Racism Riding the Internet According to HUNET, an Enail newsgroup of Howard University alumni, racism has become a frequent traveler on the super information highway. Samples of some messages appearing on computer screen across the world: Question: "How do you get a nigger to cemmit suicide?" Auswer: "Toss

a hucket of Kentucky Fried Chicken into traffic." Another read: "What do you call two nigger motorcycle cops?" Answer, Chocolate CHiPs." Blacks who are offended by such remarks on their cereens will probably have to "grin and bear it," as a part of advancing technology. Mest hackers say to try and regulate such items on the Internet would be an attempt to curb free speech and more of a headache than it's worth. A new national survey shows nearly half of American households own a computer and 17 percent of those who don't already have one plan to buy a computer in the next year.

Sur. Can Harm Dark Skin, Too The sun's rays can be especially harmfel to dark skin because the initial damaging effects are harder to detect. Dark skin has more melanin that does light skin, says Dr. Ted Rosen, a dermatologist at Baylor College of Medicine. Melanin is the pigment that gives color to skin and protects it from turning. But melanin does not completely protect dark skin from the ravages of sun overexposure, Rosen says. "On people with darker complexions, you can't see the first tinges of pink very readily. Sunburn would be easier to detect if there were a sign." He recommends avoiding the mid-day sun and using sunscreens.

An Assertion by O.J. Simpson defense attorney Johnnie Cochran Ir. that people cannot recognize someone's race from their voice runs counter to several studies. ORDERS TO KILL The Truth Behind the Murder of Martin Luther King

By William F. Pepper

William F. Pepper rewrites American history in ORDERS TO KILL: The Truck Behind the Murder of Martin Luther King (Carroll & Graf, October 2, $28.00 cloth). ORDERS TO KILL, an explosive investigation of one of this country's most tragic historical events, is based on Dr. Pepper's investigation of the massive cover-up of the murder of Martin Luther King. ORDERS TO KILL shatters the myth and mystery surrounding a case that, until now, withstood twenty-seven years of scruti-

On April 4, 1968 in Memphis, Tennessee, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., stepped out onto a motel balcony and into his sasssin's line of fire. One shot ended Dr. King's life and the dream he had of "a new birth of freedom." Barrister Pepper's friendship with Dr. King compelled him to seek out the truth and ultimately to defend James Earl Ray, King's convicted assas-

ORDERS TO KILL details an investigation that took Dr. Pepper from the corridors of the Capitol to the backroads of rural Tennessee, from New York's majestic Riverside Cathedral to Orlando's steamy ghettos and through New Orleans' French Quarter to Houston's docks. Initially snared in an intricate web of official obfuscation on the local, state, and national levels, Dr. Pepper eventually unearthed documents and files buried deep within government archives. These oncehidden records and evidence from witnesses long silenced by fear, or by their own vested interests in the killing directly contradict the government's verdict on the case. Not only does Pepper, now atterney for James Earl Ray, believe that Ray did not fire the fatal shot, he believes that Ray was the victim of a frame-up. Finally, ORDERS TO KILL demonstrates that the assassination of Martin Luther King was masterminded by a cabal of government leaders and organized crime figures who viewed King as a Communist bent on inci-

ing revolution. ABOUT THE AUTHOR

correctly identified the interviewer's race. A 1991 article of the journal Public Opinion Quarterly reviewed evidence that a telephone interviewer's race can influence answers to racially sensitive questions. For example, it said that when Democrat L. Douglas Wilder became the nation's first black elected governor, all the pre-election polls taken in Virginia overestimated his support. Researchers found that whites were more likely to tell black telephone interviewers they would vote for Wilder. At the Simpson trial Cochran objected to black prosecutor Chr's Darden's asking a witness if he told anyone that one of the voices he heard coming from the murder scene sounded like that of a black man. Cochran said he resented as racist the implication that people could be recognized as black from their voices

Million Man March

By William Reed, NNPA Director of Communications

Nation of Islam (NOI) leader Minister Louis Farrakhan intends to bring one million black men to the nation's capital "to petition the government on behalf of our people."

in a sharp departure from the traditional philosophy of the NOI's founder, the Honorable Elijah Muhammad of keeping involvement with the government to a minimum. Fartakhan has teamed up with the NAACP's former executive director. Berjamin F. Chavis, to send a message to government officials in regards to "the deteriorating conditions in the U.S. for black people in general, and black men in particu-

In a press conference at the march's "strategy headquarters," Farrakhan outlined his concerns about. The government's shift to the right; jobs leaving America. the deterioration of the nation's inner cities; crime and violence in the cities, the alarming homicide rate among young African American men and the disrespect of the government toward black elected officials.

The 61-year-old Farrakhan said that at the end of the day or the march, "America will know what we are all about and they can begin to include us or tell us directly we are not wanted here."

The Minister has been crisscrossing the country for months addressing large audiences of men, urging them to close ranks around the myriad of social problems confronting urban areas and to illustrate their power and concern through this march. The Million Man March is scheduled for Oct. 16 in Weshington. The date is a Monday. Such a large assemblage will undoubtedly close down the city on a work day. Many believe that government officials and federal law enforcement officers will find reasons to not let such an event take place, but Farrakhan says, "We're coming anyway."

With Ben Chavis sitting at his side, Farrakhan also announced that on the Jay of the march black women should stay home to initiate a "shut down of the country." He also said he is asking black youth not to attend school that day or black sports figures and entertainers not to engage in their normal labors on that day. He said these actions should be taken by blacks to illustrate the wrongs that America has committed against us and to show that reparations are due for these "legitimate"

The Nation of Islam leader also said that the march day would be "a day of atonement," allowing black men to contemplate their condition as well as that of the race. "The coldness with which we trutalize onanother, mistreat our worden and abuse our children-this must sease," he told a group of over 30 black journalists.

Rev. Chavis, a principal condinator of the merch, has laenched a new national organization to continue the promotion of a black nationalist agenda he espoused but was rejected by the NAACP leadership. Chavis' new entity, the National African American Leadership Summit (NAALS), held a conference in Houston in June, with more than 200 groups represented. According to Chavis, the NAALS formalizes the unity summits he began before he was fired as NAACP executive director last summer. Despite his firing, Chavis is proving he has a significant fo'lowing among young black people, both on cotlege campuses and in housing projects and in street gangs.

Minister Farrakhan outpolled all other leading African American figures as the nation's top black leader in a Black Press Poll last fall. Now that he and Chazis have made their pact, the two have the backing of a broau cross-section of African American religious, political, education and business leaders.

Drug Research Targets Diseases of Aging

By I arry Lucas

"Grew old along with ma The best is yet to be"

When the English noet Robert Browning wrote those lines, it's a safe bet he was still too young to for some of the debilitating discases of aging-diseases such as arthritis, Atzheimer'e disease, depression, diabetes or Parkinson's disease. Although people are living a lot longer than they did in Browning's day, many find that chronic ailments keep them from enjoying retirement. Fortunately, pharmaceutical research comparies are actively searching for effective treatments for the debilitating diseases of aging.

A recent survey by the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America (PhRMA) found that 71 U.S. drug companies are currently testing 132 medicines for such diseases.

Alzheimer's disease, which afflicts 10 percent of Americans 65 and older, is the target of 14 potential modicines. Parkinson's disease, which affects more than I million Americans is the focus of 10 research projects. About 40 million Americans suffer from some kind of arthritis, and pharmaceutical companies are researching treatments for several types of this chronic disease. There are 20 medicines in development for rheumatold arthritis, 7 for osteoarthritis, and 15 for osteoporosis. In addition, there are 11 medicines for bladder and kidney disorders, 9 for prostate disease and 18 for respiratory and lung disorders.

These diseases are a burden not only to the people who have theni-in terms of pain, loss of function and loss of independence-but to society. Alzheimer's Research and Manufacturers of disease alone costs Americans America.

about $100 billion a year. More than half of all nursing home residents have / Izheimer's a related disorder. The Alliance for Aging Research estimates that delaying the time that people get Alzheimer's by five years would save almost $50 billion a year.

It takes nearly 15 years-and almost $400 billion--to develop a new medicine and win approval for it from the Food and Drug Administration (FDA). Most of the medicines listed in the survey are in the later stages of development or have applications pending at the FDA, but it still may be several years before your 'octo; can prescribe them for you. Fortunately, Congress is looking at ways to speed up the drug development process. This, along with the fact that U.S. drug companies are spending $15 billion a year to search for cures for these and other diseases, is good news for older Americans.

Guest Editorial by Art Alcausin Hall

The affirmative action debate has reached a new level this past year and will continue to be the focus of many legislatures, universitics, businesses, and individuals. Some, including Joan Beck in an Avalanche-Journal 7/29 commentary, have argued that ending racial "preferences" is the right move today. Beck says, "[M]uch of these [racial] gains would have come about simply by ending discrimination by race, sex, ethnicity and other factors, without creating reverse discrimination against others." This present thinking is naive at best and reflects the general ignorance of the system and mentality that creates the need for solutions such as affirmative action.

While Beck is correct in her supposition that the present system of affirmative action is based on a distrust of those in positions of power to equally consider qualified people of color in their admitting, hiring, promoting, etc., Beck has not completely considered the basis of American society and the "American Way," which are at the root of this distrust.

First, in America, both democracy and capitalism operate together, but they represent two contradicting philosophies. Though democracy is said to be based upon equality and opportunity, capitalism is based upon inequality, promoting selfishness, greed, and individual achievement at the expense of others. Capitalism would not work if all achieved and competed equally, and hence advantages and disadvantages are created and sustained from whatever natural, but now mostly superimposed, differences that can be found and effectively many qualified minorities from "taking the spots of and Malcolm X, who called the "American dream" an verbalized. And, while it is convenient to revive democratic principles when desired, the greed of capitalism is often a hidden reality whose danger and viciousness must not be lost in deceit.

In America, many created an advantage by subjecting people of color to varying forms and degrees slavery and treating them as inferior. These same individuals sustained that advantage by legalizing and ingraining into the American system their ideas. Today, this advantage is still sustained by those who benefited from past laws and doctrines. These beneficiaries further sustain this advantage by attempting to remove themselves. U.S. population, while comprising 89 percent of the from "the crimes of their forefathers," though enjoying those fruits nonetheless, and by operating a less obvious system of racism.

Once an advantage is created and sustained, in a system based on greed and selfishness, those with the advantage allow some smaller, token gains by the disadvantaged solely in order to appease the disadvantaged, but never enough to allow the disadvantaged to gain a significant advantage over those with the advantage. And, when those with the advantage are threatened, they make the disadvantaged the culprits and blame them with laziness, lack of "qualifications," and other attempts to once again sustain an advantage-all while the concept of democracy is promoted and the Americans and whites with the "separate but equal" reality of capitalism is hidden.

white students," the University of California system has ended affirmative action in admissions. Ebony magazine argues, "Talk of the 'angry [w]hite male' has grown to a fever pitch as [w]hite men say affirmative action takes what's meritoriously theirs and sympathetically gives it to unqualified Blacks. They say they're losing jobs, promotions, pay raises, educational opportunities and-along with them-the American Dream. Any effort on behalt of Blacks to catch up, they say is 'reverse discrimination.' ... White men see ... growth as a threat, even though they make up 33 percent of the managers and professionals and 368 of the country's 400 wealthiest people. Meanwhile,... [i]n many parts of the country, college-educat 1 Blacks continue to earn less than [w]hite high-school dropouts."

Such a system will reluctantly, if at all, end all effects the same country and system that signed a Constitution in 1787 counting African Americans as three-lifths human only by compromise; that wrote a Dred Scott decision in 1857 claiming African Americans to be inferior and not constitutional citizens; that broke its 1865 Freedmen's Bureau promise to African Americans of 40 acres, $50, and a mule; that segregated African gressional districts to "strict scrutiny." And, to keep too rather with real peace, love, brotherhood, and justice, 'not and are not losing,

"American nightmare"; that celebrated strong opponents of busing and integration, such as Ed Irons, with a school in his name and a front page article remembering him in the 7/22 Avalanche-Journal; that divided Native American tribes in 1851 into "concentrations," later called "reservations," making it easier to exploit and defeat them, forcing tribes into less desirable land locations, and creating the need for heroes such as Apache Geronimo, Shawnee Tecumseh, and Sioux Crazy Horse and Sitting Buil, who arose in opposition to white invasion and reservation efforts; and that Libeled Japanese Americans during World War II as "devious, malign and cruel," leading to Franktin Roosevelt's authorization and the Supreme Court's upholding of the removal of more than 100,000 Japanese Americans to "relocation centers."

This is the historic reality that stands as the backdrop of racial discrimination on its own. Remember, this is to the present debate over affirmative action. But, while I argue that the need for affirmative action has not yet subsided, people of color should move away from so much dependence on other's ir complete solutions and turn instead toward determining themselves their future and progress. People of color need to renew a pride and knowledge of themselves and their culture and review their movement in the present and historical reality in America. Progress has meant different things to differdoctrine until 1954; that created the need for leaders ent people and cultures, and while the focus of all Today, in hopes in part of reducing the success and such as Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., who said, "Being a should be on everyone winning in this game of life, strength of the Congressional Black Caucus, the Negro in America is not a comfortable existence," and people of color unfortunately must be continuously pre-Suprame Court has decided to subject "bizarre" con- who dreamed an America without its hypocrisy but occupied, more than others, to make sure that they do

A Wake-Up Call

Side brothers, It's time for you all to put up your guns and throw away your drugs. The reason for those three guys that were out riding on the East this "wake-up call" is for you all to realize that Side, shooting at any black male they saw, you are already the minorities-and when I say minimities, I'm not talking about being dumb and them? Did the one who initiated the fatal shot stupid, but saying that us black sisters don't have that killed that black male (just an ordinary man), enough black brothers around to keep our black did he get 99 years in prison for killing him? Or race going. We need you all to show us (your was it not imported to the District Attorneys or own race), white, and Hispanies, that you all are the lawyers, because he was an tolinary black strong, not just muscular, but let them SZE that nale? But during the Ryan Keith Moody case, you all can take care of a family be a man of the D.A. said Moody got what he deserved. Why God, a father figure, and leaders like they can, was that? Because Lawton was a "stockbroke." What you brothers fail to realize, that when you Did ar one say those 3 guys, who got stopped by kill, you're killing your own kind; when you're a police officer after someone reported that they selling drugs, you're ' urting your own race. You saw them riding around shooting, got what they all need to "weke up" and stop, stop it now.

You'll present yourselves as being strong and bad with guns you carry and the drugs you sell. That's not being strong, that's "acting stupid," notice I said acting, because that's all it is, an act. strong if not stronger than the white or Hispanic male. You all just need to know how to use it and apply to other things besides selling dregs and

You all don't seem to see that white people don't care about the fact that you are destroying one another (black male vs. black male). The more you destroy one another, the less black males to try and get rid of. Nowadays they don't brothers, because you are Joing it for them, killing your own, destroying one another, and even your own community.

black male off the streets. The jurors came back with a guilty verdict and it only took 25 minutes to deliberate with a punishment of 99 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. This case is another case of black male vs. white male from the start. They made it clear that this killing was racially

This is strictly to the black males of our East motivated. But, then it makes you wonder, "hmmm" (as Arsenio Lall used to say). When wounding two and killing one, what happened to deserved? I don't think so. Was their sentencing like that of Moody? In my opinion, because the black male who was killed was just an ordinary person, it was unimportant to keep stating that he was shot and killed and it was "racially motivat-You black males aren't stupid, your minds are ed," because he didn't have a title like Lawson. Every time the news came on they always made sure that we knew Randy Lawson was "a "teckbroker," and I guess that made him important because of his title, and how his family were all in tears. It's sad for anyone to be killed like that. But this ordinary black male got shot, he had family or someone who loved him also, but they didn't make it a big deal. He was killed and it was "racially motivated," but who really cares, need white supremacist groups to kill black he's just another brother who's no longer here You black males need to look at this "wake-ry call," because if you don't wake up, sooner or later you all are going to become extinct like the Another "wake-up call" would be the case of dinosaurs. The white male don't care that you all Ryan Keith Moody. Another example of one less are getting rid of your own kind, because they are going to be there for each other and you rarely hear them killing their own race. "Wake Up," brothers, it's time to come together and stop killing your own.

Group Credits Gang Truce for Drop in W. Side Crime By Joel Williams

Express News Staff Writer [Editor's note: This article would be of interest to Digest readers.]

Drive-by shootings and other violent crimes have declined oramatically on the West Side since five area gangs entered into a trace this spring, community leaders announced

The program takes gang members, particularly the leaders, and gives them leadership training and employs them at minimurn wage as social workers to direct area young people and eventually other gang members toward positive behavior.

Center Director Gloria Kehl said the truce, which began March 27, developed out of a "war council" leaders of the five gan s formed in Tanuary.

SPREADING THE WORD

"They don't cover the good things that happen in our communities. The only time they come into our neighborhoods is to write about crime and violence. They don't talk about who was born and the people who were strong pillars in our communities that died. And they definitely don't give enough coverage to Africa and events occurring there," is what so many in Black America say about "the mainstream media" of white-owned newspapers, magazines and breadcast outlets. But if "they" don't do for us, who is it out there that is suppose to do for us? The answer, of course, is "W- are!"

Have you read in the "white-owned" newspapers stories about the multi-billion dollar deals that are being made between corporations such as: Time-Warner, Paramount, Fox Television, News Corporation, Inc., and the path that is being made for such by Telecommunications Bill before Congress and the President? Europeanowned-and-oriented media is moving to create huge global information systems, but it seems that blacks are waiting for some Big Media Boss to take us by the hand and help us tell our stories. As the world's communications systems become interconnected, it is time for blacks to stake their claim in the industry. We can no longer be content to simply ret jobs and plead for advancement in white-owned media firms.

Though we still need voices inside national information organizations, which can effect results such as the recent stay of execution that was gained for former NABJ member, Mumia Abu-Jamal, in Pennsylvania, we must forge alliances among our own to accelerate the growth of diversity in the information industry and black control over many segments of it. A "coming together" of black media organizations such as: the National Association of Black Journalists (NABJ), National Newspaper Publishers Association (NNPA), National Association of Black-Owned Broadcasters (NABOB) and Pan African News Agency (PANA) would make blacks, and their issues, a for midable force on the Internet, calle channels and in print publications. With over 2,000 members, there is no reason that the whole of the NABJ should still be begging. for jobs and career advancement opportunities.

While the traditional Black Press, black-oriented newspapers, he; been spreading the word for, and about, black society and its issues for over 160 years, with the so-called "integration" of American's facilities and workplaces in the 1960s the majority of African Americans turned to the pages of mainstream newspapers and magazines and the convenient ecreens of their T.V.

sets for their information and knowledge. These actions by two-thirds of the black population pushed African Americans in mainstream media to the forefront. As noted by Miki Turner in the mainstream-oriented Oakland Tribune, "It's always been necessary for the handful of us to provide a voice for the 22 million African-Americans who have for too long depended on others to tell heir stories."

During the NABJ's annual convention in Atlanta in 1994, it became evident and an open secret across the country, that much rancor and disr-spect existed between NABJ members, who work for mainstream media, and most of the nation's black publishers. In addition to questions about the quality of black newspapers and their content, the issue of "Who speaks for Black America?" was a point of contention between the journalists. But, thankfully, a collaboration occurred between the two. The combined clout of NABJ and NNPA journalists made the world pay attention to Mumia Abu-Jamal's death row plight and brought new respect to both media groups.

With their increasing esteem in media and the NABI providing awards of recognition to black publishers at their 1995 convention in Philadelphia, the thange in attitudes continues. Now, many people seeking advancement for blacks in all levels of American society are hoping that that change in attitude our be converted to arrangements of a higher order. The world's blacks'-dependency on European-oriented media can be decreased if a deal can be struck between America's two leading media groups to not only further the level esteem of each among the public, but to collaborate to increase their level of economics through collective ownership of major ports on the information highway, as well. With the pace of ascension along the super information highway and media merger mania the likes of the Disney and Capital Cities and CBS and Westinghouse deals, Black America's leading media groups can hardly afford to stand on the sidelines and debate issues decades old. The future of information delivery will be devoid of diversity, unless blacks who have "The Race" in mind take steps toward increased ownership in relecommunications facilities such as broadcast and cable. The economic and outreach successes of Black Entertainment Television (BET) should show the NABJ's 2,000 members, as well as the NNPA's 200 publishers, that Black America is a ready and available media market for those who have the technological know-how to make it hap-

for Family in Need LUBBOCK—St. Mary Hospital. Methodist Hospital and University Medical Center will come together this holiday season to build a home for a family in need.

Employees of all three hospitals will join forces through Lubbock's Habitat for Humanity-to donate $30,000 for a home to be constructed at 2408 Hickory Ave. A ground-breaking ceremony for the new home will be Sept. 30 at 10:30 a.m.

The home will be constructed in one week's time Dec. 9-17. The all-volunteer construction crew will consist of employees from each of the three hospitals:

"It's exciting to see three competitive entities coming together for the good of our community," said John Mallory, executive director of Lubbock Habitat for Humanity. "Our volunteers are what make this project possible, and we are finding tremendous support at each of Lubbock's three major hospitals." Habitat volunteers at each of the three major hospitals in Lubbock are raising funds for the hospital by selling "square footage" to fellow employees at $30 per square foot. Each individual purchasing a "square foot" of the home will be named on a certificate to be permanently placed in a cornerstone of the home on Hickory

Lubbock Habitat for Humanity, Inc., is a not-for-profit organization established in 1987 with the goal of eliminating substandard housing in Lubbock. So far, the volunteer organization has built or rehabilitated 18 homes in partnership with lowincome families and have sold them to the families on a no-profit, no-interest basis.

Each year, a family selection committee chooses the most needy family from among the applicants for a home. The selected family-fir which this project will be named in October-is required to help construct the home and must have enough reliable income to pay for the

Intersound's James Hall and Worship and Praise Capture the Essence of Gospel with Live Set

ATLANTA, GA-On September 19, the essence of Gospel will be exposed with the release of Intersound recording crtist James Hall and Worship and Praise's second offering, King of Glory. Recorded live in Montreal, Canada, King of Glery features a selection of new songs, thus capturing all of the spirituality and energy that exists when performers take the scripture and translate it properly to music. Under the direction of James Hall, Melvin Crispell, and Jerry Peters, the thirtyfive member choir aims to expose all aspects of Gospel and to inspire their fans with the message of Christ. With James Hall and Worship and Praise, inspiration is the key to their music.

Since their first record, God Is he Control, Jame. Hall and Worship and Praise have matured as singers and songwriters, while continuing to weave several genres of music into their repertoire. As a classicallytrained planist since age five, Hall possesses a trained ear, giving him the ability to combine his jazz and Gospel roots with modern, international flavoring, thus creating a new sound with an ago-old message. Songs like "Pressia" On" attract the ear with a catchy celypso beat and Glory.

fective Hawaiian guitars while stim tlating the mind by encouraging these in doubt to entriest God with their lives. These fascinating musical combination empowers the stage presence of Worship and Praise as evidenced in live cuts like "Caught Up." which, according to Hall, "was hyped like a rock concert." The first single from the record is the title track and serves as a musical werkout of the psalm "Lift Up Your Heads." With a firm emphasis on the scripture, like most of the choir's song. "King of Glory" and the accompanying album attempts to demonstrate the intense relationship that fames Hall and Worship and Praise maintain with God. Above anything else, Hall wants ail listeners to know that "it took a lo! of prayer and fasting to get | this going and we've been with God the whole way." The incarnation of that faith is King of

B. Chase Williams and ShaBach Choir Take Listeners on a Musical Trip

ATLANTA GA - Gospel music is taking a radical step forward with the September 19 Inter-ound release of Take A Trip, the debut project from Atlanta's best kept musical secret, B. Chase Williams & the ShaBach Choir. As keylooardist and lead vocalist, Williams weaves holy messages into a broad spectrum of musical styles, ultimately reaching many audiences. Produced by the Grammy-winning jerry Peters, whose previous works include albums with The Mighty Clouds of Joy and other legendary, Gospel groups, Take A Trip will also introduce the exuberant Gospel flavor of the youthful ShaBach, a thirty-voice choral ensemble whose unique, stylistic blend will allow all listeners to embark on a musical journey

Williams is by no means a rookie to the world of Gospel, a genre of music that has been a tradition in his family for over three generations. With the support of his choir, named after the Hebrew term for "radical praise," Take A Trip serves as the musical and spiritual message of its visionary. In an attempt to "reach the world," B. Chase Williams and the ShaBach Choir combine genres, such as jazz, hip-hop, runk, and house with their Gospel message, which transcends denomination and leads the listener to ultimate faith through the power of music. Inspirations for Take A Trip read like a "Who's Who" of African-American artists as the ensemble incorporates a variety of influences from James Cleveland and Stevie Wonder to Pattie LaBelle and Boyz II Men.

But the true meaning of the ShaBach's work on Take A Trip lies in the lyrics asking listeners to climb aboard and feel the Lord's presence with titles such as "Rejoice," "Lift Up Your Hands," and "Put It All In His Hands." The songs, four of which are original compositions, ring true with positive messages because Williams believes that "Every song is geared toward life, its situations, and the ways that your life can be uplifted by the message of Christ."

Is the Dream Still Alive? By Michael Sharp Special to the NNPA

Is the dream still alive? Do you remember the dream? The dream Martin Luther King Jr. fought and died for. The dream Medgar Evers fought and died for. The dream countless others before us have fought and died for, in the quest to be treated equally?

It's hard to imagine there ever was a dream in this day and age when civil rights activist Rosa Parks is recognized and then assaulted by an unsympathetic black man; when we are faced with the senseless killing of black teenagers by black teenagers; when the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the supposed watchdog of the black civil rights movement, can't even balance its checkbook, let alone deal with the problems and challenges black Americans have to encounter everyday.

I remember 'back in the day' when our leaders preached selfreliance, when they exfolled the virtues of education and discipline and the work ethic. But no more. Now, the answer to all our problems ! is another government program or more spending for already existing ones. We are tired of watching our leaders make fools of themselves while encouraging us to be more dependent on the government. Our liberal black "leaders," bless 'em, are so removed from reality that I they actually think they are helping us! Middle class "working" blacks—the backbone of the black community—are some of the most over-taxed people on this planet. We are asked again and again to pay for more social programs whether it be midnight basketball for teenagers, who should be at home studying, or welfare for able men who should be out working.

At what point do we say "uncle"? How many more of our people do we have to slay? How many more teenaged mothers have to give birth to illegitimate children? How many more of us have to be dependent on the government for food, clothing, and shelter? When do we stop accepting the abnormal as normal? Based on the recent behavior of some in the black community, I believe there are more slaves now than when we were bought and sold like cattle!

There are some in the black community who believe living off the government has only made our problems worse rather than better. This makes the liberal leaders seethingly angry! They see their status and benefits eroding so they retaliate by calling all blacks who preach conservative values Uncle Torrs. They say black conservatives are betraying their race when, in reality, it is black liberals who are selling out. By acting like house slaves who have found out the field slaves are planning to escape, in essence, these liberais are saying, "Here dey is, massa, dey is tryin' to run away from da ghetto, from gub'ment control. Dey is tryin' to do stuff fo' demselves. Dat ain't ne way for no Nigra to act."

Indeed, if the definition of selling out is to run from the destructive influence of government intervention in every espect of our lives, then black conservatives are self-outs. But whatever it is we're selling is not worth keeping. By refusing to become dependent on government, black conservatives have decided that hope and freedom are worth more than any hand-out offered by Big Brother.
