LCHD - Tech Regents Sign Agreement Here

by Joe Robbins

The long-awaited joint meeting between Texas Tech regents and Lubbock County Hospital District board to discuss operation of the $22 million teaching hospital here should be scheduled sometime in September.

Former regents chairman Clint Formby told the West Texas Times that Sept. 30 is the target date for the joint session. During that meeting, members of the two groups will review results of a study to establish "community rates" on costs of shared services between the Health Sciences Center Hospital and Tech Medical School.

At Friday's meeting with Lubbock County Commissioners Court, the regents and LCHD board signed a document agreeing to share services between the teaching hospital and the med school at a "rate not greater than community costs."

The regents and hospital district also agreed to hire the firm of Caraway, Howard and Spikes as independent and outside consultants to aid in establishing the "community costs."

According to Formby, the regents LCHD board also have discussed possibilities of conducting a "town hall" type of meeting during which local citizens could ask questions about the medical school and teaching hospital.

Both Formby and LCHD board chairman Marshall Pennington voiced optimism about the agreement signed by their respective groups and the atmosphere of cooperation now existing in the effort to solve shared services problems.

Formby termed Friday's session a "positive step" in the negotiations. He said the agreement will lead to the dissolution of at least one problem between the regents and LCHD board—and should bring on the solution of other problems and development of a tremendous opportunity offered the university and the people of Lubbock.

According to Formby, the personal contact between the two boards in the past two or three months is an indication of the future. He said both boards need to make their staffs aware of the intention to move forward.

The personal contact between boards also has let to assurances that Lubbock's Health Sciences Center Hospital will be the primary teaching hospital for the Tech Medical School, Pennington noted. He said the agreement signed Friday relieves fears that Lubbock would suffer because of med school programs in existence in Amarillo and El Paso and one planned for the Permian Basin area.

The agreement on shared services that will be reached based on the study results will be for one year, the regents and hospital district board said. After that time, it can be renegotiated either up or down.

Formby and Pennington indicated there is still a possibility that the university will take over the teaching hospital sometime in the distant future. But before this can be accomplished, a large number of financial and legal problems will have to be solved.

CHEERING SQUAD READY—When the 1976 high school football season kicks off this week, these two Lubbock beauties will be cheering their teams on. At left is Dunbar High School's head cheerleader, Avis Patterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T.J. Patterson of 2405 Globe. Her counterpart at Estacado High School is Teresa Raven, daughter of Robert Raven Jr. of 1518 E. Amherst. The Dunbar Panthers will meet El Paso Bowie at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Lowrey Field. Last year's bi-district champs, the Estacado Matadors, face the Plainview Bulldogs at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at Lowrey Field. (Times Photo)

Briscoe Announces Highway Plan

by Mary Alice Robbins

The financially troubled Texas Department of Highways and Public Transportation could get monetary relief if Gov. Dolph Briscoe finds legislative support for his highway funding plan.

Briscoe visited Lubbock last week for a $25-a-plate fund-raising luncheon to raise money to pay off his last election campaign. At a press conference following the Thursday luncheon, Briscoe outlined his recommendations for solving the highway department's current crisis.

According to Briscoe the state's $33 billion investment in the highway program is jeopardized by an outmoded system of financing which offers no resistance to the ravages of inflation.

"The problem has become so severe that there is a mounting backlog of badly needed projects in every area of the state and a growing danger to the maintenance and safety of our existing roads," Briscoe said.

"Unless drastic changes are made," the governor noted, "Texas soon will run out of sufficient funds to match available federal funds for the state system."

Briscoe said the purchasing power of highway revenues has been cut in half by inflation since 1967, meaning that fewer miles are being built and fewer obsolete bridges are being replaced for the same highway dollar. By 1980, he said, all available revenue for the state system will be needed for maintenance, with no funds for new construction or upgrading obsolete roads and bridges.

The highway department estimates that in the next 20 years less than $2 billion in state and

Times Announces New Edition

Following 14 years of news service to the citizens of East Lubbock, the West Texas Times—Lubbock's only home-owned newspaper—will publish a second weekly edition for the benefit of West Lubbock.

The regular edition of the Times will be published weekly each Wednesday, and the new edition will come out each Friday.

After 14 successful years publishing news in the Dunbar-Estacado High Schools area, the Times will broaden its coverage in a second edition each week to include the Monterey-Coronado High School districts in West Lubbock.

Both editions will include news coverage of issues important to all areas of the city of Lubbock. Wednesday's edition will focus on events significant to the eastern section of the city, while Friday's issue will feature activities of particular interest to the western portion.

Editorially, the newspaper will maintain an objective outlook pertinent to local opinion—conservative in most fiscal policy while upholding the Lubbock citizen, his ideas, beliefs and his heritage.

The Times will maintain its 15-cent per issue newsstand cost. Subscription rates will be $10 per year (tax included) for both weekly issues or $5.25 for either the Wednesday issue or the Friday issue.

New City Manager Plans To Improve Communications

Larry Cunningham—at 32, the youngest city manager in Lubbock's history—assumes the duties of retiring City Mgr. N.B. "Mac" McCullough today following a decade of service to the city.

And one of the top priorities on the young man's list of things to do is to improve the lines of communication between local residents and city hall.

"My main interest is to try to improve communications with the citizens of Lubbock and have all the city staff adopt the idea that the citizen is always right," Cunningham told the West Texas Times.

One of the things the city really needs to do, according to Cunningham, is improve its communication with minority areas in the city. "I think there is some hesitancy among minorities to call city hall when they have problems," Cunningham said.

He plans to begin a series of seminars and courses within the next few months aimed at providing public relations training for city employees at all levels. Cunningham said he is not just instigating "a blanket be-nice-to-everybody policy," but he hopes to provide training for city personnel on how to handle a variety of situations many of them must face on their jobs daily.

City public information officer Vaughn Hendrie has been asked by Cunningham to develop a public relations course designed specially for the city's department heads.

"This is where we'll start," Cunningham noted. Further public relations training will be provided to all city hall employees as time goes on. Cunningham said he hopes to begin the training courses by the end of September.

The new city manager also hopes to begin more courses in conversational Spanish that will be mandatory for city employees. Elimination of language barriers should help work out some of the communications problems, he said.

Similar Spanish courses were offered on a voluntary basis to city

Summer's End; School

For millions of youngsters this is a time when tragedy, or joy, overtakes them. For those who love the freedom of summer, the hot weather and outdoors, and lack of study, school's reopening is stark tragedy.

For millions of others, who love school and association with friends and learning, this is a time of joy. Geniuses and successful men and women have developed from both philosophies. Winston Churchill, for example, was a poor student.

In today's world, however, successful study is more important than ever. As the world grows more technical and complex and competition becomes greater and greater, education becomes increasingly important. It is not only the best investment for the student but the best investment for adult citizens in their community.

Therefore, accept the beginning of a new school year as a challenge, if you are of school age, and make the best of it. School years, and one's youthful years in general, are not always easy years.

But they are years of opportunity and challenge—and those who move out to meet that opportunity and challenge in school today are very likely to be the leaders of tomorrow.

Ford-Dole Chances

Current polls indicate the Republican presidential ticket may, after all, have a chance against the Democratic ticket. Much may depend on televised debates between President Ford and Governor Carter.

The new reasoning is based in part on the developing underdog theme of the Ford campaign, the President's new speaking ability (demonstrated in Give-'em-Hell style at the convention), the suspect speaking ability of Jimmy Carter and an alleged Carter vagueness on the issues.

Certainly the last few weeks have proven more positive than had been anticipated by some Republicans. The party is united, with Ronald Reagan and supporters backing the Ford-Dole ticket. The President struck a sympathetic chord among voters by pitching his campaign on peace, prosperity and his two-year record as earning him a four-year term of his own.

Though Carter had led Ford two to one after the New York convention, an incumbent President has undeniable public relations advantages. And President Ford has surprised and impressed many with a new aggressive speech-making ability.

Carter remains the favorite. But a spirited race, not a foregone conclusion, is in the making. And President Ford has become a more effective campaigner than his own entourage foresaw.

Easy Credit

That it is easier to "charge it" than pay for it is a well-known fact of life and that is why so many stores operate massive credit programs and welcome charge business. But there should be some reasonable criterion for the extension of credit.

Too often the temptation to buy more than one should traps the poor or the ignorant or the gullible—and many installment purchase plans are deceiving. What the little man actually pays in many installment purchasing plans is far more than he realizes. Carrying charges and interest are sometimes excessive.

Nothing will arrest the credit trend but there should be reasonable limits to protect the public and these limits, set by law, should be enforced.

"As I See It"

by T.J. Patterson

Larry Cunningham, recently appointed city manager for the City of Lubbock, should do a splendid job. He's a hard worker and willing to pay the price to see that all citizens are treated equally. As a matter of fact, this writer told Cunningham that one day he would probably become the city manager of Lubbock.

Over the past several years, Cunningham has had an opportunity of speaking to my freshman class at Texas Tech University in the College of Business Administration. He has the youth and energy to keep Lubbock the number one city in America. Good luck, Larry Cunningham.

Speaking of new appointments, D.C. "Sonny" Fair Jr. will add much to the Lubbock Housing Authority Board as its executive director. He told this writer that he will do all in his power to upgrade the housing standards of living for the residents of Green Fair Manor, Hub Homes and Cherry Point.

A veteran in the Lubbock public schools, Fair will be an asset to the city of Lubbock. We should be proud to have a man of his stature to take on such a giant responsibility for the citizens of Lubbock.

In order for him to become successful in his endeavor, we must all get behind him so he can do his job well.

AS I SEE IT, East Lubbock residents got behind the effort to raise funds for the Meals on Wheels program last week. It's good to see our citizens come to rescue of a program which will benefit the elderly citizens of Lubbock. With team work, anything is possible.

Because of the special effort and recent grant, senior citizens of Lubbock can be assured of hot meals in time of need. As I've told many people, there are some beautiful people in our city. There are many who care about lives of others.

Mrs. Edna R. Walker has done a beautiful job in seeing that this effort is being coordinated in East Lubbock.

State Rep. R.B. "Mac" McAlister, along with Rep. Fred Head, chairman of the House Committee on Higher Education; and Rep. Don Rains of San Marcos, vice chairman, will be involved in lively debate over several issues next week in Austin which will come before Head's committee.

The committee will address several issues that have very vocal opponents and proponents. It will be the charge of the committee to consider the dissolution of the University of Texas System School of Nursing, the issue of whether Texas needs additional medical schools, finding ways of getting more doctors to rural areas and underserved urban areas, state funding of teaching hospitals, and several other less controversial matters relating to medical education and the delivery of health care in the state.

This writer hopes this committee will make sure that all Texans have access to good quality health care in the rural areas and underserved urban areas. At the same time, let's hope the controversial nature of several of the matters before the Subcommittee does not overshadow its primary goal of determining how to get more health care providers, including doctors, nurses, and technicians, to the citizens of Texas.

A parade of cars were seen this past weekend viewing the new house built for Mr. and Mrs. David Crockett at 2008 Date Avenue. It's a lovely home in a lovely part of East Lubbock.

As this writer has said in the past, we can build East Lubbock back if we really care. The Crocketts are proving that something can be done with a lot of planning and determination.

Black Empowerment

by Dr. Nathaniel Wright, Jr.
Human Rights Activist
Bi-Centennial Gift For Blacks

Black Americans need to be aroused in every community across our country about one major aspect of the prevailing criminal justice system.

This is the revealingly racist and inhumane "Bi-centennial gift to black America" by the U.S. Supreme Court in upholding the legality of the death penalty.

Some close observers of the high court have held that, in upholding the death penalty under some circumstances, the court was simply following the current public opinion trend. Several years ago, when death sentences were stayed by the U.S. Supreme Court, there was strong U.S. sentiment against the death penalty.

Now, in our "mature Bi-Centennial year" in our nation's life, most Americans have apparently grown in their moral or ethical understandings to the point of believing that human life—that is, some specific types of human life—are relatively worthless.

This is the import of the early July seven-to-two decision for the death penalty, a decision which brought dissenting Associate Justice Thurgood Marshall to open tears.

While the high court cited the need for "retribution and deference," the court failed to note several most significant facts. These include the reality that only the poor face the death penalty, with exceedingly rare exceptions. Hence, the penalty is discriminatory on its face.

Again, approximately one-half of the inhabitants of death rows throughout the country are black. Here also is discrimination on its face. So endemic is the anti-black sentiment throughout America that the news reports of reactions of prisoners to the high court's decision gave the impression—through selective interviews—that most of the inhabitants of death rows were white.

Such is the institutionalized nature of the racist culture in which we live and in which so-called measured or objective justice is set forth.

Complicating matters is the observation by a national

There is still no adult crossing guard for the kids who go to Ella Iles Elementary School. It is a must that something be done to see that there is an adult at the corner of East 23rd Street and Date Avenue.

Lovely kids attend this elementary school and they should have someone who loves them to see that they cross this area carefully. . . It can be done if we really care.

Dr. Heenan Johnson, president of the Dunbar PTA, and officers should be congratulated for a splendid "get-acquainted" PTA meeting last week. It was a good idea for parents to have an opportunity to meet their young people's teachers and administrators. This is beautiful.

Say, Dr. Johnson, what about a dinner before Christmas holidays? This should close the calendar year out in a positive way.

Evidently there are some problems concerning the maintenance of the houses in the Cherry Point addition. This particular property is under the administration of the Housing Authority of Lubbock. A closed meeting was held with the supervisor of maintenance in this area last Thursday.

This writer would hope that the complaints we have been hearing from tenants will discontinue. Perhaps the new director, who will be named this week, will come on board and do something about these kinds of complaints which are uncalled for if those persons in position will do their jobs.

It is hoped that the new executive director of the Housing Authority Board will create a positive image for the board and tenants. This is a must and with a lot of hard work, this can happen.

This writer is very curious about the need for housing in east Lubbock. There have been many who have mentioned to me how they would be interested in purchasing a new home, if it was possible, in the eastern part of the city.

Since this is the feeling of many, this writer would like to hear from those of you who are interested in purchasing homes in this part of the city of Lubbock.

If you would like to express your views, why not give me a call or drop me a note to P.O. Box 225, Lubbock, Texas 79408.

From all indications in the past, it appears as though something could happen in the housing industry if the right plan was put together for the residents of east Lubbock.

It is good to receive all the letters we've been receiving over the past several weeks. This is good, and we hope you (our readers) will continue to send letters to us. Your input helps us meet the goals of the community. As I've told many people, in the past, this is your newspaper and you should have an opportunity to address any issue which you feel is of importance to the total community.

Keep all those letters coming into our office. This can be done by sending the letter to: Letters to the Editor, West Texas Times, P.O. Box 225, Lubbock, Texas 79408.

Many people are commenting on the letters we've received to date. Keep the interest going and express how you feel about a particular situation.

association of civil rights lawyers that most of the black convictions were of highly doubtful validity.

This latter observation takes on special significance for all liberty-loving Americans or for any groups—including our churches—who are concerned with elementary decency. The reason here is that all societies tend to harass and punish, in direct or indirect ways, those at the bottom of the socio-economic ladder who are viewed as "effective aliens."

Beyond this, astute observers of the American mind-set have pointed persistently to the Puritan strain of guilt which has run like an unending web throughout all of our nation's history. The guilt-ridden always require a "sacrificial lamb" or a "scape-goat" upon whom to inflict the penalty for their "sense of sin."

Blacks have played this gratuitous and deadly role. And the probability is that it will continue until blacks themselves awaken to the painful reality that they are the "lamb in wait for the slaughter" and so write a fresh bottom line to the age-old American script conceiving the need for legalized murder.

The high court indicated that there should be at least one major safeguard in the event the death penalty should be imposed. This requires at least one higher court's review.

This arrangement effectively deters appeals to the Supreme Court, since summary execution may be imposed once one local higher court has made its review, ostensibly on the basis of the same local prejudices which predisposed the original recommendation of death.

Black Americans should co-opt, or else put out of business, the "right to life" movement which claims such a sanctimonious conviction about the sacredness of all human life. Thus far, it has said next to nothing regarding the legal murder of anyone beyond the pre-birth of fetal stage.

Our black churches need to make a religious crusade of this matter, confronting our white religious bodies with the gross inconsistency involved in proclaiming the dignity of mankind, on the one hand, and acquiescing in the thoroughly inhumane death penalty, on the other.

The question raised here is not academic for the upwards of 200 black and tan Americans—most of whom have been dubiously convicted—who face this Bi-Centennial year's promised "trial run" of black mass executions, in this case in gas chambers and electric chairs.

Looking Back Over The Years

"Young People Get a Trade You Love," Says T. S. Jamison

by T.J. Patterson

(Editor's note: This is the final interview with Theodore Solden Jamison, a resident of Lubbock since 1919. He established the Jamison Funeral Home December 21, 1949. He was half owner of the South Plains Funeral Home with Perry Jackson).

Mr. Jamison, did you really get excited about the funeral business?

"I sure did, Mr. Patterson. I remember the times I would operate on dogs and rabbits if they needed help. I would just get them and doctor on them. I liked what I was doing because I was doing a service for a sick animal. I thought I could do the same thing by helping families in the funeral home business. I remember once I even operated on a pig."

How did you operate on a pig?

"Well, there was a ruptured pig in the neighborhood. Dr. Castleberry gave me some of his old medical books. I took those medical books and went home and studied it. After reading the books, I was able to operate on the pig, and the operation saved its life. This pig became one of the largest in the community. After that experience, I knew I could contribute a service to the community."

When did you make preparation for mortuary college?

"I remember coming back to Lubbock and going to work in 1935. I worked for two years to save enough money to go to mortuary college."

Where did you go to mortuary college?

"I went to college in Fort Worth, at the Texas College of Embalming. This college was operated by a black man, named Jessie Kannaugh."

What did you do when you enrolled?

"I enrolled and went to college ready for anything. During the summer, before going to Fort Worth, I got some books. I got all the anatomy and embalming books. I would even order these books from throughout the country. I was working in Lubbock at the Paris Hotel in the daytime and at night I would study all those books. I wanted to be prepared when I got to college. I also had a medical dictionary."

Was it real hard to work and study in those days?

"Not, it wasn't, because I wanted to learn. I would just study real hard. I can remember after getting off work, I would study instead of going to sleep. The manager would let us have a night room to sleep. I didn't have anything in my room but charts."

What kind of charts did you have in your room?

"There were nothing but human charts. My friends would make fun of me all the time about those charts. They said I was going to have nothing but spirit and ghost coming into the hotel with all those charts. Boy, I had a lot of human charts. I wanted to learn and I studied to learn."

How long did you attend college in Fort Worth?

"Well, I enrolled for six months. It was a thousand hours course. I was able to finish the course in only four months."

Did you get your diploma when you finished in four months?

"Mr. Patterson, I begged Mr. Kannaugh to give me my diploma so I could come back home ahead of time. I didn't want my people to think I had messed up down there in Fort Worth. I just finished before it was time to complete the course."

Did he give you the diploma to bring back to Lubbock?

"He did give me the diploma. I told him I wouldn't frame the diploma until the six months were past. I still wasn't satisfied with the knowledge I got from the Texas College of Embalming."

Why were you not satisfied, Mr. Jamison?

"I didn't get enough of the study of the human body, nor plastic or derma surgery."

What did you do about it?

"Well, I came back and went to work. I hoboed from Lubbock to Cincinnati, Ohio. In those days, it was not against the law to hobo from one place to another. You could ride a freight train on the top or bottom, or anyplace on the train you could ride. Nobody would bother you about hoboing. If you got off the train, however, and came into town you had problems. That's why they had something we called a 'hobo jungle.' They had railroad dicks to keep you down there in the hobo jungle. He had a gun like the police. If you wanted some food or something else, they (hobos) would pool their money and send one of the railroad dicks to town to get what you wanted. This 'hobo jungle' had pots and pans and other things to live."

Was the hobo jungle like a motel?

"No, man, it wasn't. You were sleeping outside. That wasn't always a good place to sleep."

How long did it take you to hobo to Cincinnati, Ohio?

"It took me two weeks to get from Lubbock to Cincinnati. After getting there, I enrolled in the Cincinnati College of Embalming."

What did you study at this college?

"I studied plastic derma surgery. I couldn't get that kind of training in Texas."

When did you start the funeral business in Lubbock?

"Before I went into business, I was in the Santa Fe Dinner Service during World War II. During that time, I bought half interest in the South Plains Funeral Home. This was in 1943. I was in partnership with a man by the name of Perry Jackson. We were partners, but we couldn't make it."

What happened to the partnership with South Plains Funeral Home?

"Since we couldn't make it, we dissolved the partnership."

What did you do then, Mr. Jamison?

"I went back to work and made enough money to make a down payment on some land for my own funeral home."

When did you open up Jamison Funeral Home?

"I opened up on December 21, 1949."

Where was the Jamison Funeral Home located?

"I was located just across the street from old Dunbar High School on Elm Avenue."

Did you have any problems after opening up?

"I guess the pitiful part about all of it was the loss of my three children's mother in August, 1944 before I had gone into my own business. You see when she died, I had three babies on my hands, but I hung in there to make it for my family."

After looking from where you've come from, have you ever helped other young blacks in the funeral business?

"Yes, I've helped several young blacks in this business. I have given all of them free training, because I wanted to help them. They needed to know the business if they wanted to become a mortician. I'm not boasting about what I've done in the mortuary business. I love what I'm doing. I will say it this way; I don't sell a service for the casket. I don't care if you got any money or not. I just love to take that body and make it look life-like. I like to make that body look like it has never been shaken a day in its life. People have asked me: 'what is it you love to do about the dead.'"

What do you tell them?

"Well, Mr. Patterson, you take your mother or your loved ones, you want them to look nice. That, in my opinion, is your funeral. People don't come to a funeral to see a casket, they want to see the person who has expired. I can show you plenty of caskets right now. You want to give the best service you can for the family. I want people to look at the person in the casket and it looks like the person there is only asleep. I want the person to look like he has never been sick in his life. That is when my chest gets as wide as king kong's. I know then, I've done a service to the family."

Mr. Jamison, what can kids do in the world today?

"I would tell them to get them a field of learning to help themselves. They must understand that they can't master anything overnight. It will take time and patience to do a good job. Most of our young people are looking for something for nothing. That's not the way to go through life. There are even some of them who don't want to work. That's the wrong attitude about life. You must work hard for anything you want today. I wish they would get them a trade they love. You can't be successful with something you don't love. Mr. Patterson, there are so many opportunities for our minority kids if they really want it. They must keep in mind that it will take a lot of hard work to make it happen."

Local Boy Scout Earns World Conservation Award

Mark A. Woody, member of Boy Scout Troop 435, has earned the new World Conservation Award, according to the Bob Bouse, executive of the South Plains Council of the Boy Scouts of America.

The award is made by the World Wildlife Fund of Washington, D.C., through the Boy Scouts of America and recognizes achievement in environmental improvement, natural resource and conservation and an understanding of world conservation problems.

Purpose of the award is to point out to young people that countries of the world are closely interrelated through natural resources and that the people in this country are interdependent with the world environment.

To win the award, Woody earned conservation and environmental skill awards, merit badges in environmental science, soil and water conservation, fish and wildlife management and citizenship in the world.

Woody is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sam P. Woody of 1104 E. Rice.

The basic course, starting Sept. 7, will cover legal terminology, paperwork procedures, time elements in litigation, wills and probate, real estate transactions, operation of the law office and legal ethics.

The advanced course, for persons who have completed a basic course or those who have five years' legal experience, will cover substantive law in the areas of personal injury litigation, wills and probate, corporations and law office management.

Registration fee is $25. Books and workbooks will be available for purchase after the first class meeting.

Additional information is available by calling the Texas Tech Division of Continuing Education, 742-3739.

federal funds will be available at the current funding level to finance a backlog of $11 billion in construction and right-of-way purchases.

But Briscoe has a plan that would increase the highway fund by $825 million for the next two years—without increasing taxes.

A proposal the governor is readying for the next legislative session calls for the allocation of three-fourths of the motor vehicle sales tax, bringing in $203 million to the highway fund in the fiscal year 1978. This money currently goes into the general fund.

Briscoe's proposal also calls for the dedication of state taxes from the sale of tires, tubes, parts and auto accessories, which he said would increase highway funds by another $45 million.

Briscoe is recommending further that a $20 million limitation on financing the Department of Public Safety receives from the highway fund. The DPS now receives most of its funding from the highway fund "at a level approaching $70 million per year," he noted.

In addition to a legislation covering the above proposals, Briscoe will recommend that the legislature set aside $100 million annually in federal revenue sharing funds during the next biennium as an emergency fund for capital improvements on the highway system.

In keeping with his campaign promises of no tax increases, Briscoe does not plan to recommend any hike in the state's gasoline tax. "Texas has the lowest highway user taxes of any state in the union," he observed. "I want to keep it that way. I am convinced we can resolve this funding crisis within available revenues, without new or additional taxes."

The governor's highway funding plan received the full support of Lubbock County Commissioners Court. During Friday's meeting, commissioners voted to endorse the proposal and said they would send a resolution of their support to the Governor's Office.

Commissioner Arch Lamb told the West Texas Times he approves of everything in the governor's proposal. "I think it's a practical approach to a very serious problem," he said, "and it should be high on the priority list of the state legislature and all other subdivisions of government."

employees about 18 months ago, Cunningham explained, and there was a good response to these.

Cunningham cited the implementation of new programs at Lubbock Police Department as one of the major challenges facing him in his new job. He said he will be working closely with Police Chief J.T. Alley to improve the local police force.

In the 1976-77 budget, the city is planning to spend $176,000 to improve the local police service and another $175,000 for new police cars and equipment.

"The success of these improvements depends on how hard we try to make this work," Cunningham said.

News Report From Washington:

Carter and The South— In The Bag?

WASHINGTON, D.C. —Politicians are pondering whether Georgian Jimmy Carter has the South in the bag. He has many advantages, the main one being that prejudice against all Deep South candidates has kept a native son from Dixie off the presidential ballot for a hundred years.

But will Carter routinely carry such states as Virginia, Florida and Texas? Republicans feel they have very good chances in many Dixie states, but especially in these, and in a few they admit their chances are dim.

The answer to the question whether Carter is a sureshot to carry Dixie overwhelmingly will affect the G.O.P. campaign. Should the region be downplayed and greater concentration made in industrial states where Carter allegedly is weak?

New York State for example, where a recent poll showed 36 per cent of those voting were Jewish, and 32 per cent Roman Catholic, might not be in the bag even though Carter is a Democrat, and Democrats are always heavily favored there.

Carter supposedly has problems with Jews and Catholics and the Protestant vote in the Empire State is relatively small. If these troubles are not mostly imaginary or transient, the G.O.P. could offset most of the South by carrying New York State, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

The 11 former Confederate States cast 130 electoral votes, about half needed to elect. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania cast 85. If, therefore, the Republican candidate could carry these three eastern states, plus only one or two in the South, from there the race would be even.

Carter is, supposedly again, not strong in the west. So following a strategy of concentration on the eastern industrial states and west the Republicans presumably have their best chance.

That chance will be helped, in the South, if right-to-work repeal and other concessions to the unions by Carter become a major campaign topic.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

It's no wonder that Charles Bronson, that craggy-faced movie star, looks so craggy. If any one star (maybe Charlton Heston, too) makes as many pictures in so short a turnover time, it would be enough to make anyone craggy.

Now, one of the faults of being quite so energetic with one's talents is that the action requires a lot of screen properties and with that quantity putout the consumption is tremendous and the results can vary from excellent to ho-hum.

Well, the muscular star who acquitted himself well in recent outings in such vehicles as "Breakout" has yet another feature unspooling at the Fox 4 complex, this one called "St. Ives." It is one of the Bronson lesser entries.

This 93-minute film breaks away from the pure violence, gun-toting image, gets a PG-rating, and generates very little energy or enthusiasm. Bronson plays an ex-police reporter and he gets mixed up with John Houseman as a wealthy criminal type and Jacqueline Bisset. You see, Bronson is acting as a go-between to recover some paper stolen from Houseman and each time the ransom fails, somebody else gets knocked off. Most of this is never shown on the screen, which is probably just as well.

By the time that 93-minute deadline is reached, some points are being rehashed and the net result is not so good. There is one difference in this film; it gives Bronson a more in-depth approach to his usually formulaized, static characterizations but that is about the only innovation.

You'll see some good talent going down the drain in "St. Ives." Maximilian Schell is around as a kind of psychiatrist to Houseman, while veterans Harry Guardino and Harris Yulin are detectives as is Harry Elcar. There is a motorcycle cop tooling around occasionally, named Burr De Benning and a couple of other names that might stike responsive chords are Michael Lerner and Elisha Cook.

Well, so much for "St. Ives." That's the only film on tap at this time. The lengthy hold-overs in virtually all the city's movie houses have produced a kind of stalemate at the moment. But, hold fast for there are a spate of new ones on the way, including an X-rated children's story (I mean, remembered from OUR childhood), "The Great Scout and Cathouse Thursday," purported to be another spoof of the old Western era. Departing thence will be that cute and funny spoof, "Hawmps," the so-so "Harry and Walter Go to New York," the awful "The Sailor Who Fell from Grace with the Sea" and the corny Burt Reynolds effort, "Gator." Sticking around for a while are the successful "The Omen" "The Shootist," the John Wayne "different" movie, "Gus" the Walt Disney bit about the kicking mule on a professional football team, and the flashy, vulgar "Drum," okay in its own right. Oh yes, that recall of Errol Flynn and Burt Lancaster priate epics "Swashbuckler" holds a little longer, too.

With a brand-new 1000-seat theater to utilize, Texas Tech's University Center Cultural Events series for the upcoming 1976-77 season is a winner. They've set mime Keith Berger to open on Sept. 30, lecture and films by dance critic, teacher and writer John Mueller, modern dance company Mordine and Company, South American pianist Alfonso Montecino, the Paul guitarist (classical) David Grimes, John Houseman-directed "The Acting Company" from New York City and the Atlanta Ballet, one of the nation's foremost.

The two "biggies" on the list are the Broadway hit musical "A Little Night Music" taken from Ingmar Bergman's "Smiles of a Summer Night" film (that's on Nov. 19) and on Feb. 17, 1977, the return of the highly-regarded Houston Symphony Orchestra.

Not a bad line-up, certainly enough diversification to please the most exacting demands.

Texas Tech's University Theater always has an interesting and compelling season for all tastes and the 1976-77 season is quality. The first item opening Oct. 8 will be Edward Albee's moderate succes, "Seascape." Drama events continue with the stunning "The Royal Hunt of the Sun," an Inca spectacular, to be directed by Ronald Schulz, Tech's entry in the American College Theatre Festival. Comedy and music rule with "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" and stark, classic tragedy will close the season with "Oedipus Rex" by Sophocles. Schulz again helms this one.

There is a thanking nod to be extended to Virginia Lott out at the studios of Ch. 5, KTXT-TV, the Public Broadcasting Service facility and the Texas Tech station. She has been supplying me with a full monthly line-up of the excellent fare that features the daily output of this facility and it is appreciated. If you don't watch Channel 5 on a regular basis, then you are the loser and I'm sorry for you. Such weekly episodic gems as "Great Performances," the weekly Saturday classic films, the absorbing, nostalgic conversations (with film clips) with noted film directors, the weekly delightful hours with the Boston Pops under the leadership of Lubbock's beloved (and Boston's, too, I'll concede) Arthur Fiedler, with outstanding guests, the fascinating "Nova" series, and, of course, such outstanding entries as "Shoulder to Shoulder," "Jennie" and the perennial favorite "Upstairs, Downstairs" are only a few of the class, tasteful and dynamic shows that belong high on everybody's list.

KTXT-TV, Ch. 5, gives as well as it gets and it should get the maximum support in every way from television viewers in this community. It's a cultural, scientific, entertainment installation that informs and pleases. So, Virginia Lott and John Lacy, program director, hats off to you and thanks.

Foster Parents Needed Here To Help Minority Children

by Mary Alice Robbins

They come from all walks of life and all ethnic backgrounds, but they have one thing in common—they're children in trouble.

These youngsters need foster homes to provide them with love and temporary care until they can be reunited with their own families or placed in adoptive homes.

The number of children requiring foster care has grown extensively during the past year because of the increased emphasis on reporting child abuse and neglect, noted Calvin Davis, social services program director for the State Department of Public Welfare.

According to Davis, most of these children are forced to live away from their own parents for reasons beyond their own control. Some of them are victims of abuse and neglect. In other cases, parents may be temporarily unable to care for them because of illness or family problems.

But the fact is, there are not enough foster homes to provide the care these children need so desparately.

"We definitely do have a need for good stable families who are interested in providing a temporary home for children," commented foster care worker Karen Medlin.

Many of these children are black or Mexican American, Mrs. Medlin said, and there are not enough foster homes to serve them.

In July, nine black children and 13 Mexican American children were replaced in foster care in Lubbock County. During the same month, there were nine Mexican American foster homes and four black ones.

"Our dream," Mrs. Medlin said, "would be to find the right foster home fit each child's needs." If there were enough foster homes, this could be done, she added.

What is needed, according to foster home supervisor Linda Flippin, are persons who have stable incomes. Serving as foster parents is not a part-time job, she stressed.

"We don't pay a salary to foster parents for the time and love they provide a child," Mrs. Medlin explained. The welfare department does pay for a foster child's room and board, his clothing needs and medical expenses.

"But a family doesn't have to be wealthy or own their own home," Mrs. Medlin said. They do need sufficient room in their home to adequately house a foster child, she noted, and the residence must be free from fire or sanitation hazards.

One of the problems in finding foster parents is people aren't informed about what it's like to work with a government agency, Mrs. Flippin said. Many would-be foster parents are scared off because they don't know what to expect.

But, Mrs. Flippin noted, the agency works hard to provide foster parents with any assistance needed in caring for a child.

The paper work involved in the foster care program may keep some people from applying, according to Mrs. Medlin. She explained that the welfare department handles much of the paper work.

Both Mrs. Medlin and Mrs. Flippin stressed that foster care is not a form of adoption. Most of the

Unemployment Rates Continue To Show Decline

The state unemployment rate dipped to 5.7 per cent in July, according to Texas Employment commission chairman Harold K. Dudley. Lubbock's unemployment rate was 4.0—one of the lowest in the state.

The state's July rate is four-tenths of one per cent below the June figure, Dudley noted.

"The decline follows a seasonal pattern," he said. "Each year, many people looking for summer jobs remove themselves from the labor force if they have not found employment by mid-summer."

"This year's July rate compares favorably with last year's July rate of 6 per cent."

Figures announced by Dudley showed a July labor force of 5,469,500 in Texas—with 5,156,500 persons being employed. Total employment in June was 5,149,000.

foster children will return to their own homes when problems there are resolved, they said. In some instances, temporary foster care is required while a permanent adoptive home is found.

Foster care is needed for children of all ages from infancy to age 18, the welfare workers said. Persons interested in the foster care program should contact a foster care worker at the State Department of Public Welfare, P.O. Box 10528, Lubbock, 79408. The phone number is 762-8922.

Mrs. Medlin lauded the minority foster parents now serving in Lubbock. "But we do need more to provide for the needs of children who are constantly being referred to us," she said.

Retarded Helped At Center

by Janice Jarvis

Small accomplishments can be big breakthroughs for students at Milam Children's Training Center.

This school year at the center, one child may learn to swallow his food for the first time, while another may cook his first hamburger. Both accomplishments will be considered important steps forward for mentally handicapped youngsters attending the training center.

Forty students ranging in age from infancy to 21 years are enrolled in training programs at the center this year, according to center director Barbara Reese. Students are divided into small groups for instruction.

Establishing some means of communication for the retarded child is one of the chief goals at Milam's, Mrs. Reese noted. Only a small percentage of the children at the center can talk, she said, so sign language instruction is provided for the students, teachers and parents. Originally, the center's staff believed the children would have difficulty remembering the signs, but so far the program has been successful, the director explained.

According to Mrs. Reese, each child follows a training program designed especially for his needs, with emphasis on practical living skills, language development and motor skills. In addition, each child receives speech, physical and occupational therapy.

During practical living classes, children are taught how to take a bath and blow dry their hair. They also learn how to sweep a floor or wash dishes.

Older students are taught the basics of cooking. Although they can't read a cook book, the students utilize a specially designed recipe book. By matching a picture in the recipe to the ingredient called for, students have learned to bake cookies and other foods.

Mrs. Reese noted that the majority of the children at the center are infants. "The earlier you can start a handicapped child on a program, the more progress he will make," she observed.

Older students work in vocational classrooms or attend Ballenger School where they receive training in sheltered workshops. Students are taught assembly line jobs, and companies pay them for their work.

Some students participate in the annual Special Olympics, competing in track and field events. Mrs. Reese said the youngsters also are taken on field trips around the city.

Texas Tech University provides consultation services for all students at the center, and a physician examines the children weekly.

A physical therapist at Milam's follows an individual therapy program for each student, under the recommendation of a therapist at Tech. Doctors and dentists also volunteer their time to conduct yearly examinations of the students.

Teaching tools such as filmstrips, puzzles and sorting beads are used in classrooms. Many of the teaching tools are multi-sensory, Mrs. Reese noted, providing a student with tactile learning experiences as well as those with sight and sound.

"If a child is not showing progress, it is not because he can't learn but because we haven't found the best way to teach him," the director said.

Children are checked every 60 days for progress, and records are shown to parents. It may take as long as 12 years to toilet train one child, while others learn quickly, Mrs. Reese said.

Most of the children at the center are multi-handicapped, requiring extensive training. One child is mentally retarded, blind, deaf and a victim of cerebral palsy.

Children are reinforced for good behavior, while unacceptable behavior usually is ignored, Mrs. Reese explained.

Each classroom is staffed with a teacher, teacher's aide and student teacher. The small classes enable the center to provide more individual attention to the students.

Annual budget for Milam's is $120,000, with extra money provided for a part-time nurse. Tuition fees are not charged, and students are provided transportation to and from the center, Mrs. Reese said.

Some retarded children cannot speak but can still understand what is said to them—but often, parents and teachers have a tendency to be overprotective with them, Mrs. Reese pointed out.

"Often we miscalculate what a child can do, but if we let him do things, he will learn," she said. But the learning process takes time.

Once, the retarded were considered untrainable, but this is not the case, according to Mrs. Reese. "They can be taught to be useful in society—it just may take society a little longer to realize it."

Two Hundred Years of Black Achievement 1776 — 1976

Matthew A. Henson

The first man to stand at the pinnacle of the world—the North Pole—was a black man, Matthew A. Henson. He had been an assistant and friend of Rear Admiral Robert E. Peary for more than 20 years. Many of these years were spent on dangerous expeditions in the frozen Arctic before they reached the Pole on their seventh attempt together. In sub-zero cold on April 6, 1909, the two Americans, one white, the other black, along with four Eskimos, reached the top of the world. Henson, trailbreaker for the expedition, got there first about 45 minutes before the Admiral and the rest of the party.

Henson was born the year following the close of the Civil War. He had a bleak childhood and, by his eighth birthday, was an orphan. While in his teens, he discovered the urge to travel and moved on to Baltimore where he had heard there were tall ships that sailed the oceans of the world. He got a job as a cabin boy on one of the vessels. Matt sailed the seas for five years, studying and learning. Young Matt quit the ship and tried a series of jobs, and while a stock clerk in a men's furnishings store, a young Naval civil engineer came in one day to purchase a sun helmet for the tropics. It was Robert E. Peary. Peary offered Matt Henson a job as his personal attendant. He took the job because it held the promise of adventure. Peary soon saw Henson's potential as an exploration partner and promoted him. It was the beginning of a close association and friendship that lasted 23 years.

Famous Burns Surgeon Warns Against Gasoline

by Mary Alice Robbins

"Gasoline is the No. 1 killer in the burn field today," a noted burn surgeon told members of Lubbock Lions Club and their wives during a luncheon program this week.

More than 90 per cent of the children currently under treatment at the Shriners Burn Institute in Galveston are suffering from burns caused by gasoline fires, noted the institute's chief surgeon Dr. Duane Larson.

"Gasoline is one of the deadliest agents in our environment," Larson said. He advised the audience to store gasoline in special containers—well away from any ignition source.

Larson has seen many young victims of gasoline fires in his work at the Burns Institute, one of three Shriners-supported hospitals in the United States. The 30-bed facility caters exclusively to research and treatment of severely burned children under 14 years of age.

Since the institute was started in 1966, approximately 5,000 young burn victims have been admitted, Larson said. Ten years ago, a child suffering burns over 50 per cent of his body had a 50-50 chance of surviving, he noted. Today, a child who is burned over half of his body has better than a 90-95 per cent chance for survival.

But seeing that youngsters merely survive their burn wounds is not the institute's only goal, according to Larson. One of the hospital's major accomplishments, he said, is its work "in decreasing the terrible scarring and deformities" often caused by burns.

Larson explained that the institute's medical staff now utilizes splints to prevent children's joints from developing in crippling contracted positions. Constant pressure dressings also are utilized, he said, to reduce the development of deforming scars.

The institute's extensive research has enabled many young burn victims to live normal lives—despite having suffered serious burns.

Dr. Larson visited Lubbock to address the Khiva Shrine Temple's kickoff dinner for the 10th annual Shriners' football game. The game is slated Oct. 7 in Jones Stadium.

The Shriners hope to raise $500,000 for the Burns Institute.

Berry Pie — Right Out of Heaven

One can argue the point but a splendid case can be made for the proposition that berry pie in summer is one of the closest dishes to Heaven.

Strawberries come earlier and are indeed elegant but for those who like deep dish pies and berry pies in general blackberry pie is king. Whether it's topped with strips of pastry or solid pastry turned golder brown or whether it's a deep-dish cobbler (so good with peaches), the king of the pies is blackberry pie—from wild blackberries.

It isn't easy to come by blackberries these days. One must con some unsuspecting soul into picking them—if the weather is hot and these running vines entwined where one gets scratched.

Generally speaking, it takes just under two quarts of berries to make a pie. A quart of berries will make two pint jars of jam. (Don't strain the berries, get all the vitamins by using a blender.)

Better Business Bureau Notes Officer Changes

Immediate corporate redesignation of Malcolm T. Cleland as president and Jim Eppler as chairman of the board capped a busy agenda at last week's meeting of the Better Business Bureau of the South Plains.

Cleland has been titled executive vice president, and Eppler has served in the president's post. In the corporate restructuring, Cleland will continue with his previously assigned duties. He has headed the bureau's professional staff since coming to Lubbock in October, 1975.

Eppler's term, in his change of designation from president to board chairman, goes through the end of this year.

In other business, immediate past president Jim Ed Waller and current second vice president Don Tusha were named delegates to the annual National Assembly of Better Business Bureaus slated Sept. 27-29 in New Orleans.

Keynoters of the 142-bureau assembly will be Federal Communications Commission chairman Richard E. Wiley and U.S. Rep. John B. Anderson (R-Illinois).

Dunbar Football Coach Sees Improvement In Gridders

by Joe Robbins

Things are looking good on the gridiron scene for the Dunbar Panthers, according to second-year head coach Van Jefferson.

Jefferson said he "feels good about the Panthers—they're making steady improvement." Dunbar will return 13 starters from last year's 5-5 season when it opens its 1976 football campaign against El Paso Bowie at 7:30 p.m. Friday in Lowrey Field.

According to the coach, Dunbar will have a strong defensive unit with safetyman Dennis Gentry, a 5-foot-11 175-pounder, the outstanding performer.

Anchoring the five-man defensive front will be two big tackles, junior Gary Baldwin and senior Thomas Gonzales. With the defense established, Jefferson has put added emphasis on the offensive strength during pre-season workouts.

Dunbar will go with the veer-triple option offense, with quarterback Walter Alsbrooks, a returning starter, at the helm. Behind Alsbrooks are a trio of quick power runners—seniors Michael Williams and Gary Adams and junior Kenneth Jones.

Up front offensively, two fast guards, senior James Russell and junior Willie Anderson, will make the Panther attack go. Jefferson said the offense will use the psychology of taking whatever the defense will give up—run or pass—with speedy wide receivers a plus in the aerial attack.

According to Jefferson, District 3-AAA is one of the toughest in the state to predict for the coming season. He listed Estacado, Snyder and Lakeview as favorites but said all the teams are contenders for the district championship. On any given night, the coach added, any one of five teams in the district could surge ahead.

Judging other people often prevents the appraising of ourselves.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

wasn't, in my book, the type of scrimmage that would send me lying down to the corner bookie to bet a bob or so on Texas Tech to the Southwest Conference title.

It wasn't bad at all and it had a number of bright spots. Steve Sloan is a more astute football mind than the one boasted here and when he says that it was probably the best scrimmage since he and his staff have been at Tech, he might be right.

Well, being the best scrimmage since he's been here and the caliber of the Raiders that will win the conference are two different things. The Raiders have a way to go.

For one thing, we saw Texas on TV the other night and the Longhorns again have the size that makes King Kong look like a rookie in the building school. Either Steer players are abnormally big, or else they have air inflated padding under their jerseys.

Like heart, Tech fans. The Raiders may not be that big, but they do size and they are hitting. In fact, the way they hit Saturday might be an indication of things to come.

The Raiders also retained elements of the offense that last year led the SWC. The passing game augments the run and the combination play moved the ball well. Experience makes a big difference and the Raiders have a lot of that on offense.

At the same time, the defense looked stronger than it did a year ago. I particularly liked the lateral pursuit and the containment that allowed the Raiders to catch up.

Passive teams, like Texas, A&M or Oklahoma State will give Tech trouble, but the margin isn't as big as last year. And Tech should have been on the Okies. No, the Raiders have fair size, seem to have alertness definitely showed desire Saturday.

Probably the most impressive thing about the scrimmage last Saturday was the intensity shown. Here was a squad that has been going through hard paces for 10 days or so. And yet the hitting was hard and the players really put out.

It will be a conditioned squad and, against Colorado, this could be a real test. The Raiders will have this week in which to work hard and get a week to install polish.

One of those officiating Saturday was Jim Schiermeyer. James once worked in the baseball vinyard at Tech, where he blocked many a wild pitch. Some of his detractors, and they fortunately aren't legion, claim he salted the errant flight too often with his head.

That as it may, Jim generally officiates Tech junior varsity football games and the coaches feel more confident with him in position. No one has accused him of coming from a foreign land.

Anyway, with the reserves on the field and Jim sitting on a bench as a reserve in for him, we sidled over and, by way of getting things straight, asked how long it would be before there was more than one SWC game in Lubbock.

At the present time, the only official from this area is Tim Hatch, a former Raider halfback, who is listed as a back judge and has been rewarded with some top games.

Schiermeyer's answer was no long in coming than a West Texas storm in March.

"You tell me!" he exploded. "We've got a number of qualified officials, they can't get hired. We've worn out a path to the conference office trying to get them on board."

J.T. (King) has gone to bat with Hal Lahar (supervisor of officials) and can't get anywhere. It's politics and we don't have the time or money to spend hanging around the conference office."

That brought on a discussion of officials in general and we remarked that the Southeastern Conference used to have the worst—old, fat and fat.

That used to be true," Jim agreed, "but no more. They have probably the best, along with the Big 8 and Western Athletic Conference. After that it's in a descending scale and there's not much to choose between others."

When Jim turned to the subject of Jim Carlen. We could have talked all day without having to bring up that name.

"I don't know how you feel about him," Jim declared, "but I still like him because he's a heckuva coach. You watch, he'll have Southwestern in the top 10 and he could win a national championship."

Jim opined that Tech had traded a winning coach for a nice guy—and there's no argument there. The argument is in the inference.

Steve Sloan is a nice guy, but I happen to think that, with time, he's going to be a winning coach at Tech, too. And when it comes to personality, that's like comparing Irish Setters with Bulldogs, ice cream with water or roses with prickly pears.

Texas Tech Sports Program

A new aquatic center, back-packing, canoeing, kayaking and racquetball are part of the expanded Texas Tech University recreational sports program, expanded from and now including intramural sports.

The aquatic center, which is under construction and should be finished by approximately Sept. 15, is on the west end of the Texas Tech campus, near the commuter lot.

The facility will be a 50-meter-by-25-yard, indoor-outdoor pool with an adjacent grassy sunning area. It will be open to students with a valid identification card; no entry fee will be charged.

Some of the events scheduled for the pool include; beginning swimming class, Oct. 2; class to improve swimming strokes, Nov. 2, 9 and 16; midnight swim, Sept. 18; recreational early morning swim, Oct. 11, 12 and 13; synchronized swimming demonstration, October date to be announced; and all-university water play day, Dec. 5.

Registration for basic canoe instruction will be Oct. 1-2 at the pool.

Recreational clinics scheduled are: intermediate-advanced tennis, Sept. 14 and 16; beginning tennis, Sept. 11; and bowling, Sept. 17.

A backpacking seminar will be held Oct. 5; women's fitness and exercise, Sept. 13 or 14; and beginning racquetball, Sept. 9.

Equipment for backpacking, canoeing, rafting or kayaking can be rented from the recreational sports office for the day, weekend or week.

"Our biggest thrust," said Joe MacLean, director of recreational sports, "will be our outdoor program and equipment. The cost of the equipment is one of the biggest problems for people who want to get into the outdoors."

Recreational sports will also supervise the formation of sports clubs at Texas Tech. Presently there are clubs for bowling, gymnastics, hockey, lacrosse, rifle, sailing, soccer, softball and wrestling; and new ones can be formed.

Estacado Matadors Seeking Second Championship Here

Repeating their 1975 nine and three season and bi-district championship will be a giant order for Coach Louis Kelley's Estacado Matadors. However, many high school gridiron observers believe Estacado will have the necessary horsepower to do it.

"I feel better this week than last," Kelley said. "They're coming along, but we're not there yet."

According to Kelley, there are two or three teams who have more strength than Estacado. "We have a lot of young, inexperienced players," he noted. "The first non-district games will tell us a lot before we get to Dunbar."

Estacado opens its 1976 season at 7:30 p.m. Thursday when the Matadors meet the Plainview Bulldogs in Lowrey Field.

The Matadors are returning three all-district performers from last season's championship squad. Center Jerry Turner, a 6-foot-3, 215-pound senior, is the only returning interior offensive lineman and will be counted on to give stability to the younger players.

The defensive squad boasts two returning all-district players — 190-pound line backer Sammy Sims and cornerback Gerald Lewis.

Kelley said he had "a tremendous football player" in fleet-footed wingback Kinzey Burrell, a 165-pounder with 9.8 speed.

At fullback in the Matador "I" formation is Mike Chattan, a 180-pound sophomore who played in five games last season.

The tailback position is still a question mark in Kelley's mind. But it's a problem he soon must solve.

Inexperience is the chief problem in the quarterback spot—both Jimmy Scott and James Davis are vying for the starter's role.

Kelley believes the ground game will go, "but we're going to have to throw it more to balance up the offense. Jimmy Scott has been looking good throwing the ball."

What does Kelley really believe are Estacado's chances in district competition? "We believe we can win," he says.

The Job Picture

The Labor Department's August report of higher unemployment is manysided. Democrats seized upon the 7.8 per cent unemployment rate, and the July increase, the largest since last year, as political ammunition.

They are right but the picture isn't that simple. The Labor Department's July report shows the nation has a record number of jobs. July figures reflected the large number of new job seekers, including students, in the market.

The economy is still improving and the number of jobs expanding. But the population and the number of jobseekers expanded faster in the latest period reported on.

The good news is that an additional 410,000 people found jobs in July—making the total number of jobholders 87.9 million, a new record.

Football Keeps Lubbock Woman's Husband Five Months Each Year

by Janice Jarvis

When the football season begins this year Patsy Pritchett, secretary to the city manager, will be cheering for the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, and with good reason, since her husband is the team's fullback.

Patsy Pritchett

Pritchett, who played with the Cleveland Browns for three years, requested to be traded to the new expansion team last week. For Patsy Pritchett the trade still means a yearly five month separation while her husband plays ball. "I know Bill's not going to play all his life so while he is playing we're getting financially suited," she said.

Pritchett plans to stay in professional football for five years before retiring to Lubbock where he plans to coach junior high school boys, Mrs. Pritchett said. He also plans to build an athletic facility for younger children, according to his wife. The building would be voluntarily staffed and children could play basketball and other sports free. "He wants to put back some of the money he's made into something worthwhile," Mrs. Pritchett said.

To keep in shape during the off season Pritchett jogs two miles a day and runs five miles. "I hate to run with him because he's miles ahead of me," said Mrs. Pritchett. For Pritchett, who loves food, the new season means dieting. He gains 15 to 20 pounds during the off season and then eats only meat and vegetables a month before the season begins.

The first major disappointment as a pro football player came for Pritchett his first year with the team. Because of a calcium deposit he did not play football all season.

With the exception of bumps and bruises he has not had any other injuries. "Everytime I watch him play I can hear the pounding of pads and I just got where I can keep my eyes open," said Mrs. Pritchett.

Mrs. Pritchett said she thinks it is better for her to stay in Lubbock while her husband is working on the team. "He doesn't have to worry about me if I'm here," she said.

Before turning professional, Pritchett was a fullback at West Texas State where he met his wife, then a cheerleader.

"He always liked football but I think I had more confidence in him than he did," said Mrs. Pritchett. His coach encouraged him, then during Pritchett's third year with the team the coach died. "A lot of enthusiasm left Billy then," said Mrs. Pritchett.

After graduating, Pritchett was drafted by the Cleveland Browns and later decided to apply for a transfer. The worst thing about Cleveland was that the fans boo their team, said Mrs. Pritchett.

With three years of professional football behind him, Pritchett's ambition now is to play in the Superbowl. "Even if he never makes the Superbowl he's done what he wanted to do just by being a professional football player," said Mrs. Pritchett.

Although Mrs. Pritchett said that she lives in constant fear her husband will be hurt it is all worthwhile. "Football is Billy's whole world," she said. "He's doing what he wants to do and I wouldn't have it any other way," she added.

Film Series Starts at Library

Lubbock City-County Library will present free showings of the award-winning film series, "The Six Wives of Henry VIII," beginning Thursday at the Mahon Library at 1306 9th St.

This six-episode series is being shown as part of the library's participation in Film Plus, an experimental project funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

The library will show the series over a six-week period, with one episode scheduled weekly. Each 90-minute episode will be shown in the Community Room at 7 p.m. each Thursday and repeated at 2 p.m. the following Saturday.

The film series depicts the famous English monarch's disastrous marital career and a reign that was both glorious and gory. Originally produced for television by the British Broadcasting Corp., the series won five awards from the British Society of Film and Television, the British equivalent of the Emmys.

Members of the audience will receive a free, illustrated film guide providing background on the series. Because the presentation of the series is part of an experimental program, audiences will be asked to fill out short questionnaires giving their opinion of the series, the film guide and the project in general.

The library also plans to show a six-week series entitled "The Search for the Nile" beginning in mid-October and a two-week series on "The Spoils of Poyton" beginning in late November.

Words From The Pastor: Worship begins as I close the door to my home. On the way, I pray for my church, for my pastor, and for those who worship far and near.

Before I enter the house of God, I pause a moment that I may cast off and leave outside all the things and thoughts unbecoming to a child of my Heavenly Father — hates, grudges, worldly cares, and sinful thoughts.

The moment I enter the door of this sacred house I cease all conversation. I come in silence, for great things arise out of quietness and minister to me and to those with me.

As soon as I am seated, I bow my head and pray. I pray for others as well as myself. I pray for my church and its great cause. I ask God to be near me now.

The Bible still outsells any book published, and whether you believe it or not, it is still being read.

Freezone is for corns that hurt.

Absolutely painless. No dangerous cutting, no ugly pads or plasters. In days, Freezone eases the hurt...safely helps ease off the corn. Drop on Freezone—take off corns.

Ringling The Bell

by Bob Tieuel

The first nation convention of the National Black Republican Council was held recently in Kansas City, following closely on the heels of the G.O.P. National Convention. Dr. Henry Lucas of San Francisco, national president presided. Speaking to the group was Dr. Mildred F. Jefferson of Boston and president of the National Right to Life Committee, Inc. Dr. Jefferson is also an assistant clinical professor of surgery at Boston University School of Medicine, received a standing ovation after her attack on abortion laws.

Stated Dr. Lucas, who is a dentist: "The free enterprise system, as the eminent Dr. Booker T. Washington once noted, gains needed strength when all elements of the nation community are afforded an equal opportunity to contribute productive growth. The minority community, representing 17 per cent of the population, can translate economic justice into reality or through minority economic development.

"This requires a commitment—a national commitment—to parity simple concept of equity, or more precisely an equal opportunity proportionately share in the economic wealth of the nation," stated Lucas.

Dr. Lucas said that in 1972 there were no blacks on the Republican executive committee. In January, 1973, Senator Bob Dole, the chairman of the Republican National Committee, appointed Lucas to the executive body. Now, four years after Miami, 26 states have black Republican organizations. Some three hundred delegates attended the first national convention in Kansas City.

Asked why he is a Republican by bellringer sources, Dr. Lucas said that he thinks it is "good business" for black people to be Republican. He said that he believes in the two-party system and declared the fact that too many black people have been operating under a one-party system.

Dr. Lucas said that he has a basic concern about the welfare system. He believes in people having initiative and making their own way. He said that subsidies take away a person's independence.

The Republican Party needs to broaden its base, believes the black Republican leader and "we are working with other black Republicans broaden that base," the good doctor added. Also addressing the black Republican organization was Ms. Andrey Colom, a black with the Republican Women's Task Force.

Bishop H.H. Brookins, recently elected bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Church said: "I am not going to bleed poor people for money. Rather, I would like to see the A.M.E. Church develop programs that will help people who cannot help themselves. Instead of giving a banquet for the bishop, I'd rather see churches and church groups feed some senior citizens. The black church has not been serious enough. Too often we play church. . . We do too much eating and greeting. When black folk eat, they don't think."

Bishop Brookins suggested greater cooperation with other churches. He said that in planning programs or institutes, "do not be scared to get a C.M.E. or a Presbyterian to serve as a leader if he has knowledge and expertise in the subject to be discussed." He added that the A.M.E. Church is weary and sick because there has been "too much inbreeding—dealing only with folk who agree with you."

Fuss Behind the Bus: From the National Baptist Union-Review—"many churches throughout the land we are emphasizing a Bus ministry. This ministry is designed to pick up children where they are (often against their will). If you don't believe this ask some of the workers with the bus ministry and transport them to the church where we have determined that they ought to be. We are convinced that this is what is best for them. This is 'busing' to achieve salvation. Then why is it wrong to use busing to achieve integration? If a bus is so bad, why hasn't someone challenged the Bus ministry in our churches. It would make us happy if we could just bet Baptists and all the nation to realize that, Bus Is A Bus. Don't cuss the bus its Us." End of quote.

Dear Bob: "We ask that you join our many friends who are donating to the United Negro College Fund through Texas College. Please add our thanks to the 105,000 contributors last year who donated $12.1 million UNCF. . . ." Sincerely yours, W.E. Williams, Director of Development, Texas College, Tyler, Texas.

Until later, be a good neighbor. Remember they come in all colors.

PERSONALS

IN GRATEFUL APPRECIATION

We wish to express our sincere thanks and grateful appreciation to all our many, many friends for the thoughtfulness and kindness during our recent sorrow. You sent flowers, food and many, many messages of comfort and consolation for which we will be forever grateful. Our thanks also include the kindnesses of South Plains Funeral Home. May God bless each of you, and be as kind when in need of comfort and sympathy.

Sincerely, Mr. and Mrs. Leon Melton

THANK YOU

I wish to express my personal and sincere thanks to the churches and organizations of the East Lubbock community for your very generous response to the call for assistance to the "Meals on Wheels" program. I am a volunteer helper for this service during the summer months, but the idea to appeal to the public was not mine, and I don't take credit for it. Mrs. Maunita Terrell, who helps me during the summer, prepared the announcements, Merry Jo Walker typed them; and Mr. T.J. Patterson distributed them. I want to include them in "thank you." Also the West Texas Times.

Your generous contributions provide what can be accomplished when forced to unite for a common cause. I'm grateful that some of you have included "Meals on Wheels" in your monthly budget.

Thank you so very much for caring enough to share so that someone in need can continue to eat a wholesome meal. May God bless each of you, and gain, I thank you very much.

Sincerely, Mrs. Edna R. Walker Helper for "Meals on Wheels"

You have a right to your own life if you have the courage to live it.
