Editor's Note: For the benefit of our many readers in other areas of West Texas who saw the following column in last week's paper, we are reprinting it for our Amarillo readers. Last week's issue of the Times was lost by the Amarillo Post Office and did not get sold to the many readers in that city. It is our sincere hope that this issue of the paper will be delivered, on time, to our agent, and that the readers there can learn of the events in their city, and other West Texas towns.

Amarillo-I would like to thank my many, many friends who were so nice to me and my family during my illness and while I was in the hospital. Thanks to God I am out, and feeling much better. I hope you did not miss your paper, my wife and daughter were very nice in trying to put the paper out but they did not know the address of a lot of you, and especially some of my newer customers. I assure you that in the future you will get your paper.

Neighbors, should I remind you that school has started, and that the streets are full of everyone's children, yours and mine—and that you should watch your speed in and near a school zone, and that the child's life you take could well be that of your own child. Did you get the message? Drive carefully.

According to witnesses, the assailant drove up to the motel in a panel truck, pointed a shotgun at Hailey and fired one shot, just as Hailey ducked around the side of the building.

Black Brotherhood Is Not for Real Here

In looking at the situation in the local black community, and being honest with ourselves, the "Black Brotherhood" bag is a myth. We are often seen giving the elaborate "Soul Shake," the hip greeting, the raised clenched fist and other rituals which are no more than meaningless gestures designed to make it appear to be part of the "scene". And many times, it is a bleak scene indeed that the tired old eyes of the "Times" surveys daily.

Let's be honest with ourselves again, there are blacks in our community who are truly dedicated and committed to the ethnic thrust, it is also true that there are many who are only self-centered, irresponsible, translucent shams, drifting like so much flotsam upon the waters of black middle-classism. The ivory tower stance of this segment of our community is a detriment to the progress of us all !!!

The American black man stands at the threshold of advancement and dignity, but he must stand united for the common cause and good of us all. It is this time in history which can determine the success or failure of future ethnic generations. We have the opportunity to pool our resources, solidify our intellect, and move forward rapidly. We must be cautious of the many perils which exist—envy of one another, suspicion of each other and being afraid that somebody else black will rise above us in any given endeavor. We should all be offering strength and guidance to each other.

Brothers and sisters, we have much to overcome in this regard, and we had better get about the business of doing so. The divisive manner in which the black man exists in this country is a sad commentary on our heritage. We were once proud, strong-willed people, forthright and honest with each other; brothers in the true sense of the word. We were neither integrationists nor separatists, but a race of people joined together in one common bond of love and respect for each other and our fellow man. The time is long overdue that we should and must regain that philosophy.

There is nothing wrong with the "Soul handshake" or the various rituals that we (blacks) are accustomed to, but there has to be something done about the need for togetherness that must be shown in the black community of Lubbock.

Down To Earth

Regrettable Religious Controversy

By Jimmy R. Allen

That ours is a nation free of religious conflict is a blessing Americans often take for granted. The rioting which racks American cities has been on racial or economic lines. It does not have the clock or approval of religion. History proves that religious hate is the best kind of hate. Americans nurtured in a society in which separation of Church and State has guaranteed freedom of religious response have difficulty understanding a country in which men hate and destroy in the name of religion.

The election this week of Ian Paisley, symbol of militant Protestantism, to the Parliament of North Ireland calls that troubled country to the attention of the world. Just as was the case with his militant Roman Catholic counterpart, Bernadette Devlin, M.P., Paisley's election is in stark contrast to jail sentence for inciting followers to action. Both Paisley and Devlin are products, rather than producers, of North Ireland's hate filled sectarian strife. This atmosphere is shaped by many factors. One is the fact that every economic and political conflict takes on the intensity of religious fervor. There is a battle of establishment church groups grasping for additional political and economic support.

I walked through rioting crowds at Belfast last August seeking reasons for the hate-distorted faces. I stood in the bright Sunday afternoon sun and listened as Paisley extorted the predominantly Protestant crowds to go home. But it was too late. Their anger and frustration were too high. They had followed him out of lethargy into action and would not stop at non-violence. He had become a firebrand in a combustible situation and could not halt the conflagration. We were a block away from the center of the battlefield, a large apartment complex, ironically named Unity Walk.

I talked to a protestant woman who had been struck by a hammer thrown from the apartment house by a Catholic person. I talked also to the Roman Catholic leader, Dr. Thomas Gogarty, who lamented the fact that rioting robbed men of reason. He sought simply the economic justice that was moving through the mine field of religious passions.

Several facts are clear. The Scotch-Irish Protestants settled in Ulster generations ago as a means of controlling the country. Like the Afrikaners of South Africa they had struggled for life; now they struggled to perpetuate privilege. Agitation for the overthrow of the Ulster government in order to unite with Ireland is obvious. There is a political revolution going on in North Ireland.

The tragic dimension is that religion is the banner of the battle. This is not a shrewd, calculating move on the parts of people like Paisley. They readily identify with their political causes, but the spill-over of religious passion also is present.

I was told by a thoughtful observer that one of the major contributing factors to the conflict is the totally separate educational system in North Ireland. Catholic and Protestant children never have occasion to know each other. They even compete in different styles of athletic events. The ultimate impact of historical divisions nurtured by a lifelong separation means that they encounter each other only in confrontations.

The free public school has provided a great common ground in our nation. The Irish know nothing of this.

I came away convinced that separation of church and state is wise and essential. I also became convinced that any encroachment on the public school system by religious bodies should be strongly resisted. The ultimate destruction of a public school system in our nation would change the basic nature of our communities.

Religious conscious should be free. If it is kept so, both religion and the state are healthy. Hate can be rejected and unity can be created.

Austin, Texas—Just when highway construction in the state is at an all-time high, the Texas Highway Commission has cancelled the regular December lettings of highway contracts.

Commission blames the contract moratorium on the recent holdback of part of Texas' apportionment from the Federal Highway Trust Fund. Action came at a time when, because of favorable weather, highway construction was at its highest. For the past two months, pay-out for construction completed by Texas Contractors has set new records in dollar volume.

Contractors were paid $42.6 million in July for work completed in June and $46.3 million in Federal Aid Highway Act of 1968, as approved by Congress, provides that states should receive $5.4 billion for the 1971 fiscal year from the Highway Trust Fund. Amount allocated, however, was reduced by the Administration,

Highway Commissioner Chairman Dewitt Greer said, to $4.6 billion nationally and resulted in a reduction of the Texas share from $275 million to $210 million—$65 million less than was expected.

Proceeds in the Federal Highway Trust Fund are derived from special taxes levied on motor vehicle users. Fund was set up in 1956 to provide a stable source of revenue for the construction of National System of Interstate and Defense Highways.

Cancellation of the December bid letting is the first since World War II, Greer said. The Commission Chairman said the reduction has come because the condition of the finances of the Federal Government has required that it borrow money from the Federal Highway Trust Fund for government operation even though the trust fund was established for the specific purpose of building the highway system from highway user revenues.

Greer said the "motor vehicle users of this country, who pay these dedicated taxes, have every right to expect that the Federal Government return to the highway system these revenues, in accordance with agreements made 14 years ago."

Your 'Right To Know' Didn't Come Easily In This Country

By George Speers, New England Press Association
Chairman, Department of Journalism, Northeastern University
(First of a series)

Editor's Note: This is a four part series reviewing the history of "the public's right to know"—"freedom of information" and "freedom of the press" in the United States. Current problems and future problems of the press are reviewed in the final articles.

Are we about to complete a cycle in this country? Three hundred years ago all printed matter in this country was regulated and licensed.

At the beginning of the 70's—a decade in which we can celebrate 200 years of freedom of information and freedom of the press—we read some amazing headlines.

Here are some:
"All reporters should be licensed."
"Notes and files of newsmen are subpoenaed."
"ABA sets controls on crime news information."
"Vice President Agnew says 'news media disseminates drivel'."

Because of these attacks on the public's "right to know"—this series of stories is designed to remind both readers and journalists that the First Amendment to the United States Constitution didn't "come easily" in this country.

Boston, Mass. (NNW)—Newspaper journalism began in this country just 280 years ago.

But there were no celebrations, speeches, proclamations, or any special occasions to mark the auspicious event.

As a matter of fact when Publick Occurrences Both Foreign and Domestick, the nation's first newspaper, "hit the streets" in the town of Boston on the morning of September 25, 1690, there was considerable apprehension and a feeling of foreboding.

To be sure, the little four-page newspaper was eagerly accepted by the local residents. As a matter of fact, every copy was snatched up. The demand far exceeded the supply.

And the little paper carried a wide variety of news stories never before produced in the Colonies. There were stories about a smallpox epidemic in Boston, a kidnapping of two children by Indians, a suicide by a depressed old man, who recently lost his wife, a big fire that destroyed 20 homes, a report of the labor shortage and the difficulty of harvesting the crops, an account of skirmishes among the French, Indians, and English troops, and even a story that shocked some concerning the amours of King XIV of France.

There was no doubt about it, editor Benjamin Harris had published an exciting little paper.

But the trouble was he had committed a crime by publishing his newspaper. And it was a serious crime at that. It could mean a jail sentence.

The law of that time, as Ben Harris knew very well, was that a license must be obtained before any printing was done, and most certainly if the printing contained public information or information about governmental activities.

But Harris took a long chance and waited. He did not have to wait very long.

He was summoned before the Colonial Governor and Council to explain why he had violated the Regulation of Printing and Licensing Act of 1662. Why, he was asked, didn't he first obtain a license before putting out the newspaper as required under the Act?

Harris, of course, really couldn't answer the question. He knew very well, however, that a license meant prior approval by the government of the contents and that meant a dull, uninteresting, not-too-informative publication. That is not what Harris had in mind.

The fact that Harris put out an interesting newspaper that was extremely popular, probably saved him from a jail sentence. The law was violated, of course, but even the stern Colonial authorities were loath to press too far against the new popularity of editor Harris.

Harris was not jailed. He was prevented from ever publishing again in the American Colonies. His one issue of Publick Occurrences was all that the Governor and Council would tolerate.

In the proclamation issued by the Governor and Council, the official position about publishing newspapers without a license was made very clear in the following words:

"The Governor and Council having had the perusal of the said pamphlet, and finding that therein is contained reflections of a very high nature: As also sundry doubtful and uncertain reports, do hereby manifest and declare their high resentment and disallowance of said pamphlet, and order that the same be suppressed and called in; strictly forbidding any person or persons for the future to set forth anything in print without License first obtained from those that are or shall be appointed by the Government to grant the same".

The point was made and the lesson was learned about publishing newspapers without permission.

It took 14 years before someone else was able to muster enough courage to try again. In 1704, Boston Postmaster John Campbell did try again, but he first made sure he had a license to publish. He published his safe but dull newspaper "by Authority" for the next 20 years.

Another Bostonian in August of 1721 decided to publish a newspaper without a license. He tried it and he got away with it despite the Regulation of Printing and Licensing Act still very much "on the books".

His name was James Franklin, older brother of Benjamin Franklin.

Brother James Franklin was most unlike younger brother Ben in temperament and personality. Ben had all the qualities necessary to get along very well with people. Throughout his life he was considered diplomatic and personable. James was an opposite.

One thing James Franklin did possess, however, was a talent to publish a very interesting and readable newspaper. Right from the beginning his unlicensed newspaper, The New England Courant, "caught on". Everyone in Boston seemed to read it. The reputation of the newspaper spread throughout the colonies.

Why was he allowed to print without a license? For one thing, the authorities were quick to recognize that the New England Courant was extremely popular. And who enjoys opposing popularity?

For another thing the Courant eschewed government news. Instead, the Courant concentrated, in the beginning at least, on items about people, witty and entertaining essays, poems, letters, and criticisms of the established church.

Since the church was the one power block that the Governor and Council feared, the governmental authorities were happy to have Franklin oppose the church as much as possible. The longer this went on, the more popular and powerful the New England Courant became.

It wasn't until James Franklin decided to criticize governmental authorities (for laxity of law enforcement) did the Governor begin to object to Franklin's unlicensed newspaper. By now it was too late to invoke the Licensing Act. The authorities had to object on other grounds. The charge: sedition.

Franklin was jailed for a month for the crime of sedition (criticizing the law enforcement policies of the Governor) but the Courant survived.

The New England Courant survived for 5½ years and James was again tried for sedition. The punishment the second time prevented Franklin from owning or publishing the newspaper unless it first be censored by the authorities. Since he refused to do this he was not allowed to keep the newspaper.

His way out of the dilemma was to put the newspaper in brother Ben's name, which, of course, was perfectly legal.

As a fighting force The New England Courant was now finished. Benjamin Franklin soon left for Philadelphia to start a new career and James went to Rhode Island.

But James Franklin and the Courant had won the "war".

Licensing of the press in the Colonies as a viable, workable concept was done. No longer could authorities insist on a license or permit to publish or print under the Regulation of Printing and Licensing Act.

The shackle that had controlled the press since Gutenberg's time in the mid 1400's was finally broken, thanks to James Franklin.

Lubbock Woman's Sister Burned

Mrs. J. L. Walker, wife of Rev. J. L. Walker, received a message here this week that her sister, Mrs. Ester Miller, was burned in a fire early Saturday morning in Charlotte, North Carolina.

Melvin, son of Rev. and Mrs. Walker, discovered the fire and summoned help. Mrs. Miller was carried to safety by firemen.

The house, owned by the Walkers, was partially destroyed and completely smoked and water damaged.

The mother of Mrs. Walker is under sedation from shock after hearing of the fire. Mrs. Walker also has a brother-in-law who is in intensive care at Charlotte.

Mrs. Miller was treated at a local hospital and released.

Alderson Junior High News
By Durrell Dew

After a summer of fun, Alderson Junior High School students were welcomed back to school last week at orientation assemblies for both seventh and eighth grade students. Our student council officers; Dwight Delgado, president; Joe Ross, vice-president; Sharon Hyder, secretary; and Shirley Dailey, treasurer, participated in these assemblies. Our new principal, Mr. Walter Rinehart, gave a welcoming speech. Mr. Gerome Byrd, our new assistant principal and boys' counselor, explained the school policy on dress and behavior. Mrs. Ruth Alford, girls' counselor, discussed the school regulations which concern girls. Mrs. Jeanette Green, cheerleader sponsor, introduced the 1970-71 cheerleaders. They are JoAnn McDaniel, head cheerleader, Kathy Williams, Cathy White, Marge Raven and Esther Brisen. After their introduction, these girls led the school in four yells.

About forty-three students attended the first Busy Bee Club meeting last week. The Busy Bees, a spirit booster group, plan to do skits at our pep rallies and make posters in an effort to boost the Hornets to victory. The sponsors are Mrs. Jeanette Green, Miss Laura Childress, and Mrs. Joyce Keller. Mr. Charles Brunjes is sponsor for the boys.

The eighth grade has 65 boys out for football, but head football coach, G. Q. Nell, says, "We are stronger in number than we are in football players. We have some boys who can make football players, but we are not a football team yet." The Hornets have been troubled by injuries to both the offensive and defensive teams, but they should be ready to play for our game with Mackenzie today. Both coaches and players feel this game will answer a number of questions about the Hornet's strength. Particularly looking forward to the game this afternoon are newly elected team captains, Albert Limon, Gary Bouldin, and Lemuel Judie.

The Hornets have three new coaches. Coach Ronnie Jones is assistant eighth grade football coach and head basketball coach. Coach David Baker will be the assistant seventh grade football coach and will work with the off season program and track. Coach Tom Roach will handle all the tennis program. Returning this year as head seventh grade football coach is Kenneth Olson.

There is a new mathematics course for seventh graders this year. It is called Stretchers and Shrinkers. Mrs. Mary Rowlette, a seventh grade math teacher, attended the University of Illinois for four weeks in order to qualify to teach the course. This course is designed to create interest and is the only one in all the Lubbock schools.

Dunbar Panther Report

By Harold Gentry

The Dunbar Panthers are in final preparations for their game against South Oak Cliff of Dallas here Saturday night.

The Panthers will operate a backfield this year based on quickness and power. Their running game is centered around Gentry and Ward, while their passing attack will depend on Davis and Toines. "Super Nat" George Thomas, a 140-pound senior is also expected to turn in a good season again this year.

"We ask all high school art classes to join us for L.E.A.R.N. Educational Talent Search Week declared by Mayor Grandberry," DeLeon stated in an interview this week. "The Talent Search Week will be the week of September 21 through 27th," he added.

The week will be packed with daily evening activities sponsored by various civic and service organizations. The displays will be used at the various centers of activities. The topping will come with a Junior and Senior Conference at Estacado High School, Saturday, September 26, kicked off by a social wiener-roast Friday evening at Mackenzie Park for Juniors and Seniors and their parents.

Sunday, September 27, will be the day for a grand open house at the L.E.A.R.N. office, 1306 1/2 Broadway.

MY VIEWS

By Eddie P. Richardson

"Lets get ourselves together and make Lubbock a better place for everyone by working for a better town." A very good idea, but first we must get ourselves together before we try to work with other groups of people.

What we have to do now is establish some faith and hope for the black community of Lubbock. There are good people here, but very poor leadership. We need leaders that are going to think of the people—not of themselves, their popularity and pocketbooks. Some of our present leaders are fooling the community and fattening their pockets at poor, underprivileged people's expense.

I am a firm believer in black self-determination, unity and self-help. It can be done, as the Southern Consumers Co-op Bakeries in Louisiana have shown. When they first formed, women baked fruit cakes out of their own home kitchens, and now they have complete bakery shops throughout Louisiana.

Still another example of black determination and self-help is Father McKnight's Louisiana Evangeline Farmer's Co-op. The Catholic priest organized this group around the city of Sunset, Louisiana, did so because the farmers, mostly black, were getting 24¢ per basket for yams. Father McKnight told the farmers not to sell for 25¢, that he would give them 25¢ per basket if they would sit on them, burn them or just bury the yams. The co-op started with this idea, and now the yam farmers in the area are getting as much as four times more per basket for yams.

I would like to see some of our religious leaders take that type of leadership here, dig down into some of that anniversary money, help the poor people that give it to them, and emerge as true leaders here.

Closing thought: "True leaders' deeds and actions speak so loud you can't hear a word they say."

Pondering Thoughts
The Family Background

A home is more than a house where one eats and sleeps. Home is a place where my father was proud to support and my mother was glad to keep. My friends were happy to visit it.

A place of companionship for the family and friends who are always welcome. Life is old and well established. It can always be improved. A home is an inevitable center of spiritual and social structure with God, whose blue print is the Bible and foundation is love, undergirded with prayer by the King of Peace who finds peace in His home. Thank God. Amen.

The Sunday school got off to a late start due to inclement weather. Superintendent Morris taught the lesson and reviewed it quickly due to the lateness of the hour.

The 11 a.m. services began with the deacons in charge of the devotion and singing was by the congregation. Songs of inspiration were conducted by the choir with Mrs. Bell at the piano.

After devotion the message was brought by Pastor R. J. Dixon, entitled, "The Resurrection of Christ Brought Into Court". Several witnesses were put on the stand to testify of the Resurrection; Mary Magdolene, Simon Peter, Cleophas and others. The picture was painted so beautifully and was enjoyed by all.

At 3:00 the church family worshipped with the Bethel A.M.E. Church.

In the evening services the pastor spoke briefly from the theme, "In Times Like These". His text was found in Amos 3:5.
