GENEVA, Jan. 23. (AP)—A sharp battle over communist and fascist foreign policies and Uruguay's right to break off diplomatic relations with Russia broke out in the League of Nations council today.

Serrant Asked To Form A New French Cabinet

(By The Associated Press) President Albert Lebrun Thursday asked a former premier, Albert Serrant, to form a cabinet to replace Pierre Laval's government which fell Wednesday.

While diplomatic interest centered on Paris, where the cabinet overthrow was attributed largely to Laval's policies on the Italo-Ethiopian war, an official Ethiopian communiqué was issued claiming that "several thousand Italians had been killed" in a major battle on the northern front that had been raging since Monday.

Ethiopian officials denied Italian claims of victory as new troop movements on both sides were reported. At Geneva, Italy made known its opposition to the five-power mutual assistance pact and to concentration of British ships in the Mediterranean. The League of Nations Wednesday announced conclusion of a mutual assistance pact between Great Britain, France, Turkey, Greece, and Yugoslavia to operate if any one of them is attacked by Italy.

The new League committee moved Thursday to consider the imposition of embargoes against Italy on oil, steel, coal and iron.

Traffic Violators Are Being Warned

Mad drivers eased pressure on the accelerator Thursday as the threat of a traffic officer's whistle made itself felt.

George Herbert, new traffic officer, found plenty to do on busy streets Wednesday evening and Thursday morning, repeatedly halting drivers who "runned" their cars down congested thoroughfares at 50 miles an hour or more.

Violators of parking rules were beginning to find their life less pleasant as they were cautioned against double parking.

Merchants on Main between 3rd and 2nd streets were considering a petition asking for 2-hour parking limit. City officials indicated they would get it if enough of the merchants demanded it.

'Doodle Bug' Worthless In Locating Oil, In Opinion Of Texas Tribunal

AUSTIN, Jan. 23. (UP)—Ability of a "doodle bug," a sort of divining rod, to discover oil under the surface was ruled impossible by the third court of civil appeals here.

In an opinion filed by Chief Justice James McWhorter the court said: "We take judicial knowledge of the scientific fact that there is no virtue whatever in the 'doodle bug' in locating oil or other substance underground the earth."

The court previously had affirmed the decision of a Williamson county district court which refused judgment for "doodle bug" use. The written opinion then was deferred. It was filed yesterday. At length the court cited encyclopedias and other records referring to use of divining rods. It concluded that the only consideration for a claim before the court was use of a divining rod or "wiggie stick" or "doodle bug" in oil exploration which, the court said, "we do not regard as constituting

Borah Soon Will Launch His Campaign

Will Start Activity With Speech At Brooklyn Next Tuesday

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. (UP)—A smashing opening of the presidential candidacy of Sen. William E. Borah was planned today, with major developments expected within the next fortnight.

The senator's eastern campaign begins next Tuesday with a speech in Brooklyn. Borah, canny in his use of publicity methods, plans to use the opportunity for a well-timed burst of news developments.

Hamilton Fish, Jr., considered as Borah's eastern campaign manager, said he expected the senator to make a definite announcement of his candidacy not later than Feb. 1.

The New York opening, Fish said, will be the signal for an aggressive drive throughout New York state.

Other friends of Borah believed he would announce his intentions soon regarding other states having primaries in the near future. The senator has been giving particular attention to the Ohio primary May 12 and may enter that state with a bid for liberal delegates.

Because of his desire to have a republican convention given to liberal views and attended by liberal delegates, Borah must concentrate on primaries to make his plans effective.

Sixteen states are holding presidential primaries, electing a total of 306 of the 397 delegates to the republican convention in Cleveland. Besides the children who were in Yuma Thursday, survivors are John, Paul, Stephen and Joe Corcoran, all of whom live in Big Spring, and William Corcoran of Kansas City.

Temperature As Low As 55 Below Zero

Blizzard Sweeps Twenty States From Great Lakes to Atlantic

CHICAGO, Jan. 22. (AP)—Sub-zero temperatures and bitter winds from the Northwest today doubled the toll of human lives as the severe cold extended from the Dakotas to the Atlantic seaboard.

At least 48 were dead in twelve of the 20 states covered by the Arctic blast.

Worst in Years Temperatures were far below zero in the Great Lake region, and the cold extended as far south as Kentucky and Tennessee, where some points reported the mercury down to near zero. There was no immediate forecast that the blizzard would extend into Texas.

It was the worst cold wave in many years, driving the temperature down as far as 55 below zero on the bridge linking International Falls, Minn., with Canada.

Twenty states, in varying degrees of frost bitten weather, felt the effects of the invasion. Schools were ordered closed in many of them. Normal activities in hundreds of chilled communities were reduced to a minimum.

A 40-mile an hour gale drove into Ohio, where temperatures ranged from zero to 14 below at Dayton. Deputy sheriffs on horseback rescued 100 school children last night from buses buried in 16-foot snow drifts near St. Clairsville, O., but 60 other children had to spend the night in two Champlain county schools.

As the cold waves swept into New York and other eastern states some relief was promised by the weather bureau here for the middle west. Slowly rising temperatures were predicted for Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

Resume Drilling On M'Dowell Deep Test

Drill Stem Being Run For Deepening Operation

Drill stem was being run in the John I. Moore No. 1 McDowell wildcat deep test in Glasscock county Thursday morning after having been shut in since Dec. 15 when it heeded and caused fuel tanks to catch fire.

Operators believed that bottom would be reached during the morning and drilling resumed at 10,115 feet where deepening operations ceased in early August. Tuesday the hole was opened and the test made a strong head, blowing oil a distance of a quarter mile. It was allowed to run its course before being shut in again.

Wednesday equipment was put in shape and boilers fired. John Moore, who promoted the untitled boom on which the test is located, was due to arrive at the well Thursday morning to oversee the resumption of drilling. Jack Lottland, contractor, was unable to superintend the work, having been detained in Fort Worth on legal business.

How far the test would be deepened was not certain Thursday. It was generally conceded that it would be drilled through the present soft formation or until pay was encountered. If no encouraging shows are received, it may be shot. Location of the test is 1,980 feet from the north line and 660 feet from the east line of section 22, block 34, T-2-S, T&P survey. It is about 54 miles north and east of the Big Lake field where West Texas' only Ordovician production is obtained at depths ranging from 8,344 to 9,020 feet.

From Lime Section Oil men believe that the oil from the test is coming largely from the lime section between 9,471 and 9,520 feet. There were other increases at greater depth, one coming at 9,600 feet. At 10,115 feet it is thought that the test is bottomed in the lower Pennsylvania, probably the Strawn or Bend.

After being deepened from 9,465 feet to 10,115 feet, the test was swabbed and bailed and treated

INSURANCE IMPORTANT IN SAFEGUARDING ESTATE; PROVIDES CASH AND AN INCOME

(In connection with the current "Write-a-Will Week" campaign being sponsored as a service to its readers, The Daily Herald presents herewith an article on the subject, "The Value of Life Insurance in the Creation and Perpetuation of an Estate," by W. W. Inkman, district agent for the General American Life Insurance company.—Editor's Note.)

By W. W. INKMAN That the editors of The Big Spring Herald should choose the subject of writing a will to highlight with a special "Write-a-Will" week, testifies to the importance of the subject. That they should invite a life insurance man to contribute to their promotion of this event is further evidence that the editors are aware of the fact that a will and a life insurance trust frequently go hand in hand. In many cases in my experience and in the experience of every man who deals with the financial problems of individuals, one has proved to be as important as the other. The creator of a personal estate, whether large or small, may struggle all his life to build this estate for his family's protection after he has passed on; he may, by a well-drawn will, assure the proper distribution of his estate; but there frequently remain certain things which must be done to safeguard and perpetuate the income from the estate. When a man dies without a will, debts and designing relatives can and often do dissipate a good part of his estate. A will properly drawn, not necessarily long and complicated, avoids litigation and delay. It directs the benefits from the estate to the parties which the

Two Senators Refuse Place On Committee

Constitutionality Of New Measure Debated; May Be Changed

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. (AP)—Serious friction over the new administration farm program developed in the senate agriculture committee today when republicans refused to serve on a sub-committee to study the soil conservation plan, Senator Smith (Dem-SC) reluctantly accepted the chairmanship.

Predicts Changes Smith said "I will support the bill which it conforms with the constitution." Republicans McNary and Norris declined to serve on the sub-committee. Norris had asserted earlier in the week that the farm program would not meet with requirements as laid down by the supreme court in its AAA decision.

Chairman Jones (Dem-OR) of the house agriculture committee which is studying the bill, said "there will be some changes." There were indications that language might be added to specify that the present measure is to be followed by a permanent program based on state cooperation.

It was learned that the senate group discussed the constitutionality of the new measure at length. The farm proposal was put before congress yesterday, identical bills being introduced in both branches.

Carefully steering clear of constitutional pitfalls exposed by the supreme court AAA decision, the new measure was presented in the form of amendments to the existing soil conservation act.

The measure carried no specific appropriation of funds. Sen. John H. Bankhead, D., Ala., sponsor of the measure in the senate, said he was seeking to insert an appropriation of $440,000,000 to provide for the new plan in the independent offices bill, first supply bill to reach the senate.

The bill provided that payments replacing the invalidated AAA benefits may be made to farmers who cooperate in improving their soil in methods outlined by the secretary of agriculture.

The amount of payments to individual farmers is conditioned by four factors: 1. The acreage of soil improving or erosion preventing crops. 2. The total acreage of crop land. 3. The amount of changes made in use of the land. 4. The percentage of the farmer's crop going into domestic consumption upon the basis of a national estimate compiled by the secretary of agriculture.

For the fourth time in less than three years the case of John Johnson, 29-year-old Lynn county deputy sheriff charged with the death of B. O. "Bunk" Best, May 24, 1933 seven miles north of Lamesa, was nearing the jury here Thursday afternoon.

Testimony was concluded after a brief session Thursday morning and the court was considering exceptions before delivering his charge at the beginning of the afternoon.

George Dupree, Lubbock; Cecil Collins, district attorney, and James T. Brooks for the state and Tom Gerrard, Tahoka; Carl Roundtree, Lamesa, and Clyde E. Thomas for the defense were ready to start final arguments which were due to consume more than six hours. It appeared that the jury would receive the case shortly after nightfall.

Johnson, taking the stand Wednesday afternoon in his own defense, said that he fired the shots which killed Best because "I thought my life was in danger."

He told of the events leading up to the shooting and denied that he fired because of prior threats he had heard the Bests (Bunk and his brother, Grady) had allegedly made against him. Johnson said he was not mad but excited and fired after Bunk had grabbed him by the collar and demanded: "You—what are you doing in Dawson county?" The deputy said "I thought my life and my companion's life were in danger."

On rigid cross examination by George Dupree, special prosecutor, Johnson denied that he shot Bunk Best while he had his hands in the air. He testified that he did not take deliberate aim in firing but that he pulled the pistol and fired quickly in the direction of the Best boys.

No Word From FDR On Plans Toward Bonus

Friends Think He Will Veto, But That Won't Stop Measure

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23. (UP)—Intimates of President Roosevelt hazarded the guess today that he will veto the bonus measure, but the chief executive himself remained silent.

He had the politically delicate problem of deciding within ten days whether to let the legislation become law or risk overriding a veto. The problem became his after an overpowering house majority yesterday approved the bond-payment method and forwarded it to the White House.

For 3,500,000 world war veterans, enactment will mean cash for their adjusted service certificates nine years ahead of the present maturity date.

For the government, it will pose the question of raising at least $1,300,000,000 at once and $2,491,000,000 eventually.

Again by a margin greatly in excess of the two-thirds needed to override a veto, the house went on record for the bonus. By a 346 to 59 vote it agreed to the senate's proposal for payment in $50 bonds, cashable on demand after June 15.

No sooner had the bill reached the White House than Henry H. Cramer, director of the national economy league, addressed this telegram to the president: "Give them the same good veto message you gave them a year ago. That was a bad bonus bill and a good message. This bonus bill is just as bad so make the message just as good."

Congressional bonus leaders concluded, however, that it made no difference what the president did. They argued they could control far more votes than are needed to kill a veto.

Will Attend Golf Meeting

Mrs. Phillips To Represent Big Spring At Group Session

Mrs. Guy McAfee, Lubbock, and Mrs. G. I. Phillips, Big Spring, will leave Friday for Mineral Wells where they will attend a meeting of the executive committee of the West Texas Women's Golf association Saturday. Mrs. McAfee is first president of the association and Mrs. Phillips is secretary.

They will join Mrs. Ray Vernon, Abilene, enroute. Mrs. Olla Shanks and Mrs. Will O'Connell of San Angelo will also attend from this section.

Mrs. Phillips said Thursday that a full attendance was expected for the meeting. One director who will be unable to attend is dispatching an alternate. The committee is to set dates for the second annual tournament which will be held in Mineral Wells and make other plans for the affair.

Mrs. Frank Goldthwaite, Fort Worth, first champion and winner of the initial tournament held at Lubbock a year ago, will attend the meeting as a director.

Around And About

The Sports Circuit

By Tom Beasley

COACH TALLEY at Coahoma has visions of a nice football line-up next fall. It seems that Talley is a very ambitious young mentor and has scouted around and recruited several promising backs. Talley believes he will have a team capable of matching any Class B team in this section, and if prospects still look rosy when fall rolls around he may ask for admittance to the interscholastic league.

BILL TATE of the Tate & Bristol Insurance Agency pulled an ace gag recently. Tate was a spectator at the Foran-Lamesa Tornados basketball game which was won by the Tornados after a struggle. Bill walked over to Leonard Martin, Foran school official, and informed him that he would mail a check first thing in the morning. "Why, what do you mean?" Martin inquired. "Well," Bill replied, "it appeared to me you were damaged by a tornado, and you know we have you insured against tornadoes." Martin had no comeback.

GENE GARDNER, coach of the junior high school basketball team this year—the best he has ever had—yet he has failed to win a game. Most of the teams around this section are too strong for Gardner's junior high school boys.

FROM THE following paragraphs, taken from "Top O' Morn Stuff" in the San Angelo Morning Times, we gather that San Angelo does not like the idea of having to continue athletic relations with Big Spring.

"Coach Harry Taylor of the Bobcats had figured on at least two big inter-sectional games this year, one of them with Amarillo, the defending state champion two seasons in succession. Largely because the Bobcats look like they're going to be fairly tough again next autumn, no district 3 club will care to play the opening game with San Angelo. The rest of the pack will want to see the Concho corps in at least one warm-up conflict. In which event, now the only practical date for the proposed tussle with the Golden Sandies is the season opener. That would be a wussamer with which to start things rolling.

Your reporter is not trying to start a fuss with the interscholastic league duds, but the new alignment isn't as pleasant as it could be. Nobody around here cares to continue athletic relations with Coach George Gentry's Big Spring delegations. There is a flock of set-ups in the old Oil Belt which has been joined with district 3. You and you and you and that other fellow over there much would rather see the Bobcats combatting strong inter-sectional rivals than a set of soft sisters in their own circuit. Big Spring, by the way, will have to invade the Concho palisades this year. The Bobcats will have to play at Sweetwater and there is going to be argument about location of the rest of the booting bees. Abilene right now looms as the toughest from the erstwhile Oil Belt. Efforts will be made to book Abilene here—either that or flip a coin for it."

Players Bear Unbelievable Price Tags To Yankee Management

MCCARTHY DAZED BY HIGH PRICE

By TOM PAPROCKI Associated Press Sports Writer Joe McCarthy, manager of the New York Yankees, on a recent visit to New York to discuss plans for the coming season with Colonel Ruppert, tossed a beefsteak party for some 200 baseball officials, players and newspapermen at Jack Dempsey's. It was a grand pre-season get-together. And everyone got re-acquainted before the serious business of baseball campaigning starts again.

Aside from the fact that the Yankee management was trying to pick up a second baseman, with no luck whatever because every one they are interested in seems to bear an unbelievable price tag (like the $500,000 one Clark Griffin pinned on Buddy Myers) when a Yankee representative appears on the scene, there was little American league news floating around.

Here, at an American league party, the most discussed news morsel was the elevation of young Horace Charles Stoneham to the seat his late father occupied as president of the New York Giants, the National league entry.

Everyone seemed to think that the 22-year-old son of Charles Stoneham, long one of the powers in the affairs of the senior circuit, would fit into the job very nicely. The young fellow is very well liked on all sides. The Giants' new president has been very close to the team for the past few seasons, even to accompanying the ball players on the swing around the loop.

For young Stoneham it is the realization of a boyhood dream. As a small boy he was a frequent spectator at the Polo Grounds where his father had a season box. When he was 16 years old, in 1919, his father bought a controlling interest in the Giants from the Erush estate. Following the purchase Charles Stoneham gave the press a short, expressive announcement: "I bought the club for my boy."

It always has been Horace Stoneham's ball club since that day. The senior Stoneham operated the business but, always in the hope that some day Horace would be sitting in the president's chair. It really is his club now.

It is very unlikely that there will be much of a change in the Giants, for the present, at least. Horace knew his father's policies and was completely in accord with them. The present owners of the Giants are not likely to retreat from their firm stand against night baseball and the broadcasting of daily ball games.

Manager Bill Terry and the new president have been close friends for many years. Terry's 5-year contract still has three years to run, but even so Stoneham is certain that "Memphis Bill" is the man he wants out there leading his Giants.

One of the new president's first acts was to hang the "not-for-sale" sign on the Giants.

"We don't want anyone getting free publicity," was the way Stoneham put it. "Why, Dad used to get an offer almost every year from John Ringling, but it always came in March just before the circus came into town. Once Dad retaliated by offering to buy the circus."

After all, you would hardly expect a fellow to want to rush out and sell a present his father gave him 17 years ago.

EASY BILLIARDS

By Willie Hoppe

Willie Hoppe's priceless left hand demonstrates the long bridge used for the most powerful shots, such as three, four, five and even six cushion shots, and his pupil, Miss Mary Alice Rice, shows the closed bridge, for short shots, such as "nip draw" and "nurse" shots. The diagram shows the right and wrong ways to follow through on the follow and draw shots.

(This is the fifth in a series of lessons by Willie Hoppe, world champion and outstanding figure in billiards for 30 years.)

(Written For The Associated Press)

No. 5: STROKE AND LENGTH OF BRIDGE

When an expert billiard player is asked to watch a promising youngster in action, with a view to passing judgment on his possibilities, the first thing he studies in the new player is his stroke.

In order to acquire a good stroke a player must, above all things, control his cue after coming in contact with the ball. Here are a few axioms on stroking which will prove helpful:

Hold a level cue. Follow through the cue ball regardless of whether the stroke is center ball or to impart follow, draw or english.

Finish with the cue-point two, three or four inches beyond the place where the cue ball rested, depending on the distance required, on the cue ball or the first object ball.

Never permit the cue-tip to waver about in the air, after delivering the stroke.

Never permit the cue to slide off to the right or left when putting english on the ball. Follow absolutely straight through.

The diagrams above illustrate exactly what I mean. I have seen many an amateur display this fault of pulling or swinging his cue in the direction in which he wishes to impart english. It's a dangerous fault. While it is true that the cue tip is in contact with the ball only a tiny fraction of a second the straight, clean follow-through will influence the course of the ball and give it the motion you want.

Length of Bridge. One of the greatest aids to control of the object balls is regulation of the length of the bridge. By that I mean the length of that portion of the cue extending beyond the first finger of the bridge.

A medium draw shot, long bridge, short shot, short bridge. Thus, in cushion billiards, where a great deal of length is required on almost every shot, the bridge, or length of the cue extending beyond the first finger of the bridge hand, should be about seven inches. A shot requiring unusual force may call for a bridge nine inches long.

A medium draw shot or an ordinary one-cushion shot, should be made with a bridge of about five inches. The "close nurse" or play in which the balls are moved but little, demands a short bridge, usually about four inches.

Charlie Peterson, world champion fancy shot billiardist, once told me that he checked the play-ers in the international championship billiards tournament of 1922 and learned that the average length of the bridge used was about 4 1/2 inches.

Generally speaking, the short bridge should be favored because it enables a player to strike the cue ball more accurately. The longer the bridge the greater the danger of missing the desired point on the object ball.

BIG SPRING BACK IN OIL BELT

After a five-year absence the Big Spring Steers will return to Oil Belt football competition. The executive committee of the Texas Interscholastic League so ruled yesterday in a surprise move. Roy B. Henderson, athletic director of the league, had recommended that Big Spring be placed in the Panhandle circuit.

The Oil Belt thus becomes the largest district in the state by two schools. Nine teams next fall will compete for the championship of District 3. Big Spring was a member of the old Oil Belt in 1929 and 1930 when Bill Stevens was coaching here.

The new Oil Belt alignment is Abilene, Big Spring, Breckenridge, Brownwood, Cisco, Eastland, Ranger, San Angelo and Sweetwater.

Chester Kenley, San Angelo high school principal, this morning advised George Gentry, Big Spring school principal that an Oil Belt confab would be held in Abilene Saturday. The meeting was called by I. E. Dudley, Abilene, chairman of the old Oil Belt district.

Reorganization and schedule arrangement for the 1936 season will be brought up at the first meeting. San Angelo was the only school to oppose Big Spring's entrance into the Oil Belt.

With nine teams in the race, it will be necessary to begin championship play the first week-end in October and continue without a break through Thanksgiving.

Local school officials and coaches were jubilant over the move which sends Big Spring back to the Oil Belt. "It was a distinct surprise to me," Gentry said, "I expected the committee to place Big Spring in the district with Amarillo."

The following arrangement was ordered by the executive committee: District: 1. Amarillo, Borger, Lubbock, Pampa, Plainview.

Continue Team Play Tomorrow

Weather permissible, team play of the women's golf association will continue on the country club course Friday afternoon.

Mrs. Ralph Rix's team is leading the team captained by Mrs. E. V. Spence by a wide margin. Friday's matches will be the third week of play.

Regulars Bow To "B" Squad

Play New Mexico Greyhounds in Portales Monday

(By HANK HART) MOORE, Jan. 23.—The Coahoma Oilers held their last practice session here last night before they leave for Portales, N. M., where they play Tiny Reed's Greyhounds of Eastern New Mexico Normal, Monday night, Jan. 27.

It will be a return affair, the Greyhounds having lost to the Big Spring quintet earlier in the season in Big Spring.

Last night's practice may cause a shake up in the starting "five" for the squad that is generally known as the "A" team was beaten badly by the reserves, but the first stringers never really bore down throughout the match, contenting themselves with shots from far back on the court.

Led by Jake Morgan and Dave Hopper, who recorded 39 points together, the "B" quintet took the lead from the opening gun and were never headed, the final score, 52-38.

Tommy Hutto, the biggest threat the Coahoma has produced thus far, was slightly injured during the first five minutes of play when he turned his ankle and was forced to leave the game, but the Coahoma lad should be in top shape by the time the Oilers leave Monday morning.

Ray Groseclose teamed with Lloyd Forester at the guard positions in the absence of Horace Wallin, regular starter in the backcourt, and used his height to a good advantage, while Forester continued to ring up field goals from midcourt with his long arch shots.

Morgan took high honors for the game with 23 points, followed by Hopper who bagged 16, while Groseclose was the "A" leader with four field goals and two free tosses.

Akey To Try New Greens

Muny Pro To Have Experimental Plot Of Seaside Bent grass

Charles Akey, Municipal golf professional, will soon begin an interesting experiment on his grass greens. Akey will have an experimental plot with seaside bent grass, which is recognized as the best putting green grass.

Akey said the seaside bent grass provides a smoother putting surface and stays green the year round. If the experiment proves successful all of the Muny greens may be changed to seaside bent grass.

The Muny course will undergo a general clean-up soon, Akey said. Cedar pruning and fairway improvements will be made. The greens are in fairly good condition for this time of year.

The table was laid with a linen drawwork cloth that Mrs. Schermerhorn had purchased in Singapore on her wedding trip. The appointments were of crystal and silver. A center bouquet of white and pink carnations on a reflector established the color motif of the afternoon. The members of the house party wore carnation corsages. The same flowers were used for the buffet, and the pink color note was repeated in the canopies.

Two Couples Complimented By Methodists

Mr. and Mrs. Alvina Lovelace opened their home Wednesday evening in honor of two young married couples, Mr. and Mrs. Felton Smith and Mr. and Mrs. John Vastine.

Inasmuch as the honorees were officers of the Methodist League, the guests were young people of that church.

The young people met at the home of Mrs. A. Schmitzer, sponsor, went in a body to the Vastine home and presented the Vastines with a beautiful table lamp. A similar gift was then given to the Smiths. An ovenware dish was presented Mrs. Schmitzer for her work with the organization.

The party, joined by the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bickley, spent the remainder of the evening at the Lovelace residence. Appropriate games devised for the occasion were played.

Refreshments were served to Messrs. and Mrs. Felton Smith, John Vastine, Jack Haines, C. A. Bickley, Mrs. Schmitzer; Misses Claree Canyon, Mildred Soap, Mary Burns, Barbara Scherrub, Nova Lynn Graves; Messrs. W. C. Gallemore, Tommy Reeves, Hiram Knox.

DESERVES IMMEDIATE ATTENTION

Time was when people waited until they believed they were near the end of their days to write a will, directing the disposition of their property. The result was that in many cases the final distribution was at variance with the real desires of the testator.

More and more people are beginning to realize that the making of a will while one is in full possession of his bodily and mental powers is wise, and it is to lead the thoughts of people along this line, and if possible stir them to action.

It is much better for a man to employ a competent lawyer to draw his will than it is for his family or other heirs to have to pay lawyers and courts costs in defending their right to property. And it is also better for the will to designate a corporate institution as executor rather than to put the responsibility on a widow.

There are men and women who have no families, or who having families are possessed of enough property to justify a desire to give some portion to a worthy cause or institution.

Making a will today is one of the duties incumbent on every citizen who has even a small share of this world's goods. It is the sensible and certain way to insure the orderly disposition of an estate and is a proper precaution against possible wasting of what has been accumulated in a lifetime.

Man About Manhattan

By George Tucker

NEW YORK—True, they never actually got around to tritulating another's features, but the recent impasse between Ely Culbertson, contract bridge authority, and Mike Jacobs, mentor of prize-fighters, went a long way towards invigorating a scene that has languished too long for want of an old fashioned pier brawl.

We like fights in New York. The prospects of personal encounter make us whiney and tremble like high-strung colts. And I submit that for page-one publicity nothing is more potent than the spectacle of one celebrity whaling the hide off another in public.

Sinclair Lewis came in for a lot of attention when he won the Nobel award for literature, but those shavings were nothing to the layouts given him when he accused another writer of plagiarism—and got slapped. Jim Tully and George Raft are others who emerged from fistfights to find their names in the inky splendor of headlines.

In time his fine but dissenting voice was borne to Mr. Jacobs, who forthwith summoned his ace ghost-writer and authored this masterpiece of sarcastic repartee:

"As one promoter to another, I am amused at your holy horror over the prospect of commercializing a sport which I am informed, has given you a couple of million dollars."

Mr. Jacobs went on to assure Mr. Culbertson that the matches would go on. He closed with the cordial suggestion that Ely drop in "anytime" and enjoy himself.

Nothing came next. The promise of assault and battery which so whetted our appetites went no further than the parchment of personal notes. They contented themselves with oratorical barbs of verbs and adjectives.

Katharine Cornell's promised revival of George Bernard Shaw's "Saint Joan" recalls that most hilarious of Shaw legends.

Wandering through Europe one day, the playwright came upon a little girl who was playing on the shore of the famous Volga river. They talked for some time, Shaw taking delight in chatting with so pert and animate a child. When, finally, it grew dusk and time to go, Shaw said to her:

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND. By OWEN FEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—The threatening shadow of the U. S. supreme court is causing wheels to turn in far corners.

A few weeks ago, Old Guard craft-union leaders of the A. F. of L. were planning an uncompromising fight against insurgent industrial unionists.

With the prospect almost certain that the supreme court will junk the Wagner labor disputes act and other labor measures, the A. F. of L. moguls are looking for no family fights.

President Bill Green has quietly opened negotiations with John L. Lewis, mine chief and leader of the insurgent, looking to a leveling of the rift that has threatened to split the A. F. of L. wide open.

NOTE: The craft leaders have tired for 10 years to unionize these fields, have got nowhere.

Colleagues who accompanied Jack Garner to the Far East are telling the following story on the vice president of the United States.

In Shanghai the congressional party was invited to a banquet by the leading Chinese business man, a British subject who had been knighted by King George.

As ranking guests he and Mrs. Garner sat at the table of their host, who was accompanied by his No. 1 wife. During the course of the dinner Jack complimented his hostess on her beautiful home.

Patronage Raid: An attempted patronage raid on the bituminous coal commission's legal division has added new fuel to the hot strife raging behind the scenes within this organization.

Since the agency has no funds of its own—due to defeat of the deficiency appropriation bill by the late Huey P. Long—"borrowed" lawyers from the NRA.

John S. McGraw is a member of congress, a Los Angeles newspaper columnist, a poet and a sponsor of the Townsend bill. Recently, when he had his overcoat stolen from the house lobby, this is how he endeavored to secure its return.

"Mr. Speaker," he informed the house of representatives, "I understand the calendar today calls for appropriations. It is most appropriate that I should wear a $100 overcoat. My intuition was right, for now it is gone."

of the man who was awakened by his wife in the middle of the night with the announcement: 'John, there is a robber in the house.' He yawned, turned over and said: 'No, not in the house, maybe in the den.'

Despite the supreme court's non-handling of new deal acts, Chairman John G. Winant of the social security board, a New Hampshire republican, insists that his agency is not in danger.

Ballet To Be At Abilene

Monte Carlo Troupe Will Appear At University February 5

ABILENE, Jan. 23.—Last season, American audiences paid nearly one million dollars to witness the renaissance of Russian ballet provided by Col. W. de Basil's Monte Carlo troupe which is scheduled to return to Abilene on Feb. 5, 1936, at Hardin-Simmons university auditorium.

This total, declares S. Hurok, American manager of the company, establishes a record. No traveling organization within his memory—and his memory goes back more than twenty-five years—has attracted such a sum to the combined box-offices of the nation while dispensing a high form of cultural entertainment.

Considering the era, the growing difficulties of the entertainment industry, notably the theater, and the relatively esoteric nature of the ballet as compared to more popular theatrical forms, the record is all the more amazing.

Included in the collection is a large octopus, "Abram" Lincoln relics, World War curios, postage stamps, marine display, photographic copy of the Declaration of Independence, letters from five early presidents, a copy of the smallest book ever printed in the U. S., Jivaro Indian shrunken head, dressed man from Mexico, rare patent models, displays from China, Japan, Australia, Africa, Arabia, Palestine, Philippine Islands and Haiti.

It will be parked on the east side of the courthouse all day Tuesday. Children of all rural schools will be brought here to inspect the car and its contents.

NEVER MIND THE LADY by David Garth

Chapter 31 INSPECTION The old minister removed his pince-nez and rubbed them with his handkerchief, a favorite gesture of his when he was deeply thoughtful and apprehensive.

The next morning, in company with an elderly bank official, she drove up the avenue of locust trees and unlocked the great front door. It took actual nerve for her to enter this house.

"I don't know what I thought," she said slowly. "But what makes you think that?"

"You're not coaxing him—you're making him see it is worth while to win a battle even as you see it is worth while to win a battle of your own."

"I'll forgive you, Doctor Ross," she laughed, "but don't you dust me off again. Unless," and her smile was lovely, "you enjoy it."

She had luncheon with the Doctor, and then left to "prowl around," as she expressed it, and he directed her to several places he thought she might find interesting.

The statue of Captain Rhodes Willett arrested her attention and she read the inscription with deep interest. Captain Willett had dashed into a fight too at the first whistle; that characteristic seemed a keystone of the Willett family.

And that night, Allaire West waited patiently while she went through a living room bereft of light of day by reason of boarded windows; but she saw that the white wainscoted walls of the room had been built to catch the sun.

Students Call On County Officials

High school students of Highway school inspected the courthouse offices Wednesday to learn first hand the functions of county government.

After hearing explanations from the various officials and assistants as to how the offices were conducted, the students caught a glimpse of court procedure by sitting in on a trial for a portion of the afternoon. They were in charge of H. E. Rallsback, principal of the school.

Schools Go Into New Semester

With final examinations behind and a half month of school work ahead, high school students Thursday were settling down to the regular routine of classes.

Finals for the first semester were finished Monday and report cards issued Tuesday. Wednesday the inevitable confusion growing out of registration was diminished when a majority of students found it necessary to change schedules.

Hoover Puts Wisecracks In Speeches

Has Dropped Statistics With New Manner Of Making Addresses

By BYRON PRICE
 (Chief of AP Bureau, Washington)

The "new Hoover," so much talked of recently, furnished friend and foe with still greater surprises in his farm address at Lincoln, Neb.

He departed so widely from the moods and mannerisms of the "old Hoover" that few could have guessed it was the former president speaking, unless they knew beforehand. If he had shown evidence of change before, he accomplished on this occasion the impression of a complete transformation.

Philosophic and unworried in general demeanor, he packed wisecracks into simple, pungent sentences. There were no wearisome statistics. Absent entirely were those once-familiar passages which rumbled on and on forever in not vein so sober that it often amounted almost to sorrow.

He discussed the farm problem without emotional outbursts about the days when he himself was a poor farm boy. He spoke only incidentally and lightly in defense of what he did when president. He referred to President Roosevelt directly by name. When he suggested a farm subsidy he called it that without circumlocution.

NOTICE!

We will pay $10.00 reward for address of Harry Murphy, who formerly resided in Wink, Texas, or information that will lead to the whereabouts of a 1935 Standard Chevrolet Coupe, motor No. M2486039, Serial No. 5EAB8-23505. Answer to: 715 First National Bank, El Paso, Texas.

It is hard for those who knew the weary, heady-earless Hoover of the White House to reconcile their memories with what now is presented to their sight and hearing.

Writes Own Speeches

None can doubt any longer that something important has happened to Mr. Hoover.

Not, perhaps, to his underlying conceptions of government, for his political opponents still advance the point that his farm proposals are nebulous, lacking in originality and quite ineffective.

But to the man himself, to his attitude toward life and his whole mental outlook. His public appearances certainly are today almost everything they were not four years ago.

Acquaintances who knew him best in Washington take little stock in the story that all this is the work of a clever press agent, who also is a good speech-writer. Undoubtedly Mr. Hoover has had advice, but the one thing on which he always has prided himself is that he writes his own speeches.

In the White House he wrote and rewrote, laboriously recasting paragraphs, returning the proofs to the printer a half dozen times for revision. The best available information is that he still does not only that but more.

He Loves It

For the first time in his life he is in a position to devote virtually all of his time to the preparation and delivery of speeches; and he loves it. That he is having a good time at it is obvious from the product.

In the process some of the "old Hoover" which the public little knew is coming out to grace the public utterances of the "new Hoover."

For in private conversation Mr. Hoover always was a delightful companion. It was only before an audience or a large group in private that he put on the mask of ponderous reserve. Now the mask has been put away.

For the first time in his active contact with public affairs, too, he is on the offensive politically. For 15 years, in the administrations of Wilson, Harding, Coolidge and his own, he was enveloped with the dignity of office, which always weighed heavier on him than on most men. Now he is on the outside, looking in.

That means a great deal to a man like Hoover. Whether he is running for president or not, he manifestly feels a far greater independence about it. There was something vastly impressive in his statement at Lincoln:

Insurance

ticular field in which life insurance serves an especially important part. I refer to the payment of Federal and State estate and inheritance taxes. As is commonly known, these taxes become due and payable almost immediately upon the death of the man whose estate is to be administered. Very few estates have the cash on hand necessary to take care of these expenses. Oftentimes, the sad result is that gilt edge securities, such as government bonds, are sold to pay these obligations; naturally, the executor sell these assets rather than sell other properties, on which they do not recover their former value, the heirs are left with skimmed milk because the tax laws have been satisfied by selling the cream. Here again life insurance, in the proper amount, which can be easily approximated beforehand creates an immediate cash estate at death to pay off these legal obligations and conserve the property. Thus, the real assets of the estate are kept to serve the purpose for which the deceased intended them.

An Example

Let me give you an example to illustrate this connection between wills and life insurance trust agreements from still another an-

Graduation Exercises Held For Seventh Graders At Auditorium

Mid-term graduation exercises for the seventh grade students held Tuesday evening at the Municipal auditorium were marked by flashes of enlightening humor, excellent drillwork and a large audience.

On the platform sat the six highest ranking students, those on the program and Principal George Gentry representing the faculty. Superintendent W. C. Blankenship, trustee W. R. Purser, and the speaker of the evening, Forrest Waldrop, minister of the Church of Christ, were also on the platform.

The highest ranking student among the graduates was Billy Mae Fahrnkamp. Others were Helen Hurt, Kenneth Hall, Helen Madison, Mary Ellen Farrar and Warren Woodward.

The students marched in to the playing of a professional march by a seventh grader, Mary Evelyn Lawrence. Miss Rita Debenport and Elouise Haley were teacher-maestros.

Warren Woodward gave a humorous class address. Helen Hurt played a piano solo. A quartet composed of Kenneth Hall, Justin Danner, Billy Hugh Fletcher and Joe Robert Myers, accompanied by Miss Debenport at the piano, sang a parody on "Nobody Knows the Trouble We've Had."

Mr. Waldrop delivered the address after which the diplomas were presented to 48 students.

gle. In 1928, a former polleyholder, because he had been successful in building up a considerable fortune, let his life insurance lapse against the judgment of most of his financial advisers. This gentleman left a well-drawn will, dividing his property proportionately to protect his wife, his children and his aged mother. His intentions were of the best. In 1928 when he died, the condition of his estate was such that it produced enough income to carry out all his wishes.

In 1929, as we too well remember, the depression struck. By 1931 the estate had not only dwindled miserably but the income was cut down 50 to 80 per cent. His heirs were forced to descend to a much lower standard of living. Had this man maintained his life insurance and left it in a separate trust designating life time income in the proper amounts to each of his loved ones, there would have been no such tragic results. Everyone knows that there has been no shrinkage in life insurance estates left in this manner.

To give another example: A man may have a prosperous business. He may desire to have his family retain the business after his death, to derive the income and to perpetuate it so that his children, when they are grown up, can stop it and continue the business. I know such a man. As is often the case, he is the all-important cog which makes his business a success from year to year. He is surely able to will that business to his family but there is no assurance that it will continue to be profitable without him at the helm. Such businesses which depend upon the genius and talents of one man go down hill very rapidly when that man dies. But this particular gentleman of whom I am speaking has had the foresight to value his life in dollars through life insurance in the proper amount so that if he should be called away, his heirs would have ample income to employ the right man, if necessary, to direct the business, to preserve it and to keep it successful until such time as his children are grown.

The Professional Man

A similar situation is that of the professional man—the lawyer, the doctor, the dentist, the engineer, the writer. The professional man may build up a large estate, however, it is known that the income from the average professional man's business is produced through his personal talent and efforts, this represents the greater value of his business.

A professional man's business producing an annual income of $10,000 should certainly be valued at no less than $100,000. If he were in a commercial business, for instance, that would be a perfectly correct statement, but what we must not overlook is that when a professional man dies his business dies, too; unless he has the foresight to value his business in life insurance so that instead of inheriting the business, his heirs will inherit its equivalent value.

Certainly, these few instances should amply illustrate the value of life insurance in the creation and perpetuation of an estate.

When it failed to head again within two months, operators made ready to deepen. On the eve of the drilling date, the well came in with an unexpected head of 15 and caused fuel tanks to catch fire before it could be shut in.
