Candidates Ready for Nov. 2 Showdown

Cleveland to "Cut In" On Commissioner Race

by Cliff Avery

In the campaign for County Commissioner in Precinct 3, it looked like there'd be only two to tango, until a new dancer decided to cut in to see if anybody else would fill out his dance card.

The newcomer was the Rev. Adolphus Cleveland who last week announced he'd like to cut a rug in a write-in campaign, after he was defeated in the June Democratic runoff by candidate James Lancaster.

So Lancaster and Raza Unida candidate Trinidad Zepeda have somebody to share the floor with, adding a new note to the campaign while other races dulled to a monotone.

Lancaster said the Cleveland candidacy has "stirred up some interest" in the race. "Many people have called me to offer their support," says the Democrat.

Zepeda said Cleveland had "fallen victim to the old Democrat trick of diluting the strength of the minority vote in order to elect an unqualified candidate." Zepeda noted that Cleveland had said he was running at the request of "community leaders," and Zepeda wondered aloud whether the community leaders would be "running the county commissioner's office" if Cleveland won.

Cleveland said he hopes to cash in on Democrats who jumped party lines to vote in the Republican primary, thus barring their participation in the Democrat runoff. Cleveland also declared he will count on Tech students who weren't in the city during the runoff and on new voters.

"There's a growing awareness of the power of the ballot and what's lost if people don't vote," Cleveland said, "I think Box Six is a great untapped source of votes." But the pastor of the New Jerusalem Baptist Church said he's not waging a "black candidacy. I think people tend not to vote along color lines. I think they vote along economic lines.

I like to see our race as excellence against mediocrity," Cleveland said.

Idalou resident Lancaster, 46, said, "My concern is the teaching hospital—getting it open and getting it in operation.

"I sat in on all the budget sessions. There are a lot of 'ifs,' but I think we're going to need help from the state level."

Lancaster noted that at the outset, the teaching hospital will go through a phase of trial and error, but said that cooperation is essential and expects that "like any other problem, we'll come to a suitable conclusion."

Lancaster refused to speculate what might be needed to bring the county jail up to standards until the Texas Jail Standards Commission hands down regulations. He says it will take "in depth study" to bring about definite solutions as far as the jail and the juvenile detention problems are concerned.

Zepeda charged that "the needs of the people have been ignored for too long," and emphasized "people representation." Citing his youth in what other cities would call "the barrio" Zepeda said, "If a person is going to represent me, he's going to have to know what I've had to live through."

At a recent candidate's rally, Zepeda came down hard for improved jail facilities and has said he'd work closely with Sheriff C.H. Blanchard to solve the problems of the overcrowded facility.

Zepeda has scorned "bickering" between the county commissioners and the City of Lubbock and

Politocos Hit Local Issues

by Mary Alice Robbins

With the General Election less than a week away, political candidates are busy "pressing the flesh" and expounding their views in an effort to reach as many voters as possible.

The race for state representative in District 75-B is developing into a showdown between Democrat nominee Froy Salinas and Republican standard bearer Lee Page.

Salinas ran second in the five-man contest that shaped up for the May 1 primary, throwing him into a runoff with former state legislator Delwin Jones. In June, Salinas was able to rally his forces enough to defeat Jones by a narrow margin.

A Tahoka native who frequently refers to himself as "just a country boy," Salinas is 37 years old, married and the father of four children. He has been in the insurance business more than 10 years here and has served on advisory committees for Lubbock public schools, the tax equalization board for city and schools and on the Small Business Administration Advisory Board for the region.

Page is 30 years old, single and an agribusinessman. A veteran of the Vietnam war, Page served more than three years in the U.S. Navy as a hospital corpsman. He was unopposed in the May primary.

In order to present local voters as much information on the views of the two candidates, the West Texas Times developed a list of questions and fielded responses from both men. The following is the results of the question-and-answer sessions.

How much money has been contributed to your campaign? Has any of the money come from political action groups. If the answer to the preceding question is "Yes," how much money?

SALINAS: I'd say roughly $20,000 has been contributed. About half of the money has come from political action groups. These

Commissioners Take Steps To Solve Health Problems

Lubbock County Commissioners took steps Tuesday to assure enforcement of the county's private sewage facilities will be an ongoing program.

Enforcement of the sewage regulations has been carried on by personnel at the Lubbock City-County Health Department. But the recent dissolution of the city-county joint health service threatened to disrupt the regulatory program.

Tuesday, commissioners authorized County Judge Rod Shaw to write the Texas Department of Health Resources, requesting permission to utilize the services of the state-employed engineer assigned to the local health unit to assist with the septic tank regulation program.

Commissioners also okayed a job description for a county sanitarian to oversee enforcement of the private sewage regulations and other environmental health programs. The sanitarian may be called on to run the county's vector control program and inspection of retail food establishments in the rural areas.

Shaw was authorized to advertise for applicants for the sanitarian's post. Although commissioners discussed the possibility of setting the sanitarian's salary between $11,000-$13,000, Commissioner Arch Lamb recommended the salary be left open for negotiation.

Commissioners plan to meet with applicants for the sanitarian's job at their Nov. 8 meeting.

In other business, Lamb cited an increase in the dumping of trash on county roads. "It's a very expensive process to go around and pick it up," he said, noting that the trash problem also can cause a health hazard.

"I think legally we could prosecute someone for dumping trash," Lamb told fellow commissioners. The biggest problem, he said, is getting testimony that would assure conviction.

Commissioner Les Derrick noted that dumping trash on county roads is a violation of state law. Under state law, a conviction for dumping trash along a state highway carries a fine of from $10-$200.

Lamb suggested that Shaw write a letter to Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin requesting the prosecution of any individual found throwing trash on roads in the county.

Tax Hike Eyed to Cure Hospital Ills

by Joe Robbins

Texas Tech regents Monday raised the possibility of a tax increase as an additional source of revenue to fill the predicted first 10-year operating deficit of $47 million for the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Regent chairman Dr. Judson Williams said, "If it means a tax increase, now is the time to talk about it."

But Tuesday, Lubbock County commissioners—who have budgetary control over the hospital district—reacted unanimously with a "never" to the idea of a tax increase for the financially troubled teaching hospital.

Commissioners noted that the current 75-cent per $100 valuation tax rate is the statutory limit set by the Texas Legislature in creating the hospital district.

Tech regents were presented with the Caraway report at their Monday meeting. That report paints a cloudy financial picture for the successful operation of the hospital.

Williams said the two big problem areas in the report that make the financial future of the hospital so grim are the estimated percentage of occupancy and the estimated collection ratio on inpatient services. Williams called these two problems "vital areas that must be worked out."

Max Caraway—who was hired by the regents and the hospital district to forecast the financial future of the hospital—also had more bad news.

When regent Clint Formby asked if the hospital can open as scheduled in September of next year, Caraway's answer was, "No, I don't think so."

Medical school vice president Dr. Richard Lockwood said, "The hospital opening date is essential to the med school. The date effects our plans to develop teaching programs and we want to get active as soon as possible.

Regent J. Fred Bucy said that "the opening date needs as much study as we've had so far on the financial situation. Tech is a part of the problem because of some monkey shins that have been going on."

Tech President Dr. Cecil Mackey displayed a bit of temper when he responded to a statement by LCHD board chairman Marshall Pennington that "the hospital will be ready Sept. 1, but it is useless unless the medical program is ready."

Mackey snapped, "The medical program is well underway, but there are decisions remaining that can't be made until we know when the hospital will open and if it will stay open—it all depends on the hospital."

Bucy asked, "What are we going to do about facing up to an opening date?"

Williams replied, "It's unlikely we'll be able to establish a firm opening date until the financial problems are worked out."

Another vital area needs to be worked out, Bucy said. "Which comes first—patients or doctors? This is a question we need to get

At-Large System Needs Changing

With so much opposition against the election of city council persons at-large, the recent suit filed by attorney A. Gene Gaines should receive a boost for the better when it comes before U.S. District Court Judge Halbert O. Woodard early next year.

The case, brought against the City of Lubbock by Gaines last spring, was scheduled to be presented Nov. 15, but a continuance was granted until 1977. The local chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) has joined hands with the local attorney by becoming a "friend of the court."

A federal judge in Mobile, Ala., last week ordered that city to change its form of government. U.S. District Judge Virgil Pittman ruled that Mobile's at-large election of the city commissioners was unconstitutional. His recent decision should help the local situation.

Late this summer, a federal judge issued a similar order for Shreveport, La. The city appealed the ruling. Shreveport, however, was given one year to come up with a new plan of government that would end unconstitutional bias against blacks in its at-large election of city commissioners.

As we've said in previous editorials, sooner or later Lubbock also will be ordered by the federal courts to do the same thing. We believe it will be only a matter of time before changes are ordered here, and Gaines had the vision to see what was happening.

Like in Mobile, there are problems for blacks and browns to be elected to the city council. In the past, blacks and browns have run for positions on the council with little success.

With the great number of federal dollars being received by the City of Lubbock, the more than 27 per cent of blacks and browns need representation. Population figures of blacks and browns are always used to get those federal dollars yet, minorities aren't on the city council to determine how the money should be used.

Sooner or later, when the storm blows over, officials will be ordered to change the at-large system in Lubbock. This is our city, and this change is necessary for the welfare of our total community.

As I See It . . .

by T.J. Patterson

With the announcement that Adolphus Cleveland will run for County Commissioner Precinct Three last week in the West Texas Times, it should create some interesting fireworks in the General Election. In this writer's opinion, this decision by Cleveland should be healthy and create a lot of interest in the upcoming election.

As black people, we need someone with guts to stand up for what he or she wants to do and continue to stay with it until the final vote is cast.

Many will say this last minute by Cleveland, which is constitutional, will create a division among the black voters. This writer will differ, because the black community needs someone who will not give up under any circumstances.

As Cleveland told this writer, "if it hadn't been for the drenching rain or as some professionals call it 'an act of God', I would have won the race."

As I See It, he has a good point to be proven on Tuesday, Nov. 2nd. Bad weather has a tendency of keeping black people home from the polls. Maybe it will be a beautiful day for the election, and Cleveland will have an opportunity to see if the rains kept the voters home. Anyway, it's going to be an interesting situation for him and other candidates.

There is an interesting pilot project to test the quality of gasoline sold at service stations in Texas being initiated by Comptroller Bob Bullock's office.

According to Bullock, his office has received a number of consumer complaints in recent months indicating that some service stations are selling inferior gasoline.

Selling inferior gasoline to the public without clearly indicating its substandard quality is a misdemeanor.

Bullock has urged motorists who can document that their engines have been damaged by inferior gasoline to call his Motor Fuels Tax Division toll-free from anywhere in Texas at 1-800-252-5555.

If there are persons who can document such acts in Lubbock should inform Bullock's office.

Since Adolphus Cleveland has taken steps for a write-in for the County Commissioner Precinct Three race, it has been rumoured that there is a possibility of someone else doing the same thing. Not in the same race, however.

It will be very interesting to see how this kind of political strategy will prove in Lubbock.

Although summer is gone and the weeds grew pretty tall in east Lubbock, it would be nice to cut some of those weeds down at those busy intersections. One intersection stands out in my mind at this time.

This dangerous intersection is at the corner of Avenue B and 16th St. If one is traveling east, it is hard to see who's coming from your right without driving out into the middle of the intersection.

It would be a good thing if the weeds were cut in this area.

This writer has become disturbed about what happens to our many young black kids who graduate from high school and don't know what to do. On the other hand, there are many of our young black people who even go to college for a year or two and not know what to do with their lives. There are also those who graduate from college and don't know of the opportunities in this world.

STICK 'EM UP... BROTHER!

It would be nice to have a program to work with those young people so they will have some idea which way to go. How many of you have ever thought about what will happen to these young people? It's really worth thinking about.

*****

Councilwoman Carolyn Jordan is apparently unhappy with this writer because he didn't pursue a project of flower boxes which she read of in Readers Digest sometime ago. She admits that the idea didn't strike my "fancy."

What Ms. Jordan must realize is that residents of Green Fair Manor apartments must first get their minds right before they start growing flowers in boxes. There are other priorities needed before flower boxes.

If Brother D.C. Fair keeps working hard, time may come when tenants can plant flower boxes. Not before then.

There still needs to be some type of leadership training program for young men and women in the eastern part of the city. This writer is still willing to work with young people who would like to get involved in a leadership training program.

If there are any of you interested, why not let me know. It's never too late to start developing one's ability to lead and get a job done. A program like this one would help our community as well as those who are interested.

Roy Wilkins as Sterling Symbol

Black Americans of every persuasion in reference to black freedom should rally behind the forces presently seeking the greatest honors for Roy Wilkins.

Perhaps the strongest support for this position is the observation that no chain is stronger than its weakest link. And Mr. Wilkins has been more than a simple link. He has, at many times in our recent racial past, been like the entire chain itself. Then, too, we have not come quite yet, in our racial pilgrimage, to the point where we can dwell upon the fine distinctions of the good, the better and the best. Mr.

Wilkins has often times been the very best resource in black America. Few would argue that he has always been "the better"; and he has never been—for any of us—less than what just men could call "good."

This places this rare and richly heroic figure in a niche marked alone for the immortals. Can the year 1977, that of his "official retirement," be anything less than a "year of glory" both for Mr. Wilkins and for black Americans as a whole?

Roy Wilkins is a symbol in many ways. But perhaps most notably he is a symbol of our racial—and human—honesty at its very best. He was not a "typical" ghetto youth, that is, as depicted by many stereotypic minds. He came from a home realistically akin to most hard-working and aspiring black Americans. Indeed, such were his youthful genteel ways that several of the "finer folks" in his community are said to have given special permission for their daughters to say "yes" to young Roy, if he should ever ask them for a dance.

In much this same fine and clean-cut spirit, his personal goals and those which he espoused for "his people" were always high and deserving of the greatest approbation.

Mr. Wilkins has often been spoken of as not being greatly charismatic. This may be seen as a distinct asset, especially at a time when black America has not so much needed what white America has called "leaders." "Leaders" on the racial scene have always borne the inopportune attribution in some degree of being persons who could be bargained with. Roy Wilkins has never seen himself as this kind of "leader."

Long before we talked openly of the need for fewer leaders and for more enablers, Roy Wilkins was a quiet-spoken public servant who simply took his talents and offered them "just as they were" for whatever good they might mean for his fellow man. This is an enabler par excellence. He always sought to do his quiet best to enable all others to do the same.

Some have remarked both charitably and well of Mr. Wilkins that whenever he seemed to make a faulty judgment, it was because he had worked too long and too hard—for all of us. He has always been the work horse type, pulling infinitely more than a humanly expected load. Yet, whenever any of us stood back and looked at this mighty warrior and what he had accomplished, we saw all the lineaments of a stalwart, handsome, pride-filling stallion. Such is the measure of this great man!

Roy Wilkins has been an interracial man. This made him less popular, for a time, during the mid and late 1960's, in the minds of some than otherwise he might have been. But the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has always been interracial. It began, as such, in the midst of internal tension. That tension, while greater or less at some times than at others, has never fully disappeared. This, indeed, is the NAACP. It is an interracial organization, reflecting both the inter-racial and intra-racial strivings of a benighted but always upwardly-bound people for their secure, worthy and long-postponed place of dignity within America's mainstream.

Uniquely, it has been said by those of widely variant shades of view, Roy Wilkins is the nation's best embodiment of the NAACP. If you love the organization as it is, you'll fall head over heels for Roy Wilkins. If you're for it, as the best—ideal-wise—that it could ever be, you'd have to walk hand-in-hand with Roy Wilkins, too. The most earnest and honest "criticism" I have ever heard of Roy Wilkins is that he is "too much of an organization man!"

Roy Wilkins, in fair weather and foul weather, has been, is now . . . and doubtless ever will be America's "Mr. NAACP."

As time passes . . . and 1977, the year of Mr. Wilkins' official retirement from his official station . . . will, too soon, have passed. Yet our sense of his quiet presence when we have needed him the most will never pass us by.

Busts of him will be made. And he will be "cussed and discussed" for countless generations. That's the way it always is with indispensable folks for whom we hold an often unstated reverence, esteem, and heart-felt need and affection.

In an often darksome world which has always needed light, the future pioneers and pilgrims will think of our luminous brother and take heart knowing that, even as he did . . . and does . . . so can we all be "lights of the world in the generation in which we live."

Police Beat

Theft Under $5.00

An east Lubbock man reported to police that he was sleeping with a lady one night last week, and she got up before he did and took his billfold.

The billfold was valued at $5.00. "There was no money in the billfold, but I am going to file charges against her," he told police.

Criminal Mischief

Pat Moore, 2707 Weber Drive, reported to Lubbock police that persons unknown broke into her apartment one day last week.

According to the police report, a beer bottle was apparently thrown in a window and broken. There was approximately $10 worth of damage to the apartment.

Assault

Mack Henderson, Jr., 2806 Weber Drive #C, reported to Lubbock police that while he was at the Thunderbird Lounge on East 23rd and Fir, he was struck on the left eye with the large end of a pool stick. He claims it was done by a 27 year old man.

Henderson expressed great anger over the incident and do something about the assault.

His left eye was swollen. He was treated and released after a short while.

Mother Stabs Daughter

An east Lubbock lady told police that she was walking into the kitchen one night last week when her mother stabbed her in the back with a knife or some other sharp object.

The daughter believed that her mother stabbed her because she was seen talking to her mother's boyfriend earlier in the evening.

The daughter didn't say she would file charges against her mother.

Arson

Willie B. Collins, 3402 East Cornell, reported to Lubbock police that persons unknown poured gasoline in the floor of his house one day last week while he was away.

After being set afire, it caused approximately $30 worth of smoke damage. The fire department came and put out the fire.

There were no suspects in the incident.

House Burglary

Dale Barton reported to Lubbock police that persons unknown had broken into his father's house, Ralph Barton, 3002 East 4th St., one day last week.

Entry to the house was gained by prying open the front door lock. Taken from the house was an assortment of packaged meats.

Lubbock High exes will be welcome to attend Friday's game.

Republican Senatorial Nominee Charges "Bentsen Hedges"

Charging that "Bentsen hedges," Republican senatorial candidate Alan Steelman launched an attack on U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen here this week.

Steelman, a two-term congressman from Dallas, cited what he called Bentsen's tendency to sway back and forth on issues, during an address to Lubbock Jaycees at noon Monday. Following the luncheon, Steelman also spoke at Texas Tech University Center.

In his criticism of the incumbent, Steelman noted that six years ago Bentsen criticized Ralph Yarborough for being a "big spender" and said he believed in fiscal responsibility. But Bentsen's record shows just the opposite, according to Steelman. He said the Democrat is one of the biggest spenders in all of Congress, with a voting record that ties with Sen. Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts.

Steelman also noted how often Bentsen has changed his mind on the right-to-work law. In 1970, the incumbent said he was for the right to work, but in 1975 he said he was against it, the GOP contender observed. Then, he added, Bentsen swung back the other way this year, saying he favored the right-to-work law.

"Around Texas, they call this Bentsen hedges," Steelman quipped.

"I think we don't need a man for all seasons—we need a man to stand up for principles," he added.

Reaffirming his own stands on issues, the 34-year-old Steelman said he believes in a fiscally responsible federal government with a balanced budget and free market economy. "We need to tell the Secretary of State and George Meany to stay out of the economy," he told Jaycee members.

Steelman also took a strong stand on national defense, saying the United States must remain strong to continue its influence for peace in the world. He recalled Teddy Roosevelt's advice to "speak softly, but carry a big stick."

On the issue of land use, Steelman said this should fall within the realm of states' rights. He favors leaving land use planning up to the state government.

"Do-It-Yourself Fun" Makes Holiday

Halloween is a children's playday that should be fun and practical.

She suggested some do-it-yourself projects.

Halloween Cat—cut a large cat's head, body and tail from black construction paper. Glue egg carton cups with glass marble centers on the cat's head for wild eyes. Attach the head, body and tail with brass brads. Change the cat's position to make him look as if he is falling, running, frightened or just scary.

Jack-o-lantern mobile—cut an irregular ring out of heavy orange paper. Cut three triangles and one moon-shape out of heavy black paper for the eyes, nose and mouth. Don't forget the stem for the pumpkin. Hang the eyes, nose and mouth on strings to dangle inside the orange ring. Hang the mobile by a longer string attached to the stem of the pumpkin.

Paper plate mask—draw a scary face on a heavy paper plate. Cut out and/or paint the facial features on the plate. Use rug yarn or straw for hair. Punch a hole above the ears on each side of the plate. Attach a shoe lace on each side and tie around the head.

Noise makers—large, dried gourds painted with scary faces make excellent Halloween noise makers. The seeds inside the gourd make a nice "shushing" sound.

A small paper bag painted or decorated in a Halloween theme can be filled with dry beans, pop caps or jingle bells and attached to a stick. This is a great hand rattle.

And for Halloween, every child yearns for a Jack-o-lantern. There are a few rules to follow in making this Halloween favorite.

- Select a fresh pumpkin. The size will depend upon your needs and the amount of money you want to spend.

- With a sharp knife, core out a small lid at the top (large enough to get your hand in the pumpkin).

- Remove the seeds and fiber from inside the pumpkin.

- Draw the desired face on the pumpkin with a pencil or crayon.

- Carve the Jack-o-lantern, following the design you drew.

- Place a votive candle in a candle glass or small can inside the pumpkin.

- When the candle is burning, remove the pumpkin top to prevent scorching the top. Burn your Jack-o-lantern and enjoy its glow a long time.

- Once Halloween is over, make all kinds of goodies out of the pumpkin meat. If your pumpkin is too large to use at one time, freeze it and use the pumpkin later to celebrate fall harvest, the specialist suggested.

Veterans May Be Missing Dividend Checks

Many veterans retired from military service and paying premiums for U.S. Government Life Insurance (USGLI) or National Service Life Insurance (NSLI) from monthly retirement checks may be missing annual dividend checks, the Veterans Administration reported.

The VA insurance center at Philadelphia reported there are several thousand military retirees who each month pay insurance premiums by allotment from their retired pay.

In some cases, the monthly deduction becomes so routine the veterans fail to notify the VA when there is a change of address. This is particularly true, a spokesman said, when a retiree's check is sent to a banking institution.

Annual dividends paid on USGLI and NSLI policies often result in some checks being returned to the VA for lack of a current address, the Spokesman said.

Military retirees paying their GI insurance premiums by allotment should send changes of address, with policy number to the Veterans Administration Center, P.O. Box 8079, Philadelphia, Pa. 19101.

Can we afford four more years without effective leadership?

There is a critical decision to be made on November 2nd. It goes far beyond the question of which Presidential candidate can govern with integrity and honesty. We must determine which candidate has the ability and strength to lead our country out of economic chaos, and the vision to see that all Americans—not just the powerful and influential—have a better future.

During the past two years, the middle class has paid far too dear a price for a President lacking that ability.

Since Gerald Ford took office, the unemployment rate has risen 50%, from 5.5% or 5 million people, to 7.9% or 7-1/2 million jobless Americans.

Today's inflation rate of 6% is higher than it was at any time between the Korean War and the inauguration of Richard Nixon.

The 1968 food dollar is now worth 57¢.

Mr. Ford's budget will account for the largest single deficit and more than 1/3 of the public debt incurred during our entire 200-year history.

Real GNP has actually declined during each of Gerald Ford's two years in office.

And who is most affected by these distressing statistics? Not the Washington establishment, or the economic elite courted by the Republicans. The burden falls on the person who can least afford it: the average American.

Jimmy Carter means to change all that. As President, he will make government responsive to your needs.

Tax Reform: "The average family in this country actually pays a higher proportion of their income in taxes than the average family that makes more than a million dollars a year. That's disgraceful. We need to move toward a truly progressive and simplified tax system, with reduced tax rates for the average American."

Economy: "We'll never have a balanced budget nor an end to the inflationary problems as long as we have 7-1/2 million people out of work. Employment needs to be the major thrust of the whole domestic policy of our government."

Efficiency in Government: "We now have in the federal government the most bloated, confused, wasteful bureaucracy ever created. There's no way to get an answer out of Washington and no way to understand what's going on there. We need to reorganize completely the executive branch of government, making it fair, efficient, effective, and responsive to our people's needs."

Housing: "No government that cared about our neighborhoods would stack the tax deck against them. A landlord can let a building run down and make a good living on tax breaks. But when a home owner spends a little hard-earned money fixing up his home, the assessor raises his taxes. And the FHA no longer cares about families getting started in their own homes. I intend to restore the FHA to the time when, for a down payment, a family could get a mortgage which the government would insure."

Health Care: "We need a nationwide health care delivery system which will make adequate health care a right for all people."

Jimmy Carter has the strength to take charge of our government. If you are tired of paying the high price of Republican ineffectiveness, you have only one choice on November 2nd, and that choice is for change.

A leader, for a change.

Scout-O-Rama Set

Hundreds of Cub Scouts, Scouts, and Explorers will participate in the "Scouting Heritage" Scot-O-Rama Nov. 6 in five area locations, announced Bill McAlister, show chairman.

Indian dancing, woodwork, pioneering, mountain climbing and pinewood derbies are just a few of the many subjects that will be on display in action booths during each show.

A Scout-O-Rama is an action booth type show where Scouts in all communities come together to put on scouting skills.

Part of the Scout-O-Rama program is the chance for boys and girls to learn to meet the public and develop salesmanship by selling tickets for the show. Tickets are selling for $1 each. Not only is experience gained, but a portion of the ticket money is returned to the unit in sales commission to help young people pay their own way.

Locations for the shows are Hale County Agriculture Building in Plainview, 2 to 7 p.m.; Ralls High School Gym, 1 to 6 p.m.; Agriculture Building on the Fair Grounds in Levelland, 1 to 6 p.m.; Lamesa Boys Club, 1 to 6 p.m.; and this year's Lubbock show will again be at Reese Air Force Base from 1 to 6 p.m.

Don't forget to visit one of these great Scouting shows on Nov. 6. All tickets are good for any of the show locations. Tickets will be available at the gate for each show.

Across The Nation

The Portland, Oregon Observer received the following intriguing letter to the editor concerning an alleged CIA coverup of the Oswald murder:

To the Editor:
There has been so much written about the assassination of President Kennedy lately that I am moved to make the following comments:

The key to clearing up the mystery that has developed around Harvey Oswald's assassination of President Kennedy (that is, was there a conspiracy to place Oswald at the window in the book warehouse) is the Quaker lady who befriended Mrs. Oswald. Without her, Oswald would not have been in the book warehouse on the fateful day, let alone in Dallas, Texas.

Mrs. Oswald had been living with her for some time because the Oswalds had separated and Mrs. Oswald desperately needed a place to stay. She is also the one who directed Oswald to the job in the book warehouse about a month before the day he assassinated Kennedy. She did this so that the Oswalds could be back together.

The Kennedy trip was not planned very long in advance. It was a hastily organized campaign trip to help then-Governor Connally and Vice President Lyndon Johnson who were in trouble politically. At the time Connally was running for re-election. For security reasons, the route was laid out just long enough in advance to insure a turnout. This was long enough, however, for Oswald to go back to New Orleans where he had been living to get his gun.

If there was a conspiracy in the classic sense, (I distinguish here from a social conspiracy where people are emotionally moved by politician's demagoguery and/or the various news medias hate mongering—I understand that the main newspaper in Dallas stirred up a lot of hate against Kennedy's visit), the Quaker lady had to be involved months before. Without her and the chain events she effected, the assassin would not have been in place on the fateful day. I have never read any reference to her being involved in a conspiracy.

The solution is to simply apply intelligence-orientated analysis to the fact we have. Others call this mental process common sense. After all, at this point we are not trying to prove a case in court.

The mystery and conspiratorial cover-up becomes quite clear today in light of recent scandalous revelations involving the CIA and the FBI.

We now know that the CIA has been involved in covert activities that at times included assassination. Africa's Patrice Lumumba's death, the death of Allende in Chile, and the death of Martin Luther King here at home attest to this fact.

Oswald was in Russia for several years. The Russians were only too glad to get rid of him, even allowing him to return to the United States with his Russian wife. This was even more unusual then than it is now. We know that he tried to enter Cuba and failed.

We also know that he was an excellent shot. The extra shot, by the way, was an echo. As a roofer hammering shingles on a roof, I used to mistake the echo from the last of a series of hammer blows for another roofer working in the area. I have looked for him all day long until finally realizing what was happening.

My point is not that Oswald killed the President on orders from the CIA. I am saying that he was hired by the CIA to kill someone in Russia and probably Castro in Cuba. The assassin just happened to get himself worked up enough to kill the President of the United States.

The mystery and the conspiracy developed around the attempt to cover up Oswald's CIA connection: a coverup that the FBI was more than willing to cooperate with for reasons of its own. If I were them, I'd try to cover it up too.

The Akron, Ohio Reporter tells of a significant local cultural event which highlighted a noted black woman of whom all black Americans interested in the arts should be proud.

The Reporter notes:
The St. Philips Episcopal Church Women presented Dr. Zelma Watson George in a recital at the Akron Art Institute. Dr. George's recital was on "The Negro Spiritual and its Historical Background." Dr. George was appointed to the United States delegation to the General Assembly of the United Nations by President Eisenhower in 1960.

She also served as the director of the Cleveland Job Corps Center for women sponsored by the Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority. Dr. George wrote a Ph.D. dissertation in 1943 while at New York University titled, "A Guide to Negro Music: Toward a Sociologic of Negro Music."
*****

The Sojourner Truth Players, Inc., who sponsored the National Cultural Arts Festival, September 3-6, in Ft. Worth, Texas, share with all their well-wishers these thoughts of Curtis King.

Two hundred years ago—and not during the Bicentennial year—we are still at war, we are still, for the most part, battling poverty, illiteracy and social deprivation; we are still frequently misinterpreted, misunderstood and undervalued for a variety of reasons—aesthetic, cultural, social, economic, educational and political. But it has come to a point where we as Americans must come to the crux of our dilemma—pull back the cloak and see the American problem as and for what it is: a victim of its own deception. The time has come for all of us to stop being misled into thinking that one who speaks the word "Freedom" with passion in their voices and a glow in their eyes is the "True American." Two hundred years has only brought us to a point where the nature of the struggle has just begun and we must finish up the unfinished business on America's agenda.

Since this culture is based upon a theoretical, practical and productive science of superiority and inferiority which became the backbone of a culture that we are too often asked to believe; a culture drawn from the unpaid laborer near starvation—a brutalization and enactment of atrocity upon millions of people in bondage—we must name the new paradigm. For we must remember that a culture is defined and understood from the truth of a people's way of life; peculiar to their experiences, their history, their needs, their aspirations and their culture as they perceive it. That is why we must name this new paradigm.

We as American artists must all sacrifice and come together to help rectify the myths, but most of all, we must more now than ever before put away our superficial differences and work together as true brothers and sisters.

urged cooperation with the South Plains Association of Governments.

"If Mr. Lancaster is elected, the old type of county government that ignores the welfare of the people will continue," Zepeda charged.

Cleveland said that concern for the area of health brought him back into the race, noting that the county's withdrawal from funding the city-county health department has hurt prenatal care programs and services for crippled children.

Cleveland, citing experience with the Parks and Recreation Board where he says he helped oversee a $1 million budget, said he would support renovation of the present jail unless economically unfeasible.

Cleveland also called for reinvolvement in SPAG.

The 33-year-old minister noted that waging a write-in campaign is difficult, but said that even if voters don't know the process for writing in a candidate's name, they should be able to receive help. "If the people know who they want to vote for, they can get help from election judges," Cleveland said.

People grow old; life is continually new and full of change.

Mrs. M. Terrell Honored

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Stubblefield, who reside in the rural area west of the Lubbock State School, prepared a birthday dinner and invited Mrs. Maunita Terrell for her special day.

Mrs. Stubblefield ("Mennie") is Dr. Roy Sheffield's nurse, and she and Maunita are the dearest of friends. "I really didn't feel like taking the ride, but anyone who goes that far, you dare not refuse," says Mrs. Terrell.

According to Mrs. Terrell, it was a very delicious dinner. "The thoughts of such a lovely gesture will ever be remembered by me," she said.

"Their home is lovely and so many articles they've made by their hands kept me too busy to see it all," she smiles. Mrs. Terrell went on to say: "I want to say to Charles and Mennie, 'Thanks' again, and I love you."

A very tired lady when she returned home from a very pleasant surprise, she said: "It's wonderful to know you have friends like them who care about you. Who cares about being tired, I took my pills and went to bed happy," said Mrs. Terrell.

Attorneys to Meet In Lubbock

Ordinarily, most lawyers are more concerned about legal problems than medical ones. But certain medical problems will be the focus for attorneys from around the state here this week.

Approximately 250 members of the Texas Association of Defense Counsel and their wives are expected to attend the two-day meeting which begins at 9:30 a.m. Friday in Methodist Hospital.

An outstanding neurosurgeon, neurologist, orthopedic surgeon and radiologist will provide background information about various subjects including examination of patients with low back complaints, x-rays and surgery. Tours will be conducted of related departments at Methodist Hospital.

In addition, cardiologist Dr. Brandon Hull of Lubbock will speak on "Type A Personality and Heart Disease." TADC member Mark Martin of Dallas will discuss the work of the Medical Liability Commission, during a meeting Saturday morning at the Hilton Inn.

Other experts on the agenda include neurosurgeon Dr. Jack Dunn, neurologist Dr. William Gordon Jr., orthopedic surgeon Dr. Ted Hartman and radiologist Dr. Philip E. Duvall. All are from Lubbock.

The presentations by the doctors will be followed by a TADC business meeting on Saturday. At that time, Richard Granger of Tyler will become president of the organization; Wayne Sturdivant of Amarillo will become president-elect; and a new executive vice president will be elected. Barham Bratton of Austin will continue as secretary-treasurer.

The 650-member TADC is composed of attorneys whose practices generally involve defense cases. In addition to providing its members opportunities for continuing legal education, TADC works for the improvement of the administration of justice in many ways.

Local host committee members for the meeting include current TADC president Bill Moss, Barney Evans, TADC director Jack Flygare and Bill Wade, all of Lubbock.

by Joe Kelly

You began to wonder, was either team able to stop the other and, if it kept up, was a break going to decide the outcome? And then Texas Tech's defense woke up and began to play.

"We weren't aggressive on defense," Coach Steve Sloan said long after the game had ended. "In other games this year, we had been aggressive. We were doing too much standing around. The tackling wasn't good and neither was pass defense."

About the only adjustment Tech coaches made at the half was to tell the players to wake up and start playing defense. They did, and they did it so convincingly that Arizona managed only a "gimme" touchdown with six seconds left in the game.

The Wildcats managed only 91 yards total offense the last half, while Tech was piling up 270 out of their game high total of 564. It was an impressive showing.

The way the Raiders moved the ball was impressive, and yet, surprising. The offense had done well in prior games, but nothing like it was against Arizona. Tech didn't have to pass much, but the passing was good and receivers were open.

In rushing, Billy Taylor and Larry Issac both went over the 100 yard mark, and Tech hasn't had this in earlier games. It was reassuring to see the offense do so well.

The fact that the Raiders were able to move the ball so well offensively is bound to give the offense a boost. It should give the players confidence and make Tech a better team.

And when Tech could put both offense and defenses together, it made the entire team more capable. It can't help giving the Raiders the type of confidence needed for the rest of the campaign. And, with the games they have left, they'll need it.

Friday night one of the Arizona writers asked me if I thought that Tech players might be looking for revenge. The reply was the obvious. I said that I didn't see how any player, who had been in Tucson the year before, could forget the treatment they received.

Yet, the way Tech's defense stood around and seemed lethargic made you wonder if they remembered—or cared. Still, when they did get untracked, it was all over.

Coach Sloan was asked Saturday night if there would be any special preparations made to get Tech players ready for Texas this week.

Steve paused a moment and you wondered what the answer would be. The late Vince Lombardi probably would have cast a withering look at the questioner and snap "what kind of a stupid question is that?"

But Steve answered quietly that he thought that the only thing they had to do was let them know the game was going to be played.

There is no need for mental preparation. Texas is here for a Saturday afternoon game and that's really all you have to say. The Raiders know how big a game this is. So do the Longhorns.

Both teams are undefeated in conference play. The Raiders are off to their best start since 1938, when they went 10-0. Texas has been having its troubles, but is 3-1-1 and is still the team to beat—until the Steers are beaten.

*****

Arkansas took a big step Saturday when it beat Houston, which didn't derail the Cougars, but did slow them. None of the top four is out of the race yet and it could be that even A&M isn't out of it, nor Baylor, even with two losses.

The Razorbacks have a tough schedule, meeting A&M, SMU, Tech and Texas on consecutive games. Both A&M and Tech, though, will be home games and that will help the Hogs.

The Texas-Tech game is the big game this week and nothing can be taken for granted. Tech is doing better than anticipated; Texas is not doing as well. But, they're still the Longhorns and they get their share of the breaks.

This Raider squad believes in itself, though, and it should win. I think Tech has too much speed for the Horns, as well as too much passing. The Raiders slowed A&M; they should do the same thing to the Longhorns.

*****

And so the upsets in college football continue. Now it is Oklahoma State doing the improbable and beating Oklahoma. Maybe the Sooners didn't bother to spy on the Cowboys, huh?

Missouri's upset of Nebraska was not that surprising, because the Tigers have been making it a habit.

At least one Cotton Bowl official is pulling for Tech to remain unbeaten, because it would make it possible to get a better opponent, as well as to put still another new face in the Jan. 1 game. We hope that the Raiders make his wishes come true!

Rick Bullock was the last rookie to be cut by the New York Knicks and probably, on any other year, he wouldn't have been, is considering an offer to play in Europe.

The word we get is that Bullock has been offered $40,000, which isn't peanuts, even for what's-his-name running for the presidency. I don't know the details, but it sounds like a pretty good deal for the former Texas Tech star.

Tax Hike . . .

settled, and nothing productive is being done at this point."

Bucy said the key factor in solving the hospital's troubles is to straighten out the financing. "We cannot make it without help from the legislature."

An attempt is underway to get legislation passed that would enable the state to pay for the educational costs involved in teaching hospitals. Most estimates place the "teaching costs" at around 40 per cent of a teaching hospital's budget.

Although both the hospital district and the regents feel that such legislation stands a good chance of passage, Williams said that "we're only whistling Dixie" if they expect the state to aid to offset more than a small portion of the costs. Williams said that other teaching hospitals already established in Dallas, San Antonio, Houston, Temple and Waco will be sharing in any state funding along with the Lubbock facility.

Bucy—who has been meeting with Pennington to get negotiations between the med school and the hospital district off dead center—said, "The community must understand that we don't have the answers now. We're in this thing together and we've got to get together to work on the strategy on how to get the hospital financed, but we can not be successful without the help of the community."

Mackey said the community did not realize at the time the hospital district was created the full meaning of its commitment. Passage of the referendum was only an indication of its willingness.

"I am optimistic because I'm convinced that the community will arise to the occasion," Mackey added.

According to Mackey, the much publicized differences between the med school and hospital district have been a "red-herring" that has led to public confusion over the real issues.

Both Tech and the hospital district agreed to a concentrated public information program to inform the community of the crisis facing the hospital-med school complex.

Options being pursued at the present time, according to Pennington, are either to offer the hospital to the medical school to operate or for the hospital district to operate the hospital and lease the service facilities from the med school.

Either of these options, Pennington said, would result in a single entity being involved in the administration of the hospital. The third option would call for dual administration of the hospital with the med school selling services to the hospital district at cost or community rates.

"Texas Tech would be willing and happy to accept the hospital after questions about the legality and financial bridges are crossed, Williams said. "We believe that single entity administration is the answer."

Pennington said other sources of revenue for the financially troubled hospital were being looked at. He listed state support, revenue sharing, tax increase, community contributions, enlargement of the hospital district and payment by counties outside Lubbock for their medical indigents as possibilities.

Pennington also said it might be possible to stretch out repayment of the hospital's bonded indebtedness—thereby reducing the size of the payments and freeing more money for hospital operation.

Caraway's report predicts that unless some additional sources of revenue are found, the hospital district's current rate of income would cover only $16 million of the predicted $47 million deficit in the 10-year period.

At the conclusion of the meeting, Williams appointed Don Workman, Bill Collins and Clint Formby to work with committees from the hospital district and the Chamber of Commerce to look for possible solutions to the many problems facing the future of the Health Sciences Center Hospital.

Tech Student Receives Peace Award

Chukwudi Y. Eminah of Ebu, Nigeria, has been named the 1976 recipient of the Georgia Dingus Peace Award, administered through the Texas Tech University International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies. The Dingus Award includes a $200 scholarship and a plaque of recognition.

Eminah is working toward the master's degree in mass communications at Tech, and he also is a candidate for the master's degree in special education from San Francisco State University. He expects to receive both degrees in May, 1977.

The award was established by Mrs. William Dingus of Lubbock to recognize scholastic achievement, contributions in the general area of international relations and an interest in the general principles of the United Nations Organization.

Eminah is president of the Nigerian Students Union Lubbock chapter, vice president of the African Students Organization, coach and team manager of the African soccer team and a member of the Mass Communications Social Club at Tech.

At San Francisco State, he was engaged in similar undertakings, and he earlier worked at the University of Nigeria at Nnsukka on behalf of the all Nigeria University Symposium, the Biafra Students Organization and the Biafra Youth Vanguard. His major scholastic interest at that university was anthropology, and he earned his bachelor's degree there.

He came to the United States in 1970 as a Biafran refugee under the auspices of the United Nations refugee programs for war victims.

At Tech his major scholastic interest is advertising.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

There's a marvelous, nerve-wracking motion picture in town that you must try to take the time to see. It is a movie that is not for the squeamish, the faint-of-heart or the romanticists that doted on "Love Story" and the like. It is belly-tearing, shocking thriller, first class in its genre, and it is homing at the Fox Theatres complex for now and, I think, some weeks to come.

It is a movie from a novel by William Goldman called "Marathon Man" and it has a superlative cast, superb camera work, intricate detail of directorship by John Schlesinger ("Midnight Cowboy") and musicianship of a most inventive and emotional quality by Michael Small, production design of stunning choice by Richard MacDonald and complementary departmental work of excellence by many technicians.

This is a movie of complexities as was Goldman's novel, from which he wrote the screenplay admirably. It is seldom that an author himself can adapt his own work to the wider demands of the camera than Goldman has done here. His novel, as his film, takes a lot of doing on the reader's or the viewer's part, to "get into" what all is going on. That is precisely what Goldman intended. But, once the piece of the baffling puzzle suddenly slide into place, the full horror and the seat-squirring tension of the rest of the story come easily.

To try, and not easily, to summarize the plot of the film is challenging enough. Babe Levy is a Ph.D. student-candidate at Columbia University. He is also a dedicated runner-trainee for marathon races on foot. He works out around a New York City reservoir that becomes the climactic scene of his ultimate involvement.

His father has committed suicide by pistol some 20 years previously, when this young man was a boy, a victim of harrassment by the remembered McCarthy persecutions. His older brother, Doc, beloved and worldly, is in "oil," but, in truth, a worker as counterspy for an agency, "Division," between the FBI and the CIA.

None of this does Babe know. Babe is to be an historian and political analyst when his doctorate thesis is done; he is a world child in many ways. He still possesses the pistol that was instrumental in his father's death.

Other forces are at work. His brother transports an important package to Paris, is party to murder at the opera, to a fight to the death in his hotel suite, to exposure to a fatal (to others) bomb plant. Violence is the key.

Doc returns, ostensibly from Washington, to visit his brother, meets with a former Nazi dental technician of Auschwitz, who founded his fortune in diamonds from the gold from Jewish teeth. This evil man has disguised himself and come to reclaim his diamonds from a New York City lock box.

Doc is knifed in a stunning scene by the cool, imperturbable ex-Nazi, staggers to his brother's room to die without a clue.

Life for Babe becomes a torment from now on, a terrifying break-in of his rooms by unknown adversaries while he is naked in his bath as his cheap door is being unhinged from beyond, taken by force to a place where the diabolically-cool dentist, thinking he knows more than Babe does (he known nothing) tortures him by means of dental equipment, drilling through to nerves centers to force the supposed truth from the distraught young man, climaxing in a harrowing chase over freeways and beyond, with even Babe's Columbia co-student girl proving only a decoy.

Then the former Nazi makes an ill-fated trip through New York's Jewish center to price diamonds for conversion of the fabulous collection of diamonds he still has not reclaimed from his lock box. Here on the streets of the crowded quarter an old Jewish woman suddenly penetrates his disguise as the infamous dentist. She cries in vain for help. No one hears; she is hit by a car. Here a jeweler's assistant, with the Auschwitz prisoner code tattooed on his wrist, seeks his familiarity with this white-haired distinguished man only to discover too late and tragically that his memory was right.

And it is this trip to the ban lock box that brings Babe Levy and this arch enemy to a frontal confrontation, diamonds and all, and the taut, stunning and shocking conclusion to all of "The Marathon Man."

I can't, of course, do justice, in this short space, to the walloping impact of the whole picture. It is a film, R-rated, of violence. It has a cast that follows Schlesinger's direction impeccably. It has as Babe Dustin Hoffman, never better, as the tormented, suffering victim of what he knows not; Roy Scheider of "Jaws" and "The French Connection" at his top form as Doc; William DeVane as the puzzling government agent; Marthe Keller as the questionable girl at Columbia; and a host of comparable players. But, and in a way, best of all, it has Lord Laurence Olivier, at the top of his famous form, as the awful Szell. He plays with all the expertise that has made him the ranking English-speaking actor in the world today and he plays it with icy calm and chilling beauty. It is worth the price of admission simply to watch a master at work.

There is, I grant, much that is not explained fully in this 125-minute block buster from Paramount Pictures, but in the long run, who cares? The book left questions open; its author did not waste time on nit-picking. He went to the core of the matter as fast as he could achieve it and in his screenplay he followed the dictates of his imaginative concepts. It was a sturdy, shaking concept as a novel; it is equally so as a filmplay. And Director Schlesinger and his super-cast have given him back the values that he had achieved as author.

As I said in the beginning, this is not a film for pantywaists. It's a rough-go and a shocker, but, it you can take it, you'll be at once fascinated, repelled and riveted to your seat by "Marathon Man." They don't come along very often like this one!

Maybe, that's just as well. MY nerves couldn't stand it!

Veterans Day Ceremonies Honor Medal Recipients

Special tribute was paid two local recipients of the Congressional Medal of Honor during Veterans Day ceremonies held Monday outside the Federal Building.

Those honored were Pvt. 1C. Herman C. Wallace, killed when a land mine detonated Feb. 27, 1945, in Prumzurley, Germany; and

Maj. George A. Davis Jr., shot down over Korea on Feb. 10, 1952.

On hand for the ceremonies were Wallace's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E.L. Wallace, and Davis' son, Charles L. Davis.

Master of ceremonies was Leon Kalwara, medical administration officer of the Veterans Administration Clinic here. Speakers were Dr. Robert Holland, acting director of the VA Clinic; Mayor Roy Bass and Brig. Gen. S.M. Kennedy of the U.S. Army Reserve.

The "Weeping Fig Tree" was dedicated during the ceremony and planted on the Federal Building lawn. Plates bearing the names of Wallace and Davis will be permanently affixed to the base of the tree.

"Gas Light" To Be Presented By Tech Lab Theatre

"Gas Light," Patrick Hamilton's Victorian melodrama, will be presented in the Texas Tech University Lab Theater at 8:15 p.m., Friday, Oct. 29 through Wednesday, Nov. 3, with two performances on Wednesday.

The play, set in Victorian London, is the story of the handsome Mr. Manningham who is driving his wife mad under the guise of kindness. Inspector Rough visits Mrs. Manningham and proves to her that her husband is a maniacal criminal suspected of murdering a wealthy aunt for the famous Barlowe rubies 15 years before. Inspector Rough discovers the evidence needed to convict Manningham of his crime.

"Gas Light" was first performed in 1938 in London. The play ran three years on Broadway. Two "Gas Light" movies were produced in the 1940's.

The lab's production will be directed by Jack Bilbo, doctoral candidate in theater at Tech. The play will be the Lubbock student's first for public performance at the university. Bilbo has written a full-length play and directed several plays for class projects.

The set and lighting will be designed by John Crane, graduate student in theater from San Antonio. Mary Ann Walsh of Fort Worth will design costumes.

British author Hamilton writes Victorian literature with special emphasis on crimes of that era.

Tickets for "Gas Light" are on sale at the University Theater ticket office. Prices are $1.00 for Tech students with I.D., $1.25 for high school students and $1.50 for general admission.

Captain Frank Lee Melton Passes Bar

The couple are enroute to Ft. Hauchuca, Arizona where they will be for at least four years or longer. They left Saturday night on a business trip to Arizona and returned here Monday. Captain Melton is to report for duty Nov. 1 there and will be sworn into the bar.

"The young couple of four months seem well on the way to a successful career," says a Lubbockite.

Mrs. Melton received her degree from Texas Tech University and was employed in social service work prior to her marriage. She hopes to find employment whenever they are settled. She admits that at present time they are looking for a furnished apartment.

Many friends of Captain and Mrs. Frank Lee Melton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Melton of Lubbock and Mr. and Mrs. J.O. Brown of Palestine, congratulate them on their success.

Every special group has special reasons to justify its special demands for special privileges.

Captain Frank Lee Melton and wife, Ruby, arrived here last week from Palestine, Texas enroute from Virginia where they spent several weeks. He graduated from Texas Tech School of Law last summer.

Before leaving for Virginia, he took the State Bar examination at Austin. Upon his arrival here last week, he received the results last Tuesday that he passed the examination.

How would you propose to solve the financial problems of the teaching hospitals in Texas? Is state assistance in order? How would state assistance be funded and could this mean a tax increase in the future?

SALINAS: I think that the teaching hospitals should be aided by the state somewhere in the 25-40 per cent area. The teaching costs should be somewhere in that 25-40 per cent range. At the present time, we have, by all indications, a $2.6 billion surplus to work with. It appears to me we could use the surplus for worthy projects—such as funding state teaching hospitals. I don't know if a tax increase in the future will be necessary.

PAGE: First, I think we should stop all future construction of additional medical teaching hospitals. Then, we could take one-fourth of the $2.6 billion surplus and give that to teaching hospitals. We should find additional money to back up the program instead of having the entire program dumped on local taxpayers. The hospital is going to be treating people on a regional basis—not just county resident. Maybe some of the surrounding counties could pay a portion of the cost. I would support a regional plan for the hospital. There shouldn't be an additional tax levied. The state is expanding economically. This should give us the additional revenue that is needed.

Everybody talks about the need to economize in government and reduce bureaucracy. How would you propose to cut down on government agencies?

SALINAS: I don't know that I would propose to cut down on the present agencies. I would work to see that the agencies provide maximum services. I would favor legislation which would ask the agencies to start with a zero-base budget to justify the amount of money required for their operation. I am in agreement with the concept of "sunset legislation" (which would require agencies to justify their existence to the legislature every two years), but I think to do this every two years would be unwise.

PAGE: I don't believe we can cut down on those agencies. The State of Texas is expanding not only economically but also on a population basis. With that expansion taking place, more and more demands will be placed on state agencies. The thing to do is keep the agencies from expanding faster than growth rate. I recommend the use of basic business practices to make the agencies more efficient.

What specific measures would you support to reduce the crime problem?

SALINAS: I would specifically recommend an additional court for Lubbock in order to have speedier trials for both the guilty and the innocent. I also would support legislation that would make it more difficult for second and third offenders to get out on bail.

PAGE: What we need is stronger state statutes to deal with crime in order to back law enforcement officials. I believe right now they are being sent out to do a job, but they're not being given the tools to do that job. My recommendations are:

- A state constitutional amendment providing for denial of bail to persons (a) charged with the commission of a felony occurring while on bail from another felony, (b) previously convicted of a felony or (c) during appeal following conviction in certain instances.

- A law establishing the mandatory life sentence for persons convicted of importing heroin into the state with the intent or purpose that it will be illegally resold to others.

- A law requiring mandatory, non-parolable prison sentences for felony offense involving the use of deadly weapons or resulting in bodily injury.

It's surprising how people can be manipulated by the dollar.

Looking at the Black Vote: Black political leaders in ever increasing numbers are convinced that economic decisions in this country are made in the political arena. It is at the ballot box where the action is, they emphasize.

"In the past, the black vote has made the difference," states Congressman Yvonne B. Burke (D. Cal.) She points out that in 1948, President Truman could not have defeated Thomas Dewey without the black vote. California, Illinois and Ohio were key electoral states, and Truman carried them by only several thousand votes each, which included almost solid black support.

The personable black Congresswoman, who is a long time active member of Phillips Temple C.M.E. Church of Los Angeles adds that in 1960, John Kennedy could not have won without the black vote. His narrow margin of victory included about 80 per cent of the black vote.

"In 1976, the Presidential election is forecasted to be very close . . . Why do I stress the black vote? I do because Blacks have been turned off from politics. We ought to vote because we have the highest percentage of poor people of any other group of our size in the population in the richest and most achieving nation in the world. . . We ought to vote because hundreds of the most talented young leaders of our society are going unused or abused in political and economic positions because they are black," Burke relates.

She concludes: "It is at the local level that we must organize. We must register the brothers and the sisters and then get them to the polls on election day. Leaders of religious, business, civil rights, professional, social, civic, fraternal and political organizations must enter into a voter registration brain trust to devise a strategy to reach people, like . . . "Earth, Wind & Fire" or "The Temptations." We will need these kind of crowds at the polls this fall to win," Yvonne said.

Black Georgia Settlement To Build a Just Society: Just south of Jimmy Carter's home county of Sumter, a group of Blacks is also raising peanuts, but they, according to Congressman Andrew Young, "expect to build a new society in the South based on justice and humanitarian concerns." They are settled on 6,000 acres in Lee County, which is the heart of Southwest Georgia's "badlands" for Blacks, and they call their settlement "New Communities, Inc."

As they dream of the just society they plant, aside from peanuts, corn, sugar cane, soybeans, strawberries, grapes, watermelons, and assorted vegetables. They also herd 250 cows, tend pigs, and fish in the bountiful streams and ponds on their cooperative farm. Their venture has enlisted the support of Coretta Scott King, the Rev. Martin Luther King, Sr., Julian Bond, Jesse Jackson, Ella Baker and others.

Despite the many instances of terror and harassment, the settlers are determined to remain, to cultivate their land, and to create a community of 200 homes, a hospital, an education center from day care to college and a variety of religious and community services.

Recent great quotes: "There is no solid satisfaction in any career for a woman like myself. There is no home, no true freedom, no hope, no joy, no expectation for tomorrow, no contentment. I would rather cook a meal for a man and bring him his slippers and feel myself in the protection of his arms than have all the citations and awards and honors I have received worldwide, including the Ribbon of Legion of Honor and my property and my bank accounts. They mean nothing to me. And I am only one among the millions of sad women like myself." From Ms. Taylor Caldwell.

Church Women United Schedule Meeting

"Into the Third Century Unafraid" will be the program theme for a meeting of the evening group of Church Women United scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Wesley United Methodist Church at 405 N. Quirt Ave.

Mrs. Judson Maynard, social action chairperson, will give "A Community Presentation of the People's Platform."

Also on the agenda is the election of officers. Mrs. Louise Sparks will conduct the installation service.

Members of Church Women United will observe World Community Day here Nov. 5. Plans are underway for that celebration.

There's little gained by working so hard one day that you have to rest the next.

Frankly Speaking

For some strange reason Americans tend to confuse frankness with rudeness.

Under the direction of the Randolph Neighborhood Center a new club has been organized. It is called The Happy Hour Club with more than 25 senior citizens enrolled.

The president is Mrs. Elmera Mosley, vice president is Mrs. Leola Hawkins, secretary is Mrs. Minnie Mae Warren, assistant secretary is Mrs. Doris Fuller, and treasurer is Mrs. Reeth Johnson. Mrs. Lennie Jones and Mrs. Daisy Datney have the program committee.

Mrs. Minnie Mae Warren has returned from Whitney, Texas, where she visited her mother, Mrs. Ida Anderson there who is not doing well. Our sick of the city are reported during nicely.

All our churches of the city are going on successfully. San Angelo is very happy to see two new churches under construction. They are Mt. John Baptist Church, Rev. M.E. Robertson, pastor, and the New Church of God in Christ at W. 17th and Louis St., Rev. W.W. Weatherspoon, pastor.

Dupree School Sets Bazaar

An "International Bazaar" is scheduled Thursday at Dupre Elementary School to raise money for an outdoor learning center.

A spaghetti supper will be served from 6 p.m.-8 p.m. in the school cafeteria. Tickets for the dinner are $1.50 each.

Handmade arts and crafts will be displayed and sold from 6 p.m.-8:30 p.m.

Participants in the bazaar will dress in colorful costumes from different countries.

Money isn't worth the effort, but we can't convince ourselves on the point.
