I Am Your Flag

I am the flag of the United States of America.
I am called Old Glory.
I am called the star Spangled Banner.
I am the rockets red glare;
the bombs bursting in air.
I am the imminence of patriotism.
I am the trenches in France, Belgium,
Anzio, Normandy, Omaha Beach,
Guadalcanal, and Korea. I am the jungle of Vietnam and the sands of Desert Storm and the streets of Bosnia.
I am "One nation under God".
I am the names of those who never came back to keep this republic free. When you salute me, you are actually saluting them.
I am the symbol of America.
The home of the proud, the brave and free.

Bale Contamination Complaints Increase

"U.S. COTTON has long been recognized as being among the highest quality cottons in the world," states Dr. William F. Lalor, vice president of Agricultural Research at Cotton Incorporated. "Whether it be our significant advances in length and strength over the last decade, or as a result of the tremendous amount of data available on each bale due to the use of HVI and Cotton Incorporated's Engineer Fiber Selection (EFS) System, both domestic and foreign mills have come to expect consistently high quality U.S. cotton with which they can produce the cotton products that are currently fueling the high level of consumer demand for cotton." However, this reputation has the potential to become tainted as a result of an alarming increase in lint contamination in recent crops. Contamination has increased so much so that mills are searching for ways to find some other entity in the cotton marketing chain to share in the cost of claims that are being filed against them by their customers. "The problem is that prevention is best done in the fields and at gins," emphasized Lalor. "It is very difficult to prevent the problem in a modern mill opening room." Producers and ginners must, therefore, give serious thought to how they can prevent plastic and non-cotton, fibrous material from contaminating their cotton, because contamination is a very real and increasing problem. Lalor emphasizes, "Think of all the clothing items made from synthetics, and all the plastic wrappers and packaging materials found around fields, machinery sheds and gins, and you will quickly understand the need to have a proactive plan to keep them out of the cotton. Above all, producers and ginners must remember that tarps and tie-downs are major sources of contaminants." Lalor continues, "We also all use items made from natural fibers that will contaminate cotton—even dyed cotton is a contaminant! Wool hats and gloves that can get into the seed-cotton or lint stream; sisal or jute twine and rope; jute fabrics; and, of course, cotton sweaters and other garments that are removed during the heat of the day and put down where they might get into seed cotton, are also all potential sources of contamination!"

PHS Top Students Named

PHS Valedictorian Yancey House and Salutatorian Jacob Lester
The Plains High School graduating class of 1997 is headed up by two young men who are true achievers. Valedictorian Yancey House is the son of Wayne and Phylis House, and has lived in Plains all his life. His maternal grandparents are Dot Wolfe and the late Charles Wolfe of Fort Worth, and paternal grandparents are R.W. House and the late Veona House of Goldwithe.

Yancey maintained a 96.157 grade average, to earn Valedictorian honors, earned a scholarship to Abilene Christian University, where he will be a pre-med student, and plans "to become a surgeon, and have a wife and two kids".

Jacob Lester, the class Salutatorian, is the son of Bruce and Jan Lester, and is also a Plains native. His maternal grandparents are Buddy and Lee Hanna of Plains, and Tenny and Bob Lester of Austin. He achieved the second highest grade point average of 96.0. He too has medical career goals, and will attend Texas Tech University as a pre-med student, and will minor in chemistry.

Both young men were active in PHS sporting events, were members of the National Honor Society and the Student Council, and competed in numerous UIL events.

New Superintendent welcomed here

James Haynes, recently named Superintendent of the Plains Independent School District, spent last Friday here meeting school staff and faculty, and working on plans for the coming school session. He was met by a number of residents at a reception in the Resource Center that afternoon. He is shown here being greeted by John, front, Tyrel, Tami and Lee Tyson,

Is this Joe III, IV, V, VI ?

Last Wednesday, May 14, we received a call from subscriber Morris Lowe, who couldn't conceal a bit of excitement in his voice. He said he was going to tell us a story just a bit hard to believe, but was true.

Seems some fifty odd years ago, Morris' mother found a turtle (tortoise) in her backyard. Knowing they helped control insects in her plants, she would occasionally feed the turtle pieces of bread. The beast stayed around the entire summer, and she was surprised when next spring the same turtle, recognized by a strange mark on its back, showed up looking for more insects, and possibly more bread. She kept feeding the turtle, and named it "old Joe".

Morris said last year on May 14, which happens to be his birthday, he found a turtle in his backyard, bringing back memories of old Joe. Wondering if the thing would stick around and possibly return, he took red fingernail polish and painted a red cross on its back. He said he spotted the turtle several times that summer. This year, May 14, 1997, marking his 87th birthday, he reported he looked outside, and lo and behold, there creeping across the yard was a turtle. Upon examination, there was the same critter, red nail polish still in evidence on its shell.

Morris said this turtle also enjoys insects and pieces of bread, and wonders, "You don't suppose this guy could be a descendant of old Joe, do you"?

Successful teachers exemplify the promise of our future

By Clint Burrus

(Editors note: PHS Sophomore Clint Burrus recently won two medals in the UIL Journalism contests in Austin. He was the first place winner in news writing, and placed second in headline writing. CCN asked Clint to submit an article for this issue of the paper. It is reproduced here exactly as submitted. We think it is an excellent piece of work)

When you are acquainted with the Plains Cowboys, success becomes second nature. You would be hard-pressed to find any better public schools in the state of Texas. Amid all the victories; whether they be academic, athletic, or artistic, it becomes increasingly difficult, however, to appreciate each achievement for the great thing which it is. You step inside the doors of PHS and what is the first thing you see? Walls lined with trophy cases holding the tears, sweat, and hard work of students, teachers, coaches, and administrators alike.

I've found that you meet many people when you are involved in extracurricular activities. I was talking to a student from another school at a Math/Science meet and he asked a question that I've heard from countless others. "How", he said "is your school so successful in everything that you do?"

At the time, I couldn't really give him an answer, but I carried the question back to Plains with me. I would have liked to have said that it's just because we have brilliant, athletic, artistic students. When I got to considering it, though, I couldn't really think of a time when PHS wasn't successful. In 90 years of existence, one would think that we would have had a streak of unsuccessful students.

There's only one explanation for our schools success. The answer is the teachers. Teachers are the heart of our schools. Students come through the doors of school with the groundwork for success. Administrators plan how an education will be built on this foundation, but it's the teachers who actually construct the knowledge that allows students to achieve greatness. It's a plan that when carried out poorly is nothing more than a faulty tower that will collapse with the slightest wind.

We all know that the pay of a teacher isn't that great. The hours are long. The work isn't very glamorous. You must deal with griping parents, unwilling students, and bureaucratic government regulations. It is a personal sacrifice to become a teacher. Teachers are constantly struggling to keep their classes on the wave of the future. To be a good teacher, you must be willing to give of yourself for the betterment of the world.

It seems that America has lost it's respect for teachers. When my sister was in college studying to become a teacher someone asked her what her major was. When she replied that she was majoring in early childhood development, the acquaintance replied "Why waste your time, you could really be somebody." I and many of my fellow students are living proof that teachers are "somebody".

Why would anyone choose to be a teacher? It may be hard to fathom, but some people do believe in the future America. Some people do still believe that one alone can make a difference, and that many working together can change the world. Some do believe that not every teenager is interested in what can be done for them. These who are the believers, the optimists, are the teachers.

Teachers go unthanked for the most part. That is why if you are a student, you should thank your teachers every day for all the hard work they have put in not to selfishly help themselves, but to help you. If you are a parent, thank your child's teacher for their support and guidance. If you are merely a member of our community, thank teachers for putting Plains on the map and steering the minds of future, doctors, lawyers, garbagemen, farmers, ranchers, entrepreneurs, ministers, congressmen, stock brokers, flight attendants, presidents, and yes, murderers, rapists, and criminals.

No teacher is 100% successful, which is why we should thank them and rejoice in the success that they do have. Teachers hold a very powerful position. Everyday they are determining our future. Their victories are the prosperity of our nation; their failures, the ills of our society.

"To invent, is remarkable," Thomas Edison once said, "but to teach is something far more beautiful."

erty enrolled in the program," he said. All lands entered into this program will be subject to most of the same regulations that apply to state-owned wildlife management areas and will be monitored periodically by state Game Wardens. "There are several advantages to leasing through this program compared to leasing privately," Richardson said. These include: 1) no landowner liability, 2) no hunting lease fee, 3) no obligation to keep hunter records, and 4) improved law enforcement activity. He said, "Every effort will be made by Wildlife Division personnel to tailor a lease agreement to meet the needs and desires of the cooperating landowner." The deadline for sign-up is July 1, 1997.

Court approves promotions, Hospital contract

The County Commissioners Court approved a request of Judge Kenny Smith, Pct. 2 Justice of Peace, to promote Marcella Bell from third Deputy to second Deputy on Monday's court session. He reported Bell was an excellent employee, and was helping him maintain his office under the approved budget. She has worked for Judge Smith 6 months, but has a total of 2 years and 10 months total time as a county employee.

Criminal District Attorney Richard Clark made a similar request, to promote Alice Bearden as second Deputy in his office, and hire Corina Estrada As third Deputy. The move was prompted by the recent resignation of second Deputy Linda May, who accepted employment with Altura Energy.

Ed Rogers, Administrator of Yoakum County Hospital, introduced Richard Pope, vice president, and Pete Beck, controller for St. Mary's Hospital, and Attorney Bo Brown, also representing St. Mary's. They discussed details of an extended contract between St. Mary's and the county for the operation of the local hospital. The contract, covering the time from January 1, 1997 through December, 1998, had previously approved and recommended by the Hospital's Board of Directors. The St. Mary representatives discussed provisions in the contract budget which had built in loss figures for bad debts and indigent health care.

Landowners Earn Extra Income by Providing Public Dove Hunting

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's Public Dove Hunting Program is entering its third year. The program is administered by the Wildlife Division and allows the Department to enter into short-term lease agreements with landowners throughout the state for the upcoming dove season (September and October). According to the TPWD Wildlife Biologist in Lubbock, Calvin Richardson, "The leased areas will not be available to all licensed hunters, but only to those hunters who possess an annual public hunting permit sold by the Department." He added, "This often results in fewer hunters on their fields than landowners sometimes anticipate and ultimately can produce some high quality hunting for individuals that possess the annual permit."

Richardson said that ideal tracts of land will range in size from 100 to 300 acres, although larger and smaller tracts have been leased by the Department. He added, "Food sources available in early fall are a primary consideration when evaluating a field for the program. Important dove foods in this area include native and commercial sunflowers, croton (doveweed), ragweed, pigweed, sorghum, and wheat. A water source such as a farm pond or creek can serve as an additional attractant for doves."

The acres that are enrolled in the Public Dove Hunting Program are posted by TPWD personnel prior to the dove hunting season to clearly define hunting boundaries, Richardson explained. "Parking areas will be designated and the local Game Wardens will be notified about the location of each prop-

Gary Walker stays on hold

In a FAX received late Monday, State Representative Gary Walker advised CCN and all of the media in his District 80 he would not have a column this week because of the ongoing and changing legislative session in Austin. "The major issues before us", Walker reported, "deregulation, the boll weevil program, the Water Bill (SB1) and home equity lending and many others, are pending. With the complex nature of the legislative process, these measures may change drastically before you have the opportunity to print the column. Let me assure you my staff and I are staying abreast of these matters and keeping the concerns of District 80 in mind". A recent article by Mary Alice Robbins of the Morris News service revealed the proposed property tax relief and school finance bill is now bogged down in Conference Committee proceedings between House and Senate members of the committee.

Well over a week ago Representative Walker told CCN in a telephone conversation there was a distinct possibility the tax and school finance bill might become a moot issue if the House and Senate Conference could not reach a satisfactory compromise to the two versions of the bill

Tim Addison elected new PISD Board President

In the regular monthly meeting of the PISD Board of Trustees, Tim Addison was elected President of the Board. He was nominated for the office by Dwayne Canada, and received supporting votes from Canada, Anna M. Gonzalez, Randy Tuggle and himself.

Incumbent President Brad Palmer was nominated by Wayne Sisson, and received votes from Sisson, Danny Bell and himself. Sisson also nominated Bell for Vice-President, and he was elected by acclamation. Tuggle nominated Anna Gonzalez for the Board Secretary position, and she too was elected by acclamation.

In other Board business, recently re-elected members Gonzalez, Addison and Palmer received the oath of office administered by Arlon Alexander. Randy Tuggle was appointed the 1997 TASS Assembly Delegate, and Dwayne Canada was named alternate delegate.

No action was taken on drug detection services. The resignation of Mrs. B.J. Doyle was accepted, and the 1997-98 school calendar was approved.

I thought the All Sports Banquet Monday evening was a pretty cool deal, and don't recall a larger crowd in the school auditorium. One of the Booster Club members reported over 275 people lined up for the catered barbecue dinner.

The pre-meal video produced by teacher Bill May was outstanding, and really held the attention of the PHS athletes and their fans. Bill reported he had no idea of how much time he devoted to the production. I thought the last portion of the film depicting high school athletes giving their time, energy and attention to the really young elementary would-be athletes was really impressive.

All of the coaches introducing the PHS athletes performed well, and I thought I detected a bit of sincere emotion, some of it barely under control, when they introduced their young charges, many of them finishing their high school careers. And it was good to see the kids themselves get some individual recognition and honor for all the hard work and hours they devote to their athletic events.

A very good evening.

Referring to the article about Morris Lowe and his visiting turtle, my first thought when he called to report the event was, "Morris has either overdosed on reading 'The Hack', or he is under the influence of strong spirits". I quickly realized the latter was highly doubtful, since the octogenarian only recently underwent a serious session under the knife for heart problems.

My apologies for that suspicion, Morris, but I do suggest you consider taking an ounce of salt (maybe a pound or two would work better) when you read this column.

DON'T TOUCH THAT DIAL.

If you do, you could be in for a shock. Because water and electricity do not mix. Yet, every summer many people are injured by electrical appliances in or near water or wet areas. So, remember, when you're near water, no radios that are not battery powered. No electric fans. No electric blenders for those frozen whatever's. If it plugs into the wall, keep it away from water or any wet surfaces. Enjoy your summer with some great rock-and-roll. But don't mix electricity and water. Or shock jocks will take on a whole new meaning.
