OVERPASS RECOMMENDED FOR QUIRT AVENUE

After several meetings since May, 1979, a positive nod has been given to the proposed overpass for Quirt Avenue. All of this became reality last Thursday morning (September 11) when a consulting engineer recommended the city council spend more than $7 million to build an overpass at the intersection of East 34th Street and Quirt Avenue. Harvey Hawkins, urban transportation manager with the firm of Turner, Collier, and Braden, Inc. of Houston, presented the results of feasibility study from a $30,000 project commissioned by the city council. Hawkins, who had met with residents of east Lubbock several months prior to the completion of the study, said his firm examined the effects of leaving the intersection as it is, extending Quirt Avenue across two railroad tracks, constructing an overpass or an underpass. Hawkins told the council the most feasible from a cost benefit standpoint would be an overpass with connecting access roadways at an estimated cost of $7,129,200. He said, because of the present design of the intersection, motorists must go an additional quarter mile to traverse the tracks. He also predicted that Quirt Avenue traffic would increase in the next 20 years as the volume of traffic on Avenue A (north and south) begins to exceed that street's capacity. Also, he made known that the Lubbock Public Schools has directed the bus route to the various public schools to be east on Loop 289 to East 19th Street, then west to Quirt Avenue. Thus, says Hawkins, the public schools would save $60,000 by using the overpass. According to this study, there are now 35 trains daily on the railroad tracks, and he predicts there would be 77 trains each day in the year of 2000. The trains average between 60 and 100 cars, and both railroad companies which have tracks at the intersection have indicated they want to double their tracks in the next 5 to 10 years. Each time a 100-car train passes the intersection motorists are delayed 3 minutes and 34 seconds, Hawkins made known. Without construction of some type of a grade separation, he said motorists would be sitting at this intersection for 6 1/2 hours each day. He pointed out that this fact would make the at-grade extension for Quirt Avenue across the tracks "not a viable alternative." Such an at-grade crossing would cost an estimated $1.6 million. Construction an underpass was the most costly alternative, ranging from $8 million to $9.5 million for an underpass with connecting access roads. An overpass without the connecting roads would cost $5.7 million, Hawkins said, but would not be as convenient for those traveling the area. He told the council there is a possibility of federal aid to help fund the project and council members are asked for recommendations at their next regular meeting of the funding alternatives for such an interchange. If federally funded, Hawkins said the project would be completed between May and November of 1984, but a completely city funded project, could be finished in mid to late 1983. Residents of east Lubbock, who met in various meetings at Mae Simmons Community Center, were pleased with the outcome of the feasibility study, but will be waiting to see the results. A meeting, according to Eddie P. Richardson, Jr., will be held after the next city council meeting to advise residents of the community what is really going on. "We hope everyone who is interested from east Lubbock will be present," he said. Alan Henry, city councilman, made it known that this project is for the "citizens of Lubbock. We must have adequate transportation east and west and north and south." He also said it appeared as though the sentiment of the council is "to get on with this project."

Pictured above are some of the participants who attended the Law Enforcement and Community Relations Conference last Thursday at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Hal Hensley, administrative assistant to the Criminal District Attorney, was keynote speaker. More than one hundred participants attended this session. According to those in attendance, "it was a great success."

South Plains Open Forum For Small Business Sept. 25th

Governor William P. Clements has called for a Texas Small Business Conference to be held in Dallas on November 13-15, 1980. The purpose of the conference is to discuss, evaluate and submit resolutions to the governor for his submitting a "Plan of Action" to the next state legislature. As a preliminary to this conference, Governor Clements has asked the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce to sponsor an Open Forum on Small Business for Lubbock and surrounding communities. The Forum is scheduled for September 25, 1980 at the South Plains Inn Motel. The purpose of the Open Forum is threefold. First, it is to identify the priority issue concerns of small business owners. Second, it is to begin to develop recommendations that will later be refined, synthesized and prioritized at the State Conference. Third, it is to elect delegates to the State Conference in Dallas. There will be pre-registration fee of $12.00 and $25.00 registration fee at the door per person. The registration fee is to cover handout material, administrative cost and lunch. There be representatives from State Government Agencies to answer questions.

Dunbar Graduate In Oklahoma City Council Run-Off

"You know if there were opportunities in Lubbock when I graduated from college, I still would be here," Corlandus Lang, a run-off candidate in Ward 2, Oklahoma City, Ok. "Because of that, I am in another community doing what I would like to be done here," he added. Lang, who was in the city last for the funeral services of his father, stopped by the Digest office to advise black people to get involved in the political and economic arena of their city. "If you get involved in these areas, many things will come their way," he said. For several years, Lang was on the sidelines, but knew that this new decade was the time to become a player. "Sure, there are many who feel the same way I did one time, but you must become a player, if you want your station in life to get better." When asked how he

The Corlandus Lang Family became involved in politics, the 45 year-old Lubbock Dunbar High School graduate said: "One Saturday morning, I was invited to a meeting where twenty-five black brothers (ranging in all ages and livelihoods) were gathered. At this

Black Women Sue Chattanooga Klansmen

Five Black women, injured during a shooting spree by several Ku Klux Klan members, held a press conference on Sept. 12th on the steps of the Federal Courthouse in Chattanooga, at 12:00 noon, to announce the filing of their civil rights damage action against three klansmen and other unknown members of the Ku Klux Klan. C. C. R. attorney Randolph McLaughlin, C. C. R. cooperating attorney Charles Victor McTeer, and Tennessee attorney A. C. Wharton, who are representing the women, were present.

This lawsuit stems from an incident which occurred on April 19, 1980, in which three self-proclaimed members of the Justice Knights of the Ku Klux Klan and others burned two eight-foot crosses in the heart of the Black community. When their actions did not arouse sufficient attention, they returned to the neighborhood and shot at innocent bystanders from their speeding cars. The plaintiffs, Viola Ellison, Lela Evans, Opal Jackson, and Katherine Johnson, were wounded by the bullets, and Fannie Crumsey was injured by flying glass resulting from shotgun blasts fired into a parked car. The lawsuit seeks damages of $300,000 for each of the women, and an injunction to prohibit the klansmen from engaging in future acts of violence against members of the Black community of Chattanooga. Larry Payne, Marshall Thrash, and William Church, who is also the group's leader, were charged with four counts each of felonious assault with intent to commit murder. After deliberations

Joe Kirven Will Speak Sept. 19th

Joe Kirven, Black administrative assistant for Small Business and Equal Employment Opportunity programs to Governor Bill Clements, will speak at a fund raising dinner for state legislative candidate McKinley Shephard on Friday, September 19th, at 7:30 p. m. at the AA Center, 1901 Parkway Drive in the Parkway Mall. There will be door prizes given away, a fashion show presented by Mae's Boutique, and gospel singing. Rev. B. Battles will give the invocation. Dr. F. L. Lovings will introduce Shephard. Following remarks by Shephard, the speaker Joe Kirven will be introduced by Shephard. Rev. Mado Lang will introduce all the workers, and the benediction will be given by Rev. R. S. Stanley. Mistress of ceremonies will be Mrs. Joan Y. Ervin.

Jesse Jackson Endorses Carter For Re-Election

The Reverend Jesse Jackson called on "17 million eligible black voters" last Saturday to throw their full support behind the re-election of President Jimmy Carter. In an inspirational speech before a capacity crowd of over 1,500 people in the auditorium of his national Operation PUSH headquarters, Jackson drew a standing ovation when he said he is endorsing President Carter for re-election. "Jimmy Carter is the best choice among the candidates. In my judgement, the nation's interest and our interests can best be served through a second Carter administration. I have decided to work both in and out of the Carter campaign." "What worries me about the limited view toward the White House, our ignorance of the statehouse and courthouse, is the spirit and attitude in your house and my house," said Jackson. "For if we stay home, we will wind up in the outhouse. The spirit of Selma must prevail. Neither dogs, the forces of reaction, tired feet, assassinations nor the tott' of evil forces must keep us from exercising our franchise."

He belongs to the Optimist Northeast, Urban League, National Association of Security Dealers, YMCA Century Club, Oklahoma City Northeast, Inc., and the Opportunities Industrialization Center Auxiliary. In Oklahoma City, Lang advises that he speaks on four basic points on his campaign, namely: preservation of neighborhoods, protection of private property, strengthening of human rights, and equality for all citizens. He makes it known that he is deeply concerned about the status of Oklahoma City. "It is apparent that our yard has not been afforded the proper protection nor has it received its property share of city service and rewards." A native of Bonham, Texas, he grew up in Lubbock. "These days in Lubbock, I will never forget. I hope there are blacks here who want to do something to upgrade their community." He is running against a well known white woman, known in many circles, Majorie Feighny, whom he says is running a "good campaign." He and his wife, Juanicezetta, have one child, Michelle. They are Catholic. "I have always been a guy that supported a lot of groups, but was never really interested in being in charge of them. I think I can make a contribution to the city and the voters will give this nod on September 30th," concluded Lang. Lang will appear on "What's Going On?" on Saturday, September 27th, over KCBT-TV, Channel 11, at 12:30 p. m.

Business in the Black

By Charles S. Belle

what you see is not all you get Giant Sums for Overseas Sales

Exports are an after thought for too many American entrepreneurs. Last year the state of California alone had two-way trade totaling $44 billion. Every other country in the world works to expand its sales of home grown products to different parts around the globe. Getting the average American businessman or woman wise to the ways of foreign trade, however, takes more than a notion.

No one can believe the amount of money in the billions of dollars that go begging each year for U.S. entrepreneurs to expand their enterprises overseas. At least that's the picture painted for me by my old college chum Les Porter. Leslie V. Porter, Presidential appointed treasurer of Overseas Private Investment Corporation, encourages American entrepreneurs to every color to call his government agency for dollars to develop overseas business.

Overseas Private Investment Corporation, who can be reached by calling 202/632-3996, not only has a Black treasurer and president, but plans to put billions of dollars in the hands of individuals interested in building plants in foreign places. Porter and his people are not the only cadre of coins to be tapped by talented business personnel.

The Export-Import (EXIM) Bank of the U.S. has as its primary purpose facilitation the export of U.S. goods and services through a variety of financing programs. Placing a telephone call to their Office of Public Affairs at toll free (800) 424-5201 will get immediate answers on any questions concerning export financing. Figuring out what products can best be sold in any foreign market place is not difficult if you start with your local office of the U.S. Department of Commerce. Calling them first will reduce the running around most business people do in market researching work.

America has been running up a trade deficit, buying more than she sells abroad for too long. Les Porter and others at OPIC, as well as, excellent personnel at the EXIM bank want wild-eyed busy aided tailed business people to take advantage of their services, so it says in writing.

Whether or not one starts with them or a state trade organization, it makes sense to see how they operate. Especially since it is free! Figure it's best to travel to a foreign country first before placing your products on a boat bound for glory. Go with an official trade mission if possible.

Everyone knows that the Middle East countries have billions of bucks to spend on any U.S. products, but not everyone will work with the U.S. Arab Chamber of Commerce. Call their San Francisco or New York office for an entry point. Chamber contacts can put you in the right place at the right time.

Placing yourself in the heat of battle alongside your possible competition aside from being most cost effective is bound to beef up your presentation and product. Plenty of products sold in single marketing areas in America are ripe for overseas sales.

After all, selling a product only requires a buyer, it does not require the buyer to live on your block.

The Most Valuable Ram

"Secretary of Defense," National Football League all-pro David Deacon Jones, left, beams with pride as he accepts his Hall of Fame ring from Earl Schreiber, secretary of the Football Hall of Fame. The presentation was made during half time ceremonies at the recent Rams - San Diego Chargers game at Anaheim Stadium, Anaheim, California. Jones, a marketing services manager for Miller Brewing Company in Los Angeles, was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame earlier this year in Canton, Ohio.

Jones was also voted the Most Valuable Ram of them all by a poll taken by the LOS ANGELES TIMES of Rams head coaches during the thirty four year period that the team played in Los Angeles, from 1946 to 1980.

Foster Care Program Needs Baby Items

The Lubbock Foster Care Program is in need of items for infants in foster care, according to Betty Mora, children's protective services supervisor for the Texas Department of Human Resources (TDHR).

Baby equipment such as baby beds, high chairs, infant seats, and playpens are needed, Mora said.

The items will be sent to the homes of foster parents who care for infants receiving protective services. These infants have been placed temporarily in foster care for their protection until problems in their homes have been solved, making it safe for them to return, or until they are personally placed elsewhere.

Anyone wishing to donate any baby items, may call TDHR at 762-8922.

Stop Competing and Start Being Happy

Most marriages that are in trouble have a common ingredient: a pervasive sense of envy and jealousy that throws the parties into competition. The bond of oneness, working toward the same goal, that was present during the initial period of happiness, resolves itself into intensive competition in which one individual attempts to "outdo" the other.

An unfortunate extension of this problem is seen in one partner refusing to complement the spouse for the spouse's achievements and in many instances actually criticizing the partner in a negative manner. When this competition occurs, the relationship is doomed.

This competitive factor usually represents the effort of the mate to demoralize the spouse, destroy one's initiative and self-confidence, and drag the spouse down to defeat. Why would one want to cause the mate to suffer defeat? The answer is simple: The mate is attempting in a very profound and exaggerated manner, to compensate for a feeling of inadequacy, that has caused a sense of jealousy.

This quality is found in most unsuccessful relationships be they in marriage or in a simple friendship. The relationship may prosper and develop as long as the parties support each other psychologically, materially and affectionately.

This factor is clearly identified as incompatibility which means that a major personality fault brings forth irreconcilable envy, jealousy, competition and, finally, conflict. Competition is by its very nature conflictive and stress provoking. A vicious cycle is in effect. The stress that occurs in such a relationship initiates an even stronger urge to compete with and destroy the other party.

This factor of incompatibility based upon the personal insecurity of one of the partners in any relationship may usually be traced to a negative feeling that one has about oneself. The troubled party usually is a conflictive person who has some difficulty in relationships with most people: friends, relatives, employer, teacher and others with whom one adopts a close relationship.

There are certain basic rules which one should follow in one's efforts to achieve happiness:

Stem the tide of your own need to compete. When you desire to compete, be aware of the fact that the urge represents your desire to pull the other person down or to raise yourself to a superior level. It represents an insecurity that requires your restraint if you are to be successful in your relationship with the other party. Competitiveness is antithetical to teamwork. Few competitors are friends;

Realize that your need to compete with a particular party is a strong indication of the likelihood that you will not achieve a close relationship with that person. Do not be fooled by your own feelings. If you feel a sense of competitiveness in the company of another person, perhaps you should think twice about your desire to adopt an affectionate relationship with that person.

Recognize competitiveness as insecurity. Lasting relationships do not thrive on insecurity.

Understand that lasting relationships are based upon a feeling of comfort and security with the other party. For your own happiness, seek out such relationships.

"Black Student Enrollment Tapering Off" Says Dr. Cavazos

San Marcos -- President Lauro F. Cavazos of Texas Tech University last week called upon the presidents of every Texas college and university to personally take on a special burden in regard to education.

Cavazos spoke on the eve of the Mexican Independence Day, addressing students and faculty at Southwestern Texas State University in San Marcos.

"The problem of too few minority students in too many colleges is a shared problem," he said. "The solution requires the best minds of this nation.

"We can begin in Texas where we are confronted with especially large numbers of minority citizens," said Cavazos, who became president of Texas Tech last April.

He told his audience that the educational problem faced by Hispanics in the United States is not the problem of Hispanics alone "any more than the energy problem is the Hispanics' problem." But he urged his listeners to take advantage of educational opportunities, calling education a "tool by which free men govern themselves."

In looking toward the future, he pointed out that minority numbers are increasing.

"Minorities are electing their leaders to positions of power," he said, and he questioned whether or not the voters or leaders of the future would be among the educated.

Cavazos cited statistics and said the black student enrollment in higher education is tapering off. While Hispanics enrollments are increasing, the numbers are still small and the greatest number are concentrated in undergraduate programs, particularly in two-year colleges.

He called upon the presidents of all other institutions of higher learning in Texas to help seek solutions to the problem.

"The children whose futures we neglect today may be the leaders we follow tomorrow," he said. "They surely will be the voters helping to choose our leaders."

"The harvest we reap tomorrow depends upon the effort we spend in planting seeds today. We will not serve either the institutions we head nor the state we live in if we turn our backs on any child in Texas."

Black American Lemuel Haynes, who later became a distinguished minister, joined the American Revolutionary expedition to Ticonderoga to stop British General Burgoyne's northern army.

Governor William P. Clements will be in East Lubbock at the Mount Gilead Baptist Church on Tuesday, September 30, 1980, at 5:30 p. m. to personally campaign for McKinley Shephard.

LEGISLATIVE ALERT!

May 1979 Home Ownership

There can be a strategic advantage for all black Americans—as well as for the nation as a whole—in efforts to mandate massive home ownership for almost all our citizens.

Let us not be frightened by such a proposal. For one thing, it has a long tradition in our federal policy considerations. Further, as many "exceptions" as may seem reasonable, can and would be provided for, as persons requested them.

But even the aged could own their own retirement buildings or communities on a cooperative or a condominium basis. Such equity as one might have could be used, for example, by older persons to avert financial disaster or stress in precipitously inflationary times.

The primary argument for everyone owning property is that those who own do not take a "usership attitude" of investing "as little as possible" and extracting "as much as possible," in their homes and in their communities. This is "our land," and every person should have a tangible investment in terms of lordship (or ladyship) and control—with economic equity—in the places where they reside. Mandated home ownership should begin to be pressed for right now.

You may write to your Congressmen and Senators at: Congressional Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20515 or Senate Office Building, Washington, D.C. 20510. Please congratulate them for their important work and let them know where Black America stands on crucial issues.

Tell It Like It Is

by T. J. Patterson

The man on East 24th Street says: "Every man has a right to utter what he thinks truth, and every other man has a right to knock him down for it."

It has been a long time coming, but finally the City Council is ready to get on with the business of making a decision on either an overpass or underpass at East 34th Street and Southeast Drive (formerly Railroad Avenue). All of this became a reality last Thursday morning in a City Council meeting in which a very positive presentation was made by urban transportation manager with the firm of Turner, Collier, and Braden, Inc. of Houston, Harvey Hawkins.

As we look back, it all began with the first of several meetings at Mae Simmons Community Center in May of 1979. More than three hundred citizens of East Lubbock, including city officials, attended those sessions. From those sessions, the City Council voted to hire this firm, and on last Thursday the long awaited decision came out.

It has taken time to get this far, and will take more time to decide what funds should be utilized to implement this project. At latest, if everything goes well (and we believe it will) something should become a reality in less than three years.

Again, it has taken time, but something will happen. Praise God for what has happened! If we keep using our patience, there will be many more things to come our way. East Lubbock, finally after all of these years, will become a true member of the Lubbock family.

"A handful of patience is worth more than a bushel of braires."

George Scott, assistant Dean of Students at Texas Tech University, revealed some interesting figures recently in reference to student enrollment at the university from the black and brown communities. He said that according to the preliminary enrollment, there are approximately 412 blacks enrolled for the fall semester and approximately 850 Mexican-American students.

From these figures, it appears as though a lot of emphasis is given about higher education in the brown community. Years ago, browns were not interested in attending a college or university as they are today. This is great!

On the other hand, the enrollment of blacks have reached 400 for the first time since blacks were allowed to register at Texas Tech University. As a matter of fact, only 395 blacks were registered this time last year.

These figures also reveal that there are 49 Indian-Americans registered this fall at Texas Tech University.

As this writer recalls when he attempted to enroll at Texas Tech University Fall, 1959, the acting president said that only whites may attend this university. Not only did he tell me this, but he showed it to me. It said:

A CROCK

WHY ARGUE? THE FACTS ARE HERE!

"There shall be established in this State a college for white students to be known as the Texas Technological College," (Appendix A, page 295) Thirty-Third Catalog; Section 1.

It was quite strange about that encounter with this man, because I was drafted into the U. S. Army in less than six months after that meeting outside of his office.

We've come a long way!! But still a mighty long ways to go. Praise God for a what has happened!

As if our local black ministers and pastors didn't know it, white churches are doing an outstanding job recruiting black boys and girls from under their nose in east Lubbock. Their outreach program comes to east Lubbock and recruits these little black boys and girls for their various programs.

If our ministers and pastors want to do something, they'd better find a way to keep these little black boys and girls in the black church. The Black Church is the only thing we have left.

When you see a bus driving over here on Sunday mornings, Pastors and Ministers, think about it and then do something for the Black Church.

Letter to the Editor

Rev. Kado Lang Doubtful of Froy Salinas' Support of the Black Community

"Any minister who is not actively involved in politics on one level or another is not fulfilling his mission as a minister, and is doing a disservice to his Parishioners ..." Rev. Carl McCall U. S. Alternate Ambassador to the United Nations. Rev. Kado Lang quotes one writer in saying "The fact is that Black preachers are as firmly entrenched in American politics as 'Amazing Grace' is in our choir's hymn books. As early as Reconstruction, Black ministers sat in Congress, and from 1945 to 1955, when only two Black (Republicans) Representatives were on Capitol Hill, one was a minister.

The reason for the traditionally pronounced presence of Black ministers in politics is twofold. First, the Black ministers have been one of the few groups in the Black community to be economically independent of the white-controlled market. Their money comes from Black folk so, they have been able to speak for Black folk with impunity, save a Cross burned on the front lawn, shot n's brandished in the night, or a taut rope strung across a sturdy tree. Second, there is the Black clergy's peculiar application of religion to Black liberation struggles. You cannot prepare people for heaven without trying to make their life more heavenly. Black ministers have been at the forefront of all Black political struggles, inside and outside the electoral process."

"From these above statements," says Rev. Lang, "it is apparent that Mr. Salinas is not familiar with the history or the workings of the Black struggle. For Mr. Froy Salinas said he 'would feel apprehensive about voting for a minister for any office' which leads me to the conclusion that he did not support Rev. Adolphus Cleveland when he ran for City Councilman and County Commissioner, and he did not support Rev. A. W. Wilson when he ran or the Rev. Otis Cooks. Since history proves that a great number of our Black politicians were ministers, and that many forthcoming politicians will be ministers, I can not see how Mr. Salinas can ask for the vote of the Black man when he can not promise support of other Black politicians who may well be a Black preacher. Hence, I am very doubtful of his support for the Black Community of Lubbock."

Ringling The Bell

U. S. Secretary of Education Speaks on Brown v Board of Education:

"Twenty-six years ago this past June, Chief Justice Earl Warren presided over a Supreme Court that had been divided in 82 percent of its opinions in the year before his appointment. Yet in Brown v Board of Education, an momentous a decision as any ever handed down by that body, there was not a single dissent among nine justices who represented every region of the country and as many shades of political opinion.

"We think of Brown as a great moral landmark, and certainly it is that. But Brown is more than a testament to our national commitment to human rights... In that historic opinion of 1954, Chief Justice Warren wrote:

"Education is perhaps the most important function of state and local governments. Compulsory school attendance laws and the great expenditures for education both demonstrate our recognition of the importance of education to our democratic society. It is required in the performance of our most basic public responsibilities... It is the foundation of good citizenship.

"I was surprised when the President (Carter) asked me to take charge of this new cabinet-level Department of Education. I accepted readily because I believe every word Earl Warren wrote about the ultimate dependence of our democratic system upon our public schools.

"We Americans have always been proud of our past, but we have never wanted to live there. In education, as in all things, we have been a nation that values progress, that strains for a glimpse of the future. A Greek philosopher Heraclitus once said: 'You cannot step twice into the same river, for other waters are continually flowing on'. The people of this country understand those words perfectly. Those who aspire to lead us would do well to ponder their meaning." End of quote from Shirley M. Hufstедler, Secretary of U. S. Department of Education.

The United Negro College Fund represents 41 historical black colleges throughout the country with a combined enrollment of some 50,000 students. The fund-raising efforts of UNCF help those schools maintain their high academic standards and to award scholarships and financial aid to qualified students.

America's predominately black colleges (there are some 105 nation-wide), and universities have provided undergraduate education for 65 percent of all the black physicians, 75 percent of black Ph.D's, more than half of the black elected officials, and most of the black diplomats, judges, mayors and college presidents.

Some of the best known alumni include the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr.; U. S. Treasurer Azie Taylor Merton; U. S. Solicitor General Waddell McCree, Jr. and the mayors of Atlanta, Richmond, Birmingham, New Orleans and Washington, D. C.

A Black College Awareness Day is being planned for mid-November in the Terman Basin in Odessa or Midland it is reported. Full details will be released here as soon as the exact details are known. It is also reported that co-publisher T. J. Patterson of the Lubbock Digest will be the scheduled invited speaker for the gala day.

Patterson is co-publisher of The Lubbock Digest, the only black owned and operated newspaper in West Texas and Southern New Mexico.

According to the Black Monitor - The Black Church, in its various forms, has been the vehicle through which black Americans have demonstrated an incessant and sometimes seemingly ironic trust in God. This demonstration of faith has been there for all the world to see as 'the substance of things hope for, and the evidence of things not seen' - Heb. 11:1.

The Outreach Prayer Breakfast

The members of the Outreach Prayer Breakfast met last Saturday morning in the home of Mr. Earl Wheeler. It was a beautiful morning, and a love filled meeting.

Vice president Corine Fair presided over the regular meeting. Opening devotion was led by Mrs. E. Dyer and Mrs. D. Hood. The scripture was taken from 1st Psalms.

Morning scripture lesson was taught by Mrs. C. C. Peoples. It was taken from Mark 6:7-13.

"And he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two; and gave them power over unclean spirits; And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them."

Thought for the day: Give yourself to Jesus; the impossible will become possible. Think about it!

Mrs. Peoples gave her all last Saturday morning and the result was terrific. This group thinks she's the greatest.

Breakfast was served by the faithful hostess. Our cooks are getting better and better. The food is simple, but it has a way of lifting your spirit (and we like that). "Come and try it!" Our guest list included

Rev. Don Ralf, Rev. J. B. Harris, Rev. Tony Williams and Mr. Autis Harris.

Thanks to each of you for stopping by. You made our day complete.

Morning prayer was offered by Rev. J. B. Harris.

Upcoming Star

Peabo Bryson

Peabo Bryson has been singing songs since his early childhood in Greenville, South Carolina. It would seem that the only difference between then and today is that now a vast audience has become acquainted with and is listening to what Peabo Bryson is singing.

Bryson entered the recording industry in the early 1970s. By 1976 he had produced his first album, titled Peabo which found positioning on the national Soul charts and brought him to the attention of major recording companies.

Peabo has recently completed his third solo LP for Capitol. Titled Paradise, the album was released this past April. The first single release from the album is "Minute By Minute."

Intensely private, solidly spiritual, extremely reflective and undeniably likeable, Peabo Bryson is only beginning to assert his own influence and style on today's pop music. Says Peabo, "It is only within the past three years that I've gained better access to my songwriting. It comes from within. I reach for it and I get the truth." For all who have the pleasurable experience of encountering Peabo Bryson's special lyrical statements, there is an anticipation that the well of talent residing in this youthful artist will bring many years of musical enjoyment.

The Outspoken CRAIG WILSON
From Hollywood

Lovely Lola Falana, the First Lady of Las Vegas and long time headliner at the elegant Alladin Hotel, normally earns $125,000 per week as a glamorous singing and dancing star. She spread much happiness and joy over the desert when she announced that she would work free for four weeks to help the financially troubled Alladin get over its current crisis. We hear that Lola feels she owes it to her faithful fans and to the hotel to do everything in her power to help keep the doors open and the staff working. More than sixty folks had been laid off before the First Lady made her generous offer. Hats off to Lola.

The cornerstanders are still wondering who the dude was that jumped up and down on the top of a rented limousine outside the church during Stephanie Mills' recent wedding, and why?

Singer Keith Barrows called to tell us that we could expect him for dinner during his brief stay in Hollywood to put the finishing touches on his new Capitol album and take a few more color cover photos. We asked Keith about those nationwide rumors that he and Tinseltown glamor girl Mary Ann Johnson were no longer closer than white on rice and he assured us that they were unfounded. Later in the week we dropped by Mary Ann's apartment and found the singer very seriously in residence. Now there it is hot off the street.

Odessa Will Observe "Black College Awareness Day"

Odessa-Midland, Texas -- "Black College Awareness Day" will be observed in the Permian Basin on Sunday, November 2. Mayors of both Odessa and Midland have been asked to declare the day official in both cities and the Odessa Daily American as well as the Midland Daily Reporter Telegram have assured sponsors of their unqualified cooperation in the observation, the Digest learned.

"We hope to call special attention to the great contribution our Black Colleges have made to our American culture in many areas as well as to continue to make available cash scholarships for deserving young men and women who will be attending our schools in Texas and other parts of the nation," stated Bob Tiucl, Jr., director of the West Texas - New Mexico Black History Scholarship Fund and pastor of the Friendship Community C. M. E. Church of Pecos, Texas. Tiucl told the Digest that special music will be given at the Dinner Reception to be held in its Holiday Inn, located on U. S. Highway 80 East, in Odessa, Texas and the time is 12:30 noon to 2:00 p. m. Scheduled speaker for the affair at the Dinner is Editor T. J. Patterson of The Lubbock Digest.

"Owing to the fact that the Dinner will be just a few hours away from the national elections in which we will choose a President of the United States to guide the nation for the next four years, we are especially inviting county chairmen and political leaders and candidates from over the Permian Basin and Southeast New Mexico to share the fellowship with us," Tiucl added. It was learned also that these type of affairs are not new to the Permian Basin as they have been a feature of the Black History organization for some dozen years.

Churches, colleges, fraternal organizations, etc. who would like to participate may get more information by writing to: Rev. Bob Tiucl, Jr., P. O. Box 1204, Midland, Texas 79702 or in care of the Holiday Inn, P. O. Box 3586, Odessa, Texas 79760 for more information.

SIMPLE AND ECONOMICAL TO PREPARE. Ginger Pork Balls in Sherry-Orange Sauce was judged a sure palate pleaser in the "Cook Your Way to Fame" contest sponsored by The Christian Brothers of California.

Zesty prize-winning recipe

Selected from thousands of original recipe entries, Ginger Pork Balls in Sherry-Orange Sauce won $1000 and a San Francisco visit for Diane S. of North Sycamore, Ill., in the "Cook Your Way to Fame" contest sponsored by The Christian Brothers of California.

Simple and economical to prepare, this appetizer blends an unusual combination of flavors and textures for a palate pleaser that will add zest to any occasion.

Let your guests and family be the judge: this prize-winning recipe is sure to earn rave reviews for you, too.

GINGER PORK BALLS IN SHERRY-ORANGE SAUCE

1 large slice white bread, crumbled (about 1 cup crumbs)
1/4 cup The Christian Brothers Golden Sherry
1 1/4 pounds lean ground pork

1/2 cup minced water chestnuts
2 tablespoons soy sauce
1 egg yolk
2 teaspoons ground ginger
1 large clove garlic, crushed
Sherry-Orange Sauce (recipe follows)

In large bowl combine bread and sherry; set aside 10 minutes. Add remaining ingredients except Sherry-Orange Sauce.

Mix & blend thoroughly. Cover and chill at least 30 minutes.

Form into 1-inch balls. Place slightly apart on baking sheet.

Bake in 400°F. oven about 20 minutes until cooked through and lightly browned.

Meanwhile, prepare Sherry-Orange Sauce.

Add drained pork balls to sauce.

Cook over medium heat until hot through, stirring gently. Remove from heat; gently stir in orange segments (reserved in Sherry-Orange Sauce recipe).

Serve hot with cocktail picks for appetizer. Makes about 2 dozen.

SHERRY-ORANGE SAUCE

2 cans (11 ounces each) mandarin orange segments
1/2 cup chicken broth or bouillon
1/2 cup The Christian Brothers Golden Sherry
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons soy sauce

Drain liquid from orange segments into 2-cup measure; reserve segments.

Add broth to orange liquid to make 2 cups.

Pour into 2-quart saucepan. Mix sherry, cornstarch and soy sauce; add to saucepan.

Cook and stir over medium heat until smooth and thickened.

Simmer 1 minute.

Lighter dessert eating with easy new recipes

Research figures show that 63 percent of Americans are concerned about the amount of sugar they eat.

Yet, it's still hard to give up tempting foods—buttery vegetables, rich desserts—for a raw carrot or a bland graham cracker.

Try lightening up your meals. Use yogurt instead of sour cream on baked potatoes. Squeeze a lemon or salad instead of creamy dressings.

For a quick low-fat, low-sugar lunch add a few teaspoons of Low Sugar Spread to plain yogurt. Smucker's mixes them in a number of fresh fruit flavors including Grape, Strawberry, Apricot and Orange Marmalade.

They have half the sugar (and half the calories) of regular preserves and jellies with all the same good taste...and no artificial sweeteners!

Desserts can be simple, yet elegant, too. Try filling crepes with Low Sugar Spread. A plain pound cake is more festive with alternating flavors of Grape and Apricot Low Sugar Spread.

And a yogurt parfait with Low Sugar Strawberry or Orange Marmalade is a great "company" dessert because your guests are probably just as concerned as you are about eating too much sugar.

For exciting, lightened-up recipes write for a free new leaflet from Smucker's. Send a business-size, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: "Spread the Good Word"

Fry bacon in large skillet until crisp. Reserve drippings. Drain bacon and crumble. Return 2 tablespoons drippings to skillet and heat. Add onions and mushrooms. Sauté until onions are transparent. Add wine and bring to boil, stirring constantly. Reduce heat to low immediately and stir in remaining ingredients, except flour. Cook over low heat, stirring, only until heated through. Remove from heat and set aside. Heat remaining bacon drippings in another skillet. Dredge liver in flour and sauté in drippings, 3 minutes on each side. Place liver in heated platter. Reheat sauce briefly and spoon over liver. Sprinkle crumbled bacon on top and serve immediately.

By Mrs. Douglas LIVER STROGANOFF

This delicious, low-cost dinner will serve six with the addition of buttered noodles or potatoes and a crisply cooked green vegetable.

1 1/2 lbs. beef liver cut into serving pieces

1/4 cup dry white wine
1 cup sour cream

Two-way TV 'Qube' system lets the audience talk back

"An instantaneous electronic show of hands. I like to call the newest marvel in television."

A friend wanted to know where I had been. In Columbus, Ohio, hosting and producing a television show, I explained. Why Columbus? Because this particular marvel is only in Columbus—the newest technological advance in telecommunications: the Qube system.

It's actually called the Warner Amex Cable Qube, a two-way television system on Columbus' cable system. By pressing one of five buttons on a tiny console connected to their television sets, thousands of subscribers to this two-way system can register their opinions on various subjects.

I had decided to make this system which allows for the opinions of viewers at home, a part of my television series format. That meant that I had to learn television all over again; I had to understand that the viewer is no longer a passive observer but an active participant.

For example, if a guest says, "I believe that President Carter should balance the budget," the home audience can respond and give you their opinions.

My configuration will consist of a guest in the NBC studios in New York via satellite and a guest and a live audience with me in the Warner Amex studio in Columbus. The guest in New York can talk to the guest and the audience in Columbus and ask the viewers on the "interactive" Qube system to respond to questions. The Columbus guest and the members of the audience have the same potential.

Qube will let the subscribers in Columbus talk back to the guest and studio audience by responding to questions or comments which are flashed on the screen. In 20 seconds, the results of their voting are displayed on the screen. My format adds to that two-way interactive telecommunications system the electronic magic of satellite transmission. Yes, I'm excited by these latest developments in television technology.

First 'dry run'

But to get a feel for the Qube system, I went out to the Warner Amex cable facility to interact with the system and the viewers. This was my "dry run" before my first national special on the Iowa precinct caucuses and the 1980 presidential campaign—"Iowa: Winners and Losers."

Once on the air live, I explained to the Qube home audiences, "I am here in Columbus because this is the only place in the world where I can sit in the studio and get answers immediately from the viewers." To demonstrate that and to test the opinions of the viewers on busing, the topic of discussion, several questions were asked throughout the broadcast.

The guest was Mr. William Moss, vice president of the Columbus Board of Education and a black. During the discussion he strongly expressed his opposition to busing and explained why.

At the beginning of the program, the home audience, responding to my question, identified itself racially as 83 percent white and 17 percent black. Early in the broadcast, black and white viewers were asked the identical question: "For the whites who are watching, do you support busing?" "For the blacks who are watching, do you support busing?"

Seventy-seven percent of the whites said no and only 23 percent supported it. Sixty-seven percent of the blacks supported it and 33 percent were opposed.

To determine if anything had been said during the discussion on busing changed the viewers' attitudes, I repeated the same question of each group at the end of the broadcast.

Both groups showed an increase in opposition to busing, the blacks expressing a phenomenal 41 percent shift. At the end of the program, 74 percent of the blacks opposed and 26 percent still supported busing. Eighty-nine percent of whites said no to busing, and only 11 percent supported it at the conclusion of the program.

Rather than scientific research, this is simply a straw poll. I like to call it an experiment in an instantaneous electronic show of hands.

Immediate answers

What else did I tell my friend when he asked why I left the mecca of television, New York City, to go to Columbus to work with the latest technology? "It's the only place in the world where I can sit in the studio and get answers immediately from the viewers."

Therefore, the majority of my guests are in their homes talking back to the guests and myself in the studio. I'm also excited about the fact that Qube, seen locally in Columbus for the most part, will get its major nationwide exposure on our series. Being somewhat biased, I call it a "significant media event."

For the rest of the year, we will bring you the viewers' opinions on current major subjects as they occur—presidential primaries, the U.S. participation in the Olympics, the proposal to bring back the draft, the developments affecting American hostages in Iran.

When the Qube viewers vote we call it a "touch-in." Qube is indeed a "touch-in" for a democratic television system.

BLACK EMPOWERMENT

By Dr. Nathaniel Wright, Jr.
Human Rights Activist

THE SOUTH AFRICAN CONNECTION

With the passage of the most recent United Nations resolution calling for an end to racial segregation in South Africa and the institution of a truly democratic society, world attention is focused upon a major racial concern.

For black Americans, the turn of events signalled by the U.N.'s action should be of much more than passing notice. On the positive side of the South African situation, black Americans should take tremendous satisfaction in the kind of long overdue statement in Vienna by Vice President Walter Mondale on the need for South African political change.

Specifically, Mr. Mondale called for a "one-man, one-vote" government to be worked toward in South Africa. This would be no less than a revolutionary view of the fact that blacks, who outnumber whites by more than five times, presently have no representation in the South African parliament.

Indeed, a crisis has been created within the apartheid ruling party over Prime Minister P.W. Botha's modest suggestion that blacks be given a place on the advisory councils to local governments. It has been the present prime minister's position that without some concessions in advance of anticipated protests, the country is simply courting "almost certain disaster."

The protests are growing. Earlier this year, one of the boldest attacks in South African history was made upon a major gasoline refinery. Unprecedented protests have been made by students of mixed race (who have been separated from blacks and given a modestly favored status) against not only inadequate school expenditures for themselves, but also the fact of segregation for blacks. Small wonder that there is official alarm!

All of this extraordinary activity is to be added to the continuing strikes and protests by black industrial workers, students and clergy. Black Americans should be deeply mindful of the new stirrings in South Africa not simply for its liberationist implications on an international scale, there are more direct and possibly immensely sinister involvements from an American point of view.

One of these was the very early summer announcement by a former Ford Administration official who is associated presently with the machinery to elect Ronald Reagan as president. He suggested that Mr. Reagan should come to see South Africa as a friend. The official Reagan spokesman immediately denounced this statement. However, blacks should be aware of the maneuverings of some politicians of a conservative bent which might tend to move U.S. foreign policy against black African and black American concerns for freedom at home and abroad.

Another set of circumstances worthy of serious note are the allegations made even earlier in the year by the Wilmington, Delaware Sunday News Journal concerning a bizarre South African connection in the United States. The paper reported links between BOSS (the former South African intelligence agency) and the Cuban exiles whose operations in the United States have involved bombings and apparent murder and who operate under the designation of "Omega 7."

The Omega 7 group has not had the reputation of being progressive in its social and political outlook. For the South African government to have been implicated with such a group suggests a dangerous proximity of the arm of South Africa to American ethnic affairs.

Religious leaders in South Africa who are well-known to many Americans are being jailed. This fact should add still more to a growing concern among American blacks for what is taking place in South Africa. Recently, two Anglican (or Episcopal) bishops were arrested for participation in a protest march. One of them was Bishop Desmond Tutu, who assisted the Rev. Jesse Jackson with his tour of South Africa last year. Bishop Tutu serves as general secretary of the South African Council of Churches.

The South African government's hard line position was stated by its Police Minister, Louis Le Grange, who said:

"People endeavoring to achieve confrontation with the government by unconstitutional means must accept that they will get what they are looking for. If anybody thinks we are going to allow any monkey business from them, they are in for a big surprise."

Considering the fact that the constitution in South Africa gives no voice whatsoever to blacks, the police-state position of the government is clear. The growing confrontation for which the stage is now set deserves at least our fullest attention, lovers and encouragers of freedom.

ADMINISTRATION'S SOUTH AFRICA POLICY ONLY MILD RHETORIC

Representative Stephen Solarz, Chairman of the House Subcommittee on Africa, is again wielding a strong hammer in trying to knock a sense of justice in the heads of the leaders of the United States for Africa. He has begun a series of hearings on South African apartheid. Mr. Solarz stated that existence of the apartheid system constitutes an explosive situation inside South Africa as well as a profound political and moral challenge for the United States. America's response will help determine the future course of South Africa as well as its relations with other Third World countries. Solarz continued by saying that the committee wants to closely examine whether or not South Africa's recent political reforms are substantive or just cosmetic. He emphasized that congress and the executive branch cannot afford to neglect racism in South Africa, while placing Afghanistan, the hostages and other international events on center stage.

At the first day's committee hearing, Richard Moose, Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs was the lead-off witness. He stated that South Africa's actions, in the future, will have a direct bearing on our interest in three ways: (1) Preserving our national consensus on foreign policy goals relating to human rights; (2) Assuring long-term access to strategic minerals in South Africa and surrounding countries, both for our own and our allies' economies and defense; and (3) Foreclosing opportunities for expanded Soviet influence that come with protracted violent conflicts.

Moose admitted that the 4 million whites control all the wealth, political and legal life of the 25 million South African people. Non-whites are restricted in travel, live in huts, receive an education for which the apartheid government spends one-tenth as much for non-whites as it does whites, receive great disparities in pay, and discriminated against in every phase of life and are punished severely, even without trial for exhibiting any kind of dissent against apartheid. In response to such conditions, Mr. Moose stated that there is very little the United States can do beyond rhetorical disapproval. He stated that the United States supports the Sullivan Principles. However, the administration is making no effort to see that the American corporations doing business in South Africa comply with the Principles. Moose stated that the difficulty could be in a conflict with South Africa's laws.

The Sullivan Principles call for non-segregation of races in all eating, comfort and work facilities, equal and fair employment practices, initiation of and development of training programs that will prepare non-whites for supervisory and administrative positions and improving quality of employees' lives outside work environment in areas of housing, transportation, schooling, recreation and health facilities.

All United States corporations operating in South Africa are signatories to the Principles. However, the old trick of removing the words "black" and "white" from facilities have been substituted by actual colors, designating blacks and whites, respectively. In the equal pay, there has been a reclassification of the same job, with whites in a higher salary category and non-whites in a lower one. There has not been one black supervisor or administrator in a single American South African industry. Even though the United Nations placed an arms embargo against South Africa, it has been learned that American corporations have been sending arms equipment and has been training South Africans in arms technology in violation of the U.N. embargo. These artillery shells were manufactured by the United States government which was the Space Research Corporation. This fact was made known late last year, an investigation was begun into the matter at that time and continues on. To this date, no report has been made of its findings.

The United States evidences clearly that it wants good relations with South Africa. Yet, the Carter administration has done nothing at all against the apartheid South African government. While it is yelling about Russia's going into Afghanistan, it has said nothing about South Africa's soldiers in Zambia, Angola, and its soldiers in Rhodesia. South Africa's treatment of dissidents, which makes Russia's in comparison look like a Sunday School picnic, has been ignored.

Black Americans must come down hard on the Carter administration for its discriminatory policy in white and black foreign matters.
