes (or, if you can't get tomatoes, green peppers) with a mixture of cooked cornered beef and buttered bread crumbs. Serve with beautifully broiled bacon and you have a dish that is good enough whole cloves, 1-2 cup lemon juice, crushed ice.

Boil water, sugar, karo and spices together for one minute, strain and add to fruit juices and mix thoroughly. Pour over crushed ice. Serves 8.

Spley Gingerbread
The gingery-cinnamon flavor of gingerbread baking is enough to convert anybody to the use of spice! To fill your kitchen with fragrance, as well as your mouths with delicious taste, prepare a package of the new gingerbread mix made with Mary Washington's recipe; just add a cup of water to 1/2 package contents and bake. Serve hot, with whipped cream—it's delicious!

"Spiced-Right" Cookie Fillings
Many cooks have their own favorite filling for the ever popular filled cookies, but the two given below may be put on the preferred list of "best-sellers."

Cinnamon Filling: Place 1 1/2 cups pitted and sliced pasteurized dates in large saucepan. Add 1-2 cup brown sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup water and 1-8 teaspoon cinnamon and cook slowly until a paste is formed. Cool, and spread on round of cookie dough. Cover with another round and cookies are ready for the oven.

Ginger Filling: Mix together 1-2 cup preserved Canton ginger, 1-2 cup blanched almonds and 1-2 cup sliced, packaged citron; put through food chopper. Add 1-3 cup dark karo and a little salt. Spread on layer of cookie dough, top with second layer of dough and bake.

Don't Trifle With Coughs

Don't let them get a strangle hold. Fight them quickly. Growling coughs help in one powerful but harmless. Pleasant to take. No narcotics. Your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creon-Lion. (adv.)

to serve at a company luncheon. And here is another just as good!

ment Sunday.

Did you ever get tangled up in an Indian stake hold? Well, don't try it. Wrestlers use it a lot, but from now on it will have a new meaning to us. It feels a lot worse than it looks. Much to our physical discomfort, the stake hold was demonstrated last night. "Now don't be afraid," the demonstrator said, "I won't apply any leverage. This is just to show you how its done." Just what happened after that we don't remember very clearly, but our spindly underpins were so entangled that we were completely helpless. Then followed a lecture on how pressure could be applied by a simple twist. The demonstrator begged off a demonstration of the pressure part. With the aid of our informant and others we soon got possession of our own pins, but they haven't been the same since. The writer's worst by gait is not the result of anything he drank.

By a somewhat devious route we learn that Tack Dennis, Big Spring's 31 stellar gridman, has been chosen to captain Gloomy Gus Henderson's Tulsa Golden Hurricane next fall.

The Brown basketball team is scheduled to enter a tournament at Pleasant Valley tomorrow. The next week they will enter either a tournament at Courtney or one at Knott, probably the Courtney meet, according to Coach Elmer Miller. The following week they will participate in their county tournament.

It has been suggested that a meeting be called of representatives of the various city leagues.

Beginning Tuesday, new low prices will go into effect at the Big Spring Athletic club's wrestling shows, and we have the management's word that some real grapplers will be brought here. Some difficulty has been experienced in lining-up a card for next week, but arrangements are expected to be made in time for announce-

COSDEN OILERS, STEERS TO TANGLE TONIGHT

Refiners Have Big Edge In Play

George Brown's high school Steer team, rated as one of the strongest schoolboy cage combinations in this section, will run into hardwood dynamite tonight when they clash with the Cosden Oilers' West Texas leading amateur team.

Henniger's crack crew is made up of former high school and college stars. On his string he boasts such players as Hopper and Morgan, both former Steer stars.

The Oilers have whalloped the strongest amateur teams, including the powerful Christoval Bats, so should experience no great difficulty in tripping the current schoolboy club.

Tip-off time is 8:30. Admission for students has been set at ten cents, and for adults, fifteen cents.

'PINGING IN THE RAIN' Jimmy McClure, 18, To Seek World Title In London Table Tennis Meet

JIMMY MCCLURE

INDIANAPOLIS, (Sp)—A rainstorm started little Jimmy McClure of Indianapolis on his way to the national table tennis championship he won a few nights ago in New York city.

The 18-year-old boy, who will make a try for the world's title in London in February, was playing outdoor tennis one day a few years ago when rain stopped the match.

On invitation of his opponent, they went to a basement where the match was finished on a table tennis outfit. The "bug" bit Jimmy right there and he has been playing the game almost daily since.

Young McClure developed his skill quickly after joining a local table tennis league and it was not long until he was the best player in Indianapolis. Last spring he won the national Ping Pong association championship.

In winning the table tennis title in New York he had to defeat Carl Schiff, the reigning national champion and a resident of the tournament city. The big prize for the winner of the tournament was a trip to London to participate in the world's championship beginning next February 1.

Since his sensational performance in New York, McClure, along with Coleman Clark of Chicago and Viktor Barana and Sandor Glanz, both of Hungary, has been touring the country giving exhibition matches. Jimmy McClure also is a top dancer of no mean ability and while in school was an exceptionally good pupil. He entered high school when only 11 years old, and has planned to matriculate in Indiana university next fall.

Arkansas Is Froggie Foe Two-Game Series Scheduled For Tonight And Saturday

FORE WORTH, (Sp)—Out of the conference cellar by Saturday! That is the battle-cry just now of the Texas Christian University Horned Frog basketball team. The Frogs, losers in both of their conference tilts to date, intend to try their best to benefit themselves (and to throw the conference race into still more of a muddle) by heading the undefeated Arkansas five in the two-game series here Friday and Saturday nights.

Coach Dutch Meyer, in an effort to speed up the floor play of his team, has announced that he may start Byron Saam and Vernon Brown in the place of Capt. Judy Truelson and Walter Roach, who have started the other two games.

The Frogs, with only two losses in the season, have found inexperience their greatest handicap. Coach Meyer has been predicting that his charges would deal out plenty of misery to some of the leaders before the season is over, and the fans are hoping that the Razorbacks will be the victims of some of it.

After the Arkansas games, the Christians will be absent from conference competition for two weeks while the squad works out upon final examinations for the fall semester. The next game for T. C. U. will be against Baylor in Waco, Feb. 2.

Mrs. Amos R. Wood and Mr. and Mrs. Denver Dunn left Thursday afternoon for Dublin, being called there by the serious illness of Mrs. Wood's and Mrs. Dunn's father, J. W. Pittman. Mr. Pittman has been in failing health for a number of months, and he was reported very low Thursday.

Gasoline Prices Drop In Dallas

DALLAS—Gasoline prices at about 30 Dallas filling stations fell to a new low Thursday, with prices posted at 8 1-2 cents a gallon for fuel. This was a drop of 1-2 cent below the minimum level prevailing here for several days. All major stations and many independents maintained a 10-cent price minimum, however, for this grade of gasoline. The low means 3 1-2-cent retail gasoline exclusive of taxes and less than the cost of legal crude required for manufacture.

Zat So? You'll Hear More, Says Dopey To Dizzy

ST. LOUIS, (Sp)—Jack Dean, young pitcher from Big Spring, Texas, who will work out with the Browns this spring, is about ready to call out the family Deaneologist.

It's just "too bad" if the better known Deans—Dizzy and Daffy—have never heard of him, says Jack Dizzy, recently denied relationship with Jack, who asserted he was a cousin of the Cardinals' famous pitching brothers.

In a letter to Dizzy, published here Thursday, Jack said: "So you've never heard of me before? Well, that's too bad, but people in this part of Texas don't think you and Paul are the only pitching Deans. Open your ears, for you are going to hear plenty about me from now on."

A card to Manager Rogers Hornsby of the Browns was signed "Jack (Dopey) Dean."

"I don't care what Dizzy and Paul say," commented Vice President Branch Ricketz of the Cardinals when he heard this, "he's a Dean, I'm sure of it."

I did not kill Osborne

By VICTOR BRIDGES

Chapter 41 EXPLOSION

Quick as an owl Jimmy twisted himself around, and thrusting them down the passage. By the time I gained the main corridor, Jimmy had already crossed the hall.

He flung open the door exactly as Molly reached it, and in another moment the firm ground was beneath our feet, and we were all three running for the iron gate. I was just thanking my stars that I hadn't locked it when with appalling suddenness the end came.

There was a rumbling roar behind us; something struck me violently between the shoulder blades, and half paralyzed by a sickening stab of pain, I pitched forward full length on the rough gravel.

"Gawd! you!" Jimmy's gasped-out exclamation was the first thing to penetrate into my numbed brain, and struggling up on to my hands and knees, I stared vacantly about me.

The whole causeway was littered with pieces of broken masonry. One huge block, just to my right, had half embedded itself in the grass and stretched out beside it, white and inert, lay the prostrate figure of Molly.

With a horrible fear clenching at my heart I crawled pitifully towards her.

"Molly!" I cried. "Molly, darling!"

At the sound of my voice she opened her eyes. For a moment she still seemed utterly dazed; then as I slid my arm round her and lifted her gently up, life and consciousness ebbed back into her face.

"What's happened, Nick?" she asked. "I-I thought we'd all been killed."

"It's a miracle we weren't. The whole place has been blown to smithereens. I dragged out your mother-in-law, and very tenderly wiped the dust and mud from her cheeks.

"Are you hurt?" I asked. "Did any of that stuff hit you?"

"No, I don't think so. I just heard a roar, and then I don't remember anything else. I guess I must have fainted or something silly like that." She drew in a quick breath.

"And you, Nick?"

"Nothing to grumble about," I replied. "I stopped a brickbat or something, with my shoulder, but it doesn't seem to have done me any particular harm."

I looked round for Jimmy and discovered him almost at my elbow. Like both of us he was covered from head to foot with white dust, and a thin trickle of blood was oozing from his nose.

"What's up, sir?" he demanded breathlessly. "The young lady ain't comin' it—'as she?"

"We're both intact, Jimmy. I assured him. "How about you?"

"Me, sir? Oh, I'm fluk. Bumped me nose a bit when I come down but that ain't nothing."

He wiped away the blood with his hand and cast a slightly awed glance at the smoking ruin behind us. "Made a decent job of it, haven't they, sir? Never seen it better, bustup, not even in the pictures."

In a sobering flash, the danger of our position suddenly came home to me.

"We mustn't stay here," I said hastily. "That devil Orloff can't be far away, and if he sees that we've escaped—"

I broke off. "We must get down under the bank and make for the boat," I added. "Do you think you can manage it, Molly?"

With the aid of my hand she scrambled shakily to her feet.

"Yes, I'm all right, Nick. It's Jerry I'm thinking of. Oughtn't we?"

"He knows what happened," I interrupted. "If he's alive he's on his way back; now our best chance is to lie up under those gorse bushes and wait for him there."

She raised no further opposition, and disregarding the unpleasant pair that was kneeling at my right shoulder, I led the way forward to the gate.

From here to the beach the distance was not more than fifty yards. The low-lying ground between was protected from the tide by a rough sea wall, and under cover of this bank we crept along in single file until we reached the little patch of higher ground where we had brought the dinghy ashore.

To my intense relief it was still there.

"One of us must look out for Jerry," I said. "You'd better do that, Molly, while we get the boat launched. Keen behind those bushes, and don't show yourself unless you see him."

nodding her head silently she moved towards the gorse, and without further delay Jimmy and I set about our task. It took us some time, for I could only make use of my left arm.

Jimmy, however, performed his share of the work manfully, and after several pauses for rest, we succeeded in tugging our craft to the water's edge, from which position she could be pushed off at a moment's notice.

This done, we crawled back to where Molly was lying, and dropped down alongside of her.

"There's no sign of him, Nick," she whispered. "I'm beginning to feel frightened."

"You needn't worry yet," I replied. "He's not that pistol of Dawson's with him, and if there's any trouble he won't stick at using it. All we can do is to wait here until he chooses to show up."

She glanced round at us both. "You're the most wonderful boy in the world, Jimmy," she said in a low voice. "How did you know that we were locked in, and however did you manage to get ashore?"

He scratched his head. "It was like this, miss. I was sitting up on deck 'aving a look at the place when all of a sudden I see a bloke comin' sneakin' out of the front door."

"Soon as I clapped my eyes on 'im I knew who 'e was. 'Gosh, I says to meself, 'if it ain't that blinkin' doctor!' and before the words, as you might say, was 'ardly out of me mouth, 'e'd nipped off round the corner and was legging

it away up the road.

"Well, it didn't take me long to guess that 'e'd done the dirty on you, so I off with me boots and shirt and drops in over the side. The tide was running a bit strong like, but I ain't what you might call a bad 'and at swimming—got a prize for it at the Battersea baths last year, I did."

"It was that bloomin' door that was the real trouble. The parisher 'ad shut it be'ind him when 'e come out, and seeing as there weren't no time to waste, I just picks up a bit o' wood, and bashes in the window."

"Lucky I did, too, or we wouldn't 'a' be in a mess now."

We both stared at him for a moment without speaking.

"James," I said slowly, "as Miss O'Brien has remarked, 'as a bloody marvel. If we ever get out of this—"

"Look, Nick, look! There he is—straight in front of us!"

Molly, who had turned round

AMELIA RESTED, VISITS MOTHER

again, was pointing through the bushes and, jumping to my feet, I caught sight of the distant figure of Jerry just emerging through a gap in the hedge that bounded the lawn.

He was heading in the direction of the factory.

"Shall I give 'im a whistle, sir?" inquired Jimmy.

"Not a bad idea," I agreed. He inserted two grimy fingers into the corners of his mouth and emitted a shrill blast. Jerry pulled up sharply.

For a moment he stood gazing about him, and then as a second and still more penetrating summons echoed across the marsh, he wheeled round and came hurrying towards us.

"You'd better tell him, Nick," said Molly. "No good our both trying to talk."

Picking his way from one firm tuft to another until he reached the path, Jerry broke once more into a steady run.

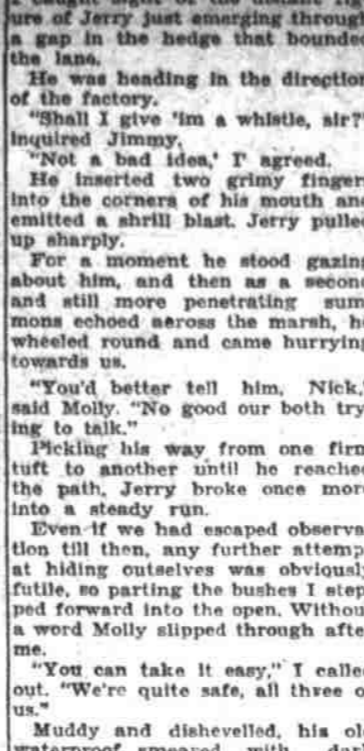

Even if we had escaped observation till then, any further attempt at hiding ourselves was obviously futile, so paring the bushes I stepped forward into the open. Without a word Molly slipped through after me.

"You can take it easy," I called out. "We're quite safe, all three of us."

Muddy and dishevelled, his old waterproof smock still dripping with stains, Jerry stumbled hurried up the slope. There was a queer look in his eyes, which I had never exactly seen before, a look of overwhelming relief, coupled with a kind of suppressed excitement.

corporation, is getting favorable mention for the job should Biggs decide to return to private practice. Reshaping - All preliminary drafts of the new AAA and NRA are taking into account the probability that the Supreme court will knock out invasions of state rights over commerce. The slipshod language of AAA giving the secretary of agriculture the power to tax will be revised in the hope of saving the processing tax system. Both big laws are based upon declaration of a national emergency. Some lawyers are wondering whether such a basis carries much weight in view of the "hot off" decision. They think the laws should be based on clear constitutional powers. Neighbor - Word comes that "Strong Man" Calles has lost his grip on Mexico. Three cabinet members selected by him have been dropped by President Cardenas. Calles went to Sinaloa and thence to Los Angeles for a surgical operation. Secretary Hull has put the snuffer on a house resolution designed to inquire into religious matters in Mexico. He politely told the author that Mexico's business is not America's business.

MOORE HAS IMPRESSIVE CAGE RECORD

The Moore Lobos, coached by Miss Arab Phillips, have scored 617 points to opponents' 456. Back row left to right: Troy Newton, James Hoodenpile, Curtis Winterrowd, Ray McKinnon. Front row: Buster Broughton, Joe Lusk, Carl Hammock, J. D. Rowland, Miss Arab Phillips (coach).

Cooled - The telegraph and cable business has two separate stories on the fire. One is the communications code, which would jack up wages and shorten hours for telegraph employees. The other is the merger of wire companies recently mentioned here. It's understood the administration is eager to put the code through shortly. It would help counteract the growing impression that codes are going out of style. Postal Telegraph is willing - even though the $2,000,000 increase in annual labor costs would virtually double the present deficit. Why? Because Western Union would have to shell out $3,000,000 more a year. Postal is willing to play along on the merger too. In fact insiders say that interests behind International Tel. & Tel. (of which Postal is a subsidiary) would be only too glad to dump their whole nightmare in somebody else's lap. But again Western Union can't see any advantages. Both pots have been cooled somewhat by the supreme court decision nullifying federal oil control. Conservatives cherish the idea of hope that maybe they won't have to toe disagreeable marks just because Uncle Sam says so. They will spar for time until they know for sure. David - Some months back the tiny republic of Panama brought action to compel the U. S. to pay the difference between devalued dollars and gold dollars for its Canal Zone lease. Now legal sharpshooters wonder whether the Department of Justice realizes it chucked its defense against Panama out the window by publicly admitting to the supreme court that international contracts are subject to international law and therefore cannot be abrogated by acts of congress. For practical purposes it won't matter. A settlement has already been arranged. It won't be advertised because it gives Panama a sweeping victory. In consideration of adding a speck of land to the lease (to save our face) Panama will get a new contract providing payment of enough more dollars to make up for devaluation - plus a guarantee that future remittances will be made on a fixed basis of exchange. Comment runs that David's slingshot was no more effective. Distraction - Senator Wheeler is supplanting Huey Long as New York's pet bete noire. His proposal to nationalize the railroad's isn't expected to pass. But Wall Street fears it will be enough of a distraction to gum up plans for constructive legislation. Rail men can think of no Senator they'd less rather see as head of the interstate commerce committee. Profit - President F. E. Williamson of New York Central recently made an optimistic statement about his stock's prospects. Thereupon his stock promptly hit a new low for the year. Comment runs that his stockholders must class him as a prophet with those who said that Prohibition was here to stay. Sidelights - Long-term investments of foreign funds in the United States are far above normal. There are 5,885,000 savings bank depositors in New York state - an all-time record. The Home Owners' Loan Corp. will get a billion dollars more for distress mortgage loans. (Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

Experts To Realize Futility Of Guessing At Mack's Actions

(By The Associated Press) Some day the experts are going to realize the futility of trying to guess what Connie Mack is going to do. In their minds they have retired him every fall for the last 25 years; planned trades for him that never were consummated; and made all sorts of decisions in advance for the veteran manager of the Philadelphia Athletics. And yet Connie doesn't seem interested in their random predictions for he goes right on doing just as he pleases - and with considerable success. Fact is, more often than not he does exactly the opposite of what is expected of him. That comes under the heading of strategy. Recall, if you please, the opening game of the 1929 world series between the Athletics and the Cubs in Chicago. Everyone was debating as to which of his three star pitchers - Grove, Earnshaw or Walberg - he would choose, the wily Connie completely crossed them all and sent the shop-worn Howard Ehmke to the mound. Mack himself must have been at least mildly astonished when the veteran slowballer not only won the game but also set up a new world series strike-out record by fanning 13 Cub batters. Mack has repeatedly named this as the outstanding thrill of his 51 years in baseball. After having mentally bounced Babe Ruth all around the American league, and a good part of the National as well, the guessers decided that the right spot for the Bambino was with the Athletics. Hadn't Mack and Ruth been very chummy on that Oriental junket? they reasoned. Why, the pair had their pictures snapped together and everything! Upon his return from the far east Mack was very generous in praising the fine job Ruth made of handling the All-Stars. He pictured Ruth in the role of ambassador of good will and lauded him for all he had done in the interests of peace and better understanding. All those kind words were just a build-up for the big announcement, the crystal gazers figured to themselves - Babe Ruth would surely be the next manager of the A's. That would have been just fine, had Connie Mack heard the rumors. But he hadn't, or if he had paid no attention to them. First of all he did not need a manager at present, inasmuch as he was determined to handle the Athletics for the next eight seasons, i. e., until he reaches 80. He has no use for a "good will ambassador" around Shibe park. What he really wants is a fast, young, hard-hitting outfielder but Babe Ruth hardly fits that picture. Looks like they've guessed wrong again. There is one other angle the guessers have overlooked - Ruth still is the property of the New York Yankees and Col. Jake Ruppert insists that to date no one has approached him with any kind of an offer for the big slugger. Connie Mack is back at his desk, after the vacation in the far east, making plans for the coming campaign. He plans to use Jimmy Foy behind the plate, as he did when the chubby-faced Jimmy reported to the A's a rookie. Frank Higgins will be on third base as usual, despite all the trade rumors. More than that - just sit tight until the season rolls around, you won't get to first base guessing.

DIONNE QUINTUPLETS TO BE PRESENTED ON RITZ SCREEN

Film Depicting A Day In Their Lives To Be Shown By Ritz Theatre Sunday And Monday

A full reel of exclusive pictures of the Dionne quintuplets, produced by Pathe by arrangement with their guardians and the Canadian authorities will form one of the units of a road show program playing at the Ritz theatre Sunday and Monday. The quintuplets are shown from dawn to bedtime, feeding, sleeping, bathing, laughing, crying. Their celebrated country doctor who is soon to be knighted by the British king in recognition of the intelligence and devotion he displayed in bringing these little human mites into the world and in guiding their fragile lives through the most difficult months of their existence, discourses on some of the problems of his charges and is shown discussing with the nurses who are on duty night and day the reports on each individual of the quint in turn. The modest house in which the little Dionne girls were born is shown, as are their parents, brothers and sisters. Also the special hospital and its equipment, the sterilization of mothers' milk which is received daily from Chicago and Toronto. The eye-dropper feeding of orange juice, the special clothing and the quintuplets' wash line are other items depicted in this most unique human interest motion picture. From the factual drama of the Dionnes the road show program leaps to Arabian Nights fantasy to present "Chu Chin Chow," a musical dramatization of the story of All Baba and the Forty Thieves.

TEXAS TOPICS

By Raymond Brooks

The new Petch public utility bill - H. R. 12 - combines the remarkable provision that every record of the proposed utility commission shall be kept secret from the public and everyone except "interested utilities" with all the futilities of the bills which for 12 years have denied the state a chance to regulate utility rates. This is not the administration bill, being drawn by Gov. James V. Allred. The Allred plan gives the state sufficient control to readminister utility rate control. The Petch bill, containing all the defects of all the League of Texas Municipalities bill, would diffuse rate powers among city and village councils and county commissioners courts. Sec. 18-h of the Petch bill relating to orders of the state commission says: "A copy of such order, authorization or certificate may be obtained by application therefor in writing by any public utility affected thereby, or by any municipality in which is situated any property of any such public utility. No one other than the commission or a municipality or a utility having direct interest therein, or a court, shall be permitted or allowed to look at, investigate or examine or have a copy of any paper, record or data in the files or possession of the public utilities commission." This would make the proceedings, orders and records of a state governmental agency as secret as the consultations of United States supreme court. Salary schedule in the Petch bill is $7,500 a year salary for each of the commissioners, but $10,000 a year for its chief counsel - not responsible to the attorney general's department; and $7,500 a year for the chief engineer, and $6,000 a year for the chief auditor and chief statistician, and secretary; three assistant counsels, three assistant engineers, three assistant statisticians, three assistant auditors and three assistant secretaries, at not exceeding $3,000 a year apiece. One of the chief points of attack of the bill is that it proposes that the utility companies "shall furnish" statements of their costs, etc., but if they refuse, or if the commission is dissatisfied, it shall make its own figures, but calls for figures involved in endless dispute, without fixing a basis or method of reaching them. It calls for approximately four times the minimum required work of fixing then returns to modern celebrity to present the famous baseball Deans in a Vitaphone comedy entitled "Dizzy and Daffy." Walt Disney's technician Billy Symphony, "The Tortoise and the Hare" wings the show again to fable. And News once more to modernity.

valuations, and for certain valuation bases that would require judicial determination of a court to set up. It falls not only for a valuation of the actual amount of money invested in a utility, but also for the controversial "fair value," for replacement value, less depreciation, and also the operating costs. That fixes three conflicting bases of valuation in the bill. In view of the almost hopeless immensity of valuation all utility properties on one basis, this multiple method would make it impossible for the state to complete the valuation task in less than a dozen years. The bill also suggests the state can be required to make "valuations" from time to time. The bill carries all the former defects of letting cities and towns and county commissioners court attack the primary job of rate-making and then for appeals to the state commission, then appeals to district court, and on up through the appellate courts. In contrast, the Allred plan, basically, is to persuade those rate matters to the state, make its fact-finding conclusive, and allow appeal on law questions only direct to supreme court. The Allred bill definitely fixes the basis of valuation, and excludes what may not be included in the valuation, and limits the fair return at 4 to 8 per cent. Mr. Petch's bill, instead of making the fact-finding of a hearing final, has the language proposing that when the state commission decides for itself any of the valuation bases he calls for, "it shall be prima facie the true valuation." This sort of provision in other cases has been attacked as void, and so held by courts. For more than a dozen years, cities, in their fight against giving the state power to regulate public utility rates consistently have killed every utility control bill before the legislature. Their substitute, so far as can be determined now, was almost identical with the Petch bill, and would have given the state only a very expensive and almost useless appellate board of review, whose work could be subjected to review by three courts after its orders were made.

Georgetown Oil Mill Seed House Destroyed By Fire

GEORGETOWN, AP - Fire destroyed the seed house of the Georgetown Oil Mill here Thursday with a loss estimated at more than $35,000. Approximately 1,000 tons of cotton-seed were in the building. In addition several bales of lint cotton, several bales of new feed sacks, 25 sacks of salt and several hundred bushels of corn were ruined. The Georgetown fire department succeeded in keeping the fire from spreading to other buildings. The seed house had been in service since 1908 when it was built by J. E. Cooper, pioneer mill manager. Mrs. H. S. Meswimen, 604 Ayford street, suffered a paralytic stroke Thursday and her condition is reported as very serious.

Mrs. Cecil Reid Is Honored At Shower

Mrs. Cecil Reid, who before her marriage was Miss Lillian Crawford, was honored for a lovely bridal shower recently at the home of Mrs. C. A. Ferguson. Mrs. Roy Crook was co-hostess. After several games, Mrs. Reid was led to the door by little Jeannie Lawson who told her to pull a string. She did so and was showered with multi-colored confetti, then directed to the bedroom and found a rainbow arched across the room. At one end was a pot of gold which was laden with many lovely gifts. Mrs. Reid unwrapped them and passed them around to be admired. All guests were invited in to the candle-light dining room. In the center of the table was a beautiful bride's cake which held all the bridal symbols and the little bride and groom. Dainty refreshments of open-faced sandwiches, angel food cake and hot tea were served to the following: Mrs. Reid, Jimmie Mitchell, Jess Johnson, Ella Crawford, E. W. Hogue, C. E. Calloway, Carl Lawson, D. A. Sims, Claude Walters, O. B. Hull, Ray Shaw, Ted Bishop, Gene Acuff, Bill Everett, Morris Burns, Elmer Dyer, Roy Pearce, Faye Harding, C. A. Ferguson and Roy Crook; Misses Laura Waidle, Josephine Tripp, Allen Ball, Ovig Marie Watson, Mary Burns, Eleanor Gates, Bernice Haynie, Dorothy Rhctan and Jeanine Lawson. Those sending gifts were: Mmes. Raymond Smith, Alice Bunch, James Eason, Ollie Anderson and A. Sikos; Misses Frances Gilliam; Messrs. Frank Powell, Joe Black and Lane Hudson; Mr. and Mrs. Rance King of Lubbock.

Inclement Weather Postpones Jamboree

Inclement weather and forecast of rain and possibly snow Friday again caused the postponement of the district No. 1 jamboree. Drizzling rain continuing through Friday caused the grounds to become slippery and Clarence Dey district commissioner, feared that if weather turned colder as forecast many boys might catch colds. Mr. and Mrs. Leo (Bucket) Hare are the parents of a baby daughter born Friday. The young lady has been named Olive Jean.

Follow The Straight Line

"A STRAIGHT line is the shortest distance between two points." That holds for any two points—your pocketbook and your list of wants, for example. Follow the straight line, and you'll save yourself time, trouble and money.

Use the advertising columns of this newspaper as guide posts. In them, you find late news of what's to be had in the markets of the world. No need for you to meander about from store to store, comparing, pricing, judging, guessing values. The advertisements tell you the names of merchants and manufacturers you can trust. There you read what's new, what's favored, what's offered confidently for your inspection. The advertisements in this paper take you into more stores than you could visit in a month.

There's no high-pressure selling, no rush, no uncertainty to this daily review of markets. Form the good habit of shopping by the straight-line method—you'll buy with assurance, with economy and with satisfaction.
