ENGLISH CHILDREN AWAIT SIGHT OF KING, QUEEN

These children, from boroughs the king and queen did not visit on their jubilee ceremonial drives, were part of the 70,000 English youngsters who turned the sidewalk outside the gates of Buckingham palace into a camping ground. Piling their coats, bags and books on the walk, they patiently awaited the royal procession from the palace. (Associated Press Photo)

NOT RETREAT ADVANCE

Liquor The Philanthropist
Again Colonel Jacob Ruppert receives prominent position in the daily press. The colonel, as head of the U. S. Brewers Association, which represents about three-fifths of the country's brewing industry, feels, of course, that his statements should be accepted with absolute faith in their accuracy, so when he declares that "beer has played a fundamental part in the progress toward business recovery" it is just too bad to raise a questioning eyebrow. Still, there are certain facts which should be noted, particularly as the colonel voices the philanthropic intention of the brewers to "double our output and its consumption as a further aid toward national prosperity."
One item of the Brewers Association report which Colonel Ruppert discussed with the press, states that the hotel and restaurant business has picked up 40 percent. Yet, on December 8, the hotel men of Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma met in annual session and declared that repeal has not helped the hotels as expected. At that time one of the speakers was quoted by the press as declaring that "those who thought liquor would be a crutch-all have been disappointed. In no instance has it brought back prosperity."
The colonel speaks also of the brewers as having "rejuvenated other business through industries linked to the beer trade. Perhaps it is something of a damper on such enthusiasm to mention the fact that relief rolls doubt about the damper on the enthusiasm of those who are taxed for relief projects or are urged to give to local relief work when they read of the number of cases in city after city where "taverns" in the vicinity of relief stations are reaping golden harvests by trading supplies for liquor. There is at least no question about the "taverns" being rejuvenated!

However, perhaps the gentleman was too modest to mention the chief ones to profit by repeal, or he would have spoken of the liquor traffic's instead of the nation's prosperity. That the liquor trade has prospered may be readily inferred from a recent press story concerning a certain distilling corporation which has given its employees "about $1,000,000 in group life insurance... each employee receiving group insurance amounting to the equivalent of a year's salary, with a minimum of $1,000 and a maximum of $7,000. The employees also receive a cash bonus, depending upon the length of service."
Yes, brewers and distillers may speak truthfully of "prosperity" for themselves, at least. But whence comes that prosperity? And what are its consequences to the consumer?

Child Looks For Angels On Air Trip

NEW YORK—A salesman who practically commutes between New York and Buffalo on American Airlines recently was accompanied by his four-year-old daughter, who put him on a good Tom which he was only rescued by the resourcefulness of the stewardess.
It seems that the little girl had been told that angels lived on top of the clouds, and she was terribly disappointed to find none floating around on those she could see from the window of the plane. She took it so to heart that her father, fearing to develop a skeptic at that early age, called on Miss Nokava for help.
One glance at the child's disappointed face was all that Miss Nokava needed. She inspected all the clouds carefully. Sure enough there were no angels.
"They must all be at their practice," she said brightly, thereby bringing a smile back to the child's face and expression of relief to the father's.

THE INFLUENCE OF THE CHURCH

It is difficult to avoid superstitions as one undertakes to discuss the Christian church and its influence upon the lives of men and women of all the ages. This is so because the church is a spiritual institution, of divine origin and symbolic of all that pertains to the Christian religion. Paradoxically, it has done more than any other institution in which men are interested to promote peace and happiness, and has been provocative of some of the bitterest and most terrible controversies recorded in the world's history. It is one body in the Lord Jesus Christ, and yet presents the spectacle of scores of denominational units lacking agreement with each other in innumerable doctrinal tenets and too often failing to give each other a brotherly sympathy in the coordination of their activities to accomplish the one purpose for which the church exists.
We do not hold the view that there should be no denominationalism, or that doctrinal standards should be discarded and forgotten. It was not so in the early Christian church, for there were even then disagreements as to many matters involving interpretation of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ and the conduct of his followers. We do believe, however, that in all the ages there has been too much duplication of church machinery and overlapping of church programs and expansion of church enterprises, with an attendant waste of energy and neglect of the mission of the church itself. There has been too much of attention to the physical equipment of the church and too much of effort to adjust its activities to the environments surrounding it, with a consequent tendency to depend largely upon the material rather than the spiritual values back of the work.
In spite of all this, however, which merely reflects the weakness of human nature and the measure of our failure to attain the ideal as God's children, the church continues to be an institution which can be described only in superlatives. Though the visible church is far from perfect, the church invisible remains as it has always been—the bride of the matchless Son of God. It has one creed, one purpose, and it marches steadily onward through the open door which all the powers of evil can not close.

STATE LOAN OF SUMMER JUVENILES ARRIVED FOR JUNIOR HYPERION LIBRARY

A state loan of 100 books for children has been secured by Mrs. B. T. Cardwell for the Junior Hyperion Juvenile Library. The books are already on the shelves and available for children of Big Spring throughout the summer.
In addition to these, the book selection committee of the Junior Hyperion club, assisted by Mrs. Cardwell, has ordered $25 more books for children with the donation made by the Rotary Service club for the purpose. These books will be on the shelves permanently.

More Power at your finger-tip than in all the world's horses

Unfailing Electric Service is the Result of Unified Management

If you had 10,000 electric light bulbs in your home or business, you could turn them all on at once. "Of course," you say. But 30 years ago you couldn't.
If you wanted to build a factory here today to use heavy electrically-driven machinery, you wouldn't have to worry about power. There's more at your fingertip than you ever would need.
When manufacturers come here looking for factory sites, you can tell them this: "We can offer you unlimited power, at low cost. We are served by interconnected system power under unified management." No manufacturer can ask a better guarantee of efficient and limitless service than that.
In the past thirty years, unified management has developed the electric utility business from feeble beginnings to what it is today. Unified management was responsible for bringing together scattered and isolated plants into systems, for furnishing them with the money to make improvements, for advising them on better ways to serve you. To the holding company, unified management, should go the credit for today's unlimited power at low cost.
Yet the holding company, and in fact the whole electric utility industry, is in danger now. A bill known as the "Wheeler-Rayburn" bill, now in Congress, proposes to destroy the industry, as you know it, and toss the remainder into the lap of political control. It would wipe the holding company out of existence, and strip your company of the present connections it has for giving you dependable service.
If government can do this to the utility business, it can do likewise to all business. Such an attitude retards Recovery. For Recovery, business must have confidence in government, instead of fear as to its future because of government.

Chapter 10
SPECULATION

Guy put on speed and they went humming up the smooth rise ahead. "Mr. Westurn..."

He did not look around and Allison repeated "Mr. Westurn?"

"Oh! Yes!" For a moment she could have sworn that he had jumped.

"Would you mind telling me one thing?"

"Anything! Go ahead?" He smiled at her and when he smiled like that she felt that she was silly even to doubt. "What is it?"

"Is Gaffe your own?"

Herbert's brother?"

Allison laughed. "No! I didn't suspect you like that. But I thought you might want to tell me really who you were and what you were doing there."

"What do you think I was doing?"

"I don't know, quite," she admitted. "I thought perhaps it might really be your house."

"Mine? Good Lord, no!" He laughed. "I give you my word it isn't. I'd never seen it in my life before."

"Oh, I believe you now." That was true. She didn't really doubt him. "Only it seemed such luck,

"Mr. Westurn—is Gaffe your own?"

"Yes. Why?" He looked surprised.

"Nothing. Only I wondered why it wasn't your name on his collar."

"Oh, as a matter of fact, I've only just bought him—from a friend."

He answered slowly, was intent now on the road ahead.

"I see! I thought it rather funny when I saw it. I hadn't thought of that," Allison confessed.

"You thought I might be spinning you a yarn?" He did not look at her and he was frowning.

"Yes!"

He was silent, negotiating the turn into the main road, before he said, "I suppose my story sounded rather thin?"

"No. Only, well, a six-mile stroll in the rain—and at midnight—and turning up inside the house like that—"

"You thought I might be little

GASOLINE 'STRIKE' AT 28 FEET

V. Hernandez of Los Angeles shows a new use for the old oaken bucket. He is one of several who drilled 28-foot holes to tap a pool of gasoline believed to have come from a refinery leak, three miles away. All drilling for the fuel was stopped because of fire hazards. (Associated Press Photo)

"I see. I don't know what I should've done if you hadn't come in." She looked at the grey road winding up under the car, thinking "I'm glad—oh, so glad—he did!" and added, aloud, "I couldn't have held the door and he'd have caught me before I got out of the window."

"You think he meant to catch you?" Guy asked doubtfully.

"I'm sure he did," said Allison simply. "I can't tell you why only, when he looked through the dogs, I'd a sort of feeling that he was looking for me—that he'd meant to find me! And that he was going to—kill me!"

"Good Lord! You poor child! No wonder you were frightened." His voice was very tender.

"You see, he must have been outside, have seen me come in and realized that the house was empty."

she explained, glad to get the haunting memory of her fear out in words. "If he was a tramp and looking for money—he was, you know, or he wouldn't have broken in the desk, would he?—well, anyway, he must have seen me pay off the car—I took out a whole bunch of English notes and he may've thought that it'd be pretty easy. He'd only got to finish me and clear out and no one'd know, would they? I mean, that it was him. He may have waited about till I was off my guard, on the chance that I'd leave my bag about and when I didn't, well—"

"Thank God it did come!" He said that as if he meant it.

"I know. I felt like that. You see, he was running after me down the stairs but when he must have heard you or seen you strike a light and perhaps he got frightened. Don't you think so?"

"I expect so..."

"Anyway," ended Allison, "it was luck."

"I'll say it was. Apart from anything else, I shouldn't have met you otherwise, should I?" He smiled down at her as he spoke, giving weight to the light words.

"No. And I'm awfully grateful." "You needn't be."

"I mean, for your staying on with me—seeing me through."

"You think I might have laid you fainting on the floor, stepped over your body and returned peacefully to Warley, leaving Little Herbert to finish whatever crime he had on hand?"

Allison laughed.

"Well—"

"It isn't done," he assured her gravely. "It's against the rules of the Burglars' Union."

Modern Pitchers Lack Variety, Is Sad Sam's Chant

CHICAGO, (UP)—Because variety doesn't seem to be the spice of a young pitcher's life nowadays Sad Sam Jones, venerable White Sox flinger, is sadder than usual.

The 43-year-old star doesn't have to worry, for while yet, about up-coming pitchers pushing him off the scene, for he has been a big factor in the Sox' sensational easy-season spurt. But he is a bit concerned at the tendency of new rookie slab stars to concentrate on one particular delivery.

solve an involved riddle—is General Motors violating the air mail law? The law provides that no corporation whose principal business is holding the stock of other companies and none which is engaged in any phase of the aviation industry shall own stock in any corporation which holds an air mail contract. General Motors owns 12% of TWA, 30% of North American Aviation (Eastern Air Lines) and 25% of Bendix Aviation. The Post office figures that GM might be either a holding company or in the industry through its Bendix connection—but it isn't quite sure.

There will be a whale of a row if General Motors is ordered to dispose of its stock in TWA and North American. Too many people are waiting to get it at forced sale prices. GM's stake in aviation is relatively small and so far unprofitable but evidently it craves to cling to it.

Sidelights—
Preventative against gangs of hecklers. No more than four tickets were sold to any individual for Father Coughlin's New York meeting. Compo Shoe Machinery is the smallest company listed by the stock exchange in years. It has only 150,000 shares outstanding. Copyright McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

Drinking polluted water during the great stockyards fire of Chicago caused severe illness among a number of firemen and bystanders. Nearly 2,000,000 hunters were licensed by the various states during 1933, the last year for which figures are available.

through original Roosevelt men, they represent interests which are battling the President's program—power, textile, financial groups. It was Robert H. Jackson—former Secretary of the Democratic National committee—who devised the new scheme for testing the validity of the dollar devaluation order.

Mr. Roosevelt's silence in the face of these developments puzzles his close friends. The lobbyists entertain and are entertained by cabinet members. The recording of these social affairs in the columns of local newspapers brings them gullible clients. In the old days lobbygows tried to keep their names out of the papers. The new-style lobbyists cultivate society editors.

Blunders—

The private utilities are botching their fight on the Roosevelt power program. In the senate they entrusted their case against TVA to Senator Austin—former counsel for a utility corporation. In the house it was carried on by Representative May of Kentucky—former head of a coal company. Mr. May recruited such aides as C. A. Beasley, who has long been the Washington representative of several southern utility companies.

Senator Norris privately conceded that his proposal for legalizing certain TVA functions was up against hard sledding in the house. But eventual passage seems assured that his proposal for legalizing dams. Mr. Roosevelt's foes have helped him more than some of his friends.

intelligently or wisely exercised. If this reasoning should be adopted now all so-called independent boards could be reconstituted as well by the president—including the Federal Reserve board, Interstate Commerce commission, Labor Relations Board and others exercising semi-judicial powers.

Cinderellas—

A half-dozen middle western senators have just started a drive to obtain more jobs for their constituents. As a preliminary they asked heads of executive and emergency agencies to submit a list of all office holders who receive more than $5,000 a year.

They were shocked to find that some middle western states have no representatives at all in the NRA and other agencies. Patronage plums have been largely divided between New York and the south—with the south getting the lion's share. The novel survey shows that the middle and far west are political Cinderellas.

Most executive and emergency heads hastened to comply with requests for enumeration and pedigrees of job holders. But three refused the senatorial lightning by braving to furnish such information—Secretary Morgenthau, Secretary Ickes and Chairman Kennedy of the Securities and Exchange commission.

Roundabout—

The tentative draft of proposed Jones law govern interstate shipments of milk for the New York-New Jersey Metropolitan Sales area—fruit of the 7-state conference promoted by Governor Lehman—contains the sentence "No part of this draft is to be considered as having approval of the agricultural adjustment administration." Actually the AAA sat in at the framing. Comment runs that the boys must be growing timid.

There's a neat device in the set-up to grease the skids for hard-boiled milk distributors who have refused to bare their accounting secrets to state authorities. The proposal provides for appointment of a market administrator by the secretary of agriculture who shall be empowered to examine the books and records of distributors and their affiliates and subsidiaries—the latter terms being broadly defined to penetrate camouflage.

This means that a New Jersey distributor who has thumbed his nose at Albany efforts to find how much he pays for the milk he ships to New York would be obliged to give that information to a federal agent. Washington would presumably turn it over to New York on request. It's a roundabout method of killing the cat—but would probably make it much harder to chase.

Problem—

Life insurance companies are not among those who expect deflation. Several of the big ones privately pulling all the wires they can find to have the legal restrictions on their investments broadened so they can buy dividend-paying common stocks. They want this privilege partly as a hedge against inflation. But even more pressing is the problem of what to do with millions of dollars in idle cash with high grade bond yields so fantastically low. These are times when it's quite a problem to make money.

Cling—

The Post Office is trying to

At Will—

The Supreme court is expected to hand down a decision soon in the case of William E. Humphrey, deceased, who was removed by President Roosevelt from the Federal Trade commission because his mind didn't travel in the right groove. Humphrey's heirs now demand back pay. The question hinges on the president's power of removal.

In the famous Myers case the court majority virtually declared that the president's power of removal is unrestricted. Chief Justice Taft remarked that officers exercising quasi-judicial functions might properly be removed by the president if he should conclude that their discretion had not been

Notes—

Union organizers are already charged with trying to induce relief workers in Pennsylvania to refuse Hopkins wages. New applications for home loans will be received for thirty days under the law just passed. Cartoonist Berryman suggests the aardvark as a mascot of the new Al Smith-Republican coalition party. Dust storm victims by thousands have flocked to California begging gas along the road.

NEW YORK
By JAMES McMULLIN

Sawing—

Did you notice the reference in the president's bonus veto message to "government by and for political coercion by minorities?" Informed New Yorkers interpret that as directed more pointedly at Father Coughlin than at the American Legion or the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Political analysts figure that Coughlin's self-assurance is getting him further out on a limb every week. He said the president wouldn't "dare" veto the Patman bill. That wasn't a very good guess. He said that the veterans wouldn't ask pensions if they got the bonus. Mr. Roosevelt disagreed with him emphatically. His drive for his banking bill will certainly boom-erany. These incidents don't exactly enhance his stature as a major political force.

A point worth noting is that the National Union has nowhere to go politically if it doesn't play with the President. Coughlin has disavowed Third Party intentions. He can't work with the Republicans and they wouldn't have him if he could. That means he must either follow FDR (and Mr. Roosevelt will refuse to woo his support) or

...WHAT IS THAT GRAND DR. PEPPER FLAVOR?

BIG MONEY PRIZES for Best Written Descriptions

A Dr. Pepper discussion goes something like this: "U-mmm! Odd taste, isn't it? ... What DOES it remind me of? ... Is it a childhood memory? ... Something I've dreamed of? ... Or what?" ...

Guessing about the Dr. Pepper flavor is getting to be a game. It seems everyone has an opinion. How about you? What does YOUR palate say? Wet it with a frosty-cold Dr. Pepper, then try to tell how it tastes. Big money for the winners. Why not try?

Make the Taste Test! At Soda Stands or Fountains

No box-tops, cartons or crowns required to enter. But a taste test will surely help. No matter if you have often drunk Dr. Pepper, try it again and concentrate upon the taste. Try it again and again and invite new impressions. Be sure you get yours frosty-cold. Sip it slowly. Get the true Dr. Pepper thrill. Get in on the fun. Make a try for the 'mon.'
