ESAA Program Helps Students Here

by Mary Alice Robbins

Johnny is 15, and he still can't read well.

He spends much of his school time either day dreaming or cutting up in class with his friends. Although he really doesn't like school, he hopes he can do just enough to get by—but his reading disability hampers him in almost every class.

And what will happen to him in adulthood, even if he manages to get by in school? Occupational opportunities for a non-reader are few and far between.

Now, there's hope for students like Johnny who need additional help in reading and mathematics. Through the Emergency School Aid Act (ESAA), Lubbock Independent School District received $115,101 this year to set up special reading and math programs in four local schools. The federally-funded program is currently underway at Dunbar High, Lubbock High, O.L. Slaton Junior High and Struggs Junior High Schools.

Signed into law by President Nixon in 1972, the act created a program designed to provide financial assistance to local school districts and non-profit groups in the implementation of new programs to aid minority students in overcoming educational disadvantages; to eliminate, prevent or reduce minority group isolation; and to meet special needs as a result of the elimination of minority group segregation and discrimination.

"It's a very fine program that's really helping our students," observed Dunbar principal Roy Roberts.

According to Roberts, Approximately 50 Dunbar students are participating in the reading program established at the school. "All students counted on the regular average daily attendance are eligible for help from the ESAA program," he explained.

Only the reading program is offered at Dunbar and Lubbock High. Math programs have been set up at Struggs and O.L. Slaton Junior High Schools.

At Dunbar, each student assigned to the program attends a special reading class two to three times a week for individual work on reading skills under the direction of the reading teacher, Cindy Wiebusch. Students are assigned to the program on a quarterly basis.

Dunbar teachers and counselors are constantly on the lookout for students who seem to have difficulty reading, Roberts said.

Providing additional help in identifying those pupils who could benefit from the reading program are nine Dunbar students who serve on the Student Advisory Committee. German Ceja serves as chairman of this student committee. Other committee members are Darla Boyd, Ruby Braxton, Robert Daniel, Delton Deal, Teresa Foster, Jerry Mendoza, Irene Perez and Marjorie Robinson.

The student committee meets once a month, Roberts said, to discuss the ESAA program and how to get students to read. According to Ms. Wiebusch, several members of the committee have taken time out from their own classes to sit in on the reading classes.

One of the goals of the reading program is to promote an interest in reading among all Dunbar students, Roberts explained. "If we can just get a student to read a magazine, it helps," he added.

The Dunbar school library is trying to include a wide variety of reading materials on its shelves. Members of the student committee offer suggestions on books and magazines that the library can order.

Ms. Wiebusch also tries to include "high interest" reading materials in her classwork for the students. She explained that a student will be more interested in learning to read if he is provided books to which he can relate.

Dunbar Boosters Hope for Win

Getting ready to win district was the theme of the Dunbar Booster Club meeting Monday night at the Dunbar Cafeteria.

A crowd of approximately 150 people were served an excellent dinner prepared by the Dunbar Panther's mothers. Highlight of the evening was a speech by coach Van Jefferson, and all Panther team members were introduced.

The Panthers, with a 6-1-2 record, play Lakeview at Lowrey Field Thursday Nov. 11 for the district title.

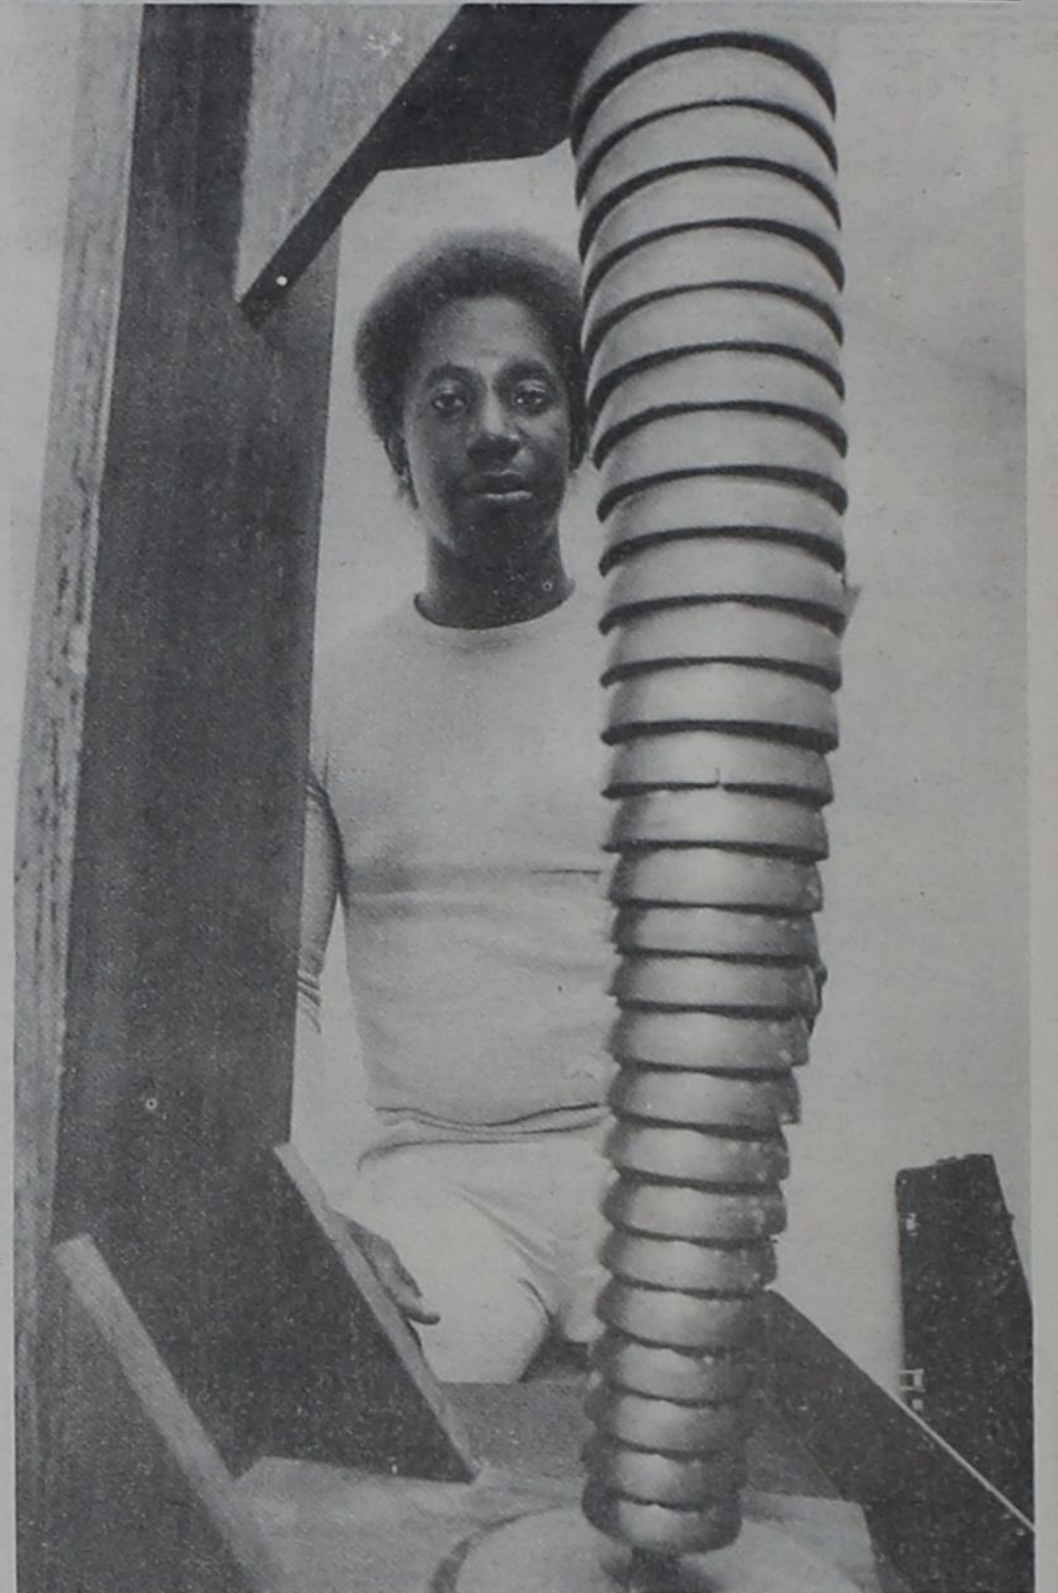

The Panthers won the district 3A title in 1967 and 1973, and were 2A champions in 1963.

All Dunbar fans are urged to attend Thursdays game and lend their support to a great team and a great coaching staff.

Pity The Young

Texas Tech International Students Volunteer for Speaker's Bureau

Lubbockites who want to know more about the world can gain first-hand information from international students attending Texas Tech University.

Students from 11 countries and Hong Kong have volunteered for the speakers' bureau of the International Student Programs office.

Civic clubs or other groups can invite a speaker by calling the volunteer chairman of the bureau, Dorothy Keho, 799-8935, who will arrange for a speaker.

Speakers volunteer their time, but if the organization wishes to give an honorarium of $5 or more, the money is contributed to the international students' emergency loan fund. The fund is a source of temporary assistance to students far from home.

Many international students can provide their own transportation, but in some cases it must be provided by the sponsoring group.

Volunteer student speakers are from Ecuador, Japan, Ghana, Jordan, Mexico, Bangladesh, Liberia, Panama, Indonesia, India and Hong Kong.

Bus Stops A Danger to School Children

East Lubbock school children are being endangered by drivers who don't stop when the school bus stops, and officials say that many of the complaints by bus drivers about violations of the law are centered at two East Lubbock stops.

Walt Goodgion, of the city's traffic office, estimated that perhaps 50 per cent of the reports of violations hover around the two stops—50th and Magnolia and 49th and Quirt.

Under Texas law, motorists on both sides of the street must stop for a school bus that is stopped to pick up or let off children.

"I don't feel like it's a willing violation of the law," said Bill Parker, director of the Lubbock schools' Pupil Personnel services. "I don't think anyone knows that by doing this they endanger children."

School bus drivers began pressing officials to crack down on violators earlier this year. The school district provides drivers with forms so the drivers can take down the license number and make of car of the violator. The complaining driver also describes incidents.

Parker said the school district has received 125 reports of violations since beginning the program earlier this year.

Goodgion says that the Citizens Traffic Commission will consider the complaints at its meeting in early December.

"The chances are that they'll recommend the police pay particular attention to the problem, they may even ask for some selective enforcement," Goodgion said.

Still final implementation of any commission recommendations may be delayed until further study is made by the Commission's enforcement committee. "They might want to take a look at the sites," Goodgion said.

The police, however, feel that there are few problems about school buses. One spokesman for the police department said that the major problem the police department had faced was clearing parked cars from curbs near schools so the buses would have a place to park.

Still the problem of enforcement for Lubbock police may be similar to one faced by Sheriff C.H. (Choc) Blanchard's department in enforcing the law on rural roads. "By the time the school bus driver can get to a phone," Blanchard said, "there'd be no way to stop the violator."

School district transportation director Robert Miller said that there are two buses that operate in the area, and because stops are subject to change, either one could be prey to careless motorists.

One bus, Bus 608, comes from the predominantly-black Yellow House Canyon area, down 50th, to Wilson and Atkins Junior High Schools. Another Bus, Bus 608, brings students from Slaton to Scruggs Junior High and Dunbar High School.

Although a police "crackdown" may slow down some violators of the law, the long term solution, Parker and Goodgion agree, is for the public to be informed of the law and to observe it on its own.

Inventor

The largest number of patents awarded to a Negro went to Elijah McCoy, the son of runaway slaves. McCoy was born in Canada in 1844 and was educated as a mechanical engineer in Scotland. He used his knowledge to advance the development of transportation and factory machinery around the world.

After the Civil War, young McCoy lived in what is now called the Motor City, Detroit. He helped make it so, earning most of his patents on engine devices. Beginning with his first invention at age 28, McCoy amassed a total of 57 patents, with the last awarded in his 76th year.

Perhaps his most valuable invention was the "drip cup," an oil-filled container which steadily lubricates machines drop by drop through a stopcock. The drip cup made it unnecessary to stop machinery in order to oil it. It remains that basic idea used in the lubrication systems of today's sophisticated machinery.

Many of McCoy's inventions have been long in use on the locomotives of the Canadian and Northwestern Railroads and the steamships of the Great Lakes, as well as on trains and boats all over the world.

"Angels of Darkness" Motorcycle Club Organized Here

by T.J. Patterson

(Editor's note: This is one of two stories on the recently organized Angels of Darkness Motorcycle Club. Its members are interested in helping the young people of the community.)

"You don't have to be a super star to be in my show" are the lyrics to a popular song today. In East Lubbock, there is a new club which is becoming popular to people who love motorcycling. This new club, Angels of Darkness, is a motorcycle club.

"We are a riding club," admits Andrew Porter, president. "We enjoy traveling from Lubbock to Amarillo, Lubbock to Midland, or any other areas in West Texas," he continued.

Another member, Albert Wilborn, says, "We want people to know us when they see us coming."

Not only is this club a motorcycle club, but it is an organization whose members are willing to help the community. Over the past months, the new club has devoted its time to helping young people in Lubbock. "This is what we really want to do—help people, regardless of their race, creed, or color," says Wilborn.

Over the past Halloween weekend, the members did all they could to see that many boys and girls in the community had an opportunity to have a fun and safe 'trick or treat' program. "It was quite a success," according to Porter.

In the future, the club wants to be in a position to help senior citizens, widows in distress and even be able to help the local churches. When asked how they could help in these areas, they quickly said that the club would have details available to help with the cleaning of yards and cutting weeds in the community. Just this past summer, the Angeles of Darkness took upon itself to clear the weeds at the corner of East Main and Idalou Road. "We realized that it was the city's responsibility to take care of these kinds of situations, but we wanted to do so because we care about our community," said Wilborn.

Members of the organization are willing to articulate the problems they see in East Lubbock. At the present time, the organization is willing to do all it can to find more supervised recreation in East Lubbock.

"Because of the lack of supervised recreation, there is a great deal of vandalism in our community," said Porter.

"We want the kids to learn to respect their neighborhood, and be willing to have something to offer," he said. "Just recently, we motored over to the Green-Fair Manor Apartments, and the kids came around and wanted to know what we were all about," said Porter. "The bikes got their attention, and we were able to talk positive to these young beautiful people," he continued.

This organization, like others in Lubbock, knows there is a need to keep the kids off the streets. At this time, it is willing to continue their picnics, speaking engagements, talent shows and will sponsor a little league baseball team to help the young people of Lubbock.

"We want it to be known, that we are concerned about any kid — black, white or brown," according to Patsy Hickerson, secretary, and one of the two young ladies in the club.

Over the past months, the Angels of Darkness have been in communication with other clubs in Dallas, Temple and Waco. Other area clubs who have been willing to help the local club with information have been Los Angeles, California and Denver, Colorado.

"This summer, will visit some of these clubs, but our main travel plans include a ride to East Texas along with displaying what we are doing in Lubbock," says Porter. "When we ride in formation, everybody looks and asks questions about our organization, because we are together," he continued.

There is strict discipline in the organization. When asked how this is done, Porter is eager to explain. He says that the organization has a highway patrol officer in the organization, and he will write a ticket on any member who disobeys the state laws when traveling outside the city. "Not only will Officer Larry Reddic write the person a ticket, we will fine that person, and it must be paid," said Porter.

"We welcome new members to join our organization," says Wilborn. He cautioned, however, that one must go through a six week training program to get their membership card. "We want to make sure that everyone who becomes a member is aware of the rules and regulations about riding their bike," he said.

At the present time, there are ten members. Officers in the club are Porter, president; L.A. Willis, vice president; Nickerson, secretary; Wilborn, treasurer; and Reddic, sargeant-at-arms.

Other active members are Gayle Foster and Wilbert Bradford, members of the project and entertainment committee; along with William Anderson, Jackie Coleman and Ricky Hayden, an airman at Reese Air Force Base.

The meeting place has been made possible by their superstars, Mr. and Mrs. J. Moore who are backing them 100 percent. The involvement of the Moores has made it possible for them to have a meeting place in a room at the Chocolate City Cafe.

(Next week: The members of the Angels of Darkness talk about future plans for the organization.)

Good workers are always in demand, somewhere.

News From Home Folks

The urgent need for "more black doctors" was described by the director of the Howard Ad University in Washington, Del. The Sacramento Observer gives the following account:

"For too many black patients, health care is a luxury which must wait until the moment when pain and weakness no longer allow them to drag another step," writes Dr. Charles S. Ireland, director of the Howard University Hospital in Washington, D.C.

In an article called "The Health woes of Blacks," which appeared in the June issue of Reader's Digest, Dr. Ireland identified the Four Horsemen of the Black community as alcoholism, malnutrition, hypertension and mental disturbances.

Calling hypertension "the most serious health problem of blacks in America today," he points out that about one in four Blacks over the age of 18 has it; over the age of 40, the ratio raises to two out of five. The mortality rate from high blood pressure in Black males is 15½ times the rate of white males between the ages of 25 and 44.

Hypertension kills Black females at 17 times the rate of white females.

"Day after day, in the emergency rooms and wards of our hospital, I see evidence that the medical problems of Blacks are more acute, more complicated and more neglected than those of Americans," he declares.

To remedy the double standard of health care which has created these desperate conditions, Dr. Ireland calls for education: "Education of more Black doctors, of Blacks, of the public." He urges higher quotas for blacks in medical schools, government subsidy to prepare qualified medical students and see them through their training, and white political support to insure that these subsidies are not reduced.

The health of 25 million Black Americans affects all Americans, the noted physician believes. He contends that "in view of the present cost of illnesses—including the millions of lost hours of work, the billions of dollars spent on welfare for the victims of ill health, the added billions spent for alcohol—the cost of what I have suggested is trifling."

The couple will make their home in Denver, following the wedding.

dates for approximately 15 post-secondary teaching positions and over 45 various fields of applied agriculture. Individuals selected will be employed for two-year assignments by the African institutions involved. Exact fields of expertise are not known, since position specifications will be provided throughout the contract period by the employing institutions.

Selected employees will be paid partially in local currency and partially in U.S. dollars. Benefits include housing, roundtrip air travel, and allowances for insurance and shipping of household goods.

IIE must fill each position within 60 days of receipt of position description from a requesting employer. Therefore, the Institute is now beginning to compile a roster of qualified and interested personnel. Applicants must be U.S. citizens, preferably with field and/or teaching experience and in developing country. Demonstrated knowledge, interest and experience in African concerns would be particularly beneficial, though not required. A few positions will require French language proficiency.

Interested individuals are requested to send appropriate documentation to the Overseas and Technical Programs Division, Institute of International Education, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Editor-Publisher Alex C. Halbersham of the Macon Courier recently editorialized in a characteristically insightful way:

I had the good fortune this week of spending a few hours as a "block expert" and found it rewarding and educational. The first topic of discussion was about economics. In this discussion it was observed that black businessmen do not take the same attitude about helping their colleagues as their white counterparts. The "boys" mentioned that, down through the years in Macon, those few blacks who have made a considerable amount of money, use their success as a black status symbol and dare not help anyone else. It was also mentioned that often-times blacks who are in the same business view each other as competition, wherein their real competition is their white counterpart.

It was also observed that in few or no instances have any of the old black entrepreneurs in this city offered to reach out and help a young aspiring businessman. This in itself sets us years behind. Established black businessmen should use helping somebody else as their status symbol.

Another economic observation that these or "masters of block education" brought out is that several opportunities have existed for blacks in the world of business, but few have taken advantage of them. This was in reference to the special government programs that are available to minority contractors that would enable them to bid competitively on government contracts.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

There is a big, sprawling, colorful, suspense-filled action film on view right now at the Fox Theater 4, called "Shout at the Devil." It is an unvarnished, open film, produced by Michael Klingner and directed by Peter Hunt and is most effective.

The setting is Africa in 1913-14 and the lengthy (147 minutes) screenplay (from a novel by Wilbur Smith) has all the ingredients for an exciting and engrossing adventure yarn that has every conceivable sequence to remind you of other similar films. But "Shout at the Devil" has its own diversified plot and its cast, headed by Lee Marvin, Roger Moore and Barbara Parkins, plays it for all it is worth from beginning to end.

In the course of the film you will see elephant hunting, natives in revolt, man-eating crocodiles, tarantulas, air and sea combat, shipwreck, big game hunting, bomb, rape and fire, malaria—you name it, the film has it all.

Lee Marvin is a gin-drinking adventurer, American, who bails out of a hotel bill the just-robed Roger Moore, straight Englishman from the Eton fields and enlists him against his will to join in an expedition to get elephant tusks from a German-held province, headed by a tyrannical German governor.

That venture entails a raft chased by a paddle-wheel river boat and all that excitement with the ultimate ramming of the raft by the German warship Blucher.

Battered and bruised the two adventurers manage to get to Flynn's (Marvin) jungle house, where his daughter Rosa (Barbara Parkins) nurses the handsome Englishman out of malaria and falls in love with him.

Then there is another expedition in Flynn's plan. That is to impersonate a German tax collector and collect the German taxes from villages in the hijacking sense. Of course, as is the way through the film, it is Marvin who proposes and poor Moore who must dispose.

That comes to naught but Rosa and Sebastian have decided to get married and that leads to a wonderful knock-down-drag-out fight between Marvin and Moore that culminates in a funny slow-motion sequence. It's a dilly of a fight.

Well, Moore and Parkins do get married (she's carrying his child) and shortly afterwards Marvin and Moore are off on another trek, leaving Rosa and the baby in the compound at home. The German officer and his natives show up on the scene and burn the house, kill the child and rape the wife.

From here on Rosa is obsessed with one idea, to kill the German commander in revenge.

World War I breaks and the British naval units want to find the Blucher. It is hidden in a South East African river delta, undergoing repairs. Now it must be destroyed.

The English provide a clock time bomb which must be placed on the camouflaged ship. Again, it is poor Moore that must do the dirty work.

And so the picture climaxes in the destruction of the ship, the best fireworks display in a long time on the screen. That ending reminds one of the destruction of the cannons in the climax of "The Guns of Navarone," which, come to think of it, might be termed a kind of "sister" adventure yarn comparable to "Shout at the Devil."

Lee Marvin continues his running role as an alcoholic, white-haired old duffer, irascible, comic and lovable. He's done the role innumerable times now since "Cat Ballou" and he's got it down pat. Moore, who is best in action parts, plays with his usual unemotional, debonaire manner and takes quite a beating in this one from time to time. He's one of those movie heroes who seem to recover his health in remarkable short order to go on to bigger and better cuts and bruises.

Miss Parkins tries to be intense but about all she does, really, is to fill out the lead triangle and hold on until her desire for vengeance is finally met on the banks of the river.

It's all very unimportant but it is entertaining. It is a handsome picture, justifying the claim that some $7 million was spent on the production. If you like pure down-to-earth adventure then "Shout at the Devil" will be to your liking. Rated PG, by the way.

In the next column I'll be reporting on a raft of events both in passing and coming up. Tuesday night was to have presented Ray Charles in concert at Lubbock Christian College, Thursday night the dress rehearsal of the Lubbock Theatre Centre's new play, Tennessee Williams' "Period of Adjustment," which opens Friday for a four-performance run, and, back again to Lubbock Christian College where the musical "Brigadoon" will be holding the boards at Moody Auditorium Friday and Saturday.

And there's two movies that will be talked out, too, the new Jack Lemmon film, "Alex and the Gypsy" at Showplace 4, and "The Ritz," the comic musical with Rita Moreno at the South Plains Cinema I-II.

Hope I run across some of you and one of these, at least. I'll try and make 'em all, strength and transportation holding out.

Smoking Still Problem in Spite of Warning Ringing The Bell . . .

Americans are trying hard to say no to the use of tobacco. But some of them aren't having much luck.

Most current smokers—61 per cent of those interviewed in the largest survey ever made of behavior, attitudes, knowledge and perceptions about tobacco use—have made at least one serious attempt to stop smoking entirely.

Nine out of 10 of these smokers say they have either tried to quit smoking or would probably do so if there were an easy way. In spite of their efforts, 57 per cent say they will definitely or probably be smoking five years from now.

These and other similar facts show a growing ambivalence about smoking in America. Among such facts: the proportion of adult Americans who smoke cigarettes has declined since 1970; public attitudes favoring stronger action against smoking have increased, even among those who still smoke; and the shift toward cigarettes with lower tar and nicotine has accelerated.

Released in the survey—Adult Use of Tobacco-1975, conducted cooperatively by the Center for Disease Control at Atlanta, Ga., and the Division of Cancer Control and Rehabilitation of the National Cancer Institute—much of the information points to a shift in attitude among smokers and non-smokers.

"The decline in the proportion of adult Americans who smoke and concurrent increase in public attitude opposing smoking demonstrates that Americans can change their life styles for the sake of their health," said Dr. David J. Sencer, director of the Center for Disease Control. "If this is so, it is a vital step in the direction of personal responsibility for the practice of preventive medicine."

Factors other than health seem important in determining the national picture of those who smoke and those who don't.

Researcher found a relationship between educational level and smoking behavior. Smoking rates are lowest for those who never attended high school. "Because educational level is related to income, there may be a corollary between income and the cost of cigarettes for persons in this group," the survey reported.

At all other educational levels, the proportion of smokers decreases as the amount of education increases.

A total of 12,000 American men and women 21 and over—smokers and non-smokers—were questioned in the 1975 survey, making it twice as large as surveys conducted in 1964, 1966 and 1970. The survey also found:

- The proportion of male smokers 21 and over dropped from 52.8 percent in 1964 and 42.2 percent in 1970 to 39.3 percent in 1975.

- The proportion of women smokers 21 and over dropped from 31.5 percent in 1964 and 30.5 percent in 1970 to 28.9 percent in 1975.

- The proportion of male and female smokers was down in every age category with the exception of a slight increase in smoking among women 21 to 24, women 55 and over and men 65 and over.

- Declines between 1970 and 1975 were greatest among young males: from 49.8 percent to 41.3 percent among men 21-24. In 1964, 67 percent of the same age group smoked. The percentage of men 35-44 who smoked declined from 59.9 in 1964 to 47.1 in 1975.

More than ever, people favor increased social action against smoking. An important change in attitude since 1964 is evidenced by response to the statement, "The smoking of cigarettes should be allowed in fewer places than it is now." In 1975, 70 percent agreed, compared to 57 percent in 1970 and 52 percent in 1964. More than half of the smokers would like to see smoking allowed in fewer places than it is now.

Other evidence of the desire for action:

- Though radio and television cigarette commercials have been stopped, 56 percent of all respondents to the 1975 survey believed that cigarette advertising should be stopped completely. Two out of five smokers agree.

- Some 78 percent of those responding thought that management should have the right to prohibit smoking in its place of business.

- More than three out of four responded that teachers, doctors and other health professionals should set a good example by not smoking. This includes two out of three who smoke.

Men smoke more cigarettes a day, averaging 23 (about the same as in 1970), compared to 19 for women (up from 17 in 1970). In addition, the survey showed that more than half of current smokers smoke cigarettes in ways most hazardous to health, by inhaling (54 percent) and by the quantity of each cigarette inhaled, almost every puff (55 percent).

Asks for Black Role in Crime War: "The war on crime is being lost," Vernon E. Jordan, Jr. executive director of the National Urban League, declared recently, citing federal and local neglect of Black involvement in anti-crime policy and community cooperation.

Mr. Jordan made his major policy statement on the problem of urban crime in an address to the National Black Police Association's Fourth Annual Convention in Louisville, Kentucky. Mr. Jordan cited calls for a harder line against law breakers and observed that "this concern for toughness is often at the expense of effectiveness." He said that top priorities in combatting crime should be "expanded Black participation at all levels of the criminal justice system and community organization and involvement in crime-control procedures."

Pointing to studies demonstrating Blacks are disproportionately victimized by crime, he said "the war on crime is the only war our nation has ever fought that did not seek Black volunteers. He added that "the Black community is rich in resources and law enforcement agencies should harness, train and aid in a joint effort to make our streets safe and our people secure."

Mr. Jordan was sharply critical of federal, state and local law enforcement agencies guilty of illegal discrimination, and of the flow of research funds to "white institutions with no roots in the black community." The current trend of calls for mandatory prison sentences was criticized as encouraging recidivism and that imprisonment should be one of several means of dealing with offenders. He said that "if all the money LEAA poured into buying tanks and armored cars for suburban police departments had gone instead into demonstrating alternatives to prison, we might now be enjoying a reduction in crime rates instead of a relentless rise in lawlessness."

Jordan concluded society will not be free of the problem of crime while it still has large numbers of poor and unemployed persons victimized by mis-education, forced into substandard housing and brutalized by racial discrimination.

Thought for the week: "We only grow as we give and when we stop giving, we stop growing." Rev. D. Greenwood in Oak Cliff Tribune.

Chimes: It's good to be back home again in West Texas and Southern New Mexico where after nearly thirty years, we have made so many friends and bellringers. While in the native state (Oklahoma) we met a lot of readers who follow us here in Oklahoma papers and friends of the long ago. Many have passed on however and those of us who survive can be happy to know that God has some more bell ringing for us to do. And thanks for the telephone calls from over the nation and flowers, cards, etc. Mom at this writing continues to improve.

Facts: 22 per cent of Americans over 17 are illiterate, plus another 32 per cent are just marginally literate, thus we come to the almost unbelievable fact that 54 per cent of the adult population cannot read simple instructions, according to a study by Dr. Ted Kitty, an associate professor at Western Michigan University. His advice to writers is that "they should write simpler, clear, direct sentences that people can understand." That's what we try so hard to do Prof.

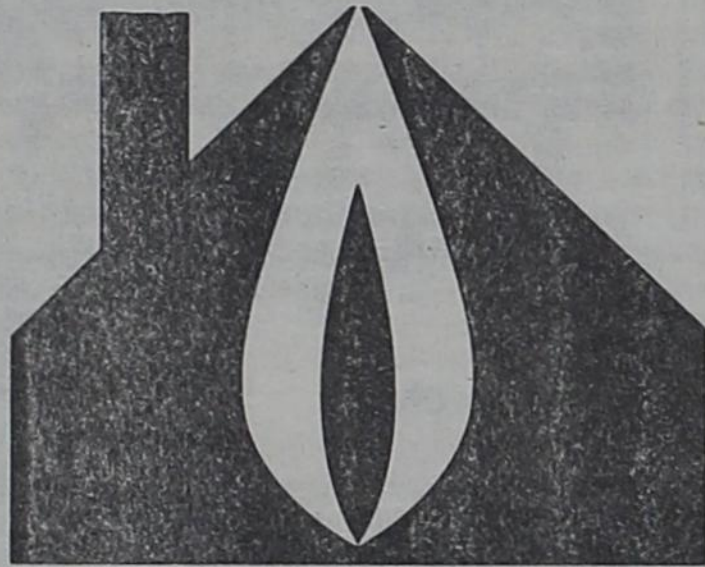

On Health: Stay away from high fat diets! That's the advice of a Harvard nutritionist who said that too much fat intake plays a significant role in the majority of cancers found among American women and 41 per cent in those discovered in American men.

HEW Reform? Did you read about the doctor in New York City who received more than $325,000 in Medicaid payments in 1974, while averaging almost 100 patients per day? He happened to be black but there were 15 other doctors who received more Medicaid payments than he did. One topped the $400,000 mark. President Ford has been asked to double the number of investigators of this program in order to eliminate fraud in the program.

Think Young! Songbird Lena Horne admits that "being old isn't nearly as bad as I thought it would be. Everybody has to get old, but nobody has to feel old. How many of you youngsters remember when the gal introduced "Stormy Weather" in the 30's? I do!

Word comes that the pastor and members of Beard Chapel C.M.E. Church of Plainview, Texas are working hard to dedicate their new church in the not too distant future. That's great news. A great people and church, even with their small membership. More later.

Hope the election went to suit you. Remember in a democracy, the majority speaks for all of us. And if you didn't vote, shame on you. Until later peace and remember God loves you.

LOIC Offers Training Program for Local AFDC Women

The Lubbock Opportunities industrialization Center (LOIC) has announced a training program for all female AFDC recipients who need or want job skills. "Those persons interested should ask their social workers to refer them to LOIC," says Ms. Diana Henderson, executive director.

The East Lubbock center, located at 2200 East Broadway, offers clerical training and G.E.D. preparation.

All those who qualify for the program may be eligible for a weekly stipend in addition to their existing grant. "Another benefit will include the assistance in finding suitable day care facilities for their children while in attendance," says Ms. Henderson.

The clerical training includes typing, bookkeeping, ten-key, filing, business math and business English. The G.E. D. preparation will prepare the trainee to pass the test for a high school equivalency diploma.

"Again, we would encourage those interested ladies to contact their social workers at the Department of Public Welfare as soon as possible and specify their interest in the LOIC training program," concludes Ms. Henderson.

824,000 Blacks Served by CETA Programs in Fiscal Year 1976

More than 824,000 blacks received jobs or training during the 1976 fiscal year through Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) programs, Secretary of Labor W.J. Usery Jr. said.

Overall, nearly 2.5 million persons received jobs or training during July 1, 1975, through June 30, 1976.

By the end of June, 1,731,500 persons had participated in skill training, work experience and other activities under title I of CETA. Of this total, blacks accounted for 37.1 per cent for a total of 642,387.

Another 750,900 persons—including 181,657 blacks—were served in public service employment and job preparation under titles II and VI.

About 70 per cent of CETA participants were new entrants, although figures may include some duplication because some participants enroll under more than one program.

Usery said that in addition to the increases in the number of people served, there has also been improvement in the ratio of services to groups with the highest rates of unemployment—females, minorities and youth.

During the year, 485,600 participants were placed in jobs and 647,700 returned to school or enlisted in the military services.

The number of persons who quit, were laid off, or left the program for other reasons totaled 543,400, representing 32 per cent of the enrollment, down sharply from 39 per cent in the previous year.

CETA programs are operated by 431 state and local governments to assist the unemployed, the underemployed and economically disadvantaged.

Honor Scout To Be Named

Nominations for South Plains Honor Scout are being taken at the South Plains Council Boy Scouts of America Service Center through Dec. 1.

Each of seven districts that comprise the council will choose an honor scout for submission to the Selection Committee. Active eagle scouts who won't be 18 before Feb. 5, 1977, and who have demonstrated "practical citizenship" in their religious institutions, school, scout troop and community are eligible for nomination by scoutmasters.

District honor scouts will be selected by Dec. 5, with the Council Honor Scout selected by Dec. 15. The scouts and the Explorer Presidents' Association chairman will be the delegation to "Report to State" ceremonies in February.

 smoke are smoking lower tar, lower nicotine cigarettes. In 1975, 20 percent of smokers reported using a cigarette with 20 or more milligrams of tar, down from 55 percent in 1970. The proportion using cigarettes with nicotine levels of 1.4 mg. and above dropped from 45 to 18 percent.

A summary of the 1975 survey is available from the National Clearinghouse for Smoking and Health, Center for Disease Control, Atlanta, Ga. 30333. Information is also available from the Office of Cancer Communications, National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md. 20014.
