Sixty-Six Million Dollars Of Public Works Fund Allocated; Projects To Be Listed Friday

Cabinet Board Takes Up Request Of War Department WASHINGTON (AP)—With about $66,000,000 definitely allocated to federal construction from the three billion, three hundred million-dollar public works fund, the cabinet board in charge of the program turned Thursday to consideration of the war department estimates of more than a half billion dollars for army construction and river and harbor improvements.

$50,000 Paid By Factor To His Kidnapers

CHICAGO (AP)—John Factor disclosed Wednesday $50,000 in five and ten dollar bills was paid kidnapers as the price of his freedom. CHICAGO (AP)—Machine guns and scissors John Factor, millionaire speculator, told police Thursday were weapons kidnapers were threatened him with the twelve days they held him captive. He said "they never harmed me, but were pretty tough in their threats. My was released just before midnight in suburban La Grange. Factor and members of his family denied any ransom was paid. There were reports anywhere from $75,000 to $200,000 was paid.

Penney Company Sales Increase

Sales of the J. C. Penney Company for the month of June 1933 were $14,817,338.95 as compared with $12,024,970.91 for June 1932. This is a gain of $2,792,368.04 or 23.2 per cent. This is the third consecutive month to show a sales increase over last year. In April the percentage of gain over 1932 was 1.57 per cent; in May the gain over a year ago was 14.15 per cent. Total sales for the first six months of 1933 were $71,018,588.40. This compares with $69,380,342.21 for the first six months of 1932, or an increase of $1,738,246.19. The percentage of gain for the first six months is 2.51 per cent. In view of the fact that losses were shown in sales for the first three months, the total gain for the first half year reflects strongly the improved buying by the consuming public.

Whirligig

Written by a group of the best informed newspapermen of Washington and New York. Opinions expressed are those of the writers and should not be interpreted as reflecting the editorial policy of this newspaper.

WASHINGTON By George Durno Beer—The foam from three-point-two is cooling over thousands of hungry workers like a benediction. Government statisticians estimate that the beer brewers today are employing about 50 per cent of the personnel they had back in 1914 before the war, and everything this applies only to those who actually brew and do the office work. Diffusion into allied fields is obvious. Cereals, bottles, caps, barrels, trucks and so forth. Fifty per cent of a dead industry come to life in 100 per cent new employment.

Breweries—Automobile factories are being turned into breweries. So are cider mills. As the new ones open up men get jobs and the burden of supplying a voracious demand is taken off those now operating. "Beverage" employment and payroll indexes have led the field for increases since the Beer Bill became effective. They will run around 150 or better for June as compared to the 100 averages based on 1924.

Barrels—In addition, large orders have been placed for aluminum barrels. It seems pasteurization of beer is necessary sometimes to prevent additional fermentation en route. They dip the metal barrel in hot water. It holds the heat that wouldn't penetrate a wooden container.

Revenue—Our national cash register is getting the bell rung pleasantly from beer, also. Treasury revenue receipts have jumped from nothing to well beyond the estimates made by the Budget Bureau as a preliminary argument.

Figures so far run better than $11,000,000 a month. This doesn't take into consideration the early fumbles that are being made in tax payments. Is it hot? Are you thirsty?

Anecdotes—Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., was taking a lot of anecdotal at a White House luncheon table the other day. They had to do with the experiences of the two press boats that followed his father and him on their recent cruise up the North Shore.

Young Franklin told with gusto how one boat was named by the "regulars" from the White House press room while the other accommodated the "prima donnas." His sister, Mrs. Anna Dall, kicked him under the table several times but the recent Groun graduates persisted to the bitter end. His sympathies seemed to be all with the "regulars."

Repeat—Alabama is going wet two to one next Tuesday. Take this on the word of Rep. Henry Bascom Steagall, a most important member of the House under the New Deal. There's one funny payoff in connection with the impending vote on prohibition repeal in this state. Federal workers here in the district who have an absentee voting right are rushing around to find out which candidates on the ballot are dry and wet. The ballot doesn't show.

Loans—Uncle Sam ought to hang out three balls. He's pretty good money lender according to a current balance of the domestic books. (We won't mention foreign loans). The Reconstruction Finance

Cox Breathes New Life Into London Meet

LONDON (AP)—New life was injected into the World Economic Conference Thursday by James M. Cox of Ohio, who convinced his colleagues the steering committee party could usefully continue despite refusal of the federal reserve board to consider cooperation of central banks. In a fighting speech, Cox gave an exposition of American difficulties and induced the committee to agree to keep working at problems of silver and commercial indebtedness.

Ice Man Shows How To Beat The Heat

DALLAS (UP)—Something can be done about the heat if you're as ingenious as Councilman Joe C. Thompson. Admitting he got the idea from a couple of visitors to Texas, Thompson recently placed a 20-pound cake of ice on the floor of his automobile before he and his wife started on a trip from Austin to Dallas. He closed all windows, leaving the dash ventilator open. He reported the trip was made in solid comfort with a little of the ice remaining when the journey was concluded. The rub—if there is one—is that Thompson is an ice manufacturer.

Taking the air again after a brief rest from the 1500 mile hop of Wednesday from Reykjavik, Iceland, to Cartwright, Labrador, the Italian fleet of 24 seaplanes en route from Italy to Chicago, flew to Shadac, New Brunswick, Thursday. Postal Telegraph and Cable company was informed here by Mackey Radio. Twenty of the planes had landed at Shadac at 3:34 p. m. Thursday, EDT. The first squadron took from Cartwright at 9:20 a. m., EDT. The third squadron left at 9:30 a. m. The planes passed over Venison Island, Labrador, at 10:15 a. m., entered the Belle Island Straits at 11 a. m., and were reported over Cape St. George at 1:05 p. m. At 2 p. m. the squadron was bucking a strong head wind and shaping its course over Magdalen Island in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Girl Lives After Wood Driven Into Her Head

B. Frank Haag, Midland Legislator, Succumbs To Injuries Suffered In Motor Accident Near Sterling City

Representative B. Frank Haag of Midland died at 1:15 p. m. Thursday in a San Angelo hospital as the result of an automobile crash late Tuesday night near Sterling City. He had suffered triple fracture of parietal bone on the right of the head over the eye and ear. Little hope was held for his recovery from the time he was discovered forty feet from his demolished automobile. Paul T. Vickers, Midland Chamber of Commerce manager, was held confined to his bed Thursday, suffering from painful bruises and a badly wrenched leg. Clarence Schaubert, Midland cattleman and hotel owner, and Midland County Judge Elliott H. Barron, other occupants of the car, received minor injuries and bruises. The car in which the Midland party was returning from Midland sidwheeled a heavy truck as the two topped a hill. Haag, driving his own car, swerved his machine but the truck caught the left front spindle, causing the car to turn over several times. Representative Haag was thrown through the left front door and was discovered some time later a distance of forty feet from the car. Other members of the party were rendered unconscious but were still in the car when it came to rest upside down against a wolf proof fence. A passing motorist rushed Haag and Barron to the hospital. Vickers and Schaubert were taken to San Angelo by the drivers of the truck. A bulletin from San Angelo 11:30 a. m. Thursday stated the representative's condition to be the strongest since the crash. Reports two minor operations had been performed could not be verified. The body was being prepared by Johnson Funeral Home in San Angelo and Newell W. Ellis Mortuary of Midland was en route Thursday afternoon to return the body to Midland. Funeral arrangements had not been completed Thursday afternoon. Vickers was able to dictate several oil stories and receive a committee on charity Thursday morning. Schaubert and Barron had been given medical attention and discharged from the hospital. The car, a Plymouth sedan, was sold by the King Motor company of this city to Haag and was brought here following the accident. The left front wheel was crumpled as if it had been made of plating and the fender was shredded into twisted bits. Both doors on the left side were crushed and twisted. All glass on the left side was shattered but only the glass in the right front door was harmed. The windshield was unscathed. An metal roof, to which the three other occupants can probably attribute their lives, was badly sprung and bowed in the middle. Haag, serving his first term as a representative in the state legislature, was one of the most popular members of the lower house, colleagues at Austin declared. He is survived by his wife, a son, Merwin and a daughter, Adileas.

76 University Of Texas Gridders To Report For Training

AUSTIN (UP)—Seventy-six football players are expected to answer Coach Clyde Littlefield's call for training at the University of Texas September 10. Low scholastic grades cut nine men from the squad. Graduation took from the lineup of last year's Longhorn eleven. Ernie Key, Harrison Stafford, Hank Clewis, Oz Rianton and Wilson (Cheese) Cook. Of the nine men whose names were scratched from the eligibility list for scholastic deficiency, only three were varsity players. They were J. D. Voyles, Austin, an end; Jim Phillips, guard from Waco, and Dan Delaney, Houston half-back. Russell Allen of Abilene was one of the major freshman candidates ruled ineligible. Coach Littlefield, however, is sure to develop some new stars from the squad of 76 men to place around Captain Bill Smith, center. Captain Smith's own pupil will be Charles Coates. For the wing positions Jack Gray and Bennie Rundle are outstanding candidates; at guard, Buck Prejean and Roy Cooleage; at tackle, Ralph Greear and Arthur Niebsch. Behind the line will be Boon Hilliard, Ronald Fagan, the Irish quarterback, and Osborne Hodges.

The percentage in the contest will be based on the roll beginning July 1. All Baptist and Methodist men in Big Spring are included in this contest. Mrs. Lee Weathers and daughter, Melva Gene Handley, of Sweetwater, spent Wednesday in Big Spring.

Car Driver Resigns His Angelo Job

Splinter 3 Inches Long, Inch Thick Crashes Into Girl's Brain Condition of Mattie Lawson, who is a huge splinter of wood driven into her forehead early Thursday in an automobile accident west of here, was "unchanged" at 3 p. m., Thursday, 12 hours after the accident. J. B. Shuford, driver of the car through which a piece of timber crashed early Thursday on the highway west of here, driving a large piece of wood into the head of Mattie Lawson, 18, of San Angelo, resigned his position as mail carrier on arriving in San Angelo Thursday morning. The Herald was advised. Shuford, who had been in the postal service sometime and was drawing $2,100 annually, is under $1,000 bond on a federal charge as a result of his arrest with Boyd Cochran, San Angelo, near Del Rio last Friday, when several cans of alcohol were confiscated by federal officers. Officers here had not determined definitely Thursday afternoon whether there were one or more persons in the car besides Miss Lawson and Shuford. One woman remained outside the hospital while the girl was on the operating table. Shuford remained in the operating room until the girl was taken to a hospital room. His left story afterward for San Angelo. Miss Lawson's mother said she did not know who was with her daughter besides Shuford, adding that "they had no business talking her off like that." Mattie Lawson, 18, of San Angelo lies in Bivings and Barcus hospital here unconscious of the fact that she is living after having a jagged splinter of wood three inches long and an inch thick driven fully two inches through her skull. The girl was brought to the hospital about 3:30 a. m. Thursday by companions on a ride from San Angelo after a freak accident on Highway No. 1 between Big Spring and Stanton, the details of which had not been cleared up Thursday afternoon by local officers. J. B. Shuford, San Angelo post office employe and driver of the car, a Ford sedan, said the car struck a detour sign or barrier. A piece of timber crashed through the windshield and through the back of the car. No other occupants were injured and the car did not overturn. But a splinter from the scantling crashed into Miss Lawson's head above the right eye and the piece of wood was broken off in her head, filling a large, jagged hole. After working over her for an hour the surgeon said she had a 100 to 1 chance to recover, but expressed the fear meningitis or some other complication would prove fatal. It was necessary for the surgeon to exert all his strength to extract the large splinter from the girl's head. It broke into four pieces, parting long-wise. Each piece of wood was 2 1/2 to 3 inches long and 1-2 to 3-4 inches thick. The brain was injured and laid bare. It was necessary to extract three small pieces of the skull to relieve pressure on the brain. The tedious procedure of cleaning the large wound of small bits of wood and paint was made more difficult by profuse bleeding. The flow of blood finally was stopped and wound packed. Stitches extended from each upper corner of the forehead to a point immediately above and slightly to the right of the nose in the shape of a "V" when the wound finally was closed. Miss Lawson withstood the operation surprisingly well. Her condition remained unchanged hours after leaving the operating table. Her mother, Mrs. Laura Lawson, 21 Poe street, San Angelo, arrived by mid-morning Wednesday and was at her bedside. She said she passed Shuford about 8 o'clock some distance south of here as he was en route to San Angelo. Mrs. Lawson said she did not know who the girl or girls were in the party with her daughter.

Loyal Legion Of West Side Side Renders Program At Meeting

Members of the Women's Christian Temperance Union of Big Spring Wednesday appointed Mrs. E. G. Richardson, Mrs. W. R. Settles and Mrs. E. G. Gay as a committee to canvas the city for dry votes in the August 26 voting on repeal of the eighteenth amendment and legalization of 3.2 per cent beer. Austin Smith made an interesting talk, defining purposes and objects of the Legion. Ten Legion members sang the White Ribbon Rally song. Miss Winnie Avant gave a reading entitled "What's the Use?" George Montgomery was heard on the subject "Youth Speaks" and Otho Grey talked on "The Liquor Traffic." The Legion program was ended with a song "The World is Going Dry." Dr. J. Richard Spann brought an instructive address in which he cited statistics to disprove propaganda of wet forces. Those present were Rev. and Mrs. B. G. Richardson, Rev. and Mrs. S. J. GETTING RESULTS

State Comptroller George H. Sheppard thinks the state's new enforcement law for the collection of the gasoline tax is a pretty good thing. He points out that in the East Texas area alone, during the last ninety days, collections have increased 150 per cent. That single district, if the pace continues, will add $2,000,000 to the state's income from that source.

In the other five districts the increase is expected to be equally impressive.

In the East Texas area during February, the state gas tax was paid on only 2,826,547 gallons. In March, following passage of the new law, the total was 4,011,227 gallons; in April it was 5,394,313 and in May, 7,064,463 gallons. Furthermore, these figures will be still further increased, Mr. Sheppard says, if the people will be vigilant and help his man spot the tax evaders.

"We do not want prisoners. We want the tax money. Getting all of it will help everybody," says the comptroller.

He points out that the increase in East Texas alone had already added $500,000 to the common school fund, $500,000 to the county bond refunding income and $1,000,000 to the highway fund.

That is a splendid record. Evidently the legislature did a good piece of work when it passed the new gasoline tax evasion statute. It is making money for the state, and is enabling the honest oil men to get an even break with the bootleggers.

Young Mother Flees Hospital Via Fire Escape Leaving Note Asking That New-Born Son Be Adopted

ABILENE—Envisioning a future life of hardship for herself, and unwilling for her new-born son to share it, a young mother, stranger in Abilene, fled Tuesday night down the fire escape of the West Texas Baptist sanitarium leaving behind a pencilled wish that he be adopted into "some good home."

The little boy, a "fine specimen," doctors say, weighed eight pounds at birth and is progressing nicely. Appearing at the hospital alone Sunday night the woman, a blonde about 21 years old, said she was en route from Big Spring to Bradshaw where her husband and mother were, but felt she would be unable to go on. A doctor was summoned and the child was born at 3 o'clock the following morning.

Friends were to have notified her people, she said, but when none had appeared Tuesday Superintendent E. M. Collier offered to get in touch with them, as he was planning a trip Wednesday to the Bradshaw area.

The woman, who signed herself "Mrs. Rufus Chapman," rejected his offer saying she would write a letter and asked for writing materials.

In the note she left behind the young woman said her husband had been killed in the recent California earthquake and that she was trying to make it to Wilmington, Del. She also declared she had arrived in Abilene by freight train Sunday night.

About 10 o'clock the attending nurse heard a disturbance in the woman's room and went to investigate. The mother had gone down the fire escape for two flights and then taken to a round chute, which covers the remaining 20-feet to the ground.

A white apron, which she had worn when entering, was the only piece of apparel she had on.

Place where the woman made her hurried exit was within a few

Factories Visited By Wasson While On Rotary Trip In East

Elmo Wasson, delegate to the Rotary International at Boston from June 26-30, visited several factories on his trip in the cities of Washington, Baltimore, Boston, New York, Milwaukee, St. Louis, and Chicago.

Mr. Wasson visited five factories in New York City, one in Boston, one in Milwaukee, two in Baltimore, and three in Chicago.

He said that all the factories were disturbed about the Recovery Act and were waiting to see how it would affect business. They will have to pay more for raw goods of all kinds. They want to raise wages also; this will mean an increase in prices.

As a whole they are better satisfied with present prospects than they were with past conditions. Most of them frankly admitted that they had done nothing but lose money the past months Mr. Wasson said.

"The factories are anxious to know the conditions of the Southern states," Mr. Wasson declared. He also mentioned that most of the large factories know the conditions at present—they know the price of oil, the lack of rain, and other existing conditions.

"Chicago is more optimistic about conditions," asserted Mr. Wasson, "than any of the other cities, probably because of the Fair." Baltimore, one of the biggest clothing and manufacturing centers of the United States, seems to know more about the effect the Recovery Act will have on the industries. "This may be because of the nearness to Washington, which is only thirty-eight miles away," stated Mr. Wasson.

Woolen goods manufacturers realize that they must pay more for raw materials than other clothes, but they are glad to pay more because the growers of wool and cotton will be paid more. This will cause better wages to be paid and more money will be put in circulation. The manufacturers believe that this will put things to operating on a more even basis.

Mr. Wasson visited the Century of Progress while he was in Chicago. He said that he liked the Fair even better when he saw the name of Big Spring on a big electrically lighted map of the American Airways lines in the Travel and Transport Building. He visited many interesting exhibits, but he said that all the state exhibits were not yet completed.

Use Of Teeth In Recovery Act Is Urged

Some Industries Holding Back Against Federal Program

By RAYMOND CLAPPER
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 WASHINGTON, (UP)—Hardy souls among President Roosevelt's advisers are urging him to use the teeth in the National Recovery Act. Some industries are holding back. Trade propaganda is carrying the hint that manufacturers might well sit tight and wait to see what happens. Some industries are so helplessly divided that the government is considering stepping in and bringing their quarrels directly before the N. I. R. A.

Many of the President's advisers are idly running out of patience. They want President Roosevelt to use his dictatorial powers.

But he is inclined to move cautiously. His unprecedented experiment must have general support if it is to work. It must have the bulk of industry and the business world with it. He has witnessed the collapse of prohibition because of the unpopularity which was aroused when federal agents attempted to dictate personal conduct. Industry has not been prepared for the sudden regimentation now proposed under the N. I. R. A. harshness now would stir up opposition and threaten the experiment, the more cautious feel.

So President Roosevelt, armed with greater power than any president in peace time, may find discretion the better part of valor for a little while longer.

Impatient ones are urging a blanket shortcut by which as a stop gap, President Roosevelt would call upon all industry to adopt a minimum wage scale and a universal maximum week of 36 hours or so, to hold until separate codes had been approved. Examination of the law indicates this could not be done without hearings. That would take weeks. The only stop-gap, which could be applied at once, would be a purely voluntary one.

It might be done with a few basic industries more quickly, with a few days of simultaneous hearings for each.

At the present rate, millions can not be put to work within a few weeks as had been planned. Speed-up measures are likely but their

Europe's Economic War Progresses Despite World Conference Truce

By WALLACE CARROLL
 United Press Staff Correspondent
 (Copyright 1933, By United Press)

PARIS, (UP)—Europe's economic war, with tariff bombardments and retaliation in the form of restrict customs regulations, is proceeding briskly despite the London Economic Conference and the recent tariff truce, a United Press survey showed.

France is waging tariff wars with Germany and Portugal; Poland is waging a tariff war against Germany and so is Roumania. The bombardments in each instance affect every country that competes with the warring ones in its export trade.

French regulations effective today raise tariffs on 100 products imported from Germany, including chemicals, cotton lint, paints, glassware and machine tools. This followed Germany's boosting of tariffs on French products.

Portugal has just raised the tariffs on French goods by 20 per cent. This war started when France raised tariffs on Madeira and port wines. Portugal in turn raised tariffs on French motorcycles and perfumes. France then imposed a 20 per cent surtax on Portuguese goods to offset depreciation in Portuguese currency.

The Portuguese foreign minister is in Paris discussing the possibility of an armistice.

Roumania has just established restrictive quotas on more than 300 items, and imposed new surtaxes of from 10 to 50 per cent on goods largely imported from Germany. This is in retaliation for Germany's restriction of imports of Roumanian agricultural products.

Poland has prohibited until October 10 the importation of wool, chemicals, tanning extracts, oleaginous products, grains and shoes imported from Germany.

Whenever the subject of cigarettes comes up, I sit back quietly and let the men explain about the "Toasting" process. Then, if they ask my opinion, I'm pretty frank and tell them why "Luckies please"—me, at least. After all, there's an intimate relationship between a cigarette and my lips—and I'm very sensitive about my personal daintiness. Certainly I enjoy Luckies' delicious tobaccos and their mellow-mildness—but the comforting purity of "Toasting" is what I prize almost above everything else. And that is a woman's reason for saying "Luckies Please!"

University Of Texas Tennis Coach Has Colorful Career In Athletics

Dr. D. A. Penick Started Out As Player On College Baseball Team

By CAPITOLA CANNON
AUSTIN—The ace tennis coach in the southwest started his college career as a baseball fiend. Daniel Allen Penick, officially professor of Classical Languages and assistant dean of the College of Arts and Science in the University of Texas, who, as a non-salaried tennis coach at that institution, has turned out four Davis cup winners, began his athletic career by playing on his college baseball team.

In fact, his athletic proclivities included quite a few other sports than tennis, which was then only a social sport, or one suited for "week-ends." His first played tennis, incidentally, on a court on a corner of the university campus. Tennis, but it took us all afternoon before we got started."

nis began for Penick in his senior year and he continued to play as a graduate student in 1891-92. The first time he ever played tennis he beat his teacher. The man he played with wasn't "much of a player," and only played to oblige him because he was anxious to learn the new game which was popular with his friends. Penick was used to keeping his eye on the ball in baseball so he beat his first opponent.

Track also took up some of his time as a student, for he participated in and won a meet his last year in school. As a junior and in the baseball team, which after his graduation, combined with their school opponents to play city teams.

It is as the tennis coach who rides a bicycle to school that he is best known; he has not discarded his trusty steed, though of late years he often walks or drives in the car which his lettermen of the last 17 years gave him a few years ago as a token of their love and appreciation.

Dr. Penick is unassuming and friendly and takes time from his lettermen players to show a beginner how to hold his racket. His advice is always in the form of suggestion rather than a command and his eyes twinkle as he gives it. He has turned out more stars than any other tennis coach in the country. He has never received pay for coaching, since he considers it as a hobby and says that he would not be a true amateur sportsman if he received any monetary remuneration.

He and Dr. H. Y. Benedict, now president of the University, played tennis together from 1900 until the war. Dr. Benedict says: "We won the faculty doubles and I beat him for the singles title. He knew more about the theory of the game, but I was steadier. We went to the state meet here once and played the A&M champions but they didn't know how to play. We should've beat them in thirty minutes, but it took us all afternoon before we got started."

Occasionally Dr. Penick plays with his pupils. Then he remarks with a laugh, "You're no good if you let me beat you. Most anybody can beat me."

Though he dislikes professionalism in tennis so much that he expressed regret that Bruce Barnes joined Bill Tilden last year, he has probably turned out more nationally known players than any other man, in addition to making and keeping his university the outstanding college in this sport. His first team was organized in 1912, and for twenty years has won victory in either singles or doubles, generally in both. Sportsmanship is the first rule he teaches his athletes. His squads have won five national intercollegiate titles in the last ten years.

Among outstanding champions he has produced are such men as Lewis White, Louis Thalheimer, Bruce Barnes, Karl Kamrath, Wilmer Allison and Berkeley Bell. Of this number two were on the Davis Cup team, one on the Davis Cup squad, four ranked in the first ten in either singles or doubles, and all have won national intercollegiate titles in either singles or doubles.

Bruce Barnes in the world's professional ranking, was named one of the highest players and with Bill Tilden, won the world's doubles championship in professional tennis. Wilmer Allison has been not only national intercollegiate singles champion but also national doubles champion, with John Van Ryn, and national mixed champion with Edith Cross. He has won, with John Van Ryn, the Davis Cup doubles championship of England. He is now ranking second in the nation and third in the world.

Dr. Penick gives his sentiments regarding them all impartially as follows: "While I am proud of these better known players, I recall with much pleasure and deep affection many others who were excellent players and the very finest fellows. These are too numerous to mention here but are no less loved by their coach. I never forget one of them though their names are not in the headlines."

This interest in tennis is only incidental. He does full time teaching, in addition to his duties as the Dean's office, and still finds time to write many articles, and publish books which are being used in the schools of Texas. He is moreover, president of the Southwestern Athletic conference.

Johnston Again Heads Brotherhood

CLEVELAND, O., (UP) — The wealthy and powerful Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in triennial convention here, reelected Alvanley Johnston as Grand Chief Engineer, ending one of the most bitter controversies in the history of the union.

The official count of ballots gave Johnston 503 votes, as against 283 for his opponent, I. O. Sanders, of Columbus, and proved a substantial administrative victory over the "progressive" faction which had sought to prevent Johnston's reelection.

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN

The Present Position in Outline

LONDON, July 8

It may be useful to take our bearings by recalling the course of events during the last week.

On Thursday evening the so-called bureau, which is the steering committee, adopted a resolution declaring in diplomatic but clear phrases that since the gold countries are unable to take part in any discussion of monetary questions until the dollar is stabilized, the sub-committees of the conference should make reports on what it is still possible to discuss. The words of the resolution can not be made to mean anything, it seems to me, but that the discussion of monetary questions was to be adjourned. And it was on this understanding that the gold countries of continental Europe voted for the resolution.

On Friday in the subcommittee dealing with financial matters, a curious thing happened. Mr. Neville Chamberlain came forward with a proposal not to adjourn the discussion of money questions, but instead, to propose to discuss them. How the British position of Friday is to be reconciled with the letter and spirit of the resolution adopted Thursday is not clear. However, the Chamberlain proposal was put to a vote and was carried by 25 to 15, Soviet Russia not voting.

The fifteen nations opposing the Chamberlain motion included the whole of Continental Europe except Portugal and Scandinavia, and the Baltic states. The twenty-five nations voting for the Chamberlain motion consisted of seven British nations, five South American, three Scandinavian and two Baltic, the Far Eastern nations and the United States and its dependencies.

On Saturday the central banks of the chief gold countries had a meeting in Paris and organized a plan to defend the gold parity of their currencies. That same day in London a statement was issued by Secretary Hull naming a list of subjects which the conference should discuss. It is interesting to note that though Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Hull have been in the same camp since Thursday, their lists of subjects to be discussed differ in one important respect. Mr. Chamberlain's list includes the limitation of currency fluctuation and Mr. Hull's does not.

All of these matters belong to the politics of the conference. The political parties, a gold party and a party which I suppose might be described as inflationist. The gold party has organized itself. It has a limited but a clear purpose, to defend the gold party. As an essential part of its defense it refuses to discuss monetary questions at London because with the dollar unestablished such discussion would inevitably feed the speculation which threatens the gold currencies.

The inflationist party is a much looser aggregation for it is as yet without a clear common objective. The United States has been forcing the pace but the President has not as yet given any public intimation as to how far in terms of commodity prices or in the revaluation of the dollar he wishes to carry the inflation. For his general purposes he has now obtained the political support of the sterling bloc, but it remains to be seen how far the Bank of England, the Treasury, and the national government will actually go in the way of practical measures.

Unless there has been a sudden revolutionary change of opinion in those British circles where real decisions are made, the actual support will be extremely cautious until the President is prepared to show in some way or other that he is a much interested in controlling inflation as in producing it. Mr. Chamberlain has voted with Mr. Hull in the conference but thus far the pound sterling continues to be stabilized de facto with the gold franc at about 85 francs to the pound. Over this week-end we have, therefore, had Anglo-American political co-operation side by side with Anglo-French financial co-operation. The British have voted with the Americans but there is no evidence as yet that they have begun to act with them.

at the present moment. The situation should develop on Monday and it may be that on Monday evening there will be a new declaration of British policy in the House of Commons debate. Until British policy is clarified it is almost impossible to tell what the maneuvers of last week signify.

Grimes County To Vote On 3.2 Beer

ANDERSON (UP)—Grimes county, now dry under the old local option laws adopted prior to prohibition, will hold another local option election Aug. 28, when the state at large will vote on legalization of beer and repeal of the 18th amendment.

The county commissioners court ordered the election after receiving a petition bearing 435 names. Local authorities predicted today that the entire wet ticket will carry in the county.

Mrs. S. P. Jones and children Myrtle, Omar, Mildred and James leave Friday morning for Sulphur Springs where they will visit relatives and friends for several days.

STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH!

—neither strong enough, nor safe enough, nor quiet enough for the body of a quality car like CHEVROLET

CHEVROLET Why is it that every 12-cylinder and 16-cylinder car in America has bodies of steel reinforced by hardwood? Why is it that every make of car selling for over $4000 uses bodies of exactly the same type? Why? For the same reason that Chevrolet uses it exclusively, and refuses to resort to anything else: Because every test and every experiment has definitely proved: STEEL ALONE IS NOT ENOUGH! Neither as strong, nor as safe, nor as quiet as a body of steel plus hardwood.

The trouble with steel alone is that it stands just so much shock and punishment. Steel alone is also inclined to rattle and rattle. Steel simply can't do a job all by itself, any more than wood alone can! BUT—when you put the two together—a heavy, staunch steel body over tough, solid hardwood—then the hardwood reinforces the steel—and vice versa! The two work together. And the result: the strongest, safest type of body, such as Fisher builds for Chevrolet.

Don't expect to find a steel plus hardwood body in any other low-priced car. Only Chevrolet has it! And don't expect to find, in any other low-priced car, sturdy, safe how and slat roof construction, such as Chevrolet gives you. Or that greatest body improvement in the last ten years: Fisher No Draft Ventilation. Or a Cushion-Balanced Engine Mounting (that kills annoying vibration). Also, don't expect to find, in any other low-priced car, such Chevrolet features as a Starterator! Or a six-cylinder engine as dependable—or as economical—as Chevrolet's! No other car has them—and that's why twice as many people choose Chevrolet as any other make of motor car.

Enforcements -- Not Repeal

The administration at Washington is urging the speeding up by the states of repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment that the revenue from legalized liquor may obviate the necessity for the imposition of new taxes to finance President Roosevelt's public works employment program. Revenue from taxes on liquor, Postmaster General Farley insists, adequately meet the need for money with which to back his plan. He is said to have admitted that the country could not get repeal before the income tax rates became effective but has called attention to the fact that his public works bill carries a provision which would make the new tax levies automatically inoperative upon the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. Commenting on this remarkable appeal, the Christian Science Monitor remarks, "If the Government anticipates $250,000,000 a year in revenue from hard liquors aside from the present beer tax, it must expect a pretty extensive drinking of those liquors. Even at the war-time rate of taxation this estimate would call for the consumption of nearly four-fifths as much whiskey, gin and similar intoxicants as during 1918."

CINCINNATI—The Cincinnati Reds and the Phillies swapped places at the bottom of the National league ladder Wednesday, the Phillies losing 4-1 and going back to the rung in which they pushed the Reds only Tuesday.

CHICAGO—Converting three Brooklyn errors into as many runs in the opening inning, the Chicago Cubs Wednesday defeated the Dodgers, 5-3, for their seventh consecutive victory and second place in the National league standing. The triumph sent the Cubs a half game ahead of the Cards, who lost.

PITTSBURGH—Boston's Braves, scoreless for eight innings, suddenly came to life in the ninth frame of Wednesday's game with an eight-run rally that tied the score, but the Pirates bounced back with a tally in the tenth to win, 9-8.

WASHINGTON (UP)—The war department Wednesday ordered district corps area commanders to refuse to renew for 1934 contracts with public utilities companies for electric power and light services unless rates are reduced by 10 per cent.

Floyd Hardesty of the P.H.E. Oil Company of Fort Worth and J. C. Alderson arrived in Big Spring Wednesday afternoon. Mr. Hardesty will be here for several days on business. Mr. Alderson is visiting his sister, Mrs. L. A. Talley.

President Roosevelt feels this economy move is warranted and is expected to back up the war department to the limit although the army will do if the companies refuse to reduce rates is not known.

As to the effect of this enormous consumption of alcoholic beverages upon industry, the Monitor says: "The testimony not only of laboratory experiments but also of common experience is that drinking is a drag on the efficiency of workers from manual laborers to intellectuals. It is a drag, moreover, on their ability to spend for the products of more wholesome industries. The Government spends large sums on public construction. So long as that money is spent for worthwhile things it tends to multiply itself. The man benefited by a new park or a new piece of furniture in his home becomes a shade more useful and helps to produce values that will go to repay the Government's expenditure. On the other hand, expenditure for intoxicants does not produce values but destroys them, slowing down if not benumbing the worker. The industry which receives some of the benefits of quickened business activity could readily pay a moderate and definite unemployment tax. But under repeal it would be asked to pay instead a very indeterminate tax in the form of lowered efficiency and dependability in its staff. Increased alcoholic competition for the consumer's dollar and increased public outlays for social salvage."

Commenting that the public works program of the administration is highly commendable, is the suggested plan for financing it by increased consumption of alcoholic liquors justified? Will any real profit accrue to a nation from revenue derived from a business that tans down rather than builds up its citizenry? (Contributed by W. C. T. U.)

Bluebonnet Bridge Club Goes On Tour

Mrs. Lee Weathers Hostess For Clever Touring Session

Mrs. Lee Weathers of Sweetwater entertained the members of the Bluebonnet Bridge Club Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. D. McDonald with the cleverest party idea of the season.

It was a vacation touring party. The spacious McDonald rooms were decorated with bouquets of sunflowers to represent the country roadsides and to carry out the color scheme of yellow and green.

The tallies and scorecards were made by the hostess and were her own original idea. The tallies were in the shape of sign posts, each tally containing a different instruction, such as Curve Ahead; School Zone, etc. The tables were called cabins and couples, beds. On the back of the tally the scores of the guests represented the mileage from the last camp.

The scorecards were cut in shapes of cabins and were numbered for the tables.

Soda pop was served between games. At the refreshment hour a lovely ice course was served, the hostess being assisted by her daughter, Meiva Gene Handley and Anna Pauline Jacobs. On the plates were little yellow and green rubber-tired autos as favors.

High score went to Mrs. La Boff for club members; her trophy was a thermos jug beautifully wrapped. High for visitors went to Mrs. Timmons and was a 12-piece picnic set. Mrs. Liberty made high guest and received a summer bridge set.

Guests of the club were: Mrs. H. C. Timmons, of Lubbock; Mrs. J. H. Kirkpatrick; Misses Agnes Currie and Nell Davis. Members present were: Mmes. Slim O'Neal, E. M. La Boff, P. H. Liberty, E. D. Merrill, C. E. Shive, S. L. Baker, Jack Hodges, and W. D. McDonald.

Bouquets of cut flowers centered the tables. The tallies were painted by the hostess to represent colorful butterflies. These were perched on the flowers.

Mrs. Browning made club high score and received a pretty picture. Mrs. Mayes received visitor's high and was given a pair of shoes.

Guests were: Mmes. Jack Mayen, D. C. Hamilton, H. L. Bohannon and P. W. Malone. Members attending were: L. R. Kuykendall, Harold Parks, Homer Wright, W. W. Pendleton, Lester Short and Morris Burns.

Puts An End To Bunion Pains

We Need to Suffer Another Day

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to reduce inflammation of swollen toe joints and help get them down to normal and that is to apply Moore's Emerald Oil night and morning.

Ask Collins Bros. or any first class drugist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces lasts a long time and furthermore if one bottle of Emerald Oil does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special Note: People who want to reduce swellings or varicose veins should get a bottle of Moore's Emerald Oil at once. Applied night and morning as directed they will quickly witness an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunions are reduced to normal.

CHAPTER 14

Mary never had wished for a fairy god-mother, but she felt very much like a bewildered Cinderella as she rode to New York all alone in the big limousine. The motorist purred like a great contented cat, the chauffeur looked like an automatic figure that had been wound up and set to perform certain gestures and move certain levers of the car.

If only she were going to meet the prince! But alas! when she arrived there would be only suave, courteous Martin Frazier whom she had evaded and almost feared for a whole year. How to cope with him! She expected him to make subtle advances, so she had to be prepared to handle a delicate situation with diplomacy. Was she capable? Half of the time Mary assured herself that she was, and the other half she experienced a moment of panic. She was tempted to see whether Jenks could turn around and drive her back home, or if he were automatically set so that he just had to arrive at a given place at a given time. Her hands were cold and her face burned annoyingly. Mary hoped that it wasn't as crimson as it felt. She leaned forward and peered timidly into the mirrored panel beside her. No, she looked normal enough.

She must get herself together, she decided. Know just what she would say to Frazier, lay out her campaign of defense.

But she had formed no plan whatever when the motor car passed silently up to the curb and stopped. A uniformed doorman leaped forward on the instant. Mary assumed that he was waiting to recognize that particular motor car and to do the leap-forward act so gracefully.

Almost at the same instant, Martin Frazier was at the door, saying: "All right. The lady will not get out here."

"Yes sir. Very well, sir," assisting him into the car and anxiously closed the door after him.

Then, "Well, little girl, here you are—at last. I thought you never would arrive. Up Park Avenue, Jenks. You haven't said. Mary, where you want to go."

"Why, anywhere you say, Mr. Frazier. I—I don't know much about New York, even though I do spend most of my time here," she laughed apologetically—the dusky-sweet laugh that turned the blood to liquid fire in men's veins.

"Sweet kid," he marveled, a trifle awed by her guilelessness. "Say, 'Martin, please, dear. When you call me 'Mr. Frazier,' it is just like building up a wall between us."

Which was exactly what Mary wanted to do. But she said lightly, laughing a little, "Anywhere you wish, 'Martin.'"

He chuckled, pleased, and pressed her hand quickly, but did not attempt to take it.

They went to a very popular roof-garden night club. "This is better than wandering from one place to another," he declared. "Here, we can dine, dance and be entertained all at once. All right?"

"Perfect!" she agreed, too impressed for words with the magnificence of the place. Of all the swanky places she ever had imagined, this out-classed them all. The brilliance, the color, the immensity, the novelty of it were overwhelming. No fairland, no prince's court ball could ever compare with the splendor, she thought. Surely, the clock would strike twelve and she would awake to find herself back in the cramped room on East Twenty-fifth Street across the river.

Frazier ordered lavishly. He was a sportsman, fond of show. He liked to make an impression on everyone who saw him—friends, fellow guests, waiters, check girls, everyone about him. And, of course, he knew that the surest way to make an impression is to be a good spender. Spending money generously is the star act of the biggest show on earth, he knew.

He consulted Mary occasionally. The menu confused her. "Why, you order, please. Not too much—Martin."

The expression in his sharp eyes recognized her shy addition of his first name. "Red caviar or anchovies, Mary?"

"Anchovies," she smiled, and hadn't the least idea whether she wanted them or not.

When he had finished the order with breast of chicken under glass, chicken salad and maroons, he leaned forward and clasped his hands together upon the table. A huge diamond in his ring flashed blue and red and green fire into Mary's eyes.

"You know, Mary, I can't believe this is true—you sitting across the table from me, looking so wonderful. You're a stunning woman when you give yourself a chance. You have style, plus."

"Thank you," she murmured, wondering desperately what to say to change the subject. When she was with Dick, it was so pleasant just to let him do most of the talking, to relax and listen to his garrulous rambling. It was quite different with Frazier. She felt stupid and ill-at-ease and anxious to turn the conversation from herself. What could she say? They had no common interest except the market, and it would be very dull to talk shop with Frazier. Market prices usually concerned him little, except in case of a sharp decline or a sensational advance. A few points either way were nothing to him. She floundered for words.

Now Bonnie could have chattered away to Martin with utmost unconcern, and probably to his delight, she thought. Why hadn't he brought such a girl as Bonnie with him tonight? There were plenty of girls like her sister who would be delighted to entertain men like Martin—in return for being enter-taind by him in such places as this.

He yet was talking about her. "What still puzzles me is your sudden change of heart. But never mind, ma chere, it is enough for me that you have changed. Let us be gay. What shall we have to celebrate? 'Build yourself a nice one' for tonight, Mary. What do you like?"

"Not a thing to drink, Martin, thank you."

"Oh, come now, just a little cocktail!"

The lights went out and the effulgent spotlight focused upon the sunken stage in the center of the room. Ballet dancers and a glittering ensemble appeared.

"They always have a good floor show here," Martin observed, vastly satisfied with himself and his surroundings. Everything complete now—even Mary Vaughn sitting there with him. He watched her more than he did the act, of which Mary was acutely conscious.

As the lights flashed on again, he said, in a voice strangely reverent for Martin Frazier, "Do you know, Mary, that you are awfully sweet—and superb? I'm just beginning to know you, after all these months."

"It's nice to be getting acquainted," she smiled. "But let's not talk about me. There are much richer subjects to discuss."

"I've never found them. Come, let us dance. I know you dance well, from the way you walk."

She had expected the nearness of his embrace to be repellant, but discovered with pleasure that he did not stress his advantage by holding her too close and that he was a charming partner. He seemed actually to be more aware of the pleasure of dancing with her than of the fact that he held her in his arms. Mary was vaguely puzzled by his impersonal attitude. She had anticipated that he would be ardent, possessive, exulting. Instead, he was obsequious, amiable, altogether charming. Her liking for him increased.

Even when the room grew warm and hazy with smoke and some of the guests ribald, Martin retained his suavity and solicitous attention to her. Altogether, Mary had a most enjoyable evening, to the very moment when he left her at the own door and gallantly bent over her hand with his customary manner of farewell.

On the way out to her home he had said, "This has been the most enjoyable evening in years for me, Mary. Will you be nice to me often?" He was sitting close beside her and he laid his hand over hers as he bent closer, at the same time that she grew rigid with that indigenous instinct for defense in his presence.

"That depends upon you," she attempted to speak lightly. "It has been nice to know you better, Martin. But you must remember that a business girl can't keep these hour many nights and keep her job. I wonder why you don't prefer the girls who have nothing to do except play. Surely, you know many of them."

"I surely do. But you see, I happen to prefer you to any of them."

"How strange."

"Why?" She was naively curious. "For more reasons than I can tell you or you would understand, dear." He added the word of affection as naturally and fondly as if they had been long intimates. Mary wondered if that was because he called every girl "dear." Probably, she hadn't had much time for conjecture about men like Martin. Dick had never called her "dear"; yet sitting there, beside Frazier in the deep upholstery of his luxurious motor car, had none of the friendly security of driving with Dick in the little coupe.

All the time she was with him that evening and even when he had gone, Martin puzzled her. She had gone to him armored and armed for a joust with an enemy; and had received the hand-clasp of a friend. And yet, she sensed in him a strained reserve of forces held in leash. Would he always control those forces in her presence?

Shot Her Because She Was Crooked Says Dying Man

DALLAS (UP)—The martial troubles of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Hickerson, Greenville, were resolved in death.

Unable to mend a rift which had caused a separation, Hickerson, 40, shot and killed his wife, then mortally wounded himself.

The shooting occurred at the home of Mrs. W. C. Bradford, where Mrs. Hickerson was visiting. Her husband followed Mrs. Hickerson to Dallas and asked to talk privately with her. From the room in which they were closeted came the sound of angry voices, then several shots.

Mrs. Hickerson emerged from the room with blood streaming from wounds in her head. She fell lifeless down the stairway at the feet of her hostess.

Hickerson's last words before he died on the operating table at a hospital were:

"I shot her because she was crooked."

The couple had been married less than a year. They had been estranged several weeks.

Verdicts of murder and suicide were returned at an inquest.

Mrs. Hickerson is survived by her mother, Mrs. John Haynes and a daughter, Mrs. Garnet Danewood, both of Greenville.

Separate Trial Of Ouster Suit Asked By Sinclair Co.

AUSTIN (UP)—Arguments on the plea of Sinclair Refining company for a separate trial in the state's $17,000,000 penalty and ouster suit against major oil companies, were to be concluded in 98th district court here.

Sinclair testified it was not marketing oil products in Texas at the time it subscribed to a code of ethics to govern marketing practices and therefore is entitled to a severance in the case.

Attorney General James V. Allred contends the code was a violation of Texas anti-trust laws. Trials of the suit, naming 17 defendants has been set for Oct. 2.

Corporation's personal books show slightly over one half of one per cent in overdue payments from its emergency advances to all types of business, industry and local government.

A banker would tell you this was nice business. Particularly when collateral is held in all past-due cases that could be foreclosed.

The R. F. C. doesn't want to grab collateral of course. That wouldn't help business.

The Board of Directors will stand instead on a record of more than two and a quarter billion dollars disbursed with collections as promised of nearly a quarter of that amount.

Look out for President Roosevelt next month when he gets to Hyde Park.

It was brought down to the White House the other day. The President tried it out in the south grounds. The car is equipped with a special left-hand hand control or brake and clutch.

"Guess I'll have to have these driveways straightened out," he said. "I can't make any speed with all these sharp curves."

TODAY and TOMORROW

By WALTER LIPPMANN The Logic of Adjournment

The Logic of Adjournment PARIS—At this writing it appears that the United States has agreed to a virtual adjournment of the debate on monetary questions. If this is true, it is a wise decision. The whole argument for the past few days about whether to adjourn or to go on talking has been unreal. No practical decision could have come out of the talk. The alignment of Great Britain with the United States in the conference has been political rather than financial or economic. The question as to whether Britain would lead the sterling bloc toward inflation could not have been determined in the World Economic Conference. It will necessarily be determined by the logic of events.

There are three fundamental uncertainties which have to be cleared up before international monetary agreements are possible. One is the uncertainty as to the degree of inflation which President Roosevelt is seeking. The second is the uncertainty as to whether in view of the inherently grave conditions of the French and of certain other Continental budgets, the gold currencies can be maintained at their present parities. The third is the uncertainty as to whether Britain will continue to keep the pound sterling stabilized with the franc or whether it will allow the pound sterling to depreciate with the dollar.

No one of these questions can now be debated in the conference. The President has insisted that for the time being he must have an absolutely free hand. The gold countries will not, for obvious reasons, debate in public the questions which trouble them, such as whether they can really deflate their budgets and their manufacturing costs enough to maintain their credit. And Great Britain will not, we may be reasonably certain, discuss before an international committee the question as to what policy she will adopt for the pound. Certainly it is hard to imagine such a discussion with men like Mr. Neville Chamberlain and Mr. Montague Norman at the helm.

Inevitably, therefore, a continuation of the debate would be meaningless in the realm of finance but highly dangerous in the realm of politics. No financial policy would be decided, but every attempt to touch the realities would provoke sharp opposition from that one of the three parties—the dollar—whose position was threatened. It is, therefore, better to adjourn, and then quietly to resume conversation with a view to import-

Enlargement Of Labor Bureaus In Texas Provided

FORT WORTH, (UP)—A wide cooperative system that will go far toward stabilization of labor conditions in Texas will result from the federal government's program to expand employment agencies in this state, according to C. W. Woodman, assistant director of the U. S. Employment service here. Woodman has received advice from Washington, D. C., that the federal government is to spend $53,398 in Texas to help find jobs for unemployed. This is provided under the Wagner act.

Exactly how the money will be put to use is uncertain at this time. Woodman said, depending on the result of negotiations carried on between W. Frank Persons, director of the federal service and city and state officials. "In Texas today there are three farm division offices," Woodman said. "Fort Worth is the central office for cotton for all states east of Arizona to Alabama. The other two offices are in San Antonio and El Paso."

"Houston and Dallas have city employment offices and most of 'Houston and Dallas have city employment offices and most of the West Texas cities since the depression have public employment offices. I feel certain that each city will arrange to cooperate as soon as the plans of the United States service become known."

"When the new service has been installed," he added, "I am sure there will be no excuse for any person to leave home without having first had knowledge of what he or she will find regarding conditions upon arrival at any destination."

The fund should give Texas an adequate employment service and save both wage earners and employers many times the cost each year, he said.

The new United States employment service, created under the Wagner act, may function in three ways:

1—In cooperation with state whose legislatures have adopted the federal law, in which event the state matches federal money.

2—In cooperation with cities and states that have not adopted the law in which event the matching of dollar for dollar is not essential although it may be required.

3—In states and cities that do not have their own employment agencies, in which instances the federal government probably will provide all funds.

Texas apparently is in the second category.

Inland Lakes Home Of Sailors Who Take Yachting Honors

DALLAS (UP)—Two Dallas sailors, neither of whom follows his sport on the deep sea, have won highly competitive honors in the 27th International Yachting association. Maurice Martin, snipe boat sailor and his one-man crew, Dee Mouth, won the Minneford Trophy for the 1932-33 season when he scored 296 1/2 points out of a possible 400 in races against boats in all parts of the country.

Dr. Hub Isaacks is commodore of the Snipe International Yachting association. He is head of the Dallas Sailing club, an organization which includes 50 ships of different sizes and build. Martin raced in the telegraphic meet of the Snipe boat organization nine times on White Rock lake, northeast of Dallas. The Minneford Trophy, awarded by the Minneford Boat Company, will remain in his possession for one year after which it will become the permanent possession of the Dallas man.

Dr. Isaacks received his sailing training before the mast on a Gulf coast trader. He sailed two years as a seaman on a "smack"ing boat which carried freight in the Gulf of Mexico. The Dallas sailing club entry in the Minneford races competed against sailors from all parts of the United States. More than 300 snipe boats were entered in the races, held on almost that many

THE ROMANS had a phrase for it --

"CAVEAT EMPTOR," meaning "Let the buyer beware." This wasn't used as a bit of balm to ease the ancient conscience; nor, yet, was it placarded in the booths and stalls of the market-place. It was a piece of every-day knowledge, born of dear-bought experience.

A shopkeeper knew little about the source of his merchandise. This tunic he bought from a trader, who said it came from Byzantium. So he sold it as the latest Byzantium style. The trader told him the dye was pure Tyrian—it wouldn't fade. So he sold it as Tyrian dyed. But the buyer knew the responsibility was his own. If he guessed wrongly, or his judgment was poor, it was his hard luck.

Today, fortunately, there are safer guides than the blanket-warning to "let your eyes be your market."

These guides are the newspaper advertisements. In this newspaper, they are a daily catalog of the best values in town—signed by responsible firms. If the goods are not all that is claimed for them, their sponsors would need to "beware." For no business can thrive on a one-time sale, or on dissatisfied customers.

A signed advertisement is, in a way, like a promissory note. The advertiser has made a statement, and affixed his signature as a sign of good faith.

So, read the advertisements before you start out on a buying-trip. Make this a daily habit, and see how much you save . . . in time, in temper, in money, in shoe-leather.

Tells How She Lost 15 Lbs. of FAT
Rheumatism Gone Too

Here is a woman who was rapidly putting on weight and who was troubled with rheumatism too. Read her letter:
"I started taking Kruschen Salts because of the good it had done for a friend of mine who had been crippled with rheumatism. At the end of the second bottle I was weighed and find I am now only 145 pounds (original weight 160 lbs.) at which I am so pleased. But I have also felt my rheumatism much less, which has been so troublesome in my knees. I must say I think Kruschen a splendid weight reducer." (Miss) E. L. P.
Overweight and rheumatic poisoning often go together. The six salts in Kruschen assist the internal organs to perform their functions properly—little by little that surely fat goes; slowly, yes—but surely. You feel wonderfully healthy, youthful and energetic—more so than ever before in your life!
Kruschen Salts is obtainable at Collins Bros. Drugs—a jar lasts four weeks and costs not more than 50c—adv.

Racketeers Face Bitterest Fight As Government Opens Offensive

By C. C. NICOLET
United Press Staff Correspondent. (Copyright, 1935, by United Press)
Racketeers, hard pressed for diamonds in depression years, are launching a widespread offensive to grab a share of the returning profits of legitimate business.
But the underworld, moving to increase its annual toll from the paltry $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 of leaner years to the old level of billions, is facing its bitterest battle since the bootleg liquor business opened the way to illicit riches.
These facts are disclosed by a United Press survey of racketeering conditions in leading cities and of federal plans for a triple offensive to break the hold of gangdom on small merchants, builders, truckers, laborers and other prime targets for extortion.
The survey is devoted primarily to genuine racketeers rather than to the liquor, narcotics, kidnaping, prostitution, gambling, robbery and murder industries frequently linked loosely under the general title of racketeering.
The true racket develops when an extortionist, with the support of a powerful gang, can force a merchant or working man to pay a weekly tribute for "protection," pression.

So, today, a horde of trained extortionists is turning back, as the cash registers of business resume tinkling, to all the groups of would-be honest men who offer the underworld its easiest and safest prey.
"Since the resumption of activity in the automobile manufacturing industry there has been a noticeable increase in the number of racketeers and a quickening in the activities of racketeers in Detroit, says Harry S. Toy, Wayne county district attorney who has made a wide reputation as a gang buster and racketeer fighter.
Toy's experiences in breaking the gangs of Detroit will be discussed in a later article. His statement is quoted here as typical of the viewpoint of men in closest touch with the underworld equivalents of business graphs and charts of rising prices.
In Chicago, where the racketeers have never lost their grip, the Century of Progress Exposition has helped quicken the hopes of underworld business.
"The Federal Government must bring its powerful aid to state and local authorities," in putting the gangs out of business, says Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan, who, with Senators Royal S. Copeland of New York and Louis Murphy of Iowa makes up a senate committee already at work investigating interlarded angles of racketeering.
This committee will seek new laws by which the government can help suppress racketeers. Its work is only one of the three branches of the federal offensive. The department of justice already has opened a drive against violators of existing laws under direction of Special Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan. The third angle of approach will be through the codes accepted by industries under the national industrial recovery act.
The provisions of these codes, it is believed, in many cases will make difficult the work of racketeers, and will provide a direct means of federal attack on actions heretofore not under federal jurisdiction.
Prosecutors in some cities insist prodigally racketeering has been eliminated from their communities, but the United Press survey indicates in most such places, the revival of the racketeers simply has failed as yet to come to the surface.
In most big cities of course, it never has died out, but only has decreased with dropping business. Most notorious of these is Chicago where, according to Frank Loesch, president of the Chicago crime commission, "everyone is caught in the net of racketeering in every walk of life."
Mrs. W. D. Belt, Jr., and daughter, Betty, who have been visiting her brother, Ray Simmons, left Wednesday night for Los Angeles. They were accompanied by Mrs. Ray Simmons, who will visit there for several weeks.

C. O. Moser, Leader In Cooperative Cotton Marketing Work, Available For Engagements In This Section

Requests for addresses by C. O. Moser, vice-president of the American Cotton Cooperative Association, have been received from many points in this territory in response to the announcement that Mr. Moser would be available for speaking engagements at cotton growers' meetings next week. Mr. Moser has been the outstanding leader in the struggle through which West Texas cotton growers and others have cleared the road for localized cotton marketing associations, and in so doing, have overthrown the original "Sapiro" plan which has ruled for a dozen years. The new plan puts the growers' central organization, ACCA, "on the spot." ACCA must meet private competition, or let the cotton go elsewhere. Of course, it would go anywhere—"high dollar" gets the cotton. But failure to go through ACCA, under the new set-up, does not break down the cooperative system. Local co-ops will handle the cotton, and sell to the highest bidder, whether ACCA or others. ACCA will be favored, where possible, because it is the growers' own organization and their protection against private traders' attempts to beat down the farm price. Existence of a central co-op has lowered the merchants' margin of profit by several dollars a bale in the past few years.
Not only can the West Texas Association market its cotton to the highest bidder, whether a co-op or a private concern, but the association may be split up into county units, each of which will also have its independent right to sell through private channels if the co-op selling organization does not meet competition.
This is a very long way from the cooperative plan brought from California to Texas in 1921 by Aaron Sapiro, under which the grower bound himself to deliver his whole crop to the central agency, no matter what the price. Adoption of the new plan marks the victory of Mr. Moser and the "decentralists" who have waged their fight within the co-op ranks for the past three years against centralized control.
Mr. Moser contends that the key-stone of cooperative activity should be the local unit that will "do everything that the farmer wants done." In the Abilene and Corpus Christi areas, this plan will have its baptism of fire during the present season, and success will quite likely mean its adoption in other areas and revolutionary remodeling of cooperative cotton marketing throughout the belt.
Mr. Moser will discuss the new plan in detail in the series of meetings which he has been invited to address in West Texas next week, July 17-21. After conferences with the West Texas leaders at Abilene and Dallas last week, Mr. Moser is spending this week in the Corpus Christi area, where cotton is actually moving under the new plan, and he will report on developments there when he returns to West Texas next week.
