Agency-Free Nursing

With the advent of Medicare's diagnosis-related group (DFIG) system in 1984, hospital occupancies went down and, with them, the demand for nurses. But, within a year, the trend turned, and the nursing demand began rising and has grown ever since Meanwhile, many hospitals had started using agency nurses, and although this system was expensive, the costs were offset by the ability topay wages on an only-as-needed basis and the absence of benpackages. Today, though, hospitals are going back to staffing theri own nursing systems, according to Tim Howell, UMC Vice-President of Nursing.

The cost of agency nurses was often more than double that of steff nurses, and the demand for nurses had become so large that sometimes, as in UMC's cass, agency nurses were being used 40 hours a week every week. On June 30, UMC will complete the phasing out of agancynurses, pluse around fitty en-

We were told to design a new state government from scratch, as if it didn't. exist. It was a one-time opportunitya once-in-a-lifetime opportunity-to make Texas state government the lone shining star among the 50 states.

Two key pillars guided this project from the start. We wanted to build a government that is customer-friendly, providing its customers—the agency clients, the school children, the business community-with fast, friendly and personalized service. We also insisted that this new government be taxpayer-friendly, giving up the inefficiencies, the duplications and the frills that squander dollars that otherwise would pay for needed services.

Our plan contains much more than archash of old ideas or minor tinkerings with the existing order. The report breaks the mold of traditional thinking and offers real improvement in goveroment organization, services and efficiency.

Remember that the state faced a $4.6 billion budget shortfall for the 1992-1993 biennium when the Legislature directed us to begin this review. We were told to find $200 million. We found that much the first day. By the time we were done, we had found ways to slice more than $4 billion from the budget while actually expanding

Thus, the Legislature has a simple choice: pass a huge tax bill or adopt this report. If they accept our recommendations, they certainly won't have to pass a major tax anytime soon.

More important, they can return home and tell their constituents that they had taken giant strides toward crafting a new state government dedicated to the twin guideposts of customer service and government efficiency. For example: . Mothers of children with multiple handicaps will no longer have to wander from agency to agency to agency to receive the services they need. Instead, they will have "onestop shopping" as convenient Health and Human Services field offices. * Drivers no longer will have to wait six weeks for their driver's licenses. Instead, they will leave the office with their new licenses already nicked away in their wallets.

* School districts no longer will be able to burden the taxpayers with bloated administrative staffs. Instead, they will have to streamline their front offices because state funding formulas will require them to concentrate their dollars in the classrooms.

* State employees will no longer spend tax dollars casually, on a whim. Instead, new personal incentives to save, combined with rewards for innovation, will create an "I've got a stake in this" spirit among state workers.

All of this, of course, won't come without cost. The special interests that benefit from state services will have to give up their free rides. Some minor dukes and barons and princesses will have to give up their fiefdoms. Some > bureaucrats hiding in the cobwebs of state government will have to give up their slush funds.

> Beware! Soon those special Interests and those petty dukes and those vested bureaucrats are going to ask you to write the Legislature, saying 'Please protect our agency." But I'm asking you right now to write your legislator and say, "Please serve our children."

During the upcoming special session of the Legislature, these recommendations should be treated like a string of Christmas tree lights. Every bulb is important. If you pull one of them out, the whole string goes dark:

So to those of you who oppose one or two items but like the rest of our report, remember, you can't have it both ways. You either streamline state government and make-it more efficient and responsive, or you pass a tax bill to pay for the old way of doing

Those of ou who participated or watched the July 4th celebration on Broadway know what a tremendous affair it turned out to be. I helped run a couple of booths and all in all, I had a great time. Next year, hopefully, we won't be calebrating or mourng a recent war. Young men and women marching and riding around in tanks last week made for a neat parade for the kids but it also means that there were some that didn't come back, others in hospitals, still others that had to kill, and some dead innoncent folks who got caught in the middle.

Next year it would be an even nicer parade if there has been a year of peace.

It was reported in the national news last week that the special Prosecutor in the Iran-Contra case is on the verge of cutting a deal with an ex-CIA official. It has been speculated by some that such a deal with a high ranking official would be needed in order to find out what ex-CIA Director George Bush knew about the various alleged illegal activitles while he was Reagan's Vice-President.

There was also a report last week that Congress may launch an investigation into the alleged 1980 deal between Reagan and the Iranians to not let the hostages go until after the election. Reagan was apparetly fearful that President Carter would secure the return of the hostages, be halled as a hero, and thus when the election. The deal allegedly involved ex-CIA director Burh and the future CIA director Casey.

Perhaps, some of this is political. But then again, if it is true, it will mean that the Reagan/Bush crew have been caught pulling off covert actions that would make Nixon blush.

I wonderl if anyone in Washington has the guts to go after a popular President during an election year.

Most Americans think of "politics" as something which is 'morally neutral.' People may debate public policies or government progarms from the perspective of the left or right, but all parties are usually seen as advocating positions which are responsible. One does not usually deplore an opponent as "immoral" or plitically "evil", even if his or hor positions are repugnant and harmful to many people. But should we really divorce our politics from our sense of what is ethically just?

Sevaral weeks ago, the television show "Sixty Minutes" presented a segment on the children of Nazi war criminals. Upon learning that their fathers had gassed and eliminated millions of Jews and other victims during World War II, these individuals lapsed into grief, shock, remorse and repantance. They recognized that they could not change the course of past history. But the "sins of their fathers" forced them to look at this mountain of crimes squarely and without ambiguity, accepting collective responsibility murally and politically.

Let us compare this response of atonement with President Bush's recent maneuvers to block a compromise between the corporate community and civil rights leaders over a new Civil Rights Act. Bush is strongly opposed to the overturning of six Supreme Court rulings which mde it more difficult for women and minority employees to win discrimination suits. The proposed legislation expressly outlaws to win discrimination suits. The proposed legislation expressly outlaws the use of quotas by employers; nevertheless, Bush's opposition is justified because the proposed legislation supposedly advocates 'quotas'. Is this simply an innocent political manever by Bush, or dishonosty, or is it a type of "political immorality," rooted in the crime of racial prejudice and bigutry?

Bush feels no moral or ethical responsibility in eliminating institutional racism, and therefore believes that his petty public lies and posturing with civil rights is justified. The massive crimes committed against people of color, in the form of job and housing discrimination, economic and social underdevelopment, are conveniently forgotten or ignored.

In America, "racism" is not a "Black problem," or a "Hispanic problem* or *Asian-American problem. Sexism is not a "woman's problem." Poverty ian't a 'poor people's probalem." Race, gender and class discrimination are the result of the power, privileges and overwhelming resources which are disproportionately allocated to upper class whites, largely males, and their grim determination to dominate these resources. Their fear generates hatred, and hatred breed policies of explopi-

How many white Americans actually recognize theri personal connections with the "sins of their fathers"? :Millions jjof whites personally benefit from racial and class inequality. And to make any hin the battle to uproot discrimination, they must actively accept the idea of compensatory justice - thiat people who havew experienced systematic discriminstin, poverty and hunger have been politically and morally violated, and theyhave a h guman right to demand compensation from the larger society.

White Americans must begin to challenge the language and rhetoric of racism in their daily lives. This means making a personal commitment to the realization of a just society for all those who have been denied the dream of equality and

THE WHITE HOUSE WASHINGTON

April 1991

Dear Friends:

Thank you for this opportunity to address you. By now you have probably heard me speak about "Points of Light." By Points of Light, I mean the countless number of individuals and organizations -- places of worship, businesses, schools, unions, clubs, groups, and other institutions -- who, by engaging in direct and consequential community service, share responsibility for solving the social problems that darken too many lives.

Historically, houses of worship have been the centers of their communities. No other institution in our society has done more over the years to help those in need. Houses of worship have served as forces of reconciliation and healing, as beacons of compassion and hope. We cannot measure the good that has sprung from the hearts of people whose love of God has moved them to help someone else.

While government has a critical role to play in meeting social needs, there is an equally critical role for communities. And so it is with the active engagement of people and institutions in community service that our Nation's communities will be transformed. No institution is more important to this effort than places of worship. Now is the time for each member of each congregation to make service to others central to his or her life and work. Now is the time for each congregation to work together to address the ills which plague our communities.

When someone teaches reading to one who is illiterate, when someone mentors a disadvantaged youngster, when one collects and distributes surplus food to the hungry -- in short, when each member of each congregation works to make a positive difference in the life of one other person in need, our Nation will be transformed.

During the period April 15-26, 1991, the Nation will pause to observe an unprecedented celebration of the spirit of community service. Not just during this time, but every day thereafter, I urge every place of worship to redouble its efforts to serve those around them in need.

Barbara joins me in wishing God's blessings on each of you. May all be led to express their faith in God through service to those of His children in need.

The Outreach Prayer Breakfast

Members of the Outreach Prayer Breakfast met last Saturday morning at 9:00 a. m. in the home of Sister Christine Burleson. The scripture lesson for the morning was St Luke 16, and taught by Sister Burleson, Her subject was "God Knows All Things."

St. Luke 16:1 -- Jesus tells the story of the shrewd accountant, people have offered many explanations for this difficult story. Here are some of them: (1) don't waste the resources you have because they belong to God, not you. (2) money can be used for good or evil. Use yours for good. (3) money hs a lot of power, so use it carefully and thoughtfully. (4) we must use our material goods in a way that will help us in the next life.

Luke 12:33-34 -- Sell what you have and give to those in need. This will fatten your purses in heaven! And the purses of heaven have no rips or holes in them. Your treasurers there will never disappear; no thief can steal them. No moth can destroy them. Whosoover your treasurers are, there your heart and thought will also be.

Our integrity often meets its match in money matters. God calls uss to be honest even in small matters. Don't let your integrity slip in small matters and it will not fail you in crucial decisions either. Don't try to be slick in money matters. God knows all you and I do. Let those pennies alone that don't belong jto you. Even if no ones watching yourself. Good job, Sister Burleson. We love you.

Thoughts: When God is not behind an undertaking the devil is they are never in business together.

The preacher who does not talk to God in his study cannot speak for God before his people.

Profanity bespeaks a feeble vocabulary and impoverished thinking. Everybody's doing it, is the national anthem of hell.

FROM THE PARSON D. A. SMITH

7-11-91 We Thank God For Jesus "The Bastard!!!"

(We call a bastard an illegitimate: child that's born out of wedlock. A person born of incestuous mixture, the son of a horlot.) Mark 10:14 -- Jesus said, suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the Kingdom of God.

We have these type of children, and the Fathers won't give them their name. America is full of this kind of "sin";, and its shame, shame, shame.

Now the child can't holp it he's here, he's ours to train up in "love." "Because God put every child in the Mother's womb; it's sent from above."

Psalm 127:3-5 -- Lo, the children are an heritage of the Lord; and the fruit of the womb is his reward. Aas arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth. Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, but shall speak with the enemies in the gate.

He needs to be trained at home, "under theword of God in prayer, so that when he goes out in the world, "he'll God is with them." Proverb 22:6 -- Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it.

Deuteronomy 6:6-7 -- The Lord said, and these words, which I command thee this day, shall be in thine heart: and thou shalt teach them diliently (carefully) unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thine house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou risest up.

He needs training from those in the achools, like I say it starts at home. 'The school and the home need to give a spanking: so he won't go wrong."

(That lie from the devil, "No Spanking," These chitdren belongs to God, and he lift his word on "how to train his children.")

Proverbs 23:13 - 14; 26:3 -- Withhold of correction from the child: for if thou beatest him with the rod, he shall not die. Thou shall beat him with the rod, and shalt deliver his soul from hell. A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.

'He needs rebucking at times, stand you: ground and say: No. He needs praising when he's doing good; amile and tell him so."

Proverbs 29:18 -- Where there is a vision, the people perish: but he that keepeth the law, happy is he. "But if he is a bastard, we don't love him: and that to our shame." "God will hold us responsible; we will be the blame."

*The child is only a baby, his love and instructions should come from me and you." "Mothers, please stop saying: "He's so bad, and train him like you're suppose to do."

one another always.

"If you let him have his way, his every when and mine. You're sending him to jail, or the grave. It's just a matter of time."

Hebrews 12:8 -- But if ye be without chastisement, whereof all are partekers, then are ye bastards, and God is not through with us yet. So let's pray for

"And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." Ephesians 6:15.

The shoes or sanda's that were worn in the time of the Apostle Paul were made of leather, felt, colth, or wood. They were sometimes decorated with lines of gold, silver, or silk and occasionally embroidered with jewels. The shoes were often bound with iron.

In those days it was very important to keep the feet protected whether on a trip or in a battle. Roads were not as we know them today and the feet could easily be punctured by thorns and briars. Added to these dangers were venomou reptiles and insects which would suddently sting or poison the feet that were unprotected. Many roads were filled with rough stones which out the feet, so that to be well shod was imperative for travelers.

In the Roman Empire much care was given to the feet of the fighting men. The shoes were specially made, not for long marches, but for protection against the dangers on the way. The Poman soldier wore a rugged type of hobnailed sandals that enable him to establish a firm footing even on slippery ground while in hand-to-hand conflict with the enemy.

So the Apostle Paul called our attention as Christians to that fact that good soldier must give careful attention to his feet. The good soldier must provide for the proper care and protection of is feet. His feet are his means of locomotion. His teet are those limbs which make progress in life and for progress in service.

The Apostle is delcaring, while using the sandals whicha the Roman soldier were as a part of his equipment for battle, as a means of communicating the great truth, that if we would overcome evil, we must have a positive attitude of readiness and eagerness to share the message of peace, the peace that Jesus gives, with all who are in spiritual darkness and death. Are you ready at all times and under all circumstances to share with others the great truth of God's love for them as it is revealed in Jesus Christ?

 Supporting state laws that would prohibit the sale of cigarettes to those

* Supporting state legislation to require supervision of vending machines in locations frequented by minors.

Requiring cigarette ads on billboards to be at least 500 feet from any elementary, junior or senior high school or children's playground.
Sharply timiting the distribution of product

To help retailers enforce state laws prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors, we are providing a sign like the one shown here for display where cigarettes are sold. There is also a new booklet available from The Tobacco Institute for families with young children. It's called "Tobacco: Helping Youth Say No." It helps parents help their children resist peer pressure to smoke. For a copy write to R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company.

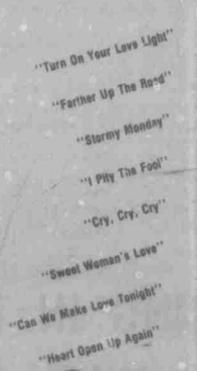

P.O. Box 1207, Winston-Salem, NC 27102.

R. J. Reynolds believes that these new tobacco industry programs will help young people understand that smoking is NOT part of growing up.
