Lubbock Woman, Mrs. Sandra Cleaver Eyes Mayor's Seat

Mrs. Sandra S. Cleaver, a city resident and unit manager at Lubbock's General Electric Credit Corporation, filed her candidacy for the mayor's office Wednesday.

In a written statement, Mrs. Cleaver cited the rising crime rate and the city's fiscal policy as issues.

"When our city is reduced to volunteers organizing to fight crime, we are in trouble," she said.

"A responsible, effective city government can and should protect the public domain."

Mrs. Cleaver has spent eight years in the business profession and said she believes her expertise will be an asset to city government.

"Without growth potential and current stability, there is no reason why the citizens of Lubbock should accept fiscal irresponsibility," she said.

Sandra Cleaver was born and raised in the city of Lubbock. She is married and has one child.

Three More Candidates Prepare For State, County Political Races

Thursday was a busy day for political candidates as Jim Teaver announced his candidacy for state representative in district 75-B. And Wayne Kirkpatrick announced he had filed for the sheriff's office currently held by Choc Blanchard. By the filing deadline Monday evening, Bobby Williams also announced he was running for the eastern district state representative seat.

Other candidates for political office include Sandra Cleaver, who is running for mayor, and Lee Hunter who announced Tuesday he was running for city council.

Three more candidates filed for state and county posts this past week as the deadline to file for state and county offices expired Monday evening.

Terence Wayne Kirkpatrick announced his intent to file as a democratic candidate for sheriff last Thursday, and Jim Teaver and Bobby Williams, both Democrats, announced for state representative in district 75-B.

Jim Teaver, citing his 6 years of experience as a legislative aide in Austin, said Thursday that people should elect him to office because of his experience in the capital.

If elected, the 23-year-old Teaver said he would support the Tech medical school and work on the water problem in West Texas.

"It's going to take planning and coordination with other states," he said.

Teaver plans to take his campaign "to the people to find out what they need, and then see if I can provide it."

"I can listen to minorities," he said.

The University of Texas graduate said he plans to use volunteers in his door-to-door campaign.

Bobby Williams announced he would run for the state representative post Monday.

The Insurance and Real Estate Broker said he "hopes to carry to Austin ideas such as conservative fiscal policies, possible mandatory sentences for criminals who perpetrate crimes with guns, tightening of parole guidelines for hardened criminals, removing unnecessary people from the welfare rolls, and decentralization of government."

"I think I have ideas that are similar to a lot of people in the area. It is time to get some of those ideas in Austin," the Texas Tech graduate said.

Williams said specific issues affecting the West Texas area were "the high rate of crime, and monetary policies the governor is taking."

Lubbock County Water District Election Results Declared Final

Recently elected officials for the Lubbock County Water Control and Improvement District No. 1 were sworn into office Monday and the new board voted to award bids for construction of additional camping spaces at the lake, and scheduled dates for bicycle, go-cart, sailboat, and powerboat races in 1976.

Those sworn into office were Burl H. Kizer, V.G. Browning, and C.B. (Cubby) Key. Final results from the January 17 election were: Cubby Key 787 votes, Burl Kizer 737 votes, V.G. Browning 731 votes, Albert Curry, Jr. 296 votes, Frances Pate 294 votes, Hurshel Roberts 242 votes. The total vote Truelock 83 votes. The total vote count for the county-wide election was 1104.

The new board for the water district, which controls Buffalo Springs Lake, elected Max Wiser president to replace the retiring Gordon H. Rose, Cubby Key vice president, H.D. Waller secretary, and V.G. Browning treasurer.

In the first order of business, board members awarded Plains Utility Company an $18,840 contract for construction of utility hookups, and water and sewage lines for 10 additional campsites in the "A" area of the park. A contract for $10,540 was awarded to Kerr Construction Company for paving a loop roadway through another section of the camping area which would provide access to an additional 50 campsites with electrical plug-ins.

Both bids were the lowest among those presented to the water district for the campsite construction work.

According to George Hensley of Parkhill, Smith and Cooper, the architectural firm handling the bids, construction on the campsites will start within the next two weeks.

"We're in the process right now of preparing documents" for the finalized contract, he said.

"It may be as much as one to two weeks before work is started."

Board members also approved an April 10-11 date for the 16th annual lake go-kart race; a September 12 date for a sail boat regatta on the lower lake; a May 30, June 13, July 4, and August 15 date for power boat races on the upper lakes of the district; and an April 25th date for a bicycle race along the road circling the top of the canyon.

In other action, the water district board voted to send Jim Segrest, general manager for Buffalo Springs Lake, to the Texas Water Conservation Association convention in Corpus Christi on February 25-27, and to authorize Elmer East, who handles the lake's legal affairs, to be an official delegate representing the water district, though his expenses will not be paid; —commemorate Gordon H. Rose, who is retiring after 12 years on the district's board of directors; —and to study a proposal for collecting garbage fees totalling $2.00 - $2.50 each month from lake residents.

Action on the garbage fee proposal will be taken in the next board meeting March 25th.

Survival Big Question for Blacks During Bicentennial

Federal Communications Commissioner Benjamin Hooks told blacks attending the 83rd Founder's Day at the Hampton Institute that what blacks had to celebrate this year was survival.

"I believe that despite all the inequalities in the history of black folk in this country we do have something to celebrate and that's survival," Hooks said.

We feel Hooks was correct when he said any progress made by blacks in this country "has been made on the shoulders of those who have gone before us and made life easier for us through their suffering."

Still No Blacks in Tax Assessor's Office

Every year about this time, we call to the attention of the public, that despite all the black people who buy license plates at the Lubbock County Tax Assessor's office, this year everything is still the same. There are still no blacks being hired to work in this department.

Although car owners won't be buying plates per se, they will still have to purchase their 1976 sticker for their plates. It would make a lot of sense if something was done about the hiring of blacks and other minorities in this area of government.

After all, this is the Bicentennial Year. All people should be given an opportunity to work in the various areas of government on a full time or part time basis. As we've said in the past, we at the West Texas Times will be more than willing to get the word out that blacks and minorities are wanted at the Tax Assessor's Office.

Good Job, AKA's

Members of the Eta Delta Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority should be commended for a job well done last Saturday evening with their sponsorship of a two hour "Mini-Thon," over KMCC-TV, Channel 28, for the United Negro College Fund.

Those citizens who gave to this worthy cause should be glad that they gave to a worthy cause for educating young people in America. The theme of the United Negro College Fund—a mind is a terrible thing to waste—is so true.

We hope next year this organization will put this same project on, and increase their time from two hours to seven hours. We believe this program helped enlighten the black people of Lubbock and the South Plains to what black people are doing and what they can still do.

We say, good job, AKA's.

"As I See It"

by T.J. Patterson

If we take a look at the violence and vandalism in the nation's public schools, as parents we can no longer say that it is kid stuff. Information I've received recently from the National Education Association (NEA) reveals that this situation has reached crisis proportions.

Last year, American school children committed 100 murders, 12,000 armed robberies, 9,000 rapes, and 204,000 aggravated assaults against teachers and each other, according to the February, 1976, issue of the NEA Reporter, a publication sent to the Association's 1.7 million members.

This report also reveals that children were responsible for 270,000 school burglaries, and vandalized over $600 million worth of school property.

Although these figures are on the national scene, it should cause concern for every parent and taxpayer on the local level. As parents, we should investigate and see what kinds of problems our Lubbock Independent School System is having in the above mentioned areas.

"Something must be done about students who are engaging in serious criminal offenses," one teacher said. Another teacher stated "No English teacher should have to rehabilitate heroin pushers."

I've said many times to many people, kids like to be told what to do and not asked what they would like to do all the time.

Speaking of education, Texas Tech University will sponsor a College Day later this month. This is a university-wide day for academic recruiting. Many high schools, including juniors and seniors, junior college students, and counselors from both high schools and junior colleges have been invited.

This big day—the first to my knowledge—will take place Friday, February 27.

As I See It, high school students in Lubbock should take advantage of this type of effort, since this day gives many local students a chance to visit the various colleges on the campus of Texas Tech University.

Texas Tech has a lot of things to offer young people. This writer would hope that the counselors at Dunbar, Coronado, Lubbock, Estacado, and Monterey High Schools, will take advantage of this opportunity to help the kids.

How many of you have thought that if you live long enough, you are going to get old. That's absolutely true if you keep on living in this world.

I say that because in Lubbock, there are no programs to help these people whom we refer to as Senior Citizens. Regardless of their socio-economic background, they made it possible for people like you and I to have a better place to live in Lubbock and the South Plains.

It appears, however, that these people have been forgotten in many areas. To me, the Senior Citizens of our community are untapped resources which could be used in decision making areas of our city.

The City of Lubbock needs to look at possible programs for Senior Citizens of Lubbock. Age has no prejudice toward ones race, creed, color, or national origin. We need to help make things happen for the Senior Citizens of Lubbock. After all, we need to show them that we care about what they have done for our city, county, state and nation.

An interesting publication, the "Town Crier," which is published by the City Manager's Office, lists the latest crime statistics in our city, and compares them to the national average.

The crime index increased both nationwide and in Lubbock. Nationwide crime increased 17 percent, while regionally, crimes jumped 16 percent. What the report identifies as regional, is an area encompassing Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas and Texas.

These crime statistics, according to the report, "are at best a rough approximation of the crime problem because of the differences in reporting systems." The statistics, however, give a clear indication of the problem that crime causes in Lubbock.

The Lubbock Police Department should be commended for clearing more cases than the national average in 1974. Examples of this are in the following cases: Cases (cleared) Murder - 80% in U.S. and 95% in Lubbock. Robbery - 27% in U.S. and 44% in Lubbock. Burglary - 18% in U.S. and 27.4% (business) 20.1% (residence) in Lubbock.

Lubbock police personnel compared favorably with 1.6 people for every 1,000 residents. In the U.S., 2.3 people are available for protection for every 1,000 citizens. Regionally, Lubbock is equal to 1.6 per persons.

One staggering area is the majority of crimes that are committed by repeat offenders. The FBI Uniform Crime Reports - 1974 indicate that 65% of the persons arrested in 1970-74 were repeat offenders. This is an indication, in my opinion, that crime repeats should be handled in a different manner.

Evidently, the LPD is doing what it can with what it has to work with. As the report indicated, crime and police protection are vital concerns of every citizen of Lubbock.

BETSY ROSS SHOWING THE FLAG TO GEN. WASHINGTON

Betsy Ross, a seamstress who lived in Philadelphia, held the position of official flag maker for the Pennsylvania Navy. In June 1776, a delegation headed by General George Washington commissioned her to make a flag based on the rough design they gave her. The flag originally was to have six-pointed stars, but Mrs. Ross convinced Gen. Washington to use five-pointed stars instead. The flag she made was adopted by Congress on June 14, 1777, as the official flag of the United States of America. From the collection of American National Insurance Company, Galveston, Texas.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

IRS HARASSMENT

by Jack Anderson with Joe Spear

(Copyright, 1976, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—We receive constant complaints from taxpayers who say they have been bullied and browbeaten by the Internal Revenue Service.

Of course, the IRS is supposed to be firm but fair with all taxpayers. Rich and poor alike are supposed to be equal in the sharp eye of the tax collectors. Top officials tell us they try to administer the tax laws without regard for social standing or political pull.

Yet policy and practice don't always coincide. Tax settlements are often reached by a process about as equitable as a medieval trial by fire.

The rich man has recourse to lawyers and experts who can find loopholes in the law or can stall a case in the courts. In contrast, those without money are often hounded by collectors whose methods would put a loan shark to shame. Many a widow's last mite has been snatched from her. Men have been stripped of their livelihood and, along with it, their only means of paying the government.

We have been investigating IRS harassment. Here are just a few examples. We have left out the victims' names to spare them from further retribution.

—A businessman in Washington complained that IRS agents actually rifled his cash register to collect delinquent taxes.

—The wife of an airline pilot under Internal Revenue investigation received abusive phone calls from agents.

—IRS agents began an investigation into a Florida doctor's private life. Several of his patients were interviewed.

—An unemployed man in Montana had all the funds in his pathetic bank account seized by the IRS.

One of the most insidious federal weapons is the jeopardy assessment, which is supposed to be used to tie up the funds of a taxpayer who might try to skip the country. Agents have used this power indiscriminately, however, to force settlements out of reluctant taxpayers.

Now, the victims of Internal Revenue abuse may get their day on the witness stand. We have learned that a Senate subcommittee, headed by Senator Joseph Montoya, will hold hearings on tax harassment in April. The subcommittee will go the people and hold hearings in Chicago, New York City, Oklahoma City and San Francisco.

We also understand masks will be provided for witnesses who don't want to be identified.

Dragon Lady: There is one foreign visitor whom the State Department hates to see. She happens to be one of the world's most glamorous women.

She is the First Lady of the Philippines, Imelda Marcos, a beautiful woman whose beguiling smile has charmed the scowls off the world's most cantankerous leaders.

But the protocol officials at the State Department grit their teeth every time she shows up in the United States. She seldom bothers to notify them. She simply arrives, unannounced.

Then she starts making difficult demands and poking her nose into delicate matters. She has come to be regarded more as a pest than a guest.

She always insists, for example, upon a White House reception. And she gets her dander up if it doesn't meet her expectations.

She suddenly appeared in this country late last year, for example. She loitered around New York City for a number of days with little to do. A confidential report on her visit claimed she was waiting for Spain's Dictator Franco to die so she could fly to Madrid for the funeral. She likes the pomp and ceremony of such international occasions.

Meanwhile, she asked to be received at the White House. There was bickering over schedules. But a 45-minute tea break was arranged with Betty Ford. Imelda showed up but was detained at the White House gate. Someone had failed to notify the guards. She was furious.

Then President Ford neglected to drop by to greet her at the tea session. She became more furious. Finally, the two First Ladies exchanged gifts. Imelda was so disappointed in her gift that she left it behind.

She was literally sputtering with rage, according to our sources, when she left the country.

Mexican Connection: At the Justice Department, attorneys are preparing an unprecedented indictment against one of Mexico's top law enforcement officials. He will be accused of conspiring with the drug smugglers he was supposed to be investigating. They smuggled millions worth of heroin into the United States.

The U.S., we learned, has brought this case to the personal attention of Mexico's President, Luis Echeverria, who is cooperating in the investigation of his own official.

Washington Whirl: Twelve years ago, a letter bearing the signature of Congressman Gerald Ford was worth but a few cents. Today, President Ford's autograph sells for about $150 . . . Chile's military junta apparently feels a kinship for other autocrats, regardless of their political stripes. In November, the Chilean embassy lowered its flag to half-mast to mourn the death of Spain's fascist leader, Francisco Franco. The flag went down again a few weeks ago in honor of Chinese Communist Premier Chou En-lai . . . The heat failed in the office of federal energy chief Frank Zarb recently, but he soon had a roaring fire going in his antique fireplace. He used old copies of The Wall Street Journal to start it . . . One Senator, who begged anonymity, told us he rolls up copies of the Congressional Record for fireplace logs.

Bullock Releases Names of Delinquent Accounts

Comptroller Bob Bullock released the names last week of 231 delinquents in the Lubbock district against whom the state has court judgments for back sales taxes totaling $381,375.22.

"This isn't a debt to a bureaucracy," said Bullock. "This is money these delinquents owe the taxpayers of this state. Every penny of it was collected from taxpayers who thought it was going to their state and city government. Instead, it went into somebody's pocket."

Statewide, he said, there are 6,500 persons with sales tax judgments against them totaling $12.5 million.

The Comptroller said he is sending every newspaper, television and radio station in the state a list of those delinquents in their area who have state judgments against them. The information is all public record, he said.

"They didn't start owing this yesterday, either," he said. "This is money we spent months trying to collect before going to court."

"Sure, it's going to embarrass some folks and make them mad," Bullock said. "But I'd rather have 6,500 red-faced delinquents coming into our district offices to pay up, grumbling all the while, than to have the other 11 million citizens of this state mad at me for letting this debt to them continue to gather dust."

He said many of the judgments are more than a decade old, and the delinquents named may have left the state. "But many of them are still living in their communities, ignoring our demands for payment, confident nothing will happen," he said.

Bullock reported only a few of Looking Back Over The Years . . .

"Integration Hurt Black Kids", According to Mrs. C. H. Kyle

by T.J. Patterson

(Editor's Note: Mrs. Celestine H. Kyle, a resident of Lubbock since 1952, organized the first drill team at Dunbar High School.)

Did you ever have any problems with the girls on the drill team?

"No, I didn't because we had a real good understanding. You see, in those days, the teacher got respect from the student. If you didn't get respect, you could always talk to the parents. The parents would always get on the child if there were problems at school. The principal also did his part in getting on the child who had caused a problem. Now days, the parents just don't go along with the teachers who are trying to help the child."

What do you mean, the parent doesn't go along with the teacher?

"Well, the parents seem to think whatever the child tells them is right. Many parents think that the teachers are wrong and the child is right. With this kind of an attitude, you just don't get the respect you got in those days."

Do you think it's the lack of parent involvement?

"Of course, I'm not talking about all parents. There are some who will not cooperate with the schools and teachers. To me, it seems as though its the great majority of parents who don't really care about what their child is doing."

How did black high school fellows treat the black girls?

"I think they treated the black girls with a little more respect than they do today. You see, during those days you didn't have so much narcotics or dope on the high school campus. In fact, until integration you didn't have all these drugs on the campuses of predominately black schools. Negro kids just didn't fool with all those drugs. This integration has brought all those kinds of habits on the campuses of schools."

Are you saying that the moral attitude of black kids has declined because of integration?

"Yes, I would say so."

What about the attitudes of black kids today in the high schools?

"Well, to be frank, you know, back in those days when I first came to Lubbock, the average Negro student was behind in their books. This was attributed to the fact that black kids had to pick cotton so many weeks during the cotton harvest. This would put many of them behind in their subjects. It seemed as though when they got into school on a regular basis, they worked real hard to catch up. You know catching up and keeping up are two different things. Kids wouldn't mind you working with them in those days as compared to now."

What kind of discipline did a teacher use on kids when they were rude?

"In those days, a teacher could spank a kid if you had a witness. Kids don't go for that now. Schools still don't allow them to drink and smoke on campus, but they still walk around with their cigarettes. They smoke constantly in the bathrooms. Not only are kids cussing and drawing knives, but they are cutting each other. This is happening all over town."

Why is it kids are always doing these things and nothing is done about it?

"Well, I guess it's because the parents back them (kids)."

Are you saying that parents back their kids in these activities?

"Well, I don't say they will back them, but something has gone wrong and I just can't pinpoint it. I think kids these days are left too much on their own. They don't see mom or dad enough, and mom and dad don't tell them what's right nor do they set up any specific rules for their kids. They (parents) should tell their kids what they can and can't do. Kids set their own rules and regulations, and come and go as they please. When I first came to Lubbock, kids didn't have cars and so much money as they have now to spend. An average kid can get out of high school now and take a job. He buys his own car and buys his own liquor. There are so many selling dope at the high schools."

What has really made it slack in your opinion?

"I think all these laws have made things too slack. They've passed laws where the kids can wear anything. They come to school looking any kind of way. I think that deducts from their moral values. You know, if a person looks sloppy and acts sloppy, the results will be a sloppy situation."

Why were there more activities at Dunbar in those days?

"Well, it goes back that the average Negro teacher was very interested in the Negro child, and in trying to help him all that he could."

Are you saying Negro teachers are not as interested as they were then?

"Well, you see, we are not in an all Negro situation now. You are just kind of barred from doing some of the things that you did. We did a lot of things on our own that was not required of us. Now, I think most teachers just do what is required. I have left home at 6 in the morning to go practice basketball with the girls. I also would practice tennis. I wasn't getting paid for doing that for the girls. I'd leave going to Abilene or San Angelo with a team of girls or drill squad and wouldn't get back sometimes until the next morning. I wasn't paid for doing that. I enjoyed doing it, because I was helping the kids and they were enjoying it. It seems as though they appreciated it. As long as the kids appreciated it, I didn't mind doing it."

Was it a challenge for you to work with the kids the extra mile?

"We kind of saw the kids come out of the ruff. You know, to see a child develop means something to you."

Are those days gone for the kids?

"Yes, those days are not here anymore. You see, by being integrated, there are just a few kids. We did try to involve all the kids. Now, only the ones involved kind of stand out and have aspirations of doing something. The kids at the bottom of the bean pot are never helped. He's not even identified. In a way, integration has hurt many of our Negro kids. At Dunbar High School, we tried to involve all of the kids. We had a lot of activities and a large number of the kids were involved. I remember when Mr. Roberts became band director, he had about 125 students. You don't have that many kids participating now. Even in integration over at Lubbock High, we hardly have two black kids in the band. There are several on the football team, but that's not enough to make up for the lack of involvement of blacks in high school. We only have one or two in the choir at Lubbock High, and you know Negroes can sing. Now, it's not that they are not asked to get into the choir over there because they are. Black kids seem non-concerned. Black kids at Lubbock High seem to have a resentment."

Are you saying that black kids who go to predominately white schools resent being there?

"Yes, they apparently resent the white teachers."

What do you think our basic problems in the black community are?

"We don't have enough parent involvement and other outside citizens involved. You see, basically, you just have the teachers, and the black teachers can't involve themselves in the community."

Why can't the black teachers involve themselves in the community?

"I would think because of the politics involved. A teacher should

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Every week is the week for decision in the Southwest Conference and the days ahead are no exception. Saturday the Red Raiders meet TCU in Fort Worth, followed by Texas here on Tuesday and then the BIG game, Tech at A&M on Saturday.

It's gotten to the point now where each and every game is most important. There can't be any slip-ups, because no one game is going to make the difference.

A week ago it appeared to be simply a two-team race between Tech and the Aggies. That was before SMU went on a three game winning streak, which propelled the Mustangs back into consideration.

In fact, after Tech beat the Ponies, Sonny Allen said he guessed that about ended their hopes. He was wrong. That night Arkansas beat A&M and, coupled with SMU's defeats of Houston, Rice and Arkansas, it became a three-team fight.

Baylor even had, as of Saturday night, an outside chance, although the Bears' 6-4 record gave faint hope. Barring a miracle, the other five teams are out of it. Rice and Texas have been out for a long time. Now Arkansas, Houston and TCU join the group.

Starting next week, A&M has three games at home and three on the road; Tech has two on the road, three at home. But the Raiders must go to Aggieland Saturday in a real showdown.

This week the Aggies have an edge, playing at home against Texas and Saturday going against Baylor. Tech hosted Arkansas Tuesday, must go to TCU on Saturday.

This coming Tuesday A&M must visit SMU, never an easy assignment, and Tech hosts Texas. Then all the marbles will be on the line, presumably, when the Raiders invade College Station. And this should be another one of those giant battles.

The Aggies won the first meeting in Lubbock, and they must be given the edge at home. Still, there is hope for the Raiders. It's going to take an all out effort, though.

In their first meeting, Tech definitely looked like the better team the first half. Then the Raiders tired and the last half belonged to the Aggies, as well as the game. It would be incredible if Tech played as poorly for an entire half again.

The results so far have been interesting. A&M and SMU are the only teams, after Jan. 31 games, that hadn't lost at home, while Arkansas has beaten both Tech and A&M, while losing to SMU. If SMU hadn't lost to Tech, A&M and TCU on the road, it would be even tighter.

Houston, excluding winless Rice, is the only team that hasn't won a road game. Arkansas, TCU and Texas each have won once on the road, while Tech and A&M have four road wins.

As usual, the home court advantage shows up strongly. Conference teams have won 26 out of 40 on their home courts, while managing only 16 victories out of 42 tries on the road.

Tech and A&M, as of Jan. 31, had accounted for 50 per cent, eight out of 16, while Baylor chipped in three. SMU two. Five of SMU's seven wins have been at home. Arkansas and Houston each had four.

One of the more interesting moments in the season took place in the Tech-Houston game. Tech held a one-point lead and it sounded as if Tech had possession with 10 seconds left. Then it was determined a foul had been called.

Which would you rather be true—possession with 10 seconds left, or a free throw with a chance for two points?

I asked some knowledgeable basketball people that question Sunday and, without exception, they replied that they would rather have possession.

With Steve Dunn and Geoff Huston, you could kill the clock. A free throw is dangerous. Miss the first, give the other team possession and there's time for the winning basket.

Rick Bullock, of course, solved it. He sank both free throws and that was the game. And that was the acid test.

This is the week for decision for many high school football players. They must, if offered football scholarships to college, make up their minds. That's not easy.

In fact, it would be the most difficult task for any schoolboy. He is wined, dined, praised, promised and would not be human if not confused by it all. Still, he has to make a choice and when he makes it, he's not really sure it's the right one.

There isn't much talk coming out of Tech, but A&M, Texas and Baylor have been announcing several players. Still, Raider fans shouldn't be upset.

Blue chip high school boys are not always the players who make winners. There are many who don't make the headlines who later develop into stars through coaching and motivation. I have every confidence that Steve Sloan and his staff will have a good recruiting season.

UNCF Telethon Receives Good Response Here Saturday

by Richard Mason

Viewers turning to KMCC-TV last Saturday evening saw something new to West Texas.

There on Channel 28 was the first telethon held for the United Negro College Fund in this part of the state. With the cameras alternating between a Las Vegas show which included such personalities as Billy Eckstine, Mel Torme, and Rich Little, and a Lubbock show featuring local community leaders, television viewers witnessed a well run professional production.

What they saw was the end result of months of preparation, planning, organization, and at times uncertainty by the sisters of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority, who sponsored the event.

Members of the local sorority began the final steps for the show by informing community organizations for the purpose and intent of the telethon by brochures, talks, and invitations to those groups to participate.

The response was - well it was phenomenal.

"I think it was tremendous," Mel Shaw, executive director of the Dallas office for UNCF, and a host for the show, said.

"It went far beyond what we expected."

That response included the participation of local civic, social, and church clubs, community leaders, and more than 100 volunteers to man the phones, and monitor the community.

By Tuesday morning, members of the sorority had received "upwards of $6,000" for UNCF with contributions still arriving. The bulk of that money will be used to finance the five UNCF schools in Texas with the remainder going to the national office of the organization.

But the telethon had as its purpose more than just earning money.

"We had in mind educating the public about UNCF," Joan Crawford, a sorority member and organizer for the event, said.

The United Negro College Fund provides money for scholarships, faculty-salaries, development of remedial programs, teaching equipment, and operating costs for black colleges. The results of this effort are found throughout the business and professional world.

Some 85 per cent of black physicians, 80 per cent of black federal judges, and 75 per cent of black Americans with Ph.Ds are graduates of UNCF colleges. All told, there are over 175,000 graduates living today who have attended these schools.

UNCF schools in Texas are Paul Quinn College, Wiley College, Jarvis Christian College, Houston-Tillotson, Bishop College, and Texas College.

Each year, chapters of Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority undertake projects to raise money for UNCF. The methods for earning the money are left to each local chapter. The Lubbock group decided to sponsor a telethon after they saw an advertisement in a national UNCF newsletter.

"We saw in a national magazine where if we contacted Mel Shaw and the Texas Association of Developing Colleges, they'd come by and help us," Marjorie Thomas, a sorority member and organizer for the event, said.

So members of the sorority began working with the Dallas TADC office to plan the telethon. The Dallas group had frequently run radiothons in the Dallas-Fort Worth area to raise money, but a telethon-particularly in West Texas-was totally new.

"We've never had any luck in West Texas at all," Mel Shaw said. "We could never get the involvement or leadership." But that's where the Alphas came in. They began soliciting organizations in the community such as churches, clubs, sororities and fraternities to participate in the effort.

The social group obtained airtime and technical assistance from the KMCC television studio. Together with the station and the Dallas office, the group worked out time and planning, and carefully organized the show.

But the big question revolved around how the community would respond, since the telethon could only work if the community supported it.

"We weren't too sure how the general population would react," Ms. Thomas said.

That question was answered and all uncertainty dispelled soon after the show began. Not only did the black community support the event, but members of the Lubbock Chicano community aided the televised effort as well.

The show ran as smoothly and as professionally as a play on opening night, and was received just as well.

So well, in fact, that the sorority is already looking towards next year.

Joan Crawford, one of the main organizers of this year's efforts said the sorority is considering running another telethon next year. Possible changes in the format include longer time on the air and the use of local talent in the Lubbock segments.

"The response from the black community was unbelievable," she said reviewing the Saturday night production. "No project that we ever worked on has received a response like this."

Willie Jones, a Reese Air Force Base officer and host for the show, said he thought the effort was "tremendous."

"I think Lubbock can be proud of itself."

"We'll be back," Mel Shaw said.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

Well, this is the DAY! The day of the cowboy, if you please, and in our midst we have the King of them all, Roy Rogers. Tonight ticket holders ($10-$50 per seat!) will be filling the spacious lobby of the Winchester Theater for a reception at 7 p.m. and then at 8 p.m. they will all file into the big auditorium for the world premiere showing of Roger's first film in 24 years, "Mackintosh and T.J.," which, everyone must know, was filmed last summer on the famed 666 Ranch and in Dickens and Matador and environs.

Following the premiere showing of this film about an old cow hand and his guidance of a rebellious 14-year-old boy, there is to be a super gala with Roy Rogers and his wife, Dale Evans, topping the list and the holders of those $50 Golden Circle ticket holders.

Then, tomorrow (Friday) "Mackintosh and T.J." will be on view for its regular public run for at least the next three weeks at the Winchester.

All the proceeds from tonight's shindig go, as you know, to benefit the Ranching Heritage Center at Texas Tech's Museum, with its formal opening set for July this Bicentennial year.

Those who read this pillar last week know that "Mackintosh and T.J." is a 96-minute, PG-rated film from Penland Productions and that this reporter's critical remark was summed up by calling the unpretentious, beautifully photographed film a "warm, entertaining family film."

And fast on the heels of today's opening comes another family show, this time live on the stage of the Municipal Auditorium. This is the witty and sparkling operetta in English, "El Capitan," which was written and composed by America's march king, the celebrated John Philip Sousa—honest! Sousa, who enjoyed a life as composer of waltzes or marches, took the idea of a hero who wants to be both ruler of Peru as well as leader of the rebel forces seeking to overthrow him! Charles Klein did the book, while Thomas Frost and Sousa had their hands in the lyrics.

It's a zany piece and is being performed by the Texas Opera Company, touring the state as part of the Bicentennial celebration. It is being brought to Lubbock by the Lubbock Cultural Affairs Council. Tickets are available at the Chamber of Commerce, at the Texas Tech University Center and will be on tap at the Auditorium box office Saturday afternoon to curtain time, 8 p.m. Prices for the reserved seats are $5, $4, $3 and $2. Incidentally, all student tickets are half-price.

A couple of weeks back, I talked about the upcoming (then) musical for the Auditorium, "Man of La Mancha," which was due on Jan. 28, starring the valued David Atkinson as Miguel Cervantes/Don Quixote.

You'll remember that Atkinson performed the title role here some years back on a national tour and then went back to New York to lead the musical there into its final performance after a run of many years.

Well, this is to report that David Atkinson and company rolled into Lubbock by van and buses a few hours before the performance and settled immediately into the big house to give one of the smoothest and most enjoyable performances of this fine musical that has been done. Atkinson has, if anything, grown in his dual interpretation and his supporting company was more distinguished than any road tour has a right to expect. In these days when traveling costs have cut the one-night-stand tours of heavy production shows down to a minimum, it is safe to say that we in this area will probably not see the likes of "Man of La Mancha" through the remainder of the year.

One remembers Mark Ross as Sancho (he played the Barber here in the earlier engagement), Alice Evans brilliant in the difficult part of Aldonza, Frederick Major as The Inkeeper, Walter Blocher as The Padre, Christopher Milo as Dr. Carrasco, David Brummel as the Head Muleteer, Louise Armstrong as the Inkeeper's wife and all the rest of this remarkably well-balanced cast. They all did such a superb job and it is no wonder that Lubbock accorded Atkinson and his company a standing ovation when it was done. These "standing ovations" per se can be overdone in Lubbock and don't always mean what they traditionally should, but in the case of "Man of La Mancha" it was the true accolade for a fine and richly entertaining night.

I have had the good fortune to number David Atkinson and his delightfully charming wife, Carol, among my friends from the time of his first appearance in Lubbock. Down through the past few years, what with moving around and David's work, we lost our mutual addresses so, propped on my crutches, I hobbled backstage after the performance and we had a joyous and warm reunion. David said he'd have embraced me if he wasn't all greasepaint, and I am sure that if I had not been fearful of toppling off my crutch perch, I should have done the same on my part.

Our visit was all too brief; the Atkinson's are traveling with the others of the cast in those abominable buses—the tour goes to April 1—and they lit out from the city at 1 a.m. for El Paso and a one-nighter there the next night. They then went to Tempe, Arizona, for three days and looked forward to a whole week stand later on in Toronto, Canada.

But we did have our visit, restored our mutual addresses and will keep in touch for real this time as the years ahead unfold.

I have met many show business people over my many years in, around, and about the business, but I can go right on the record here and now in saying that seldom, if ever, have I met and enjoyed any of its people more than I do David and Carol Atkinson.

It's the gaining of a friendship such as theirs that makes the whole thing rewarding and good. It is, I suppose, what the whole thing is all about, as they say.

Next week I'll tell you about a gifted pianist, a longtime friend composer at Texas Tech who merges her talents with the former for the incoming Lubbock Symphony Orchestra concert Feb. 16, and I'll be talking about the Lubbock Theater Center's production of Arthur Miller's get involved in civic affairs, but he can't get out there and say what is wrong with the schools. I think you have an idea as to why there would be problems if a teacher got politically involved in the community. As long as a person wants to work and continue working, he more or less has to keep quiet, because I know of one or two teachers that were asked to keep quiet. These teachers apparently were talking too much. If they wanted to work, they had to stop doing what they were doing. I think we should have more doctors, lawyers and others who can speak out, to get involved."

Mrs. Kyle, why can't the teachers speak out?

"I believe teachers don't want to be involved, so they don't speak out. They are hired to teach, so that's what they do."

Why don't black people attend public meetings?

"Well, when they go to meetings, blacks figure the political situation is such that the white man is going to do what he wants to do anyway. So they ask themselves, why should I go."

Is that a fair statement for blacks to make?

"No, it is not the right thing to say. I have had inside talks about what's going on down there among the city council people on how the money is being spent. Now, who's going to go down there and do something about it. They are still going to do what they want to do with the money. After you go down to City Hall and get involved, you are right where you started."

Are blacks sticking together in Lubbock?

"No, black people are not sticking together. Other than the teachers, we need more blacks to get involved with the problems in our community."

Do you think black people really care about what is happening in Lubbock?

"Other than the teachers, the majority of the others don't really give a hoot about what is happening. That's why I believe we have so much stealing going on in Lubbock. They believe that the white man is going to do what he wants with the money anyway. They (blacks) believe the white man won't let them have an opportunity to get a decent job so he goes around to must steal, and I all I can't steal, I'll tear up. Blacks who do things like that, don't know they are hurting themselves and they still will have to pay for what they have destroyed."

When you first came to Lubbock, did the blacks get more involved politically?

"There were not too many black people who voted in those days. Of course, they worked on the voting thing in those days. There was some blacks who voted, but it wasn't 100 per cent."

As a teacher, were you ever approached about voting?

"No one ever came to me about voting. But whenever an election came up, we were eligible to vote. Professor E.C. Struggs would always tell us to exercise our right to vote."

Mrs. Kyle, what kind of advice can you give to the black boys and girls in Lubbock?

"Mainly, I wish they would all put forth every effort they can to get an education. In situations where they go to school and teachers just give them grades to be quiet, I think they ought to realize on their own that they are not being helped. They have the book and if they study, they can get it on their own. Our kids were so used to us pushing them to make it. We pushed them so they would get their lessons. If they didn't get their assignments in, we made them stay after school or come in before school. We even visited their parents and told them what their children were doing. We stayed on the kids in those days because we wanted to help them."

Could black kids fool you as a teacher?

"No, they couldn't fool us. Now, I don't say they are fooling the teachers, but they push the lessons out there on a college level and tell them to get it. The kids don't get it. If they don't, it's their fault."

Do white teachers care?

"I don't know, but they don't give the black kids the attention that we did when we pushed our black kids. There were even times when we would have to tell them to bathe, comb their hair, and have pride in what they were doing. Nobody is telling the kids that now. They give them an assignment and if they get it okay. If they don't, that's okay too. Integration has hurt the black kid in Lubbock and all around the country. I think the same thing is happening everywhere. You know, black people asked for intergration, but now black people don't want it. I believe the next ten or twelve years, it's going to truly hurt black people."

Why will it hurt us?

"Well, those black kids coming out of high school, 90 percent of them just don't have it. A lot of the schools are giving black kids good grades, but the grades don't indicate that the kids have gotten the work. It seems as though that's all the average black parent is looking for. A black parent can have a child coming home with all A's, and the parent never questions the child about the A's. An A is alright on a card, but when it comes to trying to read or write or understand something, it's not there."

Father of Lubbock Woman Dies

Message was received here early Saturday morning that Mr. Thomas Washington had passed away at the home of his daughter in Navasota, Texas, after a lingering illness. He is also the father of Mrs. Mae Emma McGowen of Lubbock, who was at his bedside, along with other sisters when the end came.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced due to the arrival of three sons and a daughter who reside in Sacramento, and Los Angeles, California.

Jones Funeral Home has charge of arrangements and interment.

Mrs. Lula Mae Gentry, a granddaughter; and her son, David, left Tuesday for Navasota. Mrs. McGowen left last week to be at her father's bedside.

Longtime Lubbock Resident Dies Here

Mrs. Sarah Greer, who was once a resident of Lubbock years ago, passed away early Sunday morning, Feb. 1, at Methodist Hospital, after a lengthy illness.

She and her late husband, Harrison Greer, came to Lubbock years ago from an East Texas community near Paris, Texas, and were faithful members of New Hope Baptist Church.

After his death, she carried his body back home and continued to live there until her health began to fail. She could not live alone anymore.

Her only daughter, Mrs. Mary Claude Parker, who lives in the Carlisle Community, a suburb of Lubbock, brought her here months ago and kept her at home until it was necessary to enter the hospital.

Terence Wayne Kirkpatrick said he was running for the sheriff's post because the office needed a younger man with "fresh ideas."

In a press conference held at the Southpark Inn, the 36-year-old Kirkpatrick said the main issues before the public were problems at the county jail and a high crime rate.

Kirkpatrick said he would install closed circuit television in the jail which would "enable deputies to see what's going on." In addition the system would free other deputies for work in the county.

The former lawman said he would raise deputy salaries 15 per cent, provide uniforms for the deputies, and institute a training program "to keep the men informed and up to date with the law."

Kirkpatrick said there was a "morale problem" in the sheriff's office because of the low pay and lack of uniforms.

"Some of the deputies have told me that they even have to furnish their own redlights," he said.

The Lubbock subcontractor said he would make reports on prisoner beatings available to the press.

"I believe the files should be open and left up to the public."

The primaries will be held in April.

Letters To The Editor

Letter To Dunbar Principal

(Editor's note: This letter was mailed to the principal of Dunbar High School, Roy Roberts, for a job well done by the school. Mr. Roberts asked the West Texas Times to print this letter for the many parents and patrons of Dunbar.)

Dear Roy:

You may not remember me, but I was the choir director at Tascosa in Amarillo before becoming an administrator in Midland.

I wanted to tell you how much we enjoyed being in your building for the Area A, TMEA tryouts last Saturday.

Charlotte was excellent. The kids from Dunbar were great. Everything went well.

I also wanted to compliment your building. I believe our people in Midland could learn something from you folks in Lubbock. I heard many nice comments from directors about how beautiful and well kept the school was. It was obvious it was not a "quicky" clean up on Friday before. Your students over the years have done you and Dunbar proud—it shows!

Again, my thanks and the warmest regards to you from TMEA.

Sincerely,
Bill Cormack
Past President, TMEA
ac
CC: Dr. Ed Irons, Supt., LISD

Dear Editor:

Donna Jean Nelson received the following letter from the Bank of the West:

'Good Morning, From the Desk of Willard Paine'

Donna:

'Thought you might need another copy of this nice article. We are very proud of you at the school, but I personally appreciate you because you are just a fine girl.'

The article of which Mr. Paine made reference was from the West Texas Times. We who are connected with this news media feel that our paper received a 'pat on the back too.' We try to give you the best we can get our teeth on.

Mr. Paine enclosed the clipping from the Times. Donna added it to her mounting scrapbook.

Maunita Terrell

Dear Mr. Patterson:

I read the very interesting article indeed of your interview with Mrs. Celestine Kyle last week in the West Texas Times.

I too have information I would like to share with you and the press, as I was the first hired band and choir director for Dunbar, and was in Lubbock and working at Dunbar as a band and choir director when Mrs. Kyle came to Lubbock. For I began work with the assignment of both band and choir director in 1950, at Dunbar High School.

Mrs. Kyle borrowed the drums and the drum players from my band for her drill team. (smiles). She's forgotten.

I wouldn't like to be in conflict with what she has stated, but I'd sure like to share with you and the press my information.

I was called in by Prof. Struggs (principal) one day with the good news that he was going to be able to get me help and relieve me of one of the responsibilities, as indeed I was doing the work of two people. He told me I was doing a great job for both the choir and band, to sleep on it and let him know the next morning of my choice of keeping either the choir or band, and I chose the keep the choir. He began looking for a band director and came up with Mr. Roy Roberts in 1953.

Please let me share with you those precious years of experience at Dunbar High School that I cherish so much.

Thank You Kindly,
Rose Lincoln

Dear Editor:

In last week's paper, in which you interview various persons with the community, I noticed a gross error. The error being that there was no band prior to 1952.

I would like to inform you that there was a band at Dunbar High prior to that time because I was a member of that band. The first band director that I know of was a Mr. Cleveland, and the next was a Mr. Carmichael, and this was in the years between 1940 and 1944. There are several members of that band still in our fair city and they are Mr. D.C. Fair, Jr., Mrs. Edna Wortham Walker, Mr. Joe Graves, Mrs. Ada Bell Houston Jackson, Mr. Clarence Priestly, and Mr. Dillard Harris. I am sure that I have left someone out that lives in Lubbock, but there are many more I could name that no longer live here.

I commend you on capturing the history of Black Lubbock, but this was one mistake that I knew about personally, and felt the need to correct it.

Yours truly,
Harold M. Chatman
A former Dunbar High Band Member
1940-1944

CLEAN ENERGY FOR TODAY AND TOMORROW

A Natural Energy Home uses natural gas for heating, cooling, water heating, cooking and clothes drying to save you money and help conserve our cleanest natural energy resource . . . natural gas.

That's because electricity in West Texas is generated by burning natural gas, and in the process of generating and transmitting electricity to your home, 2/3 of the gas energy is lost.

So, by using gas directly in the home for the jobs it can do, you're helping to conserve it and you're getting more energy for your money.

Doll Collection on Exhibit at Library

A collection of dolls ranging from the 1850's to contemporary times will be exhibited through the month of February in the display cases of the Mahon Library, 1306 9th Street.

The display has been arranged through the cooperation of several area doll collectors. The dolls being shown are in a variety of materials, including bisque, china, hard rubber, wood, composition, and hard plastic. Each is beautifully dressed, some in original clothing, others in hand-sewn recreations of original costumes. Fabrics used include delicate lace, rich satin, deep velvet and fine cotton.

Representing the pre-Civil War period is a 28-inch hard rubber doll dressed in the full-skirted costume of her era. From the 1860's and early 1870's are two German China dolls with black "sausage curl" hair styles. Another doll displayed is an early 1900 bisque "baby doll" wearing a typical christening dress with frothy lace petticoat. Two boy dolls from the 1910 era are shown.

Other dolls in the exhibition include a "flapper" doll from the 1920's; later day "Toni" and "Shirley Temple" dolls and a contemporary Italian-made doll dressed in an 1890's costume.

The exhibit may be viewed from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

From a Black Point of View: Black ministers, pastors and churches over the country are joining the nation this year in observing two hundred years of existence. February 1, will mark the observance of "Black History Month" and black civic clubs, fraternal orders and others will join in an effort to focus special attention of the contribution of black people to the growth and development of the greatest nation on earth, the U.S.A.

According to the black-oriented Dallas Post Tribune newspaper, "for more than two hundred years black people have looked to the black church, not only for spiritual guidance, but to give directions and chart the course for their survival." They have looked to the church to deliver them from the physical and mental anguish heaped upon them by their white brothers.

The black preacher, in many instances unlearned; for time immemorial has been the only free leader that black people have had. It was said in the past that he was the only person whose salary came from black folks alone, thus freeing him to speak for his people. He has not been subject to the economic squeeze used by whites in the past to put down any uprising or demonstrations on the part of black against the unjust treatments by the majority.

The influence of these men of the gospel have always been felt in any community and have for more years than most of us can remember, been the only voice for justice here among blacks. These men of the cloth have for the most part, kept faith with the times for they believed that there is "a better day coming."

Jesse Owens in 1936 became well known as "the world's fastest human and a winner of four gold medals in the 1936 olympics. In the new and thrilling autobiography "Blackthink," he recalls vividly, "This was the time of the most intense conflict between dictatorship and freedom the world had ever seen. Adolph Hitler was arming his country against the entire world."

Again in his chapter on "Open Letter to All Whites," he said, "Fight bigotry. Fight it for all you are worth. And brothers fight your own prejudice, too. Don't expect perfection in your white brother. And remember that the hardest thing for all of us isn't to fight, but to stop and think." End of quote. A great book. A great challenge from a man who still lives and breathes, and yet is active in "running."

For Whom the Bells Toll: We are blessed in the thought and the knowledge that we knew and admired the late Paul Robeson who died recently at a ripe old age. A great artist-singer-actor-musician and public speaker, who undoubtedly lived several decades ahead of his time. We were in a group of several black students studying at the Harvard Divinity School in the early forties. He came to Harvard Square and performed in Shakespeare's great play "Othello" in one of the local theatres in Cambridge. How can we ever forget that performance? Oh, yes, a great All-American athlete too. More later. Check Worldbook.

Clay Smothers, outspoken black conservative and a columnist for the popular Oak Cliff Tribune in Dallas, may run for state legislative district 33G, according to some bellringer sources. He is an outspoken critic of welfare fraud and court-ordered school busing.

From the new book by Random House, "The Greatest (My Own Story)" by Muhammad Ali with Richard Durham: "I asked Wilt Chamberlain why, since his mama was black, his grandmama was black, his great grandmama was black, and all his sisters were black—why all of a sudden he found black girls "incompatible" (not that I ever knew of any black woman grieving over his absence.) I never got an answer, which didn't surprise me, as I had never heard of Wilt associating much with black men or women or doing anything worthwhile for blacks. In fact, the association he was most proud of was with Richard Nixon, who used him once as sort of a spear carrier in his election campaign." End of quote. (The book, all 415 pages, sells for $10.95).

Until later, Peace and be a good neighbor.

band from South Plains Junior College in Levelland.

Proceeds from the ticket sales will provide scholarships for mass communications students at Texas Tech University.

the delinquents paid up in response to a recent mailing, and their names were deleted from the list. Others, he said, responded by sending in partial payments, which were deducted.

"But some of those partial payments were paltry—like $20 on an $11,000 judgment," he said. "That's not going to cut it. We want it all back."

At the end of this happy life, the man with the most money will find it means very little.

UTEP Sets Minority Scholarships

William A. Orme, Foundation Secretary, said that the grant is part of an estimated $1,071,000 program set up by the Foundation in 1975 to aid disadvantaged, minority youth in gaining an engineering education.

The General Electric Foundation is an independent trust established by the General Electric Company in 1952.

Concert Set Here

The Angelic Choir of the Mount Gilead Baptist Church, Rev. S.R. Roberts pastor, will present their fourth annual concert Sunday evening, March 14, at seven. This year's concert will be "Lord, Help Me to Hold on," a bicentennial one. Rev. Levi Lenley will be special guest.

The Angelic Choir feels as though it is a privilege to join the many Americans around the country in celebrating this Bicentennial year.

A great deal of preparation, according to a spokesman, has been put into this special effort. The public is asked to keep this date in mind and come out and be a part of this gala affair.
