Educators Assume New Administrative Posts

Select Panel Discusses Future of Downtown Lubbock Area Thursday

A panel, composed of members of the academic and business communities, discussed the future of downtown Lubbock last Thursday evening at the First National - Pioneer Building. The effort was sponsored by five students of a senior management class at Texas Tech University in the College of Business Administration.

Representing the business community was Joe B. Phillips, local businessman, real estate broker (commercial) and concerned citizens about the re-development of downtown Lubbock, spoke to the group about the past, present and future of downtown Lubbock. He discussed a plan in which a local committee is working on to present to the city council in the near future.

Dr. Jim Burley, professor of marketing at Texas Tech University, College of Business Administration, spoke to the group about the city of Lubbock becoming a trading center, including the many opportunities Lubbock would have.

Dudley Thompson, professor of architecture and well known architect in Lubbock, related ideas which would give downtown Lubbock a new image. "Downtown Lubbock needs a new image," he told the group.

T.J. Patterson, editor of the West Texas Times, served as moderator of the panel. He told the group: "Now that we've been discussing all these good ideas, why not enlighten people from all communities to get involved with the efforts of developing downtown Lubbock."

"No matter what type of plans we come up with to re-develop downtown Lubbock, unless we remove some of those negative tangible barriers which separates downtown from east Lubbock, we'll still be in the same situation", he said.

In addition, however this publication will include the growing number of Blacks, who have distinguished themselves in business, government, religion, education, athletics, journalism, entertainment and community services. Virtually every major organization and institution in the nation has cooperated with great enthusiasm and effort to make Who's Who Among Black Americans the ultimate reference tool concerning Black achievement. We look forward to publishing your biography", the message concluded.

"Naturally, I am humbly grateful and deeply flattered by this distinct honor from a great American, Mr. Matney of ABC Television and author-writer. I pray that in some small way, I prove a worthy subject", Tieucl said.

The tea meant more than just a lovely affair to her, because she has been shut in for several months.

To make the event especially nice, many of her friends came to say happy birthday, and among those friends were: Mr. and Mrs. Carol Johnson, Mrs. D.C. Fair Sr., Mrs. James Craven, Mrs. B. Swisher, Mrs. Annie Sanders, Mrs. Carrie Mims, Mrs. M.E. Carroll. And the greatest of all her surprises as her ill son, Mr. John Henry Howard Sr., was able to be with her on her day, and have dinner with her also.

Sports of The Times

by Joe Kelly

The entire Southwest Conference football race comes down to one game, Friday, when Texas and A&M clash in Austin. The other games mean little or nothing. The Cotton Bowl is decided in this battle.

And what a battle it should be! I wish I could see it, but I'll be working. Many have said for weeks that Texas would win, basing it on tradition and the failure of the Aggies to win at Austin. And those people could well be right.

It should be a titanic struggle. Over the long run, the Aggies have had the better team this year. They beat Tech and Baylor handily, their two main challengers. They were upset by SMU, which tarnishes the record slightly.

Texas was wiped out by Tech, rebounded to become, at times, the awesome power the Horns were expected to be. Each has a potent offense with many good, strong backs.

Neither team is overpowering when it comes to passing and both rely on ground power. Marty Akins, though, probably has the edge if the Horns put the ball up—and I think that they will.

Which offensive line is better? I think I would give the edge to Texas, thanks to a little more quickness. Defensively, you have to be impressed with Aggie size and strength. I'd say that the victory would go to the team that establishes its running game first.

Watching with fingers crossed will be Baylor, which obviously will root for UT. If the Horns win, Baylor goes to the Cotton Bowl and could, by beating Rice, win the title outright.

An Aggie victory, of course, would end Baylor's hopes and send A&M to the Dallas Classic.

Although beaten soundly by A&M, the Bears are the sentimental favorite, if for no other reason than it has been 50 years since they won the title—and they've never played in the Cotton Bowl.

Fifty years! Tech has been competing for only 15 years and never has won a conference title. I hope 35 years hence people aren't making Tech the sentimental favorite because it hasn't won the title in half a century.

I dunno, could be. Since Tech has competed, Texas has won the crown eight times; Arkansas three times; SMU and A&M once; and Texas and Arkansas tied once.

In that 15 year span the Raiders have finished second three times and tied for second once. They finished third once and tied for third once. They finished fourth once and tied for fourth once. This year they finished sixth for the second time and three times have tied for sixth.

Tech also finished seventh once and in the cellar one time. Their best record was 1973, when they had a 6-1 mark. Prior to that Tech had 5-2 marks three times, 4-3 marks three times, 3-3-1 once, 2-5 four times, 1-5-1 once and 0-7 once.

So, half the time, eight of 15 to be exact, Tech has finished in the first division. But, Tech has had above .500 seasons only seven times and one even .500.

The Arkansas game made me wonder if the Raiders really had their hearts in playing, despite what they said before the game. In the first half they did everything except win.

Then it almost seemed as if the Porkers decided well, shoot, if the Raiders don't want it, let's take it. And here they came, running right up the center, with occasional end sweeps. They didn't even have to pass. It was a sickening end to a lacklustre season.

By the time this is read, there undoubtedly will be something concrete concerning the ticket situation in regards to the Peach Bowl. I had it confirmed to me Sunday that Tech had agreed to take tickets in order to assure the invitation.

Sunday morning there were all sorts of denials that anyone was responsible for guaranteeing 6,000 tickets. And yet the deal was made, that seems certain.

In view of the fact that Tech sold only 1,700 tickets last year to the Gator Bowl, against Tennessee, how many tickets will be sold for a 6-4-1 record this year?

It means that Tech will wind up buying a huge chunk of tickets—which will come off bowl expenses, never cheap. It could be an expensive bowl trip. And whoever is responsible should be given a public reprimand that will eliminate such foolishness in the future.

The Peach official here for the Arkansas game left the pressbox with a slightly green tinge. If Tennessee beats Vanderbilt, as expected, it will make it a little hard to sell tickets for 6-4 teams.

It should happen to all the bowls that jump the gun. The Peach picked a team that lost three of its final four games, and the Fiesta Bowl didn't do much better. The others were lucky, primarily because they stayed with teams that generally win. Even some of them lost, though after accepting bids.

The NCAA must take action to stop premature bowl bids and could do it easily by investigation, followed by ineligibility for wrongdoers. Only then will picking teams Nov. 1 be eliminated. It's a practice that is a farce and must be stopped.

Vacation Watch

If you happen to be out of the city for a few days on vacation or on business, one of the services offered by the Lubbock Police Department is that of watching your property while you are away. If you think you will be gone for a period of time (short or long), inform the police department about your absence.

If you are a neighbor and you notice an unknown car or person on your neighbor's property, call the Lubbock Police Department. There is a lot of "ripping off" going on in our community. In this day and time when there are shortages in many items, food especially, it pays to take some sort of precautions.

Put your property on vacation watch if you will be away for a few days. Just call the desk sergeant and say: "I will be out of the city and I would like to put my property under vacation watch."

finances and activities. Special thanks goes to Mr. and Mrs. Ulyses Kelly who worked so faithfully to make the program a success. Mrs. Kelly was responsible for the children who modeled in the program. They were Tony Collins, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lytton Collins, and Nichole Hall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Hall. Mrs. Sarah Riddle, president of the Missionary Society, modeled a long white dress. Mrs. Kelly modeled some of the latest fashions in hats. Mr. Kelly was just the "handy man" around. Additional finances since the first report brought the final report to $204.11. Mrs. Davis is grateful for reaching her goal and for all the members participations.

Wins Trip To Dallas

Vinnie Cummings and Charles Curry did their "thing" for a real good cause last week when they danced thirty-one hours for the March of Dimes. "We enjoyed dancing for a good cause", said Curry.

"We had a ten minute break every twenty-four hours", he continued. The young expert black dancers will be rewarded for their effort by going to the Cotton Bowl in Dallas on January 1st, paid for by the local March of Dimes effort.

Cummings and Curry are graduates of Dunbar High School and are employed at the Lubbock State School.
