Community Services Commission Election Scheduled

There is silence in the park. Even the wind this day is mute. But beneath the eerie stillness, spring is astir.

An election to fill three vacancies on the Community Services Commission of the City of Lubbock will be held Saturday, April 10, 1976.

The commission determines the policies of the city's Community Services Department.

One representative from each of the following areas will be elected to the two year office: Area I, northeast Lubbock, north of Parkway Drive and east of Highway 87 and the Santa Fe railroad tracks; Area II, north Lubbock, north of Fourth Street between Avenue Q and Quaker; and Area IV, east Lubbock, east of Quirt between Parkway Drive and 19th Street.

Candidates for the office must be 18 years old before April 1st and have the support by petition of 25 registered voters who live in the target area the candidate desires to represent. Write in candidates will be allowed.

Petitions for nomination, which can be obtained in Room 213 of City Hall, must be returned before 5 p.m. Friday, April 2, 1976.

The commission is made of 18 members including six public officials, six representatives from private groups, and six elected representatives from areas in north and east Lubbock.

The city's Community Services Department currently operates an outreach counselling program for Lubbock residents. The department employs eight outreach workers who are presently undergoing training with the Department of Public Welfare.

According to Archie Bottoms, Community Services executive director, the outreach program has counselled 70 families on eligibility for food stamps, aid to dependent children, social security, and city-county welfare during the past six weeks.

The department has received tentative approval for $104,400 in Community Services Agency funds, which they expect to receive within the next month, Bottoms said.

"With limited funds, Community Services will not attempt

Greenfair Manor Subject of Housing Authority Comments

The Housing Authority Board is "doing everything we can do" to clean up Greenfair Manor, housing secretary David Stiles said in response to a board member's question.

"The editorials leave the impression that we're lax, and it's just not true," he said. "It's the parents' fault for not controlling their kids."

Board member George Scott had asked Stiles what efforts the Housing Authority was taking to clean Greenfair Manor.

"I just want to be sure we're doing everything we can do," Scott said.

The comments came at a Housing Authority Board meeting held last Thursday afternoon.

Board members discussed difficulties with the rental subsidy program, an agreement with the city on fees for trash collection, and the approval of the semi-annual audit by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Stiles told the board that the rental subsidy program "is beginning to work" because of a decision by the Dallas HUD office to raise the rent ceilings the board can pay to secretary-owned housing. Secretary owned housing is federal property acquired by the government in lieu of insured default by the owners.

The move affects housing in the Plaza Apartments and Villa del Norte, making the properties competitive with other non-secretary owned real estate for the subsidy program.

So far, 47 rent subsidy certificates have been issued, though only two people have found housing which qualifies as safe, decent, and sanitary, Stiles said.

"I anticipate by the first of April we ought to have 25 of them settled in."

The secretary said he contacted the city manager and arranged to pay $27,000 in fees charged to the authority by the city for trash collection. The city agreed to hold

City Council Presented Audit Report

The city of Lubbock is in strong financial condition, the auditing firm of Mason, Nickels, and Warner told council members last Thursday. However, revenues in response to a board member's question.

Increases in fuel prices have been absorbed by the Electric Utility Department, and revenues from the Water, Sewer, Sanitation, and Aviation Departments have declined during the past year, auditors noted.

The audit detailing the city's financial operation for the fiscal year ending last September 30th, showed a year-end balance in the General Operating Fund of $1.9 million. The figure had decreased $3 million from the previous year, though the reason was listed as a change in accounting methods. Portions of the previous fund balance had been placed in a new category labeled reserves for advances, since the money is not yet available for appropriation.

Funds in the new category include $1.3 million due from Lubbock Power and Light for a loan to install a gas turbine generator, and $1 million advanced to funds used for purchasing warehouse inventories.

According to the auditors, the general fund figure is a reflection of the liquid assets readily available for unexpected appropriations.

During the 1975 fiscal year, general fund expenditures exceeded revenues by $656,000, the audit showed, while the outstanding debt for capital improvements dropped as the city retired $4.2 million in bonds. During the past year the city sold only $1.3 million in bonds.

During the morning session, the council passed an appropriation ordinance to use $50,000 in Electric Light and Power System

Scholarship Winners Named in National Achievement Program

Names of 433 winners in the twelfth annual National Achievement Scholarship Program for Outstanding Negro Students were announced last week by the National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC), which administers the competition. Winners come from schools in 35 states, the District of Columbia, U.S. territories and commonwealths, and foreign schools that enroll U.S. citizens.

Included in the announcement are 298 winners of one-time, nonrenewable National Achievement $1000 Scholarships and 135 winners of renewable Corporate sponsored Four-Year Achievement Scholarships. Of these awards, valued at $1 million, 97 percent are underwritten by businesses, industrial firms, foundations, and professional associations; the remainder are financed by donor contributions to the Achievement Program. In addition to the 433 winners of monetary awards, a few students designated as Honorary Achievement Scholars are included in the announcement in recognition of their outstanding performance in the competition; these students have won other awards or have plans to study at institutions for specialized training which preclude their receiving monetary assistance through the Achievement Program.

Over 50,000 black students, mostly high school juniors enrolled in more than 6,000 schools, entered the 1976 Achievement Scholarship competition by taking the 1974 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT) and indicating their desire to participate. The highest scoring black students in each of the geographic regions established for the competition were designated Semifinalists.

At the completion of the competition, funds totaling $11.3 million had been expended or committed for Achievement Scholarships, of which Achievement Program sponsor support represented 65 percent. It is anticipated that a total of about $1.4 million in grants from program sponsors and contributions from donors will be committed for Achievement Scholarships being awarded in 1976 to high-performing black students who will enter college next fall.

Mistrial Declared in Murder Case Here

Judge William R. Shaver declared a mistrial in the murder case of Noe Torres Cavazos in 140th District Court last week after jurors failed to reach a unanimous verdict during four hours of deliberation.

Cavazos was employed as a security guard at La Cantina Club last July 22nd when Freddie Dean Saddler entered the nightclub, shot, and critically wounded his wife, who was a dancer there. Cavazos shot at Saddler as he ran from La Cantina following the shooting. Saddler was pronounced dead on arrival at Methodist Hospital.

Tom Cannon, an assistant district attorney, said the case would be retried, though he wasn't sure when.

EDITORIALS

Continue to Support Those Who Support Your Paper

There are some merchants in Lubbock who advertise in the West Texas Times each week. We would encourage you to support the merchants who support your newspaper.

Advertising is done in part as a public service to let the consumer know what each shop has to offer in the way of prices and products. With a little time and effort each week, a family trying to make ends meet can save some pennies here and there and come up with the best of many offers.

Advertising serves as a way of providing information to the consumer. People should take advantage of it. If you get an opportunity this week or next, go by and let some of these merchants know that you have seen their message in the Times.

We ask you to support those people who are supporting the Times, because the Times supports you.

No Interest Yet in City Politics This Year

Monday, the first day of absentee voting for city candidates was fairly quiet at city hall. No one cast a single ballot. It is nice to know that no one will be away from Lubbock on April 3rd. This is an encouraging sign for the city's economy.

However, we feel the absentee turnout exemplifies the interest of the citizens in the upcoming election. So far, the entire campaign has been like that first day of absentee voting—quiet. We remind registered voters who may be absent from Lubbock on election day that they have until March 30th to cast an absentee ballot for the city elections.

In the past, local experts have used the absentee vote as an indication of what to expect election day. Probably those leaving the city either see no interest or, because of the flavor of local campaigning, have forgotten about the election.

The same evidently holds true for those candidates vying for a school board position. As a matter of fact, we do not believe any of those candidates have said anything at all. We would hope that the low profile is not a result of being unable to find any issues.

On the citizen level, local civic clubs and other organizations have been lax in their invitations for city candidates appearances. We have learned, however, that there has been some interest in state and county candidates in the local clubs. This at first seems to go against the grain of the post-Watergate political tendencies which have found the vast majority of those citizens who are still interested in politics turning their attention to local issues. We hope the interest in the county and the state races remains strong, and that the tenor of the city campaigns is not symptomatic of the interest of voters as a whole.

Unless some effort is made by the candidates to stir interest in the upcoming city elections, we feel the first day of absentee balloting will not be much different from the April 3rd turnout.

Nature's World

The world of nature, coming to life around us now, a beauty beyond the capacity of mortal man, is here to be appreciated.

Spring is a time of hope, baseball, summer dreams, pretty girls in pretty dresses and exhilaration over the warming weather and the end of winter.

A close observation of the many miracles on all sides of us in every field and forest and on every hillside and restore one's strength and peace of one's mind, and bring tranquility and humbleness to every thinking individual.

"As I See It"

by T.J. Patterson

It's good to know the Housing Authority Board, in their meeting last week, appears to be concerned about what is going on in the Green-Fair Manor apartments. One of its members, George Scott, wanted to know if the authority was doing everything possible to keep the apartments up to par.

David Stiles, executive director, places the blame on the parents of the kids in the complex for apparently destroying properties in the area. With that charge, this writer would like to challenge each parent to watch the conduct of their children. If the kids are guilty of destroying other peoples property, then the parents should do their part with their own kids.

Perhaps the blame, in some cases, could be placed on the kids. But what I'm concerned about is some of the acts which were apparently done several years ago. Sure, it's easy to place the blame on kids. At the same time we blame kids for the destruction, we, as adults, seem to forget that we were once kids ourselves.

This writer is not trying to say that kids won't destroy property if given an opportunity. There are some good kids in Green-Fair Manor, and all the bad is not completely the kids fault.

If the Housing Authority Board would take time at their next regular meeting to travel through the area, I'm sure they will see what I'm talking about. It won't take much looking to notice the junked cars, obscene language on the walls (which has been there for several years), and the nasty dumpsters which were placed in front of the apartments.

As I See It, the dumpsters should be placed in the alley of the apartments and not in front. As fast as some motorists drive through the area, it's a wonder some kid hasn't been killed or injured while playing there. Remember, the kids have no place to play, so the Weber Drive becomes a park for many of them.

In the U.S. today, there are 10 million people who suffer from speech and hearing impairments; six million are victims of stroke and two million have epilepsy.

Think about the 500,000 who suffer from multiple sclerosis; 200,000 from muscular dystrophy and 100,000 from spinal chord injuries. Every year 100,000 babies are born with defects that will force them to use crutches, braces or wheelchairs all of their lives.

Hopefully, this information will make you aware of how blessed you are. There is an organization, the Easter Seal Society for Crippled Children and Adults of Texas, working to find cures for many of the disorders. You can find out more about what they are doing if you would like to know.

If you would like to help in the Easter Seal Society's program of rehabilitation for some of these people, then call them at 747-5467 or go by their office at 2806 34th Street.

Remember the Bicentennial Celebration is helping other Americans who are less fortunate than you.

During the interview with Mr. Mae D. Thomas Simmons, retired principal in the Lubbock Public Schools, I came to appreciate her philosophy of "raising people up." Yes, Mrs. Simmons, it would be a beautiful world if we (Americans) would practice raising people up instead of putting each other down.

There's a lot in what she said. Why don't we try what Mrs. Simmons told us this week.

This month marks the 25th year Dr. Milton K. Curry, Jr. has been president of Bishop College. He was my president when the institution was located in Marshall, Texas. I will never forget his leadership and concern for the students of Bishop in those days. Since my graduation from Bishop in 1958, it has grown in many areas under the dynamic leadership of this great human being.

The greying 65-year-old black educator helped me, and I will never forget what he did. Like many predominately black institutions, Bishop had its problems. Today, however, it is getting it together in the city of Dallas under the leadership of Dr. Curry.

Happy 25th Presidential Anniversary, Dr. Curry, You have made a lot of things happen for the blue and white. As the seal of Bishop College says: "Fiat Lux," (meaning "Let there be light.") Dr. Curry has given many young people in America the light to find themselves and I want the world to know I'm one of them.

JACK ANDERSON'S WEEKLY SPECIAL

BREAKING UP THAT OLD GANG

by Jack Anderson with Joe Spear

(Copyright, 1976, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Washington—We received a mysterious call recently from a man who identified himself only as "Z". That telephone call led to the break-up of a multimillion dollar counterfeiting ring. The Secret Service, working with our staff, arrested the ringleaders just as they were preparing to flood Latin America with $10 million in counterfeit $50 bills.

The story would make a great TV mystery. There are some details we still can't reveal. We have to protect the mysterious Mr. "Z". His life could be in danger from members of the gang still at large. But here are the details that can now be told:

For reasons that might reveal his identity, "Z" wanted no part of the $10 million counterfeiting scheme. He telephoned us, because he didn't trust the government. He was afraid he might wind up in prison with the counterfeiters.

"Z" told us enough on the telephone to convince us he was no crank caller. He agreed to meet one of our reporters on a street corner in New York City. We sent Howie Kurtz, who waited on the corner with an open red umbrella so "Z" would identify him.

Mr. "Z" told Kurtz about the plan to print $10 million n fake $50 bills. Couriers were waiting, he said, to distribute the bills throughout Central and South America. He said at least $1 million in phony fifties had already been run off the press. As evidence, he gave our reporter three $50 bills, which looked genuine to him.

At this point, they telephoned us from New York City, and we persuaded "Z" to cooperate with the Secret Service.

The next day, our reporter turned over the three $50 bills to the Secret Service, which quickly determined they were counterfeit. In fact, more than $36,000 from the same bogus batch had already turned up this year in Santo Domingo.

Later in the day, we put "Z" himself in touch with the Secret Service. He directed an undercover agent to Miami, where the counterfeiting ring was holed up in a fashionable, $700-a-month house.

We have to leave out some details, but we can report that the agent made contact with the counterfeiters. Posing as an underworld operator, he dickered to buy some of the counterfeit bills.

Not long afterward $86,000 in fake bills were delivered to a waiting car. The Secret Service immediately arrested the ringleader, Antonio Demetrio Torrez, a printer from the Dominican Republic. Arrested with him were two Puerto Ricans, Jose Davila and Humberto Acosta.

The Secret Service also confiscated the negatives that Torrez was using to print the counterfeit millions. Torrez still has no idea how the Secret Service nailed him.

"The Rainmaker": The most effective lobbyist on Capitol Hill today is William Timmons. He is known in the backrooms as "The Rainmaker" because he has been able to produce a downpour of benefits for his clients.

Timmons learned the ins and outs of Capitol Hill as a White House lobbyist for former President Richard Nixon. After Nixon's fall, Timmons set up his own consulting firm. Lobbyists never like to call themselves lobbyists. So they call themselves consultants instead.

Timmons is an unlikely rainmaker. He has a middle American look; there is nothing suave about him. He never uses high pressure. He's just friendly, easygoing, skilled at the "soft sell."

Most importantly, he knows the right people—on the Republican side. Now he has hired House Speaker Carl Albert's top aide, Michael Reed, to take care of the Democratic side.

For years, Reed has literally sat outside the Speaker's door and has dealt personally with the Democratic Congressmen.

A few weeks ago, Reed became involved in the natural gas pricing battle. The Speaker bent the House rules to see that a bill, deregulating natural gas prices, reached the floor for a vote.

Now his top aide, Michael Reed, has gone to work for "The Rainmaker," whose clients include such natural gas outfits as Standard Oil of Indiana, the Alabama Gas Corporation, Atlanta Gas and Light, the Natural Gas Supply Committee and Connecticut Natural Gas, to name just a few.

Reed insisted to our associate, Jack Cloherty, that there was no connection. Reed said he did not use his position in Albert's office to help the natural gas clients that now employ him.

But there are those on Capitol Hill who wonder, in any event. That's the way the legislative clouds are opened on Capitol Hill.

Shuttle Shortcomings: It looks as if the proposed space shuttle may cost far more than the original estimate. Worse, it may endanger the environment.

These are the confidential findings of the General Accounting Office. We have seen the confidential report, and we believe the public is entitled to know what it says.

The space shuttle has already cost over $3 billion. The report estimates that, in the development stage alone, the cost overrun will be more than $1 billion. States the confidential report:

"The probable outcome will be increased cost and reduced performance, coupled with a longer period of uncertainty as to whether the space shuttle can reliably carry out its ... mission."

The report also claims the space agency underestimated the effects of the sonic booms, which the space shuttle will cause. These could dangerously deplete the earth's ozone layer, the report warns.

Taxing the Tipsters: Stool pigeons for the FBI, Justice Department and other agencies get paid for their information, but rarely do they claim their clandestine income on their tax returns. Not so with stoolies for the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS insists that it's informants always pay taxes on their secret salaries, and the tax men thoroughly examine their returns every year to see that they do.

Junked Junket: At the Interior Department, the new public affairs chief, Lou Churchville, recently drew up plans to get his subordinates together for a conference. The scheme called for 50 or 60 public affairs officers to gather in New Orleans. There was even a convenient excuse: Interior Secretary Tom Kleppe would be there at the same time, and he could speak to his spokesmen.

But, believe it or not, a number of bureaucrats rebelled at the boondoggle. Result: the trip was cancelled and about 15,000 taxpayers' dollars were saved.

A REVIVAL OF INTEREST IN HONORING GEORGE WASHINGTON CARVER is underway in at least four major cities spurred by Community Relations Representatives of Gulf Oil Corporation. It began during Career Week in January where the National Achievement Clubs, based in Pittsburgh, Pa., presented the 32nd Carver luncheon begun by the late Alma Illery who also persuaded Congress to honor Carver with a week, a coin, and a postage stamp. Looking Back Over The Years . . .

"Bootleggers Were Popular", says Mr. Edwin Nathan Scott

by T.J. Patterson

Mr. Scott, when did you come to Lubbock and why?

"T.J., I came to Lubbock in October of 1944. We came out here on a cotton pick. My three brothers and sister were with me. My sister is deceased now. We all came to West Texas together. Sylvester, my seventh brother, had already been out here and had just gotten out of service and decided to come back. All of us decided to follow him here."

Did you have much in those days?

"No, we didn't have much. We were living on a farm and there wasn't too much money in the family that year. We wanted to come to West Texas and do a little cotton picking. We just wanted to try it out."

Where did the Scotts come from?

"We came from Rockdale, Texas, located in Milam County, approximately 45 miles east of Austin."

How much money did you have in your pocket when you left home?

"I think I had about four dollars in my pocket. I had to travel 400 miles with only four dollars. You can see by that, we didn't have very much. I think I had about a dollar when I got to Lubbock. I remember it well, because it was on a Sunday evening, about 6 when I came into the city of Lubbock. I didn't know anyone here at the time."

Did you feel lost since you didn't know anyone?

"Fortunately, I was able to meet Rev. S.S. Scott. He is no relation to me. It just happened that we met. He was a great cotton picker down through the years. As I said, I got here with a dollar, and Rev. Scott, being the person that he is, helped me. He was known by many people and a great preacher. He let me use one of his cotton sacks because I didn't have one. He was a man who always carried two cotton sacks. He was too fast for one sack, so he would always have an extra one. I really appreciated him loaning me one of his sacks. I did tell him that at the end of the day when I got paid, I would pay him for his sack. I was determined to buy him a new one or buy me one. So fortunately, I was able to pull 700 pounds of cotton the first day in the field. You know what, I had never pulled that much in my life before."

How much were they paying a hundred?

"They were paying us $3.25 a hundred. Now that was real good money to pick cotton. The money I made from pulling 700 pounds a day was more than I was making a whole week where I came from. I was able to pay Rev. Scott that evening for his sack. I continued to pull the complete week."

Was the weather a problem?

"Of course, by it being in the fall of the year back in 1944, the weather out here got real severe. It was real cold in Lubbock.

Unless you were able to stand the cold, you would look for a job in the city. It was during wartime and jobs weren't very hard to find. So I got me a job in the city. I began working for Lubbock Sanitary Hospital."

What did you do there?

"I was a janitor when I first started. Eventually, I ran errands for the hospital. I also worked in the pharmacy for four or five years. I got quite a bit of experience working in the pharmacy. Would you believe I worked with the x-ray department. I really enjoyed working in that department. You know, I didn't make near as much money as I did pulling cotton."

What was your starting salary at the hospital?

"When I started, I made only $90 a month. That was an awful amount considering what boll pulling brought in if you worked real hard. I had to think in terms of winter setting in here. I had to have a job all year long, not just during a season."

Where did you live when you first came here?

"I lived with Rev. Scott for about six months. Then I moved to Mr. and Mrs. Fred McQuinney's rent house. There I stayed until I married."

What year did you marry?

"I married August 20, 1948. I married Pearlne Walker who came to Lubbock at the age of 6 from Bay City, Texas."

What kind of quarters did you live in before marrying?

"The most fortunate part about the living situation was very nice. I stayed in a one-bedroom apartment which I rented from the McQuinneys. Of course, I would always go over to their home and eat supper, or any time I wanted something to eat. They were very nice people. Anytime I would want to bring my girlfriend by, they would always fix dinner for me. They were just like mother and father to me. It was just like being home. They made me like living in Lubbock. I don't think I'd attempt to do what I did once in Lubbock."

What did you attempt, Mr. Scott?

"When my wife and I decided to get married, I didn't have anything. We married on a paycheck. We got paid on Friday. I remember the $66 I got that day. We were married that afternoon. I even worked on the day of our marriage. I worked until 4 p.m. and took an hour off. I had to get to the courthouse before it closed at 5 p.m. I had asked the lady to be off for one hour, and she agreed. She didn't even know what I wanted to be off for. My brother was working right there with me and he didn't know where I was going. I didn't want to fool anyone, but I didn't want anybody to change my mind from what I had decided to do."

How did you complete your wedding plans?

"Well, I called my bride and told her to be ready. I was leaving the hospital at 4 o'clock and I was going by and pick her up. So I got a taxi and went by my apartment and changed my clothes in a hurry. After picking up my bride, we went to the courthouse. Before we could buy the license we had a small problem. My wife lacked one month being 18 years old."

Did you panic, Mr. Scott?

"No, I didn't. We only had to wait for my father-in-law to come from Avenue Q to sign for her. He gave his consent by signing the paper. All of this was done within an hour's time. If I can recall, he

Two Hundred Years of Black Achievement

1776 — 1976

Mary Church Terrell

Civil Rights Advocate

Mary Church Terrell was born in Memphis, Tennessee on September 23, 1863. She attended a model school connected with Antioch College in Yellow Springs, Ohio, graduated in 1884 from Oberlin College where she was freshman class poet, an editor of the college newspaper, and a leader in the college literary society.

Her first public service came with an appointment to the Washington Board of Education, on which she served for eleven years. In 1896 she organized and became the first president of the National Association of Colored Women. She was also active in the Women Suffrage Association, and delivered the key speech before the convention in 1900. As a delegate to the International Congress of Women, she delivered a 30-minute address first in fluent German, then in French and English, the only woman able to do such a thing.

As an organizer and charter member of the N.A.A.C.P., she was selected as the peace representative for black women to the 1919 Paris Peace Conference of the International Congress of Women.

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

Tonight tells the story for Texas Tech. The Red Raiders tangle with Missouri, Big 8 champions, in the first game of the Midwest Regional tournament, and it's a stern challenge.

The Tigers toppled Washington, a team that beat Tech by some 20 points at the first of the year. They obviously have a strong team to win their conference, recognized as one of the toughest in the nation.

In prior years you could almost say with some degree of assurance that the season was over. Southwest Conference teams have not, with consistency, beaten Big 8 teams.

That isn't true this year. Tech has beaten both Kansas State and Oklahoma State, and Missouri wasn't that much stronger than the Wildcats. So, if the Raiders relax and play their normal game, they have a better than fighting chance tonight.

The Raiders, though, will have to play much better than they did against Syracuse. The Orangemen, who didn't play well either, aren't as strong as Missouri and Tech had, all things considered, a relatively easy time with Syracuse.

The number of turnovers Tech committed against Syracuse were alarming for this late in the season. And a like performance against Missouri would be fatal.

Certainly the nervousness of playing a first round game should be gone. The Raiders obviously were tense. They forced some shots, they stood around too much and they didn't seem to relax. And they got careless with the ball.

They cannot afford such a performance against Missouri. If they are relaxed, move well and pass accurately, while getting the good shot, there's no reason to believe that they can't beat the Tigers.

It would be a great thing for Tech and the conference if the Raiders did win. It would mark the first time since SMU lost to San Francisco in the semi-finals of the national tournament in 1956, 20 years ago, that a SWC team advanced that far.

If Tech gets past Missouri, it probably would face Notre Dame, a shaky winner over Cincinnati and an earlier conqueror of the Raiders. And that could be an epic battle.

Right now there are doubts about the baseball season, pro-style, getting off on schedule. Talks between owners and labor have progressed at a snail's pace, with nothing concrete coming out of the meetings. Both sides refuse to budge.

Meanwhile, players are beginning to get impatient. They want to play, because those topheavy salaries are in jeopardy. Maybe they're having second thoughts about going union.

Many a ballplayer lives like the rest of us, despite the inflated salaries, or pay—they spend what they make without putting anything aside. The prospect of going into another line of work is a little frightening.

And that other work doesn't pay quite in line. Big salaries in baseball don't necessarily mean an equivalent executive's pay for someone with no experience.

The owners, in many ways, hold the upperhand. The majority operate baseball clubs as a sideline to other businesses. They don't have to field baseball teams.

The owners generally own the stadiums, or have a lease agreement, on them. They foot all the costs. All the players have invested is their ability, and they run no business risks. It has become the classic confrontation between management and labor.

Frankly, my opinion is that baseball players made a grave mistake in fighting management. Sure, they have been chattels, but they've been well paid and salaries have gone up. They are doing what they enjoy and you can't beat the hours.

Unless the impasse is broken, and it may have been by now, professional baseball is in danger of being a bygone sport. The losers will be management, players and the public.

Ray "Big Train" Clements died this past week and a colorful era of wrestling died with him. He was a colorful performer in the ring and a great guy to go with it.

Ray and I had birthdays on the same date and, while we threatened to raise a convivial glass together on that day, it never came about. I was the loser, because being with him was a pleasure. He had a great sense of humor and he lived life to the fullest. He will be missed.

THE ROUNDUP: Collidge Hunt, former Lubbock High and Tech fullback, coached at Loraine last year, has moved to Jim Ned . . . Can't for the life of me understand why Channel 13 let Ray Boyd depart. He'll be missed . . . Jackie Sullivan is so worried about the sheriff's campaign that he went fishing last weekend! . . . CB handles are colorful, but I want to meet the guy who is the "Red Raider." I've also heard "The Longhorn" and "The Aggie." The latter may change his handle to "Bryan." . . . Congratulations to Corky Oglesby on developing a strong Tech track squad . . . Midland's new manager is Bill Rigney, Jr. He got the job before his dad was named manager of the San Francisco Giants.

Area School Districts Receive Federal Funds

Area school districts will be receiving immediate moneys under the School Impacted Aid Program with the possibility of additional moneys in the future.

The aid program affects areas where there are federal employees whose children attend public schools.

Congressman George Mahon was advised Monday by the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare that the entitlement for Lubbock County had been approved.

Under the program, Lubbock Independent School District will receive $100,318; Frenship ISD will receive $85,092; Shallowater ISD will receive $3,570; and Smyer ISD will receive $1,249.

A spokesperson for Congressman's office said other payments during the 1975-76 fiscal year could be made as funds are available and additional data is received.

Jimmy Lee Brown Defense Fund Growing Toward $5,000 Goal

As of Sunday afternoon, the Jimmy Lee Brown Defense Fund had grown to nearly $600, according to Rev. A.W. Wilson, coordinator of the special project.

The fund began immediately after Brown received a 30-year sentence for the alleged rape of a 23-year-old Lubbock woman. Brown was sentenced by a 137th District Court jury on Feb. 21.

"After watching the trial, 'I'm sure that Brown was railroaded in this case,'" says Rev. Wilson. "Negroes don't get fair trials here in Lubbock," he continued.

"I am not doing this totally for Jimmy Lee Brown, but I want to open the eyes of all Negroes on what is happening here," continued the veteran minister of Bethel A.M.E. Church.

According to Rev. Wilson, Brown's attorney, John T. Montford, filed a motion March 2 for a new trial and included 17 grounds for granting the new trial. That motion is under consideration by Judge Robert C. Wright.

Tried twice this year in connection with the alleged case, Brown's first trial in January resulted in a mistrial by a 10 man-2 woman jury.

A goal of $5,000 has been set by his group to see that Brown gets a new trial. "I don't believe Brown can get a fair trial in Lubbock," said Rev. Wilson.

Two Approved as Precinct Chairmen

Dr. Melville Monte, 19th Congressional District Co-chairman of the Reagan for President Committee, announced the appointment of Dean Krueger and Mark Hughes as co-precinct chairmen for Lubbock County.

Dr. Monte stated, "These two fine young men are in the process of putting together one of the strongest precinct operations in Lubbock County."

"The operational planning has been formalized," according to Mr. Krueger, "and the next step is the recruitment of volunteers to work with the many young people ready to walk and call into the precincts for the nomination of Governor Reagan and four delegates pledged to his nomination."

All people desiring to work for Governor Reagan's nomination are invited to contact Dean Krueger (795-7471) or Mark Hughes (792-0627).

Matters of heresy depend upon the point of view.

Tech's Rick Bullock is 15th on West Team Balloting for Pizza Hut Classic

In the balloting for the fifth annual Pizza Hut Basketball Classic to be held April 5 at the Las Vegas Convention Center, Rick Bullock, outstanding center for the Texas Tech Red Raiders, is in 15th position on the West squad as of last week.

More than 2.1 million ballots had been tabulated when voting closed last week. An additional million ballots will be counted until March 20. The top eight players per squad when the tabulation is terminated March 20 will receive automatic invitations to appear in the NCAA and NAIA sanctioned charity event. Two additional players per team will be named as at-large representatives.

As of last week, Bullock had 177,473 for the fifteenth position. Leading the West squad in balloting were Ed Gregg of Utah State 253,067; Willie Smith, Missouri, 246,398; Sonny Parker, Texas A&M, 243,231; Barry Sabas, Colorado State, 241,943; Ron Lee, Oregon, 236,524; and Jim Hearn, Marymount, 230,645.

The anticipated return of 3.1 million ballots will shatter the record of 2.4 million established last year. Coaches for the Pizza Hut Classic will be Indiana's Bobby Knight and Kansas State's Jack Hartman. The series is knotted at 2-2, with East victories coming the past two seasons.

Manpower Program Benefits Ballenger School Students' Projects

by Richard Mason

Perhaps you saw the movie. Cliff Robertson plays Charley, the mentally retarded young man who gains new life and an active place in society under the care of a psychologist and a lady assistant.

Charley develops mentally, emotionally, and socially, and is able to look after himself because of the doctor's experiment and the assistant's love.

Two employees of the Manpower program are attempting the same thing with 16 mentally retarded students from the Ballenger School. Only they are not using drugs in their experiment. They are teaching the young adults a trade.

Jan Morris, a former employee of the state school, and Tommy Eaton, an artist, have established a sheltered workshop at Ballenger in which the students are currently learning the skills of ceramics and the processes involved in silk screening.

Morris and Eaton market what the young adults make in the workshop, returning the proceeds to the students. Eventually, they plan to establish a self-supporting company which will employ Ballenger students 16 years of age or older.

"We hope to have a basic product which will provide year-round employment," Eaton says.

As in the movie, however, the benefits from the experiment may only be temporary. Funding for this year's Manpower program is scheduled to expire June 30th. The company will not be self-sufficient by that time, he says.

Since January, Tommy Eaton and Jan Morris have been employed with the local Manpower program. Previously, the artist notes, manpower funds were used to train maintenance workers and people for public works projects. But under the direction of Jic Clubb and Bob Cedano, two program counselors, he and Jan Morris were encouraged to develop a community project.

Tony Carpenter, a Ballenger School student, proudly displays a silkscreen poster made by young adults at the school. Tony is one of 16 students who work with two CETA employees.

Milam Center director Barbara Reese helped with the workshop concept, and Tom Herring, principal of Ballenger School, provided space on the Ballenger campus and materials for the two. Herring also rearranged the class schedules of 16 Ballenger students so they could participate in the program.

Jan Morris describes the program as a "sheltered work environment with more supervision than a regular job would have."

"We're training the students, and right now, we're working with pottery and custom silkscreening," she explains.

The ultimate goal of the project is to prepare the young adults for entry into the job market. While they learn proper work habits, the students are able to earn some money on their own.

The young company markets posters, tee shirts, jewelry, beads for macrame, and customized silkscreening. Eaton admits some of the products are crude because of a lack of standards, but he is quick to add that the project plans call for purchasing mechanical aids to produce more uniform work.

"It will still be made by the students," he explains.

Playing The Waiting Game

In 1973, the Comprehensive Employment Training Act was passed by Congress to provide funds for training the unskilled and the unemployed in trades which would benefit local economies.

As the economic situation worsened, the government added another grant to the program to employ people who had skills in public service projects.

Jan Morris, a former employee at the state school, and Tommy Eaton, an artist, are two of these people. They receive their salaries through the local CETA program which is sponsored by the South Plains Association of Governments. Basically, their money comes from the Department of Labor through the Texas Department of Community Affairs before it reaches SPAG.

But, since the public service grants are not specifically part of the 1973 CETA law, they are funded each year at the discretion of the president. He decides how much money will go into the program; the Department of Labor decides where it will go.

Last February, SPAG submitted its request for 1976-77 Manpower funding to the Texas Department of Community Affairs. Funding for the project which employs Jan Morris and Tommy Eaton was included in the request. But they must wait for a Department of Labor okay before they know about their program's future.

CETA's Vivian Williams says SPAG expects to hear from TDCA on the status of the request by the first of June.

"They will notify us as soon as Washington notifies them," she said.

"We go through such anxiety every year wondering if things are going to continue," Williams said.

But these are changes in the future. What has changed so far is the students.

"It's beginning to show effects," Eaton says of the program. "Because they do well in one area, it carries over into other areas of the school."

When the young adults were first involved with the program last January, they could only work at a task for 15 minutes. Now they have developed enough work tolerance to accept simple contracts. Together, they have divided the manufacturing process into steps with each student performing a specialized function. And a group leader in charge of organizing the tasks has been elected by the young adults.

The students have reacted well to their new responsibility. Ben seldom spoke before. He is now a talkative extrovert. Tony has developed a sense of humor, and is a leader in the group. Leslie takes pride in directing the group's activities.

"So many retarded children are programmed to fail. It takes a long time to get their confidence up," Jan Morris says. Because the students are doing something which other people want, they have developed self-esteem and pride.

But the young company has its problems, too. They have not been able to obtain enough contracts to generate constant business. The reason, according to Morris, is the uncertainty of future funding.

Eaton is definite about one future possibility, though: "When we run through our money, if we don't get someone to back us, we'll have to stop."

If and when funding expires, the students will return full-time to activities at the school, where they can remain until they are 21.

Tommy Eaton does not express concern for himself or for Jan Morris over the possibility of losing their funding. The future is simple for them. Jan will return to school where one semester separates her from graduation, and Eaton says he will go back to teaching art.

"It's not a life or death matter for us. But it is for the kids," he explains. "Once they're 21, that's it."

New Courses Added To Ethnic Program At Texas Tech

Two new three-hour courses have been added to the Texas Tech ethnic studies minor, according to Dr. Vivian Davis, chairman of the Ethnic Studies Faculty Committee and assistant professor of English.

Dr. Davis said the courses, Ethnic Studies 131 and 132, are part of a program revision. Texas Tech offers an 18-hour interdisciplinary minor in ethnic studies. In addition to the new courses, students may select ethnic-related courses in academic departments such as sociology, anthropology, English, economics, political science and history. Students may use these courses to complete their minor study.

Ethnic Studies 131 will include study of anthropology and history of different minorities. Dr. Davis said students also will study race relations and ethnic culture in Texas, the Southwest and the United States.

Ethnic Studies 132 will emphasize black, Chicano and native American influence and points of view in economics, political science, sociology, language, music and religion.

Dr. Davis said students may choose from among a number of courses to complete their minor. The areas include history of black people in the United States, history of Chicanos in the United States, ethnic politics, black American literature, sociology of poverty, native Americans today, the urban community and American minority problems.

Texas Education Agency to Begin Project "Child Find" in State Soon

The Texas Education Agency (TEA) is beginning a statewide effort to locate and identify every handicapped child of school age not now in school.

State Board of Education Chairman Joe Kelly Butler of Houston announced the beginning of project "Child Find" at a Capitol news conference in Austin.

"Child Find," he said, "is designed to search out young people between the ages of 3 and 21 who are blind, deaf, physically handicapped, emotionally disturbed, or mentally retarded, and those with learning disabilities."

The program will be implemented by education service centers in 20 regions throughout Texas, with the cooperation of the state's 1,121 independent school districts. In each region, door-to-door contacts will be made in one specific community served by a school district with an average daily attendance of approximately 3,000 students.

Kelly said through the news media and through door-to-door canvasses, handicapped children not in school will be contacted, their families will receive counseling services, and the children will begin receiving the education they need.

No statistics are available on the number of uneducated handicapped children, Butler said. "We believe the number is above 10,000 children. These children are not receiving educational services promised them by Texas law, and it is the duty of public education agencies to make their parents or guardians aware that free special education is available."

"Texas has made dramatic improvements in special education," Butler added. "Today, public education is serving more than 300,000 students in special education programs. But that is only 76 percent of the handicapped children now in the state. It is the goal of public education to be serving the needs of every handicapped child in Texas between the ages of 3 and 21 by 1980—more than 450,000 children."

"Child Find" is a project of Texas Education Agency's division of special education and is financed by a grant from the U.S. Office of Education, Bureau of Education for the Handicapped.

"Hope is what we're offering thousands of Texas youngsters, through the project called Child Find," Butler points out. If a child's needs cannot be met educationally, Child Find serves as a coordinator, matching available services and resources to the individual situation of the child. The Board chairman emphasized the program will not duplicate services of other public agencies or private organizations. He said Child Find will act as a "catalyst," representing the child's best interests to appropriate organizations and communicating the availability of special services to parents and guardians on a person-to-person basis.

Persons who desire information on their school district's educational program for handicapped children, or who wish to report uneducated handicapped children, should contact their local school superintendent's office.

Grants Available for Minorities and Women at UT

A $205,000 grant from the Sid Richardson Foundation of Fort Worth will help women, blacks and Chicanos prepare themselves at the University of Texas for leadership roles in community colleges.

The funds will provide fellowships for minorities and women seeking doctoral degrees in community college education. The grant also will help a UT internship program that trains Ph.D. candidates in various fields to become teachers at community colleges.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

I'm sure you remember that oldtime kids' thyme that goes "Smarty, Smarty had a party; nobody came by Smarty"? Well, this Smarty had his own party last Sunday and that is just what happened!

You see, being an oldtime newspaperman, I, up to a few years ago, always had implicit faith in what my editor said. He was "The Man." Of course, years and experience taught me a little differently. In fact, in one instance, I ultimately found no basis for that belief at all.

Well, in last week's issue my present editor, T.J. Patterson, a man of high character and principles, in his "As I See It" column mentioned one of my very favorite services, the annual Federation of Choirs service at Greater St. Luke's Baptist Church. That service, said he, was to be last Sunday at 2:30 p.m. So, in high anticipation, I got myself all gussied up in my best clothes, summoned a cab and arrived in front of the church at 2 p.m. The church was locked tighter than a drum, every door, and there was no human in sight for blocks around.

Well, I was early. So I sat down on a brick wall by the front door and waited. 2:10 p.m., nobody. 2:20 p.m., nobody. So, realizing what had happened, I started out, my cane and I, and hobbled over to avenue A where a good buddy picked me up and brought me to a cab availability.

Checking back I know better now. I overlooked the mention of the date in the first paragraph of T.J.'s column. I also checked with Mrs. A.L. Davis and Mrs. Americus Lee Smith and Mrs. Edwina Woods. I know now.

That service, one of the most thrilling and uplifting times of the whole year in this city, will be held on the fourth Sunday, that will be March 28, at 2:30 p.m. And, gussied up again, I shall indeed be there. I wouldn't miss it.

You shouldn't either. The whole of Lubbock should attend this one. The Federation of Choirs is the product of all the churches in east Lubbock and when they raise their collective voice and solo voices in the praise of the Lord they reach right into the innermost part of one's heart. There is an incredible joy in that service and one emerges just a little better a person than he was going in.

Remember the date—March 28, 2:30 p.m., Greater St. Luke's Baptist Church, 306 E. 26th St. It's an important date.

Still on things of Biblical nature this week. I went off to see the film production of "Moses" since my last column. This is a British and Italian co-production which was filmed in the arid lands of Israel. It is a curiously hybrid kind of picture, since Burt Lancaster as Moses is American; Anthony Quayle as Aaron is British; Ingrid Thulin as Miriam is Swedish; and Irene Papas as Zipporah is Greek!

The remainder of the cast is a mix of Israeli, American, Italian and the rest.

The film is well photographed and traces, naturally, the setting adrift of the baby Moses in the basket to be found by the Princess and raised as a prince of Egypt. There is the splitting from his "cousin," the Pharaoh Ramses II, and Moses' return to his people. The Passover, the beginning of the flight from Egypt, the parting of the Red Sea, the Burning Bush, the fall from grace and the Golden Calf, the laws and the ultimate victory into the Promise Land—all are told faithfully and with care.

The picture is told less lavishly and less overwhelmingly than the epic Biblical films from the Hollywood master of the genre, the late Cecil B. DeMille. It has validity, this "Moses," and the playing is sincere and direct.

The sequence, incidentally, of the parting of the Red Sea is a far better and more credible handling than the similar DeMille version in "The Ten Commandments."

Burt Lancaster, the one time trapeze artist and "Elmer Gantry," handles his Moses assignment with low-keyed honesty and quiet professionalism. Anthony Quayle's Aaron is a sad, troubled and sometimes uneasy portrayal. Miss Thulin makes a sincere Miriam, while Miss Papas gives her skills to Zipporah.

Two others score handily in this cast, Mario Ferrari as the Pharaoh and Yousef Shiloah as the wily Dathan.

The film, at the Cinema West, runs two hours and 20 minutes and is PG rated. It has had a dual reputation, for much of its content was seen on television under the title of "Moses: The Lawgiver" earlier. This film contains much material not seen in that TV presentation.

Talked with Less Adams of the Lubbock Theatre Centre's Act IV this week. He's deeply involved, as all members are, in formulating plans for the second annual Summer Mummies set for a July opening at the Koko Palace. If I must be immodest, it was during last July-August run that I made my "stunning debut" as a soft shoe dancer in the olio, playing all performances in white tie, tails, top hat, stick and all. My ego enjoyed it; I hope the audiences did. They seemed to do so; they were kind!

Well, there'll be another big Summer Mummies show this year and if you have any talent for acting or for an act in the olio, pick up the phone and call the Lubbock Theatre Centre and ask for one of the Act IV members or Les Adams. They'll love hearing from you, believe me. All the proceeds go to help the city's prime community theater, Lubbock Theatre Centre.

And, remember, in closing, one other date. That is this Saturday, March 20. That's the positively last time that you can purchase your memberships for the upcoming season of Lubbock Community Concerts. The headquarters is the Lubbock Inn and you can contact them by dialing 799-2105. Don't delay. Remember, no tickets at the door for the four events; only memberships admitted.

A-J Editor to Speak To Lunch Bunch

On March 23rd, the Library Lunch Bunch will have an opportunity to hear Mr. Jay Harris, editor of the Lubbock Avalanche Journal, discuss his recent trip to Israel in a presentation entitled "Some Observations on Israel and the Middle East." He will show slides of Israel and comment on the present situation in the Middle East.

Mr. Harris made his trip to Israel from October 18 to October 28, 1975, on the invitation of the National Association of Israeli Journalists and the Israeli government, with a group of twelve newspaper, television, and radio executives from the United States. The group was afforded the opportunity to visit all parts of Israel, including not only the holy sights, but also the border area of Jordan, the Golan Heights, the Dead Sea, several Kibbutzim and the Mitla and Giddi passes in the Sinai Desert where the American observation posts are situated. The group also spoke with top Israeli financial, military, and government officials, including Major Teddy Kollek of Jerusalem, and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

Lunch Bunch meets every Tuesday from 12:15 p.m. till 12:45 p.m. in the Community Room of Mahon Library, 1306 9th Street. Bring a sack lunch and enjoy a free program. The library will provide the coffee.

All Texans Should Know Weather Warning Signals

Two phrases that should be part of every Texans' vocabulary are "tornado watch" and "tornado warning."

The National Weather Service is constantly monitoring the skies and will issue a "watch" anytime a squall line which has the potential of spawning tornadoes begins to develop. "Watches" are usually posted for broad areas spanning hundreds of miles. It is not uncommon for a city or town to be included in a watch dozens of times without ever experiencing a tornado.

For this reason there is a danger of becoming complacent. Although no one expects that people will "drop everything" when a watch is posted, they should become conscious of the weather and monitor broadcasts for developments.

In spite of great technological strides, the human eye is still the best instrument for locating a tornado. Since radar isn't effective in spotting most tornadoes, many communities have organized networks of trained volunteer spotters.

To be effective, a spotter must be trained because there are many weather conditions which resemble tornadoes but are not. These tornado look-alikes will confuse one untrained eye. More often than not, the classic funnel tornado will be clearly visible in West and Central Texas. In the Eastern states and East Texas the funnel will often be obscured by rain so that it is heard rather than seen clearly.

As potentially dangerous squall lines pass through an area, that community's trained tornado spotters are deployed to scan the skies for trouble.

If a twister is spotted, a "tornado warning" is signaled. Warnings are issued for much smaller areas and may mean that residents may have only a few minutes to take shelter. If a warning is issued, persons in that area should immediately watch for danger and be ready to take cover at a second's notice.

Interviews with people who have lived through tornadoes, indicate that the most prevalent sound associated with tornadoes is that of freight trains passing close by or jet planes roaring overhead.

Anyone who thinks they have spotted a tornado should immediately notify law enforcement officials. Spotters do a good job in protecting their community but they cannot be everywhere at once.

While the community goes about its business during a tornado watch, the spotters become the first line of defense against tornadoes striking without warning. The work can be dangerous. A volunteer spotter was killed by the tornado which wrecked Lubbock in 1970.

Looking Back . . .

got there about 4:30. I did get a little nervous. Everything was happening so fast. We got our marriage license about 4:45. The marriage license department was on the second floor, so we hurried down to the first floor and found the first Justice of the Peace we could find. He married us shortly before 5 p.m."

Did you leave the courthouse happy?

"We sure did. We called a taxi and went our way. I was working two jobs then. Before I got married, I always sent home half of my paycheck each month. I always thought of mom and dad and the children they were rearing. I wanted to help my family. Every month when I got my check, I put their half in the mail and sent it to them. I would keep the other half to live off. I guess that's one reason why I didn't have very much when we got married. I didn't have any clothes or nothing, but I didn't mind any of it."

How do you see Lubbock then as compared to now?

"When I first came here, Lubbock had one of the best bus services of any city I had ever been in. It only cost a nickle to ride the bus. The bus would ride down through the black section of town every ten or fifteen minutes. You could catch a bus and go to any part of town you wanted to go. You could always transfer to any location. They had real good service. Three-fourths of the time you were unable to get on the bus because of its use. Many people didn't have cars, and the bus proved to be the way to travel in Lubbock. Most of the people were here on a cotton pick for a short period of time."

What was the population of Lubbock when you came here?

"Lubbock only had 31,000 people when I came here. There was no such thing as Avenue A. It only went two blocks, from 19th to 17th Street. That was the old Slaton Highway where we used to go around the old Railroad Avenue, now they have named it Southeast Drive. Well, all of this would be Railroad Avenue and would come around by the cemetery curve. 19th Street was even a large street in those days."

You've seen Lubbock come a long way.

"Yes, I've seen Lubbock grow from 500 to 600 blacks to 10,000 blacks. I have had a great experience living in Lubbock."

What were the attitudes of blacks then as compared to now.

"Well, when I first came here, most of the blacks were on cotton picks. It looked like Lubbock's population of blacks, from my idea, was from the worse of the people who were living in the slum areas who came to Lubbock on a cotton pick. This didn't give us too good of a neighborhood. The people were fine, but on Friday and Saturday nights, you could always look for two or three to get killed."

What caused all the killing?

"It was because of the many people coming out of the slums in other cities. These people had raised hell all their lives. They came out here on a cotton pick which didn't upgrade them any. They lived in little old shacks, slept on cotton sacks and mattresses. These people didn't have very much to really be proud of. They had their money. Lubbock wasn't wet. There were no places to buy whiskey, so the bootlegger became a popular person to those people. The bootlegger took over during this time. Blacks would buy liquor from the bootlegger and they had to hide to drink it. When they did drink it, they drank too much because they were afraid of getting their liquor taken away from them. If you ever got caught with liquor on you, they would take it on the spot. Police wouldn't take you to jail, they would just take your liquor. It looked like every little corner had a joint sitting on it."

(Next Week Mr. Scott talks about blacks in politics in Lubbock.)

Youth Day was held Sunday, March 14 at Lyon's Chapel. They presented a high spirited program. The young people are really on fire for Christ. Speaker for the morning was Willie Deshone, senior at Dunbar High School and president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. Deshone shared his personal testimony on how he received Christ and pleaded with the young and old to give up sin and accept Christ.

Young Deshone has also started a movement for Christ at Dunbar. We thank God for him and pray that God will continue to use him on his program. We ask that ever school in Lubbock get behind this movement and get on the move for Christ.

We want to thank Dr. Perry for allowing the youth to have youth day. We were also honored to have Ecomet Burley, another member of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes.

The March board meeting of the Lovely Sunset Board will meet in Slaton Thursday and Friday of this week. Members, let us make plans to be in attendance.

The Federation of Choirs will meet at our church on Sunday, March 28, at 2:30 p.m. This is an annual affair and if you miss it, you will be missing a spiritual treat.

Members of the Queen of Sheba Circle met in the home of Sister Carrie Mims, 2607 Ivory Avenue, this week.

Prayer meeting is held each Wednesday evening at seven. Prayer is a source of power; therefore, the devil trembles when he sees a praying Christian.

Let us pray for and visit our sick and shut-in members. Those on the sick list include Sisters Dolly Howard, Daisy Deo, Lillie Hall, Ellen Tillman and Annie Sanders Lewis.

"The next criminal docket for the 140th Court has already been set, so it will not be on the next docket," the assistant DA said.

"It could conceivably be on the one after that. I really couldn't say for sure."

Cannon said there had been "quite a bit of publicity in the newspaper" and the DA's office wanted to let the case die down before it was retried.

While on the witness stand, Cavazos said Saddler pointed a gun at him as he was leaving the club and again outside the building. The security guard said he told Saddler to stop and then shot at him "to keep him from killing somebody else and me."

According to the jury foreman, seven members found Cavazos innocent, two found him guilty of manslaughter, and three others voted him guilty on alternative charges.

revenue bonds for an engineering contract to extend the 34th Street transmission line another 5.4 miles to the Holly Avenue switchyard on the Slaton Highway.

The engineering firm of Hicks and Ragland will use the money to study route selection, to purchase right of way, and for actual design work. Present plans call for the poles to be in place by 1978 when the new Lubbock Power and Light generator begins operation.

"We're looking towards next summer before they'd get started," a spokesman for the city said. Tentative plans for the transmission line route have the poles running down Quirt Avenue to tie into the 34th Street line. The 34th street power lines will be in operation as soon as construction is complete, council members said.

The completion date for the 34th Street line was extended another month by the council at the request of Jack Powers, chairman of the Electric Utilities Board. Powers told the council that there had been a delay in receiving the poles.

The Lubbock Chamber of Commerce Beautification Committee appeared before the council to solicit support for cleaning the city. Beautification committee members presented a program which included working with property owners, realtors, the railroad, and the media to coordinate the campaign. The committee also asked the council to enforce ordinances which controlled weeds on vacant lots.

The council passed a resolution endorsing the committee's plans.
