Tax Exempt Status Lost by Elks

Newark, N.M. — (NBNS) — A Rutherford Elks lodge has lost its tax exemption status because it openly discriminates against blacks. New Jersey Superior Court Judge ordered that the loss in status should be retroactive and that the lodge must pay taxes for 1972 and 1973 as well as this year until it approves an agreement permitting blacks to become members of the group.

Matthew Wins Stay

New York — (NBNS) — The 49-year-old physician who found NEGRO (National Economic Growth and Reconstruction Organization), Dr. Thomas W. Matthew, has won a temporary stay of execution pending the outcome of his appeal for misapplying Medicaid funds. He was sentenced to three years in prison.

Mrs. King Threatened at Airport

Cleveland — (NBNS) — Mrs. Coretta King, widow of slain civil rights leader Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., was heavily guarded as she waited for two hours in a United Air Lines Lounge following an anonymous kidnap threat made against her. Some ten uniformed and plainclothes detectives watched over her as the time passed without incident.

Muslims Urged to Thank Whites

Chicago — (NBNS) — The 25,000 Black Muslims were urged to thank whites for the chance the organization has received to expand its multimillion dollar movement.

Black Muslim leader Elijah Muhammad made the comment during the group's annual Savior's Day to respect and honor whites.

Dirk West is Candidate for City Council Post, Place One, Here

Dirk West, a local advertising executive, recently announced for the office of Mayor Pro Tem (Place 1) on the Lubbock City Council. He told the West Texas Times, "Through my advertising business, I have been around and involved in city politics for the past twelve years, and I know how this city operates."

A member of the Parks and Recreation Board for the past seven years, West says he is strongly for letting our hired professional staff of people do the job of making this city work, and as long as it is being done, well the City Council should give them their complete support.

He also said, "I am concerned about the completion of many vital things that Lubbock has either started or is planning. The Civic Center was put in a dangerous position of being discarded or scaled down because of purely personal differences on the City Council and because of a too long period of talking and inactivity."

He went on to add, "The Canyon Lakes, a project that I am very familiar with because of my work on the Park Board, is right on the verge of a great beginning and everything possible should be done to expedite this tremendous project."

Mr. West and his wife Mary Ruth have three children, Tim, Mandy and Tom. West is a graduate of Texas Tech University.

Prairie View Acapella Choir Appearance Here a Success

It was the consensus of everyone attending the concert by the Prairie View Acapella Choir last Sunday afternoon in the auditorium that they were very, very good. This special program was sponsored by the Dunbar Ex-Students Association.

The program was broken into four parts: Portaphonic Telstar of Songs Internationale Classical, Sacred, Secular; Neo-Classical, Romanticism, Humor, and Nationalism; Morphalaphonic Heartbreaks of Ecleticism Operatic, Impressionistic, Contemporary, Modern; and Reflectaphonic, Centennial Folksongs.

The importance of continuing scholarship aid to minority medical students rather than forcing them to rely entirely on loans to pay for their education, is stressed by William E. Cadbury, Jr., Executive Director of National Medical Fellowships, Inc., in that organization's annual report issued today.

National Medical Fellowships is the country's only agency devoted entirely to providing scholarship aid to students from minority groups currently underrepresented in medicine—Blacks, mainland Puerto Ricans, Mexican Americans and American Indians. For 1973-74, for example, NMF has awarded 1,760 grants worth $2,393,800, and is helping almost 70 percent of the minority students who began medical school last fall. The organization has no funds of its own, but relies entirely on foundations, corporations and individuals for support.

In his annual message, Dr. Cadbury pointed out that the continuing attrition of both Federal and medical school scholarship funds presented major problems for the growing numbers of minority students in medical school. "Few students can hope to finish four years of professional training, which costs on the average $4,500 annually, without incurring some debt against their future earnings. But replacing all scholarship aid with loans will prove a deterrent to minority young people considering medicine as a career, and can only prove self-defeating for a society desperately in need of more doctors working in medically underserved areas."

He cited as reason for this view the need for encouragement that many minority students feel. Because they are pioneers of a sort, often in the vanguard of their group to study medicine, these young people may have unresolved doubts about their ability to survive the academic, psychological and financial rigors of medical school. They, or their families, may have had unfortunate experiences with borrowing money. If they found it was necessary to borrow large amounts in order to finance their education immediately upon entering medical school many would choose not to go.

"Grants of the sort made by NMF, though far from munificent, (this year they average $1,360), reinforce those students' desire to embark on a difficult and demanding course of study," he said. "They also have the effect of encouraging medical schools to accept more minority students."

He also pointed out that the necessity of repaying large loans immediately upon graduation is likely to influence a young physician's choice of where and what he will practice. It may, for example, inhibit a doctor from practicing in medically underserved areas, in inner cities or rural areas. In his haste to remove his debt he may choose a highly remunerative specialty, or none at all. For those who are so inclined, academic medicine becomes less possible.

"We believe that minority physicians should be as free as others to choose where they will practice. But true freedom also entails freedom from unusually heavy economic pressures that cannot help but influence that choice—pressures not normally shared by physicians from more affluent families," Dr. Cadbury continued.

"As the gap between the need for scholarship aid and the available funds continues to widen, NMF resembles a very harried David taking aim at an ever growing Goliath. We are convinced, however, that our grants are an important device not only in the recruitment of more minority group young people into medicine, but in making it possible for them to choose freely where and how their education can best be used once they become physicians," Dr. Cadbury concluded.

Knights of Pythias Services Set Sunday

Roberts will deliver the sermon and W.M. Goldstine will deliver the Pythias address. Special music will be furnished by the church choir.

Ask Candidates Pertinent Questions

Another in a series of "Let The Candidate Speak" is on tap at Bethel A.M.E. Church tonight (Thursday) at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Bethel A.M.E. Church. Frankly, we hope that the auditorium is too small to hold all the people in Lubbock who are concerned about the candidates speaking on their various platforms. We hope that East Lubbock, and Lubbock in general will get behind this effort and see exactly what the candidates have to say.

We hope pertinent questions will be asked of each candidate and not get hung up on the shotgun approach. Too many times in the past, we failed to ask the relevant question and, at the same time, put the candidate in a position in which he has to express him or herself in public. If you put the question to the person running for office, regardless of the office, you can hold him or her to it as time progresses if he or she is a winner. If, on the other hand, you are frustrated and mad, you cannot function in a perspective where the candidate has to come your way.

We at the Times, feel as though each candidate for Mayor and City Council should explain their position on how they feel about district representation on the city council? As we've stated, from time to time, we feel that a good system can be worked out whereby people in all areas of Lubbock, rather than just in Southwest Lubbock, can be represented by their neighbors on the Lubbock City Council.

Why not ask those persons seeking the city council and mayors post how they feel about the city being divided into six geographically obvious districts, with the population of each district being as close to each other as is possible; and that the six districts be numbered and represent six different and distinct "places" on the Council. Again, ask them how they feel about a person, in order to qualify for election to any "place" on the City Council, must live in the geographical area represented by that place?

What we hope you will do at the upcoming "Let the Candidate Speak" is come up with some concrete questions which will help all of us who have been left out of the mainstream of life in Lubbock. We want you to have the "guts" enough to put the cards on the table and articulate the problem as it should be. Don't be guilty of asking questions to candidates for city council that should be really addressed to the candidates for the school board. Nor should we confuse the function of a state representative with that of a county commissioner.

The shotgun approach is a thing of the past, so be aware of those type of situations which can easily put you in a bad perspective. If you lay your question out in the right vein, you will be able to tell very quickly if the man is shucking you or not. It's easy to see through a candidate who will tell you one thing at the meeting, and speak with a different attitude across the tracks. This we know, so beware of getting yourself in this type of situation.

We're glad to see this type of program being staged at Bethel Church. We're also glad to see the local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) and the Men's Civic and Social Club join hands and work for the common cause. We hope you are broad minded enough as a citizen and reader of the West Texas Times to participate in this program. We hope you won't stay at home, but be out tonight and get involved as you can. We hope you'll be out to hear the candidates speak. We hope, on the other hand, that each candidate has something to say. Something pertinent to those who live in Lubbock, Lubbock County, and the state of Texas.

As I See It

by T.J. Patterson

It is most gratifying to see Lubbock organizations reach out into America and bring in culture which will benefit the total community. This was the case last Sunday afternoon when the Dunbar Ex-Students Association sponsored the Prairie View Acappella Concert Choir. All that was heard from the persons attending the afternoon at the Dunbar High School was, "very, very good."

The local Dunbar group should be commended for a job well done and hope they continue this type of thing for the entire year. I know that everyone who is a student, or graduate of Dunbar High School, is happy over the effort and should see that this type of effort continues.

I realize that there were only a handful of Dunbar Ex's who worked night and day to see that this was a success. That's the way it goes. There are always a handful who are willing, regardless of the task, to see that something happens.

This writer hopes that last Sunday afternoon's affair will serve as a beginning of something big for the Ex-Student Association. Not only that, but I hope we can see the value of working together for any cause. Lubbock needs more activities such as this. We need more cultural events in our community. The same old thing becomes old hat.

I would, however, like to encourage those dedicated members of the Dunbar Ex-Student Association. Don't get "hung up" on quantity, but rather be concerned about the quality of the work you do. Everyone gets on the bandwagon when it begins to look like something. I am sure this week everyone will be talking about what you did last week. Don't let up, keep on keeping on.

I was happy to hear James Mosley talk about not forgetting what Lubbock has done for him. As you know, James has been a standout on the Red Raider football team at Texas Tech University for several years. He told me that he had a very important call from the Miami Dolphins last Tuesday and is looking positively about making that team.

Millions of football fans saw "Bowling Ball" Mosley in action over ABC-TV in the Gator Bowl. His run from scrimmage will be a challenge for those backs who follow him in the Gator Bowl games.

I'm proud to see the type of attitude that Mosley has about the City of Lubbock. As he puts it, "I appreciate the people of Lubbock and will never forget them." This is good Mosley, Lubbock, Texas Tech Red Raiders and others, won't forget you either.

It appears as though the Student Organization for Black Unity (SOBU) on the Texas Tech campus is off and running for a bigger and better "Black Week" program. Apparently this year, the young people are profiting off the past and coming up with some real good ideas of constructive programs.

I only wish SOBU could have programs every month instead of having only one week a year to proclaim their effort. This organization, like any other on the campus, plays a vital role in the efforts of Texas Tech University. Why not start this once a month, and who knows, maybe we can have something every week.

Without any doubt, there have been more programs geared at the total population of black people this year by all of Tech's black organization. With the program in mind by the SOBU membership, Lubbock should still profit.

BANKERS AND OIL
by Jack Anderson

(Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—Those gas lines that you have to wait in have been caused by a deadly combination of industry greed and government bumbling. But they were also caused by bankers.

The world is awash in oil, but there are not enough refineries to make it into gasoline. The major oil companies have built few refineries in the last 10 years. Here's where the bankers come in.

Independent refiners have had trouble getting financing to build new plants, because of the close ties between the eight major oil companies and the nation's largest banks. Many of the same men, who sit on the boards of the banks, also sit on the boards of the oil companies.

Therefore, they did not want to see the independents build more refineries and cut into the profits of the major oil companies.

In addition to freezing the independents out, the bankers have helped make the oil industry interdependent, rather than competitive. For example, the Chase Manhattan Bank is both the largest shareholder in Atlantic Richfield and the second largest shareholder of Mobil. Obviously, it is not in the bank's interest to promote competition between the two.

The Federal Trade Commission, meanwhile, has charged that the oil business is not free enterprise at all, but a monopoly which operates to the detriment of the public. It has filed suit to break up the oil trust.

Battle for Oman: The headlines hold out hope of peace in the Middle East and detente with Russia. But the opposite is developing in an obscure but strategic corner of the world.

The place is the oil-rich Shiekhdom of Oman, which controls the entrance to the Persian Gulf. All tankers, carrying oil from the world's greatest oil reserves, must pass from the Persian Gulf into the Gulf of Oman.

Under hostile control, Oman could bottle up the flow of oil out of the Persian Gulf. This is the jugular which carries the West's economic lifeblood.

Now the Shiekh of Oman, backed by the United States, is challenged by Communist insurgents, who are backed by the Soviet Union. Our staunch ally, Iran, has dispatched troops to Oman to battle the rebels.

Meanwhile, fishing fleets from both the United States and the Soviet Union have suddenly taken an interest in fishing the crucial Gulf of Oman.

The American fishing vessels are owned by Charles Black, the husband of former child star Shirley Temple. She has close connections with the Nixon Administration. This has led to rumors that her husband's boats are really fishing for information.

The Soviet trawlers are also bristling with electronic gear, more suitable for spying than fishing.

The battle for Oman is beginning to look a little like a rerun of Vietnam. The stakes: access to the world's largest oil supply.

Too Eager: The case against the Watergate defendants may be jeopardized by overeager prosecutors. This is causing concern among Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski's lawyers. They are particularly upset over the trial of former Attorney General John Mitchell and Commerce Secretary Maurice Stans.

The Watergate prosecutors secretly believe Mitchell and Stans stand a good chance of acquittal. They fear this will influence the juries that hear the Watergate cases and may adversely affect the chances of obtaining convictions.

The Jaworski team blames the New York prosecutors who were so eager to get into the Watergate spotlight that they went ahead with a weak case. The trouble with the case, my sources say, is that a principal player, Robert Vesco, won't be there. He is still in the Caribbean, ducking subpoenas. Without Vesco, the New York prosecutors may have trouble convicting Mitchell and Stans.

The Watergate prosecutors, themselves, were also too eager to nail a prominent Democrat and, thereby, prove they were nonpartisan. They asked the grand jury to indict a former Lyndon Johnson aide, Jake Jacobson, for allegedly lying about his role in the milk scandal.

But the indictment, the prosecutors secretly fear, was faulty and eventually will be thrown out. This may cause future juries to question the Watergate indictments.

Budget Bombs: Once again, the Pentagon is asking for billions of dollars to develop new weapons. Last year, they requested $8.5 billion for research and development. This year, they want $9.3 billion.

Once work starts on a weapon, it is almost impossible to stop. Commanders use them as excuses to demand more men, more money, more gold braid. Bureaucracies build up around them.

In 1964, for example, the Army began developing the "main battle tank." Seven years and $235 million later, Congress ordered it junked. But last year, it showed up in the budget again—as the SM-1.

Then there's the Cheyenne helicopter. After six years and $40 million, it too was shelved. But last year it was back as the "advanced attack helicopter."

And remember the B-1 manned bomber, which keeps disappearing and reappearing on the Pentagon drawing boards? Last year, the brass hats appeared before a closed session of a Senate Subcommittee and pleaded for more money for the B-1 bomber. They got it.

All too often, the weapons that the Army develops don't work right. For example, the Army has started to mass-produce a truck, which is supposed to be able to float across calm water. Army drivers drove it into Maryland's Chesapeake Bay recently for a test run. It sank.

DEAR EDITOR

Dear Sir:
I, Lee A. Banks, a former Lubbock boy and brother of Mrs. J.B. Mason of 1705 Avenue B, have been reading your paper, which has been passed on to me by my brother, Lewis Banks. I would like to know if I could have the West Texas Times come direct to my home for one year, twice a month and what would it cost me?

I would also love to give you some information for your paper. I would like to give the history of Lubbock from 1922, beginning May, until 1942, when I left there for good. When we moved to Lubbock in 1922, there was no more than 12 Negro families living in the Flats, as it was called then (from Avenue A to Avenue C, from 16th St. to 17th or 18th St.) It was nothing but a mud trail. So was the rest.

Now I will wait until I hear from you. There will be no charges for my story. I just want the Negroes to know just what Lubbock was like 50 years ago. It will be true, no gimmicks, no false, no play. Just truth.

Sir, I cannot write too good, and cannot type, but I can punch out well enough for you to understand the words I misspell, please correct them in your paper. My nickname is Dutie. Ask Almo Sedberry about Dutie Banks. Hoping to hear from you soon. Does Sonny Johns still live, my first cousin?

Dear Mr. Banks:
I am more than happy to print anything you may have about Lubbock. You can receive the West Texas Times, not twice a month, but every week in the month for only $4.00 a year. Because of your interest, I am going to place you on the mailing list this week. Don't worry about your spelling, there are a lot of so called educated people who can't spell. As one man said many years ago, "The correct spelling is when people understand what you are writing." I did understand what you have written. I will be looking forward to receiving your story about Lubbock. Ye Ed.

Dear Editor:
On December 30, I fell and broke my hip. On Jan. 12, I celebrated my 90th birthday in the hospital. Mrs. G.H. Davis made me a birthday cake and the nurses at West Texas Hospital and friends helped me celebrate.

I want to take time now and thank all of my friends for being so nice with your gifts, money, cards and most of all, for your prayers. I love pretty cards.

I want to thank Rev. Cleveland for the lovely gift. I am a member of Lyons Chapel Missionary Baptist Church and a faithful member. I like to visit New Jerusalem, Bethel and New Hope. I want to thank the Mission for coming and having mission with me. The deacons have been so nice. I am home from the hospital with my niece, Clara Etta Brown, 3616 E. 15th St. If I walk again it's the Lord's will. If not, it is still His will.

Thanks, Thanks

Police Beat

House Burglary

Shirley Bates, 608 Hub Homes, reported to Lubbock Police one day last week that someone unknown, within the last week, took a .22 automatic rifle from her apartment.

She told police that she had no idea who could have taken the rifle which was valued at approximately $50.

House Burglary

Byron Davis, 1928 East Auburn Avenue, reported to Lubbock Police that he caught two burglars in his house one evening last week. He told police that he saw two women at his back door as he got out of his car and entered the house. He noticed that one of the women had his wife's brown purse.

The young ladies, after seeing Mr. Davis, broke and ran out of the back door. He chased one of them for approximately three blocks and came back and got the other one.

Entry was apparently gained through a window glass which was broken. Taken from the house was approximately $20 in change from his wife's purse.

House Burglary

In another house burglary, Wilbert Locke, 1511 East 9th Street, reported to Lubbock police that someone entered his residence by kicking in the rear door and took several items from his house.

Taken from his residence were a portable 8-track tape player and one 8-track tape player with two speakers. These tape players were valued at approximately $449.

Theft Over $5.00

Betty Beavers, 2814 Weber Drive, Apt. C, reported to Lubbock police that she had a terrible problem one day last week. She and a man were sitting on the bed in her apartment one day last week when the problems happened.

She told police that she got up and left the room. She left her purse lying on the bed next to the man. In the billfold of the purse was $36. When Betty returned, he told her he needed some money to get some dope. She refused to give it to him. He then left and she found that $10 was missing from her purse.

She told police that she would file charges on the man.

Attempted House Burglary

Ella McLin, 1001 East 28th Street, No. 34, reported to the Lubbock Police Department that she was really shocked one evening last week. She said that someone attempted to pry open her bedroom window at the apartment.

She said she opened the venetian blinds and saw a bald headed man or a person with a close haircut looking at her.

She believes that she scared him away when she opened up the blinds.

Sports of The Times

by Joe Kelly

Texas allowed Creighton to win, UCLA demolished USC, South Carolina was upset, Kansas won the Big 8—and so what else is new? The above mentioned action merely narrows the field for the NCAA regional playoffs, which probably will be as hectic as ever.

I thought Texas had a chance to beat Creighton and the Horns probably would have, except that they got rattled by a full court press. In the final nine minutes or so, the Blue Jays outscored the Horns, 26-4.

Texas had a good team, but the best team, at the end of the Southwest Conference race, unquestionably was SMU. No one knows for sure, of course, but the Ponies probably would have beaten Creighton.

The runners-up tournament, in which SMU will be playing, should be a good tournament. If the layoff hasn't hurt them too much the Ponies ought to make a good showing. They move the ball well, they're quick, they have good shooting and they play good defense.

As for UCLA, the Bruins clearly sounded a warning—they are far from dead. If their showing against USC wasn't one of the most impressive by any team in recent years, it would be hard to top.

Bill Walton, the most dominating player in college circles today, had a fantastic performance. He seemed to be everywhere on the floor, offensively and defensively. He controlled the boards and he set the tempo. He was almost unstoppable.

The most impressive thing about UCLA probably was its defensive play. USC couldn't get untracked in the face of a tenacious defense that stuck to the Trojan players like flypaper.

I've only seen one performance that equalled it. It was the 1962 playoffs at Manhattan, Kansas. A good Colorado team beat Tech, 67-60, and then played defending NCAA champion Cincinnati. The game was rated about a tossup, with the edge to the champs.

I don't remember the score. I do remember the Bearcats' defense. Every move a Colorado player made was like looking in a mirror, so tightly did Cincinnati guard.

At the half Colorado had managed 19 points, compared to the mere 13 USC scored Saturday night. Cincinnati was maybe not as far in front as UCLA was, but it was comparable. They literally destroyed the Buffs with the defense they turned in.

Right now, based on UCLA's performance, I'd have to go with the Pacific 8 champions. They were awesome against a Trojan team that is far better than it looked. They should be great games coming up.

Kim Taliaferro, the fine Clovis athlete, may not be the difference between a conference champion and second place, but he's a long step in the right direction. It takes a lot of Taliaferros to make a winner, but Tech appears to be getting that type.

I've been watching Dan Irons usher in church the last two or three Sundays. He's big enough to go lion hunting with his bare hands. And he's only one of several big, strong linemen the Raiders are developing. With players like that, Tech is on the right track.

Congratulations are certainly in order for Rich Little and Rick Bullock for making both AP and UPI all-conference teams and to William Johnson for making the second five.

Little grew from a selfish player to one of the most unselfish in the league, a fine defensive player. Bullock improved this year and became widely feared.

And Johnson could have easily been picked, because he did it all, offense and defense and also was unselfish.

Most of last week, while I was in Abilene, the temperature was in the 80s, flowers are blooming, trees are leafing out and grass is turning green.

And fishermen are heading out in droves, even though they said the bass still were in deep water. And yet some good catches were being reported in Abilene area lakes and apparently there are a lot of people who are ready, because, for the first time this spring, there were loads of cars towing boats on the Abilene-Lubbock highway.

Ran into Bill Hart, former A-J sports staffer, one night at dinner in Abilene. He is now with the paper there following a stint for six years in Binghamton, N.Y. He thoroughly enjoyed it there.

In addition to being glad to be back in Texas, he had just returned from the Border Olympics, where he had a wonderful time. He got to talking about Vern Hilliard, Tech's able track coach.

"A lot of people don't understand Vernon," Bill declared, "but he's always done a good job. Yes, and he's left every college he's served with better track facilities than when he took over."

The Roundup—Chuck Harrison, former Tech football and baseball star, later a first baseman for the Houston Astros and others, is running for the Abilene School Board. He's 32, has some school-age kids. He's in the real estate business....Saw Bill Metzger Friday. The former Hubber gripped an imaginary bat and said, "I'm ready for spring training!" To which I said, "Yeah, to watch, not play." He agreed....The rumor has reached Abilene that the A-J is for sale....Frank Caldwell, Lubbock public schools defensive driver teacher, is proud of his son, whose 12-13 year old team is undefeated in the Little Dribblers League....With Dandy Don Meredith leaving, Monday night football is going to be as interesting as watching Congress take action on legislation....They roasted Bobby Riggs on the Dean Martin show the other night. Bobby, aside from the remarkable resemblance to Artie Johnson, looked about as comfortable as someone wearing brown shoes with a blue serge suit....Unfortunately, the SWC record book doesn't have seasonal records for the past, so no one knows how long it has been since a league champion has gone to the NCAA playoffs with a 12-14 record, or worse....And then there's the one about the sweet young thing who thought a praying mantis was a baseball priest!
