WASHINGTON

By Ray Tucker

Innocuous—

The cracking of the Federal Trade Commission's machinery can be heard as far away as the White House these days. It will take several months before this neglected agency will be ready to negotiate and supervise voluntary agreements designed to supplant NRA codes.

Preliminary negotiations offer small hope that it can ghost for the NRA. Although 100 industries have sought information since the Blue Eagle died, only 25 have expressed a readiness to negotiate agreements. Only six of these have offered to preserve code hours and wages. All the commission can do under the circumstances is frame a document setting forth a few pious precepts.

The commission executed only one agreement during the life of the NRA. When the wholesale druggists got in a jam with Hugh Johnson over hours and wages, they junked the NRA for a voluntary agreement. It makes no mention of pay or working conditions. It is an example of the kind of innocuous pledges which will be executed when the commission gets around to it.

Co-operative

The commission's present personnel does not appeal to some New Dealers. It has usually assumed a policeman's attitude toward business and industry. Its favorite slogan is "cease and desist."

There is a quiet movement to re-vamp and reorient the agency. Roosevelt has impressed upon the members the importance of their new duties at several conferences. He has one vacancy to fill immediately and another in September.

Down at Camp Louis Farr, just south of Merton in Irion county, 100 boys and leaders have been encamped for the past week. As usual, Big Spring has one of the largest groups of scouts in the camp. Informally is the watchword of the camp and comfort is an essential quality in clothing. So shorts are just about all that is worn. Upper left you see James Ripps, assistant scoutmaster of Troop No. 5, pausing between his duties on the official staff and keeping his own troop under control. Top right is the man who plans and executes the popular camp each year. "Chief" A. C. Williamson. Believe it or not, but Chief knows every boy and despite a world of worries, he knows just about how much advancement each is doing. Below the Chief is one of the veteran scouts of the Buffalo Trail council, Walton S. Morrison, scoutmaster of Troop No. 1. Morrison has had to miss scout camp for two years but he is finding fun and enjoyment this year in his old role. Below is a group of scouts from Troop No. 5. Shadowns from the dense growth of pines and oak trees make identification difficult, but on the front row from left to right are Jack Gary, R. H. "Goldie" Miller, Maurice Howard, George "Windy" Miller, and W. D. Cornelson. Back row left to right are Gene Hardy, Flevellen, Jimmie Myers, and George Holt.

The picture was snapped just as swimming call sounded. It found most of the boys ready to hit the water.

Broom Turns Up $150

LEWISBURG, Pa. (U.P.)—While street sweeping isn't a well paid job, William N. Rohrer finds it lucrative at times. A vigorous push of the broom recently revealed a silver half-dime which a numismatic concern told Rohrer was worth $150.

Easter Lily Traced To Bernuda

HARRISBURG, Pa. (U.P.)—The Easter lily, popular today, is a descendant of a native wild flower of Bernuda, propagated in Philadelphia greenhouses and given advanced training in Japan, according to G. R. Stichter of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Plant Industry.

Height Of Optimism Reached

QUEENSLAND, R. C. (U.P.)—The world's greatest optimist lives here. He entered his name in a ten-cent chain letter and then went to a bank and applied for a $200 loan, promising to repay it with the $1,562.50 he expects to derive from the chain letter.

Kimball Diamond Milling Company To Build In City

A building permit was issued Monday for the construction of a large warehouse to be erected on a railroad siding west of the Woolen Grocery warehouse and offices. Kimball Diamond Milling Company applied for the permit. The structure, to be built of corrugated iron, is to have 4,000 square feet of floor space and will cost $2,500.

Another link was forged Saturday in the chain of tragic events which have combined to make five orphaned waifs Howard county's unluckiest children.

Trouble again overtook the children when one of them, six year old Buster Mitchell, was badly beaten by his caretaker, Ethel Shields, according to officers.

Monday afternoon she pleaded guilty in county court to charges of aggravated assault and battery and was sentenced to serve six months in the Howard county jail as an outgrowth of a flogging given the boy.

Under an arrangement effected by the county, she had been taking care of the children recently. Officers said that Buster had been soundly beaten because he slipped onto a quantity of lard to slick down his hair. His story and that of his caretaker coincided. They said his back bore large, ugly markings.

The five, called his "quintuplets" by County Judge J. S. Gantling, first came to the attention of the county when their father died.

MISSISSIPPI MOB LYNCHES 2 NEGROES

Pair Taken From Sheriff After Attack

Negroes Arrested Sunday After 2 Alleged Attempts To Attack Woman

COLUMBUS, Miss. (AP)—Bert Moore and Doory Morton, each about 25, negro farmers, were lynched Monday eight miles south of here by a mob of white citizens who wrested them from Deputy Sheriff Parker Harris of Lowndes county and hanged them to a tree. The two negroes were arrested Sunday after two alleged attempts to attack a white woman, the wife of an Arkansas lumberman, residing about a mile from Zion negro church, site of the double lynching.

All Temporary Hiway Projects Are Cancelled

AUSTIN (AP)—The highway commission Monday announced cancellation of all temporary highway designations except those maintained by the state and roads under construction or on which plans were nearly completed. The action was taken to improve eligibility of roads to participate in the federal works progress administration program.

DORTMUND, Germany (AP)—Ten miners were killed, thirty-two injured and an undetermined number trapped underground Monday when an explosion set fire to a coal shaft in which they were working. Confidence was expressed that fire would be extinguished in time to save the workers.

LIBERTY (AP)—A district court jury Monday convicted Pearl Brownley as an accomplice in the slaying of her husband, D. W. Brownley, in November, 1932, and assessed a term of ten years.

DETROIT (AP)—Harry C. Hanley, attorney for Merton Ward Goodrich, said Monday he would ask the trial of the confessed slayer of Lillian Gallagher, 11, be postponed until Monday to permit preparations of plans for defense of temporary insanity.

House Members Will Be Heard In Lobby Probe

WASHINGTON (AP)—Nine house members Monday asked the house rules committee to hear them in its investigation of the utilities lobby. All wanted to testify on an assertion of Representative Brewster, Maine, that Thomas Corcoran, RFO attorney, told Brewster work on the Passamaquoddy project in Maine would be stopped unless Brewster voted for abolition of "unnecessary" utilities holding companies. Corcoran denied he said that.

Children's Caretaker Is Jailed After Flogging

With War Inevitable With Ethiopia, Mussolini Makes Ready

ROME (AP)—With war between Italy and Ethiopia increasingly regarded as inevitable, Premier Mussolini Monday ordered mobilization of another regular army division and creation of an additional blackshirt division.

Mussolini also ordered immediate construction of ten submarines.

Today's orders bring the number of regular army divisions destined to East Africa to five. Five blackshirt divisions were also created.

This means Italy will have at least a quarter of a million men for service against Ethiopia should war begin.

New Hazard On The Links

There are more hazards than these in the rough for golfers these days.

Playing their final match in the Myny golf league yesterday, a foursome composed of H. W. Whitney, L. V. Norris, Carl South and Braden King had a moving obstacle to worry about.

Whitney looked up from a shot to see a car wheel bearing down a hill across the fairway on No. 3 Myny. He shouted to South who was in the wheel's path and preparing to shoot. South dodged it and relayed a warning to King, who finally stopped the maverick wheel with a couple of well aimed kicks just as a motorist came over the hill breaking for his wheel which broke loose when an axle snapped.

Total Eclipse Of Moon Can Be Seen Here

Eclipse Will Begin At 8:22 And Will Last Five Hours

Unless overcast skies obscure the phenomenon, a total eclipse of the moon can be seen here tonight.

The eclipse will begin at 8:22 and will last for about five hours. The earth's shadow passing over an almost full moon will completely cover the orbit for one hour and forty minutes, the time required for the moon to traverse the 5,550 mile breadth of the shadow at its point in the heavens.

For much of the United States this will be the most total eclipse of the moon since 1927.

At the beginning of the eclipse the bright surface of the moon at its eastern edge will begin to darken as it enters what is known as the penumbra, or outer area, of the shadow. At 9:12 p. m. the umbra, or darkest portion of the shadow of the earth, will touch the moon's surface, and from then until 10:09 p. m. the shadow will progressively darken the lunar body until it disappears from view.

From 10:09 p. m. until 11:50 p. m. the moon will be passing through the earth's shadow, with the leading edge of its surface coming into view again at the latter time. It will pass through the umbra at 12:07 a. m. and be entirely out of the shadow at 1:45 a. m. July 16.

At the time of the eclipse the sun will be about 94,419,000 miles away from the earth and the moon will be 226,740 miles away on exactly the opposite side. The shadow cast by the earth will be cone shaped—it's base being a cross section of the earth through its 8,000 mile diameter. The shadow will extend 150 space about 639,100 miles beyond the moon.

The eclipse will be visible in the western hemisphere, except in the extreme northern part of North America, and will be seen wholly or partially in most of Africa, southeastern Europe, the Atlantic Ocean and the eastern part of the Pacific Ocean.

Government Has No Power Condemn Land

Secretary Ickes Says Decision Affects Entire Program In Forty Cities

CINCINNATI, (AP)—The Sixth District court of appeals held Monday the federal government has no power to condemn land for use in public housing projects.

The court action sustained Judge Charles I. Dawson, Louisville, who on January 4th held condemnation for such purpose was illegal through failure to come within the government's failure to condemn land for public buildings, parks, fortifications, and arsenals.

Secretary Ickes has said this suit affected the entire $100,000,000 housing program in forty cities.

WASHINGTON, (AP)—The Forest Service's plan to purchase over a million acres of waste timberland in East and Southeast Texas was vigorously protested Monday by Representatives Dies and Patton of Texas.

They complained to Secretary Wallace that sale of this land would cause such reduction in tax rolls of eleven counties as to embarrass them seriously.

He said they thought the administration should reimburse those territories for loss of taxable value.

LOCALS SHOOT SUB-PAR GOLF IN TAKING STANTON

ROBBINS SETS NEW RECORDS

Big Spring Sand Belt golfers bursted up the Stanton course Sunday in winning a league match, 28 to 12. All of the locals golfers won their individual matches except Lib Coffey, who lost to Powell, Latson and Coffey lost low ball to Burnam and Powell.

Shirley Robbins, shooting almost superb golf, set a new course record on the Stanton layout with a 38-two strokes under the old record of seventy.
Eddie Morgan, another Big Spring hot-shot, also blasted loose with sub-par golf, shooting a 69, which was one under the old course record. Just to make it a good all-around day for Big Spring, Halwood Sturdivant and Obie Bristow turned in 70's. Robbins missed a very short putt which would have given him a 67.

Germany Bolstered For Third Interzone Battle With Yanks By New Star, Henkel

BERLIN, (Sp.)—When Germany moves into the Davis cup interzone final with the United States at Wimbledon July 20-23 its hopes for victory—and thus its first attainment of the challenge round—will be based on more than the mere "charm" of its third effort against Uncle Sam.
For Nazism has at last found a capable singles player to team up with her brilliant nobleman, Baron Gottfried Von Cramm, and the Baron himself has shown that he is almost a sure bet to rise from No. 3 to No. 2 in world ranking this season.

Henkel is playing his second year on the German cup squad, but it wasn't until he faced Australia in this year's elimination round that he hit a stride which generated all the confidence now displayed about the Rot-Weiss club, where the team trains.
The newcomer conquered Jack Crawford—who seemed to be failing at the time but at Wimbledon proved still good enough to whip America's Stiney Wood—in five sets after having defeated Vivan McGrath, which gave Germany its 4-1 victory for Von Cramm.

Chapter Six
MAD SITUATION

"As it happens, I have Mrs. Moore's address here," said Mark Albery. "Mrs. Moore worked for me personally for a few weeks while my private secretary was ill. She does not have a telephone, however."

A slightly elaborate explanation, and not quite true. Albery had asked Laurie for her address because he wanted to know where she lived.

He found it in his address book and gave it to the young man.

"Do you think perhaps you ought to warn Mrs. Moore? Shall I do it for you? It will be such a shock."

"You just said joy doesn't kill, retorted Moore, with that sudden smile in his eyes, touched with mockery. "Thanks very much, I'll just get right along."

Albery felt a sudden dislike for the chaman. There was something in-comprehensible about him. His manner was so off-hand, almost inhuman. He was certainly changed, not only in looks. Perhaps his adventure had really turned his brain a little.

"I have a great admiration for Mrs. Moore," he said, a trifle stiffly. "She has shown the greatest pluck and she is a splendid worker. You are a very lucky man, Moore."

door enclosing the flat. She switched on a light on the first landing, as she ran down.

When she opened the front door, a tall man stood outside.

"I want to see Mrs. Moore," he

"I know I must be," was the chaman's reply, as they shook hands. On Albery's part, not quite so warmly, this time.

Laurie Moore sat in her little living-room in the roof, with its slanting attic ceiling on either side of the quaint dormer window, from which she looked over a dusty wilderness behind high fences, where the old houses on the other side of the street had been pulled down, and re-building had not yet begun.

Laurie's house was condemned, too, with its eight neighbors. Here was the end one, and there was a solitary plane tree in front of it, at the moment delicately tasseled and bursting into green.

Laurie was making an evening frock for Glad. She had cooked and eaten her supper and washed up and put everything away.

It was a bright little room. Laurie wanted everything that Glad wanted. And Glad adored color. So there was orange and soft blue in the curtains and covers, and there were flowery cushions, and on the dark-stained floor gay mats, and the furniture was painted white and primrose. As the old landlady said, it looked more like a garden than a room.

Laurie's bell rang. That meant there was a visitor downstairs at the front door. Each tenant had a bell, and attended to it. The landlady was not only old but rheumatic.

Who could it be? She had not many friends. Several of the girls in the office she liked very much but nearly all of them lived in the suburbs, and they only met when they made appointments. She knew three or four young men fairly well. But with none of them was she on such terms that they would drop in casually just before ten o'clock at night.

She put down the gleaming sky-blue material that she was stitching with her busy, loving fingers, and went downstairs. She had a little landing all to herself, but no would, evidently not take his eyes from her face.

"It looks like fate," he said at last, which sounded to her perfectly ridiculous. Then he went on. "A friend of yours gave me your address. I found out your name—never mind how. I want to have a chat with you. May I come in?"

"I don't know why you should," she answered, resenting him, as she had done before. "I don't want to talk to you. I don't know who you are. I don't know what friend of mine you could have met. You were extremely rude to me in the train."

"I've something important to say to you. Let me come in! I won't keep you long."

His tone was so commanding that she gave way against her will.

She led him upstairs and turned on more lights in her room.

She did not ask him to sit down. She looked at him coldly.

"Would you please explain why you are here?"

"Out of curiosity," he replied, with that smile in his eyes that both fascinated and repelled her. "I am in a peculiar position—unique, I imagine. You will admit I have reason for my curiosity, not to say interest. I have just learned that you are my widow. I mean—you have been my widow. Now, it is interesting to a man to learn he has a widow—when he has never had a wife."

Laurie stood there, dumb, her eyes wide, her mouth open, but not a sound could she make. Then her eyes gave way and she fell into a chair.

"You see, I happen to be Rex Moore," he explained. His voice was harsh; his angry lips curved with contempt. "I have just been with Mark Albery, and he told me that, you, my widow, were working in his office, and had been for two years."
