The Sports Parade

By HANK HART

The missive comes by way of Abilene and was directed squarely at our assertion of Sunday that Forsan may be the team to defeat Abilene's Eagles in the district interscholastic league basketball tournament here this weekend.

"Abilene will 'yawn' its way through the district tournament this weekend. As for Forsan the Eagles are planning to catch upon their home work during that game and don't be surprised if they appear on the court with their books."

Interesting to know it is that the Eagles and their followers are confident but the writer should have signed his name. When the Eagles walked out of the local gym following their victory over the local team last weekend one of the players was heard to remark, upon spotting the district trophies on display in the building. "We might as well take them with us now. We'll have to later, anyway."

The meeting isn't a mere formality for the Eagles or any other team here despite all that display of confidence. Too, the Forsan game may be an occasion for the Eagles to catch up on their home work. In fact, they may have all the time they want for study after that one.

Little wonder that Light-weight Champion Ellis Reed will be one of the favored batters when he takes the ring in the state-wide Golden Gloves boxing tournament finals at Fort Worth this weekend. A checkup on Tiger's flint record since January, 1938, shows 27 victories in 11 fights. Only two of his scraps have gone the limit. He beat Dick Hanna, rugged West Coast youngster, in an exhibition at Sweetwater last spring and was sidetracked in a great fight in the GG semi-finals at Fort Worth by Ellis says Rhone was the toughest cookie he has ever faced, indicated he believes that Steff was as rugged as was Hanna, who was gaining a wide reputation around Sweetwater. Of Steff the localite expressed the opinion that he had never seen anyone absorb as many blows and keep coming back for more.

Big Spring will have four representatives in the Fort Worth show. Johnny Owens, who campaigned as a feather here last year and now has grown into a full fledged 135-pounder, will represent Texas A&M college in the big show. He earned the trip by winning a bustling fight at the college. Following is the wire he fired to his father, Frank Owens, after his Monday victory that earned him the trip: "NO DECISION GIVEN. VERY HARD FIGHT. MYSTON, FORMER CHAMPION, TOOK THE ONLY COUNT IN THE THIRD ROUND. HAVE BEEN CHOSEN AS THE FORT WORTH REPRESENTATIVE. YOUR SON, JOHNNY."

Apparently Johnny will be the Aggie's only delegate at the meeting. Others have been fighting but have not been bidding for berths. Owens worked out for four days in Houston last week. It is hoped that John doesn't draw Ellis Reed, the local light-weight, in an early fight. But what would be nicer than having both boys meet in the finals?

Charles Akay, who resigned his position as professional and manager of the Lubbock country club last month but who came to a new agreement with members of the club and elected to remain there, visited in town with brother Harold Monday. Charles, who formerly was pro at the Municipal here, was to have assumed a position with a sports manufacturing concern of Racine, Wis.

Wilson Would Play For Reds

Has Coaching Job. But Would Serve, Was One Of Best

BRADENTON, Fla., Feb. 14 (AP)—Jimmy Wilson said today he's leaving the coaching job to don mask and mitt again if his new team, Cincinnati, needs him.

Striding into the clubhouse after his first golf game of the winter season, the former manager of Philadelphia's National league club was anxious to talk baseball.

"I'm tickled to death with my new place," he declared, "but any job would be better than managing the Phils."

Wilson said he would be in there playing if McKeechne wants him on the active list.

Wilson said he would be in there playing if McKeechne wants him on the active list. Jimmy added he would be good for a lot more games if someone had to fill in for Ernie Lombardi, the league's 1938 batting champion, who probably won't need much help.

HAL LEE SIGNED

DALLAS, Feb. 14 (AP)—Hal Lee, heavy-hitting outfielder from the Nashville club of the Southern association, has been acquired by the Dallas Steers of the Texas league. It was announced yesterday.

Lee led the Southern loop with a batting average of .370 last year.

after his Monday victory that earned him the trip: "NO DECISION GIVEN. VERY HARD FIGHT. MYSTON, FORMER CHAMPION, TOOK THE ONLY COUNT IN THE THIRD ROUND. HAVE BEEN CHOSEN AS THE FORT WORTH REPRESENTATIVE. YOUR SON, JOHNNY."

Apparently Johnny will be the Aggie's only delegate at the meeting. Others have been fighting but have not been bidding for berths. Owens worked out for four days in Houston last week.

Workers Start Drive For Funds For B'Spring WT-NM Loop Club

Confident that their goal of $7,000 will be realized long before the season gets underway, volunteer workers in the fund drive of the Big Spring WT-NM league baseball club started their big offensive along all the lines this morning. Committees received their assignments from Club President R. L. Cook in a fast meeting in the county court room of the court house Monday evening, a confab in which 40 were in attendance.

Workers were due to report back with the president and directors Thursday evening for a check-up. Every man will try to be recharged for donations to the fund but those interested in doing their part who have not been contacted may leave their subscriptions at the sports desk of the Daily Herald.

In initiating the drive, Cook indicated that he wanted it to be known that this would positively be the final money subscription directed by the present organization. He said he was confident the club will become independent on revenues realized once the season gets underway.

L. E. Morris, one of the active workers in the campaign last year, was being strongly considered for the role as business manager. He has offered his services to the organization and it is probable that he will soon be placed under contract. Signing of Morris would mean the first major step in reorganization of club affairs.

'I Can Whip Joe', Says Tony Coahomans Defeat Garner

Vaughn's Turns Back Bankers In Thriller

Coahoma's Oilers all but clinched the playoffs in the Major-City basketball league standing by defeating Garner, 29-18, Monday evening in the feature of three games at the high school gymnasium.

The Oilers took an early lead and were never pressed. Herbell Wheeler paced the victory drive, scoring eight field goals and a gritty pitch while Dub Kelly contributed prominently with three field goals and two free tosses.

The Hillies' Thomas twins, ace scorers, were stopped. R. C. who until last night was the second leading scorer of the league, was limited to a single field goal.

Most exciting battle of the evening was the fracas between the Vaughn's Sweet Shop quintet and the First National Bank team. Vaughn's assumed sole possession of second place in league standings by turning aside the Bankers, 32-31, after trailing for most of the way. Skeet West made good on the free toss that won the game after a charging foul had been called on Dave Hopper.

The Bankers apparently had the game sewed up and were leading by six points at half time but Jake Morgan and West led a second half assault that changed the game's complexion.

Morgan, scoring 14 points, stretched his league's individual total to 88 while West contributed four field goals and a free toss.

The Bankers were weakened when Bill Flowers fouled out of the game in the third period.

The Flamen deadlocked the count two minutes before the game ended when Doyle Vaughn hit the target with a free pitch after Grosche's hacking foul.

The defeat tumbled the Bankers into a third place tie with Garner. In the evening's first game the R-Bar Wranglers, paced by Roger Miller and J. W. Howard, turned in their first triumph of the second half schedule by turning back the Flamingo's Ginners, 26-23.

Miller scored eight points. Penny Proctor, star Planter's forward, could not count. Leading tally maker of the game was T. Crow of the Ginners. The tall center pitched in six field goals.

Drawings For Meet To Be Held Tonight

George Gentry and Pat Murphy To Attend From Here

Drawings for first round games in the district interscholastic league basketball tournament, which opens in the Big Spring high school gymnasium Friday, will take place in a meeting at Sweetwater this evening.

Representatives of the 13 schools eligible to compete for the crown are to meet with Laurence Friday, district athletic director, for the pairings and to choose game officials.

George Gentry, local high school principal who is a member of the district executive committee, and Coach Pat Murphy, will represent Big Spring at the session.

Ticket sales for the tournament progressed slowly and school officials urged that fans make their purchases as soon as possible.

Can Take It "All right," he consented. "I'll tell you serious. I can take anything Joe Louis can hit me in that stomach. I got muscles in that stomach from when I was an ice man and I used to go runnin' up two flights of steps with two 50-pound chunks of ice held up in my arms. Louis can't hurt me there. All I can say about him knocking me out is that I never been knocked off my feet yet, much less knocked out."

Locals Oppose Sweetwater 5 Tonight

In Last Warm-Up Game Before District Tournament

The local high school cage representatives, who make their start in the district interscholastic league basketball tournament Friday, tangle with the Sweetwater Mustangs in their final warm-up game this evening, 7:30 o'clock, in the Sweetwater gym.

The Evjines took a 30-29 shellacking at the hands of the Cayuses in Big Spring two weeks ago and will be out to avenge that reversal. They must stop Jo-Jo Elrod, star forward, who has been the pilot in most of Sweetwater's victories this season.

The locals will be at full strength. Marvin House, who was ill most of last week, is improved and will be able to start along with Bobby Savage at forward.

Probable lineup: STEERS pos. MUSTANGS Elrod House Forward Voss South Forward Olsen Bostick Center Gill Martin Guard Headrick Guard.

Three Games To Be Played In 'Dog Gym Wednesday Night

COAHOMA, Feb. 13.—The Garden City-Coahoma high school basketball game, originally scheduled to be played this evening, has been postponed until Wednesday evening when a double header basketball game among independent teams will also be played.

Second battle will pit the R-Bar Wranglers against the Bankers. The two high school quintets will take the court around 9:30 o'clock. Admission for the three games has been established at 10 and 20 cents.

LOWELL HI IS BACK IN GOOD STANDING

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 14 (AP)—Lowell high school, boycotted by four San Francisco high schools after its basketball coach was accused of enticing junior high school athletes to Lowell with ice cream cones and free street car rides, was back in good standing today.

George Washington, Commerce, Mission and Galileo high schools accused Lowell's coach, Benny Neff, of using unfair tactics in obtaining prospects for his team. They voted to boycott Lowell and Mission and Galileo forfeited its scheduled games. Three other schools, Polytechnic, St. Ignatius and Sacred Heart stuck by Lowell.

Principals of the schools held a secret meeting last night and voted to forget the whole thing. Rex Johnson, prep basketball commissioner, was ordered to rearrange the cage schedule so Mission and Galileo can play their games with Lowell.

DOLLARS—AND SENSE— Everybody remembers, presumably, when fibes and jets were current about the rubber dollar or America's baby on the "holo-gold standard." The power of devaluation of the dollar, which touched off the controversy when President Roosevelt exercised it in 1934 to the extent of reducing the gold content to 90 per cent of the old content, will expire on June 30, this year, unless renewed and extended by congress. Under its terms the president, if he wished, cut the gold content still further to 80 per cent on the old basis. How- ever, he has shown no disposition to do so, and in fact has answered frigidly when questioned as to the possibility of any further money tinkering.

Now it is proposed to extend the devaluation powers until Jan. 15, 1941, largely on the representation that the international monetary situation requires the United States still to have a means of meeting possible devaluations in other countries. The argument is valid enough, though it might be phrased differently. The president has kept the dollar provisionally fixed at 90 per cent of its old gold content since 1934. No other currency has been so stable. The result is that "funk" or "hot" money from the entire world is seeking refuge in the United States. This influx has already disrupted monetary relationships. If the 90 per cent dollar were fixed by statute, much more foreign money would doubtless heat upon American shores, for there would be then removed the last element of dollar uncertainty.

Accordingly the present circumstances of international affairs warrant the president in asking for the extension of the devaluation power a little longer. It has been said that the confidence of private American investors awaits the statutory fixing of the gold content. Such an argument is difficult to credit. If President Roosevelt's five year old self-denial has not answered enough, what of the confidence in the dollar which the world investors are manifesting? —(Christian Science Monitor).

By Walter Lippmann

(Mr. Lippmann's column is published as an informational and news feature. His views are personal and are not to be construed as necessarily reflecting the editorial opinion of The Herald.—Editor's Note).

PIUS XI Though he died saying that there were still "so many things to do," the commanding influence of Pius XI has only begun to make itself felt. In the deep disorder of his time he discerned the root of the disorder; in the savage struggles of his time he defined the issue at the heart of the struggle; in darkness and the confusion he clarified the idea upon which the civilization of the West is founded, by which it will be restored and preserved.

This idea is the mold in which Western civilization has been formed. It is that because he is endowed with reason and faith, therefore, choose between falsehood and the truth, man is an inviolable soul; that because he is an inviolable soul, man must never be treated as if he were a thing; and he can never finally surrender to arbitrary unreason and to brute force. Upon this conception of man depend all the institutions of Western civilization: The true liberty of the individual, the very conception of law, the grounds of justice, and unity among rational persons.

The pontificate of Pius XI was one long protest against the denial of this conception of man. He protested in Russia, in Mexico, in Spain, in Germany, in Italy; what made the protest an influence which will shape the course of history was that it rose out of a clear understanding of that faith which, despite all the political and sectarian and dogmatic differences that divide them, is the basic and universal faith of Western men. Thus he made plain to the discerning what will eventually become clear to almost all—that the essential issue is not between fascism and communism, not between authoritarianism and democracy, not between liberty and order, not between license and discipline, but between the faith which affirms and the heresies which deny that men are inviolable, responsible, rational, and free. Because he defined the real issue at the center of the whole immense disorder, Pope Pius XI exercised a spiritual influence beyond that of any Pope in modern times.

Though in many parts of the world his church is persecuted, it is the fact, and experience will prove it, that under his guidance the church has become stronger, and more nearly universal than they have been for several centuries. Not for many generations has the moral energy of his church been so abundant; not for a long age has its intellectual life been so vigorous, so clarifying, and so creative.

Pius XI was equal to the historic test which he was called upon to meet. For he had the inner virtue of great men which is that, when they are put to the test, they know how to draw from within the most essential in tradition, the understanding and the power to meet the test.

An uninspired and mediocre man might easily have fallen into confusion and weakness. But this Pope was a great man. And so, as the disorder developed, he drew from that which is most fundamental and most universal in the tradition of his church, the capacity to see clearly and the strength to speak resolutely.

For that he is venerated in every land. Because of that the Prime Minister of Great Britain paid him a visit, not as a matter of perfunctory courtesy but of acknowledgment that he represented that conception of human life which civilized men cannot and will not surrender. That visit was an event without precedent in modern times, and its symbolic significance was immense. For in making that visit, the Prime Minister acted on behalf of all those who, though they have different creeds, have one faith. He was expressing their gratitude to the Pontiff who had declared his faith to a world that had almost lost it—but is increasingly aware that the world must return to it. For this Pius XI will be long remembered, since his influence will long be felt.

And so when in the future men come to define the place of Pius XI in history, they will perhaps say that he was, in modern times, the most catholic, in the sense of the most universal, defender of the faith that makes men civilized. (Copyright, 1939, New York Tribune Inc.)

Hollywood Sights And Sounds

by ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—I learned about juggling today from the town's most distinguished-looking practitioner of the art — Howard Hawks.

It isn't the three-balls-in-the-air or cane-on-the-nose type of juggling. It's the kind a producer-director does when he is trying to tell a screen story in a manner seldom if ever attempted before.

W. C. Fields, who used to be a juggler of sorts (and did you ever see a man juggling sorts?) might envy Howard Hawks' poise as he goes about his work. This Hawks is of the quiet school of direction. Looks like a leading man except for the silver hair, and dresses—not too quietly, not too gaily—the way Adolphe Menjou should to keep that mythical fashion crown.

On the surface, meaning the sound stage where "Plane No. 4" is in work today, there is no juggling apparent. Hawks directs Cary Grant, Jean Arthur, John Carroll, Allyn Joslyn in dramatic stuff that is good but no better than any dramatic scene taken out of context.

"The problem here," Hawks tells me, "is that we have in the one script five different stories — the stories of five distinct characters or groups of characters: Grant and Jean Arthur, Grant and Rita Hayworth, who plays Barthelme's wife; of Barthelme and Rita; of Sig Ruman and the South American airline he owns but knows little about; of Thomas Mitchell, whose life is bound up with Barthelme's and with Grant's. Even the radio operator has a story, although this is minor.

"And all these stories intertwine—but we must keep each in its proper balance to the others. We have real characters, speaking lines those characters would speak, and—"

To sum it up, briefly, there's no telling at what moment one of those characters might decide to take matters into his own hands. That's why Jules Furthman, scenarist, and Hawks, whose original story it is, are still sitting up nights, working things out to keep everything in balance and yet give each character his logical and just place.

They're trying a new technique in the telling of this yarn of aviation over the Andes. A technique that shows the audience what happens first, then lets it fill in the background from dialogue and ac-

DANGEROUS SERVICE

by GRACE ELLIOTT TAYLOR

Chapter 24 CAIRO Petronella stood beside the window of the flat in Alexandria. The room was in darkness except for the small lamp on the desk. Its light caught the sheen of her satin evening dress. It shone like a sheath of rich beauty. Shaded lighting could do much, she thought, glancing down at the material. It made a dress which was tired, rubbed and old, look lustrous and new. It made you look younger, if you were getting old, fresh, if you had danced too long, and too often, and were tired. This frock had been new when she came to Alexandria. Now, two weeks later, though it was to be listed among her "successful" gowns, it had seen its life.

Not far out, at sea, were the lanterns of the fishing boats; they formed a twinkling circle as they closed in upon their nets. Those were the headlights of Mike's car now, coming along the road. Soon, she would be dancing under the gray guns with rubicund Lieutenant Jim Blake, serious Flag-Lieutenant Andrews, the little surgeon, the charming, impersonal Captain. She would be dancing with Michael for the last time. That thought saddened her. She heard Michael's ring, and went and let him in. "Hello, my dear. A drink before we go?" "Yes! But don't turn on the lights. The coast looks good through that window." He came and stood beside her. His arm slipped round her waist, and pulled her close to him.

"There's something I'd better repeat in case you've forgotten since last night. I love you. Will you marry me?" She shook her head. "No. More fool I! This visit has been heavenly. Too perfect, Michael. Just one long party. This place, the climate, the life, have all conspired together to make me feel, too, that perhaps—" "Perhaps?" "Perhaps I do love you. But I don't know. I want to be sure. I've felt like this before. Mike, for other men. Awfully fond, and happy. But it passes. Peter has a wire from his editor. I cross a frontier. We find ourselves in a country where the people talk a different language, where the rhythm of life is different. The feeling I hoped was going to last, goes. It is just a memory, sweet, but trivial. It hasn't any power to cause me pain. You haven't the power to hurt me, Mike. That is why I don't think I love you. You see, there is someone else, who has."

"In heaven's name, why ask for misery?" he groaned. "Why should love cause you pain? Woman! Stop talking!" He kissed her. Was it possible that he was right? Had she held the wrong conception of love for a long time? Was this all? She disengaged herself. "Let me cross that frontier." "This time you'll come back." He was very triumphant and sure. Other women had rendered Michael quite certain of his attraction. If only he were right, wished Petrel. She did not want to go. She wished that he would forbid her, keep her here, against her will, until her will was gone. But he released her.

"You know, you're awfully odd in some ways, darling. Very young, and immature, if you'll forgive my saying so. You take life so seriously." "Someone once said life was a comedy to those who think, a tragedy to those that feel. I can't help feeling." "But do you really believe in spiritual love? Petrel, half the couples who marry don't feel that about each other. They take a chance. Sometimes it goes well, sometimes poorly. If it's unbearable, they pack it up. That is the adult way to regard love. With us, I believe it would go well. And you're wonderful, Petrel. You have so much. Do you realize that?" "International Young Woman?" "I feel I have very, very little. Just a propensity for being useful and common sense." His hand across her mouth silenced her.

"No! And you're sometimes beautiful. You can go anywhere, talk to anybody. You're an international young woman." "That doesn't sound decent." She laughed. But she listed on her fingers: "A dictator, an Archbishop, a deposed monarch, an admiral, and Communists, Fascists, anarchists, atheists, Marxists, philosophers, poets, racists, film stars and missionaries—I've met or sat next to them all at dinner! But, perhaps, you're right, Michael. Experience doesn't necessarily bring maturity." "But, Petrel—" "We must go; you've spoilt my face, and we're missing the party." "This time tomorrow, it won't be here to spoil. What a horrible thought!" "I think I know several other faces that will be pleased to remedy the deficiency. They haven't been looking very friendly." "They don't count." But even while he kissed her, she knew that they would count again, when she was gone. If she did not return. Michael did not understand love which persisted, even when you wanted to be free. Love, like that single, relentless love of hers, which could cross all frontiers, and be with her still.

From immediately overhead, in the searing blue of heaven, the sun beat down upon the hot, glaring pavement of Cairo. It was midday. The shaded balconies and "Continental Hotel" were full of Europeans wearing light suits, and drinking long drinks. The jingle of the two-horsed gharries which passed alongside the large square, with its gray statue, intermingled with the clinking of ice in their glasses. Both were lost amid the other sounds of Cairo. Street hawkers cried their trashy merchandise as they passed, laden with Eastern carpets, silks, or beads.

In the distance, if all other sounds had ceased suddenly, could have been heard another, uglier murmur. In a mean street, the followers of Nahaq Pasha had stood listening to an impassioned speaker. Many of them were students, wild young rowdies, armed with sticks and bricks. Now, worked up to a frenzy of excitement and resentment, they turned. In a shouting, jostling throng they rushed towards the main thoroughfares. There, they would overthrow more trolley cars, uproot more lamp-posts, break more British windows.

"Down with Sir Samuel Hoare! Down with Sir Samuel Hoare! Freedom for Egypt," were their indistinguishable cries. This was a day in November of 1938, when the British reply to the Wafd's demand for a return to the 1932 treaty, mercilessly modified by Sidky Pasha, seven years later, had just been published. It appeared in many Egyptian papers and leaflets, in a much twisted version. The mob was not satisfied with such apparently vague promises from the British Government. They did not care to look forward to "settlement at a more opportune moment." When for example, Mussolini's transports had ceased crowding through the canal to Eritrea. They would continue to demonstrate more violently than ever, until their problems received attention and was solved.

"Love Of A Lady" But because the police in Cairo, mounted on their white Arab horses, are some of the finest in the world, the British could continue drinking and playing. Gently, the white horses stepped, sideways, pushing, coaxing, and stemming the angry crowd. Standing in the shelter of a doorway, an Englishman stood watching them, admirably. "Good work!" he commented aloud. He had thoughtful eyes, and long, strong features. He was very brown, yet he was being watched. It was all inconvenience to which he was accustomed. As he entered the lounge of his hotel with its chattering mid-day crowd, its red leather and chromium modernity, he heard a voice call to him: "Hi, there, Tony!" "Why, Mike, this is fine." "Where have you sprung from?" "Abyssinia and other places." "Same old dark horse, eh? Come and have a drink. Either they mix their beer here, or Cairo gives me a better thirst than Alexandria."

"I might as well ask you the same question. Why are you here?" "Business for H. E., and the love of a lady." "I see." "You do not," Michael responded gloomily. "What'll you have?" He ordered their drinks. "No! I was a fool to come, and I'm leaving soon. Wish I'd done the whole business over the telephone." "I'd like to see the girl who can cast you into such despondence. You look almost sober." "Trouble is that when I tell myself there are plenty of others it doesn't work. There aren't any like her." Tony laughed at him. "I should like to see this unique—" Tony stopped. He was staring. But Michael had not noticed. "Talk of an angel—there she is—just coming in through the door, with her hat in her hand! Looks as if she were in a hurry, so I won't stop her. News for the gang, by the look of her. In a minute, you'll see them all come tumbling out of the elevator. She's a very well-known young woman. You've probably heard of her; heard some of the legends about her. Petrel Malone?" Tony Lances answered casually. "I don't think so. What kind of legends?" (Copyright, 1938, Grace Elliott Taylor)

when important votes are scheduled. While some of the speeches were described to reporters as having been critical in tone, several legislators said they had not been caustic and that apparently they were based on a desire to be helpful in obtaining a smoothly operating democratic machine in the house. One democrat was reported to have assailed failure of the appropriations committee to bring the relief and independent offices appropriations measures to the floor in such shape that roll call votes could have been obtained on two issues on which the administration lost.

One was the $150,000,000 cut in WPA funds, the other the $17,000,000 reduction in the TVA appropriation. As long as members are permitted to hide behind the anonymity of non-record votes, one democrat said, the administration will have trouble holding democrats in line. One individual said Rayburn had attempted to impress on new members the importance of staying in town, being on the floor while the house is in session, and observing requests of the party whip organization.

Farmers (Continued from Page 1) ation of all farm programs. One plan advanced, and which he predicted might not get far because of non-support, was to allow cotton producers to make further voluntary reductions in cotton acreage without disturbing acreage allotments and in turn be given title to hold over cotton in the amount the unplanted acres would have produced. For example, a farmer with a 100 acre allotment could plant only 25 acres and receive title on his government loan cotton in the amount the 75 acres would have produced, or receive certificates on that amount if he had no cotton in the loan. At noon, District Agent J. D. Prewitt and District Home Demonstration Agent Ruth Thompson met with county and home demonstration agents for a conference on extension service work. FEAR PLANE LOST IN ALASKA INLET JUNEAU, Alaska, Feb. 14 (AP)—Discovery of oil patches off Point Bishop lent an ominous note today to the hunt for a Marine Airways plane which vanished in a storm Sunday while en route from Ketchikan to Juneau. Searchers indicated, however, they were not discouraged by the report of Captain K. Bayers of the gasboat Wanderer that he had sighted several patches of light oil on an inlet near where the pontoon-equipped ship, with at least five persons aboard, was believed forced down. They expressed hope Lon Gope, an experienced and skilled pilot, had been able to bring his passengers down safely in some isolated area.
