New Course "Contemporary Black Literature" To Be Offered This Fall at Texas Tech

"Herein lies the tragedy of the age: not that men are poor, —all men know something of poverty; not that men are wicked,—who is good? not that men are ignorant,—what is Truth? May, but that men know so little of men."

These words are notable first because they comprise a succinct gem of contemporary social comment, and secondly because they were written by a black man.

Taken from "The Souls of Black Folk" by W.E.B. DuBois, this quote is indicative of an acute social consciousness to be found in black literature, according to Dr. Walter McDonald of the Texas Tech University English Department faculty.

It is indicative also, says Dr. McDonald, of a rapidly expanding resource of articulate and meaningful literary expression which would deserve serious critical consideration regardless of any ethnic or racial ties.

From "The Negro Writer and His Roots" by another black author, Jay Saunders Redding: "The writer's ultimate purpose is to use his gifts to develop man's awareness of himself so that he, man, can become a better instrument for living together with other men."

Through a new addition to Texas Tech's English department curriculum this fall, students will be able to examine more closely the "gifts" of the black writer and his contribution to contemporary literature in all genres including novels, essays, short stories, poetry and drama.

The course, English 3310: Contemporary Black Literature, will become an elective within Tech's Ethnic Studies Program, an interdisciplinary approach which leads to an 18-hour minor in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Program director Dr. Alwyn Barr of Texas Tech's Department of History explains its goals as "increased student understanding of the nature and development of race relations, stimulation of a greater sense of dignity for minority students and expanded student knowledge of problem solving in

County Clerk Needs New Addresses

Lubbock County Clerk Frank Guess announced last week that a "sizable number" of the 2,498 notary commissions which were mailed out last week have been returned to his office.

Apparently many of the persons who applied for the commission have changed addresses, consequently their mail is undeliverable, unless a forwarding address form has been filed with the U.S. Post Office.

The West Texas Times would advise any applicant who has not yet received his commission to telephone or drop by the County Clerk's Office.

School offices will be open from 8:00 a.m. to 12 noon, and from 1:00 to 4:00 p.m. Registration for the elementary grades is not scheduled until August 20.

We Must Start Now Making Some Decisions

With a great deal of attention being given already on the national level to the presidential election, as well as some governors races—and this includes some barbs that our mayor, Dr. James Granberry, may be a potential Republican candidate for Governor of Texas this year—it's time that we start doing our homework in the black community.

The homework could be a broad thing, anything from a black candidate for city councilman, county commissioner or state representative. This especially makes sense since the new redistricting will be in our favor.

There's nothing impossible we as black people can do, if we really want to do something in regard to the political state of the West Texas Black community. One of our brothers, State Representative Curtis Graves, made it loud and clear that now is the time for us as black people to start moving in the big league. This could very well mean we can go a lot of places politically, that is, if we have our homework done early.

We must be real honest with ourselves, however, if we are going to start doing things on the city, county and state levels. This, of course, would mean that we will have to start harnessing our political power. With the new legislation saying that 18-year-olds can vote in our favor, both groups, from 18 to 20 and those of us over 21 must realize that we must implement our voting power if we are going to start getting some of the "pie" which is in the city, county or state offices.

There's no doubt about it, a great deal of awareness exist in our community at this time. We must, however, utilize our awareness to our advantage so we can compete with the man in the big circle system. There's no need backing off. You see, we have so much potential. It's high time that we start manipulating all the potential we possess.

In looking around the South Plains, with special emphasis on Lubbock, with its 75 square mile area, there are signs of blacks who could, without any doubt, contribute something to the political arena for the black community.

Voter's registration is a must if we are to really look for a political future for the black community. Of course, there's time if we really want to do something about our situation.

Aside from this, there must be different techniques used if we are to really become successful. With all the experiences we've encountered during our past, we should make a hell of a race out of some offices. This, by no means, is to imply that we'll just run a good race, but that we can win those races.

Let's hope those of us who are forever saying that we can't do this sort of thing will change their tune to "we can do anything we want to do."

This will not be hard to do if we start now conditioning ourselves to showing our blackness in the political arena. There's nothing impossible when we start believing in ourselves. The system's game of excluding blacks in politics is outdated, and therefore, we must come up with a system of our own which will be unique and helpful to all blacks in America in playing the white man's game of politics.

We must start now making some critical decisions about our future. By the same token, we must realize that if we don't start going through drastic changes, we're dead as dead can be.

As an individual, why not challenge yourself and your peers about this political thing. We've got to start making some decisions now. Decisions that will set the course for blacks in generations to come. It's up to all of us. Keep telling yourself that it can happen. . . and that it can happen right here on the South Plains, especially in the City of Lubbock.

Right On!!

Thanks Miss Gant

This editor couldn't help but be impressed with the new system being implemented by the newly elected secretary at Mount Gilead Baptist Church, Miss Bettye R. Gant.

Miss Gant has initiated a schedule for news for church members and church organizations to be placed in the West Texas Times. In last Sunday's bulletin, she had the following statement for all Mt. Gilead church members:

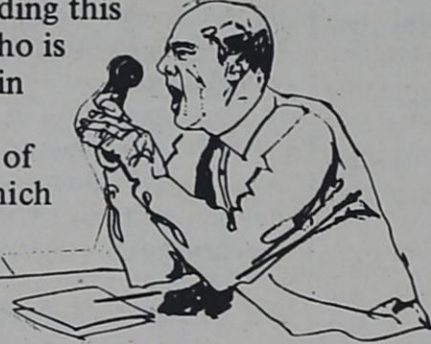

"There is a folder placed in the admitting door at the front of the church on the wall. This folder is for any news you wish to have placed in the West Texas Times newspaper. I will check on this folder daily for news."

I thought our readers would like to know about the cooperation the Times is receiving from our black brothers and sisters.

Thanks, Sister Gant, I appreciate your instruction sheet which spelled out to the membership of Mount Gilead how they can get their names in the Times. It makes a lot of sense for us all to help.

From The Business Desk

Every woman reading this issue of the paper who is sincerely interested in finding a job should take particular note of the ad on page 5, which is sponsored by the Slaton Chamber of Commerce.

I understand that they have a very good chance of getting the industry, providing there is enough women interested in work to help fill the employment rolls. It won't take but a few minutes of your time to fill out the information and mail it in before Sunday, and it certainly could mean you would have a chance at a job in the near future. So get after it gals, fill it out and turn it in—and do it now!

We Need Symbols!

As Curtis Graves, black state representative from Houston, so articulately stated when he was here June 19th, "You need some symbols here! I hope when I come back to Lubbock I will see some symbols—black people in political office, in city hall collecting taxes, as well as paying them."

I agree whole heartily with Brother Graves that we need some symbols here. We have a sharp, aggressive, clean cut mayor here in Lubbock, and I hope he can see the problems here as well as lend his influence to the situation. His efforts to help the blacks in this area would certainly stand him in good stead if he decides, as speculated in the Plainsman column of last Friday's AJ, to run for the office of Governor of Texas. Helping blacks gain symbol status here would be a great asset on the way to greater political heights for any politician. And there is certainly no question about it, any Republican candidate in Texas needs to work very hard to gather the black vote, especially if he plans to tip the balance in his favor state wide.

Others Are Saying —

Redistricting & Clique Rule

Rep. Delwin Jones of Lubbock demonstrated in a press conference at the Capitol Monday that he represents the type of legislator Texas does not need.

Rep. Jones was the arbitrary author of the redistricting bill passed by Speaker Gus Mutscher's team at the regular session, and declared unconstitutional Monday by Travis County District Judge Herman Jones.

One of the major faults of the Legislature, especially after a clique has served several terms and has gained some prestige through longevity and publicity, is the struggle of members to perpetuate themselves. Rep. Jones, in the press conference, denied his redistricting bill was aimed at eliminating liberal legislators who were opposed to Gus Mutscher, which it did do. He twisted that around to say he did attempt to take care of his friends. That he did also. It is granted that the co-called "dirty 30" represented a political group that could not be accepted as running mates by most members of the House. That was why the "dirty 30" was never able to muster enough support to dig adequately into legislative involvement in passage of the Sharp bank bill. In many instances it was a choice of suppressing sentiment for a detailed inquiry rather than joining up with the "dirty 30" crowd.

Rep. Jones, in his obligation to protect friends and perpetuate the Gus Mutscher team that had complete control, authored one of the most ruthless bills a legislature could concoct. It was not a bill designed to meet the best interest of Texas counties and groups of counties, but to punish "enemies" of the Speaker and perpetuate his friends.

Rep. Jones is cited in this editorial because he was author of the redistricting bill. But he had help from "teammates" who share his views.

The district judge's opinion is subject to appeal. But from the lack of effort put into defense of the House bill by the attorney general's department it is obvious the legal minds had little faith in Rep. Jones' product.

Texas voters are the winners and also the losers. They are assured of another effort to write a fair logical plan for legislative districts, either by a commission or the Legislature. But they also must pay the added cost tacked on them by the "Mutscher team" that set out to eliminate its enemies and perpetuate its friends.

The Austin American-Statesman

We have national symbols, but here in Lubbock it's a different story. On the national level we have people like Dr. Leon Sullivan, Jessie Jackson, Art Fletcher and many others. We should be willing here to contribute our share to the national scene and develop local people into positions of importance where we can also say we have our local symbols.

Opportunities Industrialization Center of Lubbock can help make this a reality. Through its manpower training program, through motivation and the idea of self-help, we can really improve our lot here in Lubbock, and at the same time provide our much needed symbols.

As Dr. Sullivan says, "properly motivated, a man can do almost anything." I agree that this is very true—and at the same time remind the reader that this is the idea behind OIC, motivation, development and re-channeling untrained or undertrained "lost souls."

OIC is a program all citizens of Lubbock and the South Plains should support. It is a program designed to take people off of relief and welfare rolls and place them on the tax rolls. OIC is the last hope for Lubbock, and especially for the unskilled, underskilled, the unemployed and underemployed, disadvantaged people.

This is how symbols are created—through motivation and preparation. Dr. Sullivan says, "Integration without preparation is frustration."

So black brothers, let's stop holding up broken black fists and prepare ourselves and take our rightful places in the mainstream of life. The opportunities are better now in Lubbock than ever before, so let's get ourselves together and get ready for the challenge that lies ahead.

Let's check out our minds, get our thing together and build and create our own symbols.

We can do it! We must do it! We will do it! We will produce some symbols here in Lubbock.

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

Austin, Texas—An Austin District court decision invalidating the 1971 House of Representatives redistricting act handed state attorneys and legislative leaders a mountain of unanswered questions.

Atty. Gen. Crawford C. Martin is in the process of appealing to the Texas Supreme Court the lower court's decision that the bill's "splitting" of 29 counties into separate districts is unconstitutional. Martin said the appeal is in line with a long-standing policy of his office to advocate the validity of a legislative act until the state's highest court rules on it. Many high-placed state attorneys feel that if the Supreme Court upholds the August 2 district court finding, the chore of re-doing the job will fall to a five-member Constitutional Board (composed of lieutenant governor, House speaker, attorney general, land commissioner and comptroller).

Constitution says the Board will reapportion when the Legislature fails to do so in the first regular session after publication of each U.S. decennial census.

Lawyers hope the High Court will provide guidelines, however, for they are confronted with these questions:

+ Board is directed to meet within 90 days after the Legislature adjourns (before the end of August) and to come up with a redistricting bill within 60 more days (by the end of October). What happens if there is no final Supreme Court ruling by this constitutional deadline?

+ Since the House tried to redistrict and its act was knocked out, would reapportionment then be expected in a special session of the Legislature? Constitution says the Board will reapportion if the Legislature fails to act, but the Legislature did "act" in the case of the House plan, only to have a district court declare its work invalid. No Senate reapportionment bill was passed by the Legislature, so that job automatically falls to the Board.

+ Since the 1970 census (on which lawmakers based their reapportionment) was published while the 1971 Legislature was meeting, could redistricting really wait until 1973 when the 63rd Legislature convenes?

School Appeal Watched—Federal appeal of an Austin U.S. district court decision upholding limited busing to achieve racial balance in public schools met sharp criticism and is being watched closely by other school districts with similar problems to those of the capital city.

Only alternative to the moderate plan, maintained Austin school officials, is forced busing on an even larger scale. President Nixon's statements on the subject, in effect condoning the eleventh-hour appeal though he opposes busing, were hit by U.S. Sen. John Tower and other Texas Republicans as inappropriate and displaying a lack of understanding.

Johnson - Ellis Vows Exchanged in July At Littlefield

Beneath an archway of pink carnations entwined with greenery, Miss Mary Katherine Johnson became the bride of Ben Joe Ellis, Jr. Saturday evening, July 31, in the Irving Street Baptist Church of Littlefield, Texas. Flanked on either side of the archway were candelabras holding white tapers featuring the same decor as the archway.

Officiating for the reading of the double ring wedding vows was Dr. W. A. Terry, pastor of the church.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Edward Johnson of Littlefield and Mr. and Mrs. Ben Joe Ellis, Sr. of Fairfax, S.C.

Wedding music was provided by Miss Brenda Simmington, and Mrs. Beverly Kemp sang "I Love You Truly" while the mother of the bride was seated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a bridal gown of ivory satin featuring a chapel length train. The bodice of her dress had an overlay of lace and was trimmed in seed pearls. The hemline of her gown also featured the lace and seed pearls. Her elbow-length veil of tulle was attached to a rose pillbox headpiece adorned with seed pearls. She carried a cascade of baby's breath with tiny clusters of pink flowers embedded, and green foilage atop a white beaded pearl Bible.

Jeanette Johnson, sister of the bride, carried the train. Miss Gwendolyn Johnson, also sister of the bride, attended as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Linda Lacy of Rosebud; Shirley Smith of Ft. Worth; Jackie Morgan of Dallas; and Sherry Reauch, also of Dallas. They are all students at Jarvis College at Hawkins.

Debra Carol Johnson and Shera Carol Johnson, sisters of the bride, and LaQuetta Simmington served as ushers and candle lighters.

Jessyca Holmes and Trevia James, both cousins of the bride, served as flower girls.

Ringbearer was James M. Johnson, brother of the bride. James Redmon of Jarvis Christian College served as best man to the groom.

Groomsmen were Joseph E. Johnson, Jr., of Littlefield, brother of the bride; Lawrence Henry of Odessa; Ray Brown of Edna; and Dennis Randell of Texarkana, all students at Jarvis.

Following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Johnson feted the newly weds and guests with a reception in their home and at the Littlefield Country Club.

The bride is a 1967 graduate of Littlefield High School, and is presently a 1971 candidate for graduation at Jarvis Christian College in December.

The groom is also a candidate for graduation in December. He is a native of Fairfax, South Carolina.

Out-of-town relatives attending the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Roger Johnson of Oklahoma; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holmes of Hawkins; Mrs. Etta Linton and family of Marlin; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Linton of Farmington, N.M.; Mr. and Mrs. Alvis Sanders and Miss Ida Mae Holmes of Pampa; Mr. and Mrs. R. this highly sensitive area of American life."

As far as increased understanding of the nature and development of race relations is concerned, the value of the new course in contemporary black literature is obvious, suggests course instructor Dr. McDonald, "since at least 99 per cent of the significant works by black writers are linked in some way to ethnic or racial problems, issues or themes."

He emphasizes, however, that this does not imply a preoccupation with racial issues nor an overabundance of radicalism within black literature: "I view it rather as a matter of ethnic pride," Dr. McDonald says, "being expressed through serious literary exposition and analysis of the black experience."

It is a literary effort, he continues, which in the words of black writer DuBois is aimed at "a conscientious study of the phenomena of race-contact. . . a study frank and fair, and not falsified and colored by our wishes or our fears."

The new course will be limited this fall to an enrollment of 35 students, and Dr. McDonald is hopeful that this limit will be reached. He is hopeful also that his own ethnic background—he is white—will not alienate any of those who take the course, whether white or black.

"I recognize this as a very valid question," Dr. McDonald says when asked whether the fact that he is white will have any bearing on the success of a course in black literature. He points out, however, that since the course will be turned as much as possible toward individualized study, his function will be more similar to that of guide rather than interpreter.

"Through study, I have learned to love the literature and to appreciate it," Dr. McDonald adds, "and because of its nature, I feel I have also learned to appreciate the position of other human beings more because of it."

A 1956 graduate of Texas Tech, Dr. McDonald grew up in Lubbock and completed his master's degree in Tech in 1957. He then entered the Air Force and was a pilot for seven years before going to work as a member of the English Department faculty at the Air Force Academy.

Having earned his doctorate from the University of Iowa, he returned to Texas Tech this summer to join the university's English faculty here.

Dr. McDonald said course material would consist of an anthology of black literature compiled by Houston A. Baker, Jr., and several individual works encompassing the major literary genres. He added that special emphasis will be placed on study of the black novel, short story, poetry and essay with required readings of such established black writers as James Baldwin; Richard Wright, author of "Native Son"; and Lorraine Hansberry who wrote "Raisin in the Sun."

Afro-American History Notes for Busy Newspaper Readers: James Augustine Healy (1830-1900), first Catholic Bishop of African descent in the United States, was born in Macon, Georgia. His father was a white planter and his mother was a slave. Educated in the Franklin Park Quaker School in New York and Holy Cross College in Worcester, Mass., Healy graduated with highest honors in 1849.

After the death of his parents in 1850, friends of his wealthy father encouraged him and provided him with funds to continue his studies abroad. Healy studied at the famous Sulpician Seminary in Paris, and was ordained to the priesthood in 1854.

Upon returning to America, he served as pastor of St. James Catholic Church in Boston's southeast end, a predominately Irish neighborhood. Reluctant at first to accept the black priest, when the area was ravaged by epidemics of typhoid, influenza and tuberculosis, Father Healy administered the Sacraments to the victims with no thought of the danger to his own health. He was soon accepted and respected by members of his congregation as a true priest.

When he was elevated to the bishopry, it was evident that he had been well trained for the post. As bishop he presided for 25 years over the diocese of Maine and New Hampshire. During this period, 50 new church buildings were erected, 19 parochial schools and 68 missions stations were established, and the number of Catholic communicants were more than doubled.

Bishop Healy's brother, Patrick F. Healy, was president of Georgetown University in Washington, serving in that capacity from 1872 until 1883.

Dear Bob: In thinking of the recent passing of the one and only Louis Armstrong, we must remind ourselves that Jazz has been influenced by a number of social factors—many of which are directly linked to racial injustice and as of now some forms of jazz have not been convincingly established in the minds of an overwhelming number of people. The creation and reception of jazz has never been totally confined to the Negro, but the cultural environment in which jazz originated and developed during its early years was for the most part, a breeding of the black ghetto, or as some say—the “flats”. Signed E. Belton.

Dear Mrs. Thomas: Mayor Charles Evers, the first black mayor of a biracial town in Mississippi recently observed his second anniversary in office. A Medgar Evers Clinic (named in honor of his slain civil rights brother) has been opened in Fayette.

Headquarters for the National Baptist Convention of America will be the Jack Tar Hotel in San Francisco, with Macedonia Missionary Baptist Church, host church and Dr. George L. Bedford, host pastor. Seek King Holiday: Nearly fifteen million Americans have signed a petition asking that January 15, the birthday of the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., be made a national holiday. Howard Bennett, head of the King holiday committee recently told this column that he believes the present Congress will approve the holiday.

“We feel that it is the consensus of most Americans that this day must come about because Dr. King would be the only man of a minority group honored with a holiday of his own,” said Mr. Bennett.

The drive to establish a King Holiday began shortly after the Nobel Peace Prize winner was assassinated in Memphis on April 4, 1968. “The whole purpose of the holiday is to make sure that Dr. King’s dream becomes a reality,” added Bennett.

Dear Bob: An editorial writer, Dick West of the Dallas A.M. News is really concerned about the abuses he cites on the Aid for Dependent Children Program, sponsored by local, state and federal aid. Would he do away with aid to ailing railroads, airlines, farmers and other federal subsidies just because there are abuses? Hardly. Let’s find a way to correct the abuses and not let the innocent suffer with the guilty, Mr. West. And why not suggest something sir, to correct the present inequities. It just seems to me that if he has a better plan than the one offered by the Nixon administration, he ought to come forth with it. Signed: A.N.

You are correct sir! We have bums and cheats in many walks of life from the top to the bottom.

The National Association of Social Workers, the largest organization of professional social workers in the world, has recently warned that the current national and state attacks on welfare programs and recipients—which label victims a perpetrators of social malfunctions—are really attempts to hide severe economic problems and are based on ignorance and outright deception.

Robinson Family Reunion Held

The Robinson family, and others associated with the family, had a swinging good time last Sunday. It was a Robinson reunion for “dad and all the kids.”

Two friends of the Jones’, Daniel Charles Jenkins and James Williams, made the trip from Marshall.
