Bethel AME Hosts 74th Annual Session Of Northwest Texas Conference

The Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church of Lubbock, Texas will hosi the 74th Annual Session of the Northwest Texas Annual Conference with the Rt. Rev. John R. Bryant, Presiding Bishop, presiding, August 13-18, 1991.

Assisting in the annual conference will be Rev. Cecelia Williams Bryant, Episcopal Supervisor; Rev. I. C. Cooper, Jr., Host Presiding Elder; and Rev. A. L. Dunn, host pastor.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church was started in 1787 in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, by a group of disinherited Americans whose forefathers came from Africa. The leader of this group was a 27 year old "African", Richard Allen. At that time, the word "African" was used to designate those people whom we

Pres. Eld. I. C. Cooper

Rev. Cecelia Bryant

now call African Americans. Attending this annual conference will be AME's from the Northwest Texas Conference -- Amarillo, El Paso, Abilene, Midland, Odessa, Slaton, and other West Texas areas. Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church is host for this 74th Annual Session.

Aside from the Northwest Texas delegation, there will be present General Officers, Conference Branch Officers, and AME's from throughout Texas and these United States.

A Welcoming Program was held on Tuesday night, with various members of the City of Lubbock in attendance making various welcoming speeches to the delegates who arrived early.

A reception was given in honor of Presiding Elder and Mrs. I. C. Cooper, Jr. in the Bethel Cafeteria following the program. It was a show of gratitude to the Coopers for what they have done in the Northwest Texas Conference.

"We were glad to be able to host such a function, as Presiding Elder Cooper ." said Pastor Dunn.

Missionary Day was held on Wednesday with Rev. Cecelia Bryant, Episcopal Supervisor, presiding.

The gala "Women In White" was held on Wednesday night by the women who were decked out in their white attire.

The 74th Annual Session will open up today, Thursday morning, August 15th, with host pastor, Rev. A. L. Dunn, delivering the opening sermon:

Several business sessions are on tap during the conference, with Bishop Bryant presiding.

Bishop Bryant will address the Annual Conference on Sunday morning prior to reading of the appointments of pastors to the Northwest Texas Conterence.

On Saturday night, August 17th, a Laymon Banquet will held at the Bethel Cafeteria in honor of the Northwest Texas Lay President, Mr. Worthy Gilbert of Midland, Texas, beginning at 7 p.m. Other Northwest Texes

RUBY JAY'S CORNER

New Hope Baptist Church services were great as they were conducted by the Youth of the Church.

During the 10:45 a.m. devotional period, "I Have Decided To Follow Jesus" was sung. The scripture was Psalm 100. Prayer was offered, followed by another song, "I'm Looking For A Miracle."

Responsive reading was read in unison by the congregation who stood.

The morning hymn was "Leaning On Jesus."

Pastor Billy R. Moton says: "It we learn to fellowship, we can get along when praises go up, blessings come down."

Another song was "Great Day."

The sermon of the hour was preached by Pastor Moton. His subject was "True Christians Ought To Be Like Palm Trees." His text was Psalm 92:12-14. Wonder if those who were present, let the sermon soak in. My, my, what a message. It gets better and better. Especially when he says: "I'm going to leave you alone. Closes up his Bible. That's when the dynamite stick explodes.

Invitation to discipleship was extended. Announcements ware read and visitors were welcomed to New Hope. The tithes and offerings were offered and coordinated by the Deacons and Ushers.

A special thanks go to the Youth Choir and directors for their support and singing during the Welcome program last week. It was a job well done.

The Welcome Committee with Sister Joan Y. Ervin as

A special thanks to everyone who gave their time and support to the the Association.

Also, thanks for your support, Sister Callie Howard, president.

Don't forget our sick list. Whisper a prayer. Stop sometimes and visit its growing every week.

Among those sick last week were Mr. Harrison "Bull" Davis, Mr. M. Colquitt, and Mr. Gene Wallace.

Sister Linda Polk came home Saturday from the hospital.

Rev. Johnny Lee Barnes is a patient at University Medical Center. Pray for him to soon return. He's one faithful prayer band leader.

Mrs. Bertha Levels of Amarillo, Texas and avid reader of the Southwest Digest came with a bus load of people last Thursday to the Original West Texas Association. They were all members of her church. She stopped by to visit with this writer as we have been friends for years.

CRAZY HORSE

According to an AP report in the August 6, 1991 Lubbock Avatanche-Journal, the U. S. Treasury Department asked the FBI almost a year ago to look into allegations that regulators delayed until after Election Day 1988 their closing of the Silverado S&L in Colorado where Presidont Bush's son was a director. The ballout of that S&L is expected to cost U. S. taxpayers about $1 billion. Of course, the Bush boy has other problems. According to an April 19, 1991 Wall Street Journal article the FDIC filed a negligence taw suit against Bush and the other directors for $200 million.

It was reported on August 7, 1991 on the front page all over the country that NCNB and C&S Sovran Corporation were making $10 billion over ten years available throughout the South for loans in low income communities. Why? If they were already treating everyone fairly then what is the big deal. Is NCNB adopting a new aggressive policy to make loans available to low income homeowners and community groups? Why do it now? Perhaps, it has something to do with the giant bank merger in the works and the possibility that NCNB may be subject to complaints of redlining or violating the Community Reinvestment Act which could prove embarrassing and possibly fatal to the deal.

$10 billion over 10 years spread throughout the South is not all that great. Maybe, some folks should look into the lending practices of NCNB and file a complaint if they have not been fair. Maybe that would get it up to $10 billion every year for 10 years.

The Texas Low Income Housing Information Service has put together a computer list of 16,000 foreclosed houses, duplexes, and apartments currently available for government agencies. Much of the property must be offered to non-profits as low income housing before it can be sold on the open market to the highest bidder. For qualified groups TXLIFIS can: 1) provide you with a list of the property in your community; 2) help identify free legal assistance; and, 3) provide with technical assistance in obtaining properties from the agencies, particularly if free legal help is not available. Contact TXLIHIS, 1100 East 8th Street, Austin. Texas 78702.

A low income non-profit should think about getting the list from TXLIHIS and then going to NCNB for some money and then put together a package for housing for poor folks in Lubbock.

Along The Color Line "Why Integration Has Falled"

by Dr. Menning Marable

When George Bush nominated Black conservative Clarence Thomas to replace liberal jurist Thurgood Marshall on the Supreme Court, most African American leaders vigorously opposed the nomination. Most members of the Congressional Black Caucua quickly recognized that Thomas was an uncompromising opponent of affirmative action and civil rights. However, at the moment of decision, the NAACP flinched. Its refusal to take an immediate stand against a longtime ;Reaganite illustrate the limitations of its ideology and strategy for Black advancement.

For half a century, the NAACP's basic orientation has been for racial "integration". Integregation has usually ment the elimination of all structural barriers which prohibited Blacks from full participation within the mainstream of American life. Culturally, the goal was the achievement of a 'color-blind society," which in the words of Martin Luther King, Jr., would mean that Blacks "will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character." For the integrationists, there was an implicit faith in democracy, American-style. The system could be made to work, they believed, if only people of color and others victimized by discrimination and poverty were brought to the table as full partners. This could be realized by expanding the number of African-Americans, ! atincs, women. low income people and others icito positions of authority within the existing structures of power in business, labor, govamment and the media. When one encountered resistance. the integrationist strategy relied heavily on the intervention of a "benevolent" federal judiciary, which could be counted on to defend civil rights and civil liberties. Inter-

Buried at the bottom of the obituary page of the August 7, 1991 Lubbock Avalanche-Journal was a notice of a 5:00 p.m. and 6:00 p.m. public hearing at the LISD office to gather information about the needs of parents for before and after school child care service. The need of the parents for help in Lubbock is self-evident. The scheduling of the public hearing sure seems like the LISD did not want any input. Perhaps, the LISD or the PTA at each school, will schedule additional meetings to poll parents at each school about their needs.

AT ISSUE

Mandatory Retirement for State Judges?

Alan M. Slobodin is president and general counsel of the Legal Studies Division of the Washington Legal Foundation. He previously served as minority counsel for the House Judiciary Subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights.

Should there be a mandatory retirement age for state judges?

Yes. There are several reasons supporting mandatory retirement age provisions for state judges. First, these provisions are justified in drawing a line at an age when there is often a lessening in mental and physical abilities because society has an interest in a judicial system of the highest caliber. Second, setting a mandatory retirement age avoids the difficult and unpleasant decisions of determining which judges after a certain age are physically and mertally qualified and which are not. Third, mandatory retirement increases the opportunities for qualified younger persons with fresh ideas and techniques to enter the judiciary. Fourth, it assures predictability and ease in establishing and administering judges' pension plans. Fifth, it depoliticizes judicial selection and retention by lessening incentives for judges to time their retirements with anticipated political changes and by avoiding the unseemly prospect of judges trading retirement for other considerations, such as increased retirement pay and benefits.

How should the Age and Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) apply to judges?

The ADEA does not pre-empt state law goverrying selection, retention or tonurc for state court judges. In addition, the ADEA exempts persons "elected to public office" and "appointees on the policymaking level." State judges are exempt since they, in some cases, stand for election as well as make policy in deciding cases and supervising judicial systems. Finally, the 10th Amendment prohibits application of the ADEA to state court judges.

What about the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment?

There is not a single case where a state mandatory retirement provision has been invalidated under the 14th Amendment. In addition, the reasons for mandatory retirement of state judges show that the mandatory retirement provision is a rational method by which states may serve their lagitimate goals of maintaining a highly qualified and vigorous state judiciary: a just, retinement provision

Louis P. Feck, a Vermont Supreme Court Justice. successfully fought the Vermont state law on mandatory retirement for Judges last year. Having tested the law and emerged victorious, Justice Peck has since retired volunturily.

Should there be a mandatory retirement age for state judges?

No. The argument that there could be judged who become so advanced in years that they cannot properly perform their duties is, at best, an alarmist point of view not justified by experience. The "problem" is, in fact, relatively rare. The federal system of life tenure, as well as the clear competency of most retired judges, both tend to corroborate this claim. Most state judges are appointed by the governor or elected by popular vote for limited terms. Retention for successive terms is subject to popular vote in some states, and legisfative approval in some others. If a particular judge has become clearly incompetent because of the aging process, it is unlikely he will be retained. In short, the only test is the ability to perform the duties of the position. I may become senile, but I shouldn't be made so overnight as a matter of law.

How should the Age and Discrimination in Employment Act (ADEA) apply to judges?

This question embraces the very issue presently pending before the United States Supreme Court in a case originating in the state of Missouri. If the Supreme Court affirms the circuit decision that Missouri's mandatory retirement for state judges does not violate the ADEA. I would hope that Congress might be persuaded to amend the act to extend protection to judges. Regardless of the outcome of the pending litigation. I believe state judges and justices are already within the definition of employees protected by the act.

What about the equal protection clause of the 14th Amendment?

Given expanding life expectancy and the resulting increase in the number of older people, the time has come for courts to reevaluate current interpretations of the equal protoction clause as a matter of constitutional law. Forcing a large and growing population of a physically healthy and mentally astate segment of society to retire is no more valid than discrimination haved on sez, race, religion or national origin. Physical and mental competency to perform is the only legitimete test in age cases. All the others are discriminations and should be relegated to the inspectors of historical curios like witchcraft and dimense. M nationally, intergrationists sympatized with the anti-apartheid struggle, but they failed to grasp the fundamental linkage between the battle against racism abroad and their own situation within the United States.

Integrationaists placed great faith in the power of the political system. After the passage of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, integrationists believed that all members of society now had an equal access to the process of democratic decision making. The central flaw of this political reasoning was the fact that democracy is only real as possible when all participants have roughly equal resources as they enter the electoral field of competition. Both major pulitical parties had a vested interest in "managing" if not eliminating the electoral participation of Blacks, the memployed, low income workers, and others. In national politics, the Republicans had become by the 1980's an upper-to-middle class white united front, for all practical purposes. Two thirds of all whites, and three fourths of all upper class whiten voted tor Reagan in 1984. The Republicans saw few advantages by ancouraging the electoral participation of constituencies which were highly inclined to vote Democratic. But the Democrats also had problems with Black and low Income voters, for several reasons. Increased Black efectoral clout would be translated into prg-nizations influence within the Democratic Party's structure, which would shift the ideo spicel and of the party to the left. Most white Democratic officials were convinced that the Democrats had to move to the right, incorporating elecients of the Reagan agenda into their own programs. Consequently throughout the 1960's the actual influence of Advicen-Americans as a group declined within the mainorean of both parties.

Dunbar Association Calls Meeting

The Dunbar International Alumni Association will hold an important call meeting on Saturday, August 17, 1991 at the Dunbar-Struggs High School Cafeteria, beginning at 4 p.

There will be some important business to discuss.

At the close of an illustrious career, Joshua gathered the people together in order to bring them a final message (Joshua 24). He stressed the providential hand of God in the nation's history. How good God had been! Under Moses, He had led them from the house of bondage to the edge of the Promise Land, During Joshua days of leadership, the Israelites had come in to Canaan and had defeated the enemy. Isreal was now in the land God intended for her to possess. Joshua, realized, however, that many choices faced the people. Moses had warned them that they should not become self-satisfied and complacent once they had conquered and taken control of the Canaanite cities. He insisted that they thoroughly exterminate the enemy and have nothing to do with the gods of the Chaideans, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. Joshua re-echoes many of the warnings which Moses gave to the people. The Israelites were not without an established religion when Joshua entreated them to choose between truth and error. Their rulers acting under the immediate direction of God, had united in a coherent whole a system of worship into all the national institution of the people in the fear of the Lord. Here at the Annual Conference at Schechem, the intrepid leader challenged the people to make a choice. Many of my friends and relatives will meet this week in our City of Lubbock at Bethel AME Church in an Annual Conference. At this conference, you will be challenged once again to remain staunch in your loyalty to God. No man! God speaks this word "choose" to every man amid the thunders of Sinai and the pleadings of Calvary. Christianity is a religion of reason, intelligence, not of authority and force; it appeals to motives; it sets right and wrong, life and death before every person's mind and calls upon them to choose between them. The choice is ntary. No deception is used and no compulsion of any kinu. The choice is a personal one. Each soul must decide his course and destiny and will be required to give a personal account at the judgement.

Fans vs. Players

Lately, we have had a series of nasty incidents of direct physical confrontations between fans and players. Over and over again, players have gotten into shouting matches with fans who were heckling them. A few have thrown baseballs into the stands, usually hitting an innocent spectator, and others have actually left the field and climbed into the seats to confront fans,

In my opinion, this is wrong. Fans are too important to baseball to be treated this way. Without them, the players, owners and everyone else involved with the game would be out of jobs.

#It is unusual in one sense that this problem has become so bad now. The new ballparks place the fans much farther away from the players. In the old parks, like the Dodgers' Ebbets Field in Brooklyn, fans were right on top of us. It was the same in the old park in St. Louis.

The fans in Philadelphia and New York are tough, but they are educated fans. They really know their baseball in those cities. I guess the fans who were toughest on me were the "bleacher burns" in Chicago. But again, they are very knowledgeable, very smart fans. They know baseball, and when you loaf, they know it. When they see a million-dollar player doing something he shouldn't, they let him have it. And there's nothing wrong with that.

That's where the line should be drawn. I don't think fans should get so abusive as to talk about a player's family or turn the situation into a personal vendetta. Those fans don't need to be in the ballpark. But if they want to yell. "You burn, you struck out!" that doesn't bother me.

As for the players, I believe that if they were more involved in their own game rather than in what fans were yelling, then no amount of heck-Fing would bother them. No player has ever taken the abuse Jackie Robinson took when he broke into the major leagues. But he could really take it because he was concentrating on his job, which was playing good baseball.

When I was chasing Babe Ruth's record, there were some ballparks at which I was really taunted. But for the life of me, I cap't imagine what the fan in the 15th row could say that would upset me enough to throw a baseball into the stands. That makes no sense to me. Id

Millions of our children are in crisis—partly because many families are in trouble. One of my foremost objectives is to bring help and hope to America's children.

At the Department of Health and Human Services we recently enhanced our ability to assist these children by consolidating more than 60 programs for infants, children and families—such as Head Start and Aid to Families with Dependent Children—into a single agency, the Administration for Children and Families, with a $27 billion budget.

Here are some of the problems and some of the steps we're taking to overcome them: Our nation ranks 24th in infant mortality and low birthweight babies (10.0 overall, 8.5 for whites and 17.6 for blacks); one in five mothers fails to seek perinatal health care during the critical first trimester of pregnancy; in a recent study more than 20 percent of pregnant mothers admitted to being drug users; and 15 million children (about 26 percent of all children) are growing up in single-parent households-many in low-income family situations.

In 1988, 63 percent of black children, 34 percent of Hispanic children and 18 percent of white children were born to unwed mothers. The human and monetary costs of this trend are staggering.

ACF's Child Support Enforcement program helps the 9.4 million female-headed householders who could qualify for child support. Only 5.6 million have court orders requiring fathers to pay. Worse, of roughly 4.8 million households owed child support, only 51 percent collect the full amount, 25 percent get part and 24 percent get nothing. In 64 percent of black femaleheaded families there is no court order to make fathers help their children. CSE will assist mothers in establishing paternity. To improve access to health care for poor pregnant women and children, Medicaid covers mothers and children up to age 6 when family income is below 133 percent of the federal poverty level. As of July 1, states must extend Medicaid to all children under age 19 who were born after Sept. 30, 1983, in families below 100 percent of the federal poverty line. By the year 2002, all children under 19 will qualify.

Our Healthy Start initiative put up $25 million this year to attack high infant mortality in 10 communities, another $171 million is proposed for next year.

The AFDC welfare program, with 12.8 million recipients, including 8.6 million children, is being changed to make it something beyond temporary financial assistance. More and more, adult recipients must take part in the Job Opportunities and Basic Skills Training [JOBS] program to help families become self-sufficient.

Head Start, the successful education program for young children has expanded by 58 percent since I became HHS secretary. The program's FY '91 budget increase of $399.8 million included funds for an additional 51,000 youngsters. The goal is to provide Head Start or a similar experience for every eligible child.

Just recently HHS developed final rules for two inportant programs. The Child Care and Development Block Grant will provide $732 million this year for child care for low-income parents who are working or in training. Another program offers $300 million annually to assist families at risk of going on welfare because they lack child care arrangements.

Las Vegas Casino Night Planned

The Dunbar International Alumni Association is up to its old tricks: providing another exciting event that promises to be unique! On Saturday, August 31st, starting at 8 p. m. in the Pioneer Hotel Ballroom, a completely different evening of fun, games, prizes, food and music will be incooperated into a Las Vegas Casino Night.

For the small admission cost of $5.00 per person, a person will be given a packet of nonnegotiable "play money" that will entitle you to play card games, dominoes, black jack, poker, roulette, bingo, dice games, and dancing.

The "play money" can then be exchanged for prizes.

A spokesman has emphasized that this is a fun packed event and not a gambling event. This effort should be thought of this effort of more of a monopoly game. Such events have had huge success in other cities.

When we contacted Virgil Johnson, president of the Dunbor international Alumni Association, he said, "This is another attempt by the association to provide excitement and something difforent for the community and raise funds for the association. More and more people are becoming supportive of our efforts."

For those attending this event on August 31st, men are asked to wear shirts with a collar, but blue jeans are unacceptable. One must be 21 years of age to enter.
