New Citibus Coaches Roll Into Lubbock

Lubbock residents who use the public transportation system will be riding in style beginning Dec. 6 when Citibus goes into operation. Two new Citibus coaches were rolling on Lubbock streets Monday morning when the colorful buses were previewed by members of the media, city council and the Transit Advisory Board. The two buses are part of a fleet of 24 air-conditioned coaches and a specially equipped bus for the handicapped that will begin serving the city in December. Mayor Roy Bass termed the new buses the beginning of an expanded transportation service for local citizens.

Citibus is operated by Lubbock Transit Co. under contract with the City of Lubbock. A new city Transit Department, headed by John Wilson, has been created to evaluate the management and operation of the Citibus system and to recommend improvements.

According to city public information officer Vaughn Hendrie, the system will add additional routes to provide transportation to service centers, major employers and shopping areas not previously served.

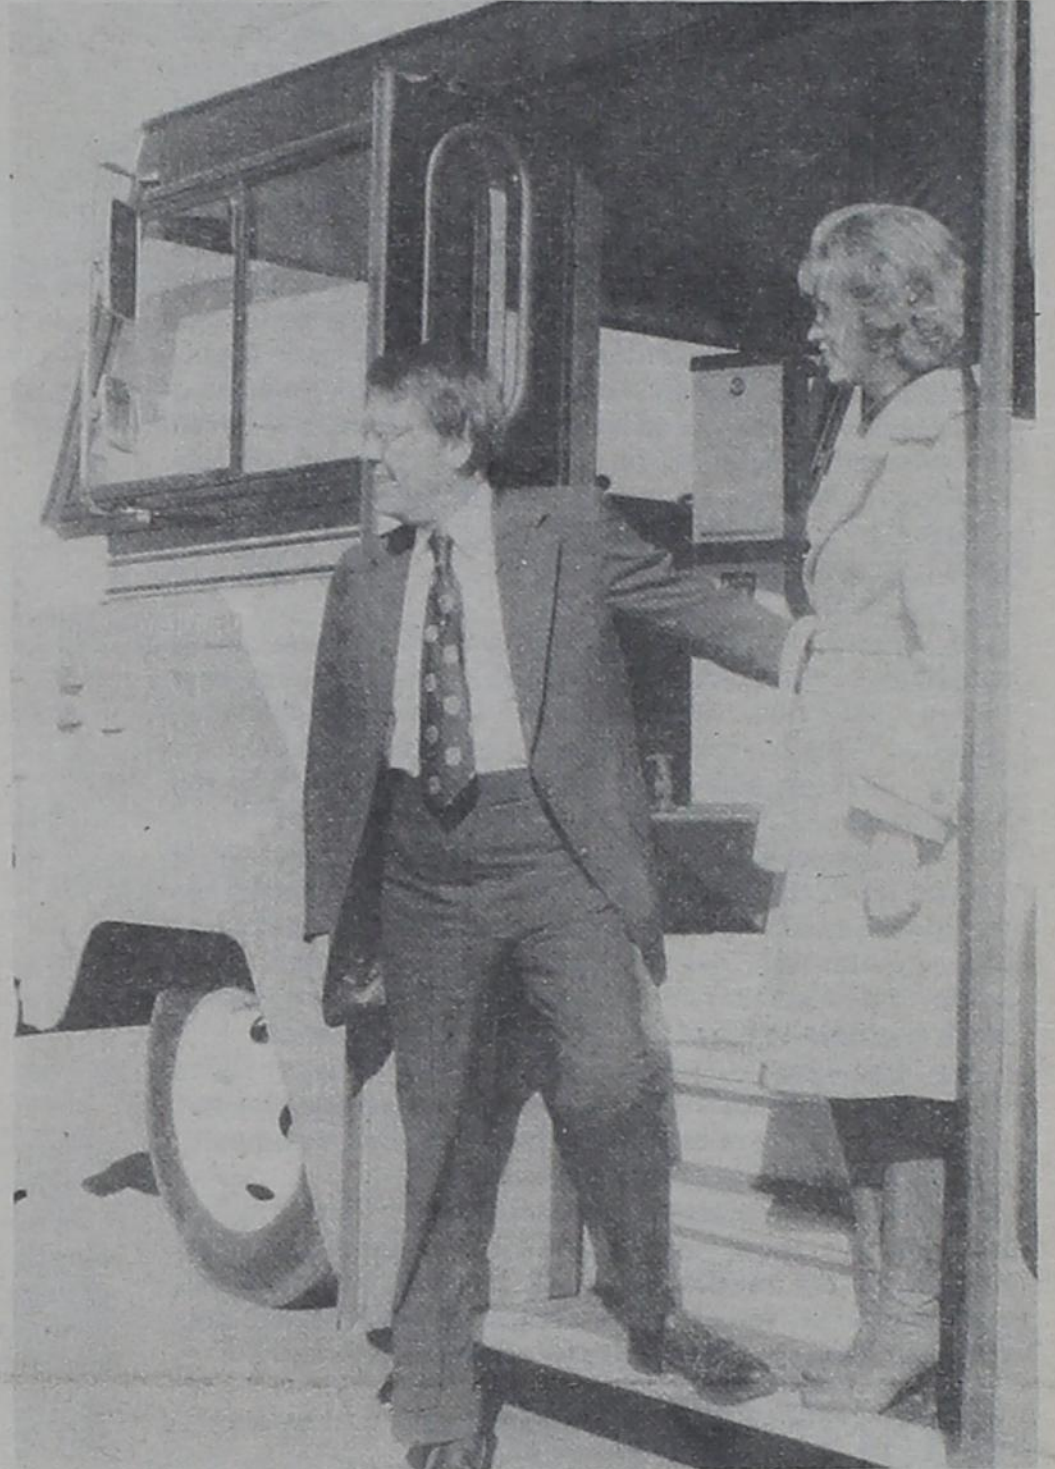

It will be hard to miss these buses when they start rolling on city streets. Citibus coaches are a colorful orange and white with gold and black accents. Their interiors are done in a matching gold.

Citibus coaches and related equipment cost a total of $649,178, Hendrie explained. Most of the capital cost, $603,736, was provided by state and federal grants. Hendrie said the city's cost was $45,442.

The new buses will have 21 passenger seats each. Faretronic fare boxes will automatically make change for the passengers boarding the coach.

Manufactured by Grumman Corp., each coach features an aluminum body on a 1976 Dodge M-500 chassis. The bus measures 279 inches from bumper to bumper. Interior width is 88 inches, and the interior height is 6-foot-5.

Each 8,000 pound bus is powered by a 400-cubic inch gasoline engine.

ALL ABOARD—Lubbock Mayor Roy Bass boards one of the new Citibus coaches that already have arrived in the Hub City. The new buses were previewed Monday by members of the local media, city council and Transit Advisory Board. According to the city, the new brightly colored coaches will begin serving local residents in December. (Times Photo)

High Fluoride Levels Reported In County's Water Systems

by Mary Alice Robbins

Fluoride—dentists claim it's good for the teeth, but too much of the substance can be harmful to the human body.

Keeping fluorides and other contaminants found in domestic water supplies at levels safe enough for human consumption is the intent of the Safe Drinking Water Act passed by Congress in 1974. The act authorized the Environmental Protection Agency to adopt regulations that will go into effect in June, 1977.

Texas is one of about six states experiencing problems with too much fluoride in its public water systems, noted C.K. Foster, director of the division of water hygiene for the Texas Department of Health Resources.

Foster and other TDHR officials as well as EPA representatives conducted classes on the new federal water law and its impact on South Plains cities during a water utilities short course that started Tuesday in Lubbock. About 400 water utilities personnel from throughout West Texas participated in the three-day training session.

During a Tuesday morning press conference, Foster estimated that approximately 480 public water systems in Texas exceed the maximum fluoride levels, with about 200 of these systems located on the South Plains.

Although the City of Lubbock's water system has a safe fluoride level, the TDHR has identified 31 water systems in the county that contain too much fluoride.

"A good number of these (water systems) are in mobile home parks," explained Floyd Williams, chief of the domestic water supply branch of the TDHR.

Shallowater's water system also has been identified as containing more fluoride than the maximum level, Foster and Williams pointed out.

Compliance with the federal regulations does not have to be done immediately, Foster said, but by 1981, all systems have to be in compliance with the law unless they plan to join a regional system.

Under the act, communities can apply for a variance or an exemption to the law.

A variance can be granted if a

City Transit System's Pros, Cons Cited

by Janice Jarvis

With the arrival of the first new city buses this week, local bus riders expressed their opinions on the pros and cons of bus riding.

"I'm glad we have the buses as a means of transportation but I think the fare should be reduced more," one female bus rider commented.

Recently, the fares were reduced from 45 cents to 40 cents for adults, while anyone under 17 years of age can ride for 20 cents.

Previously, senior citizens could ride for 20 cents with an additional 5 cents for transfers but the city council has eliminated transfer fees.

"I don't need to pay fare because I'm a senior citizen and I should be able to ride free," one woman said.

On the other hand, several local residents said they were glad to have the transportation available to them and the cost was very reasonable.

"It beats walking and the cost isn't much," one resident said. She noted that the buses are convenient and clean—so why complain about the cost?

Although Lubbock bus fares are higher when compared with cities in other parts of the state, one bus rider said the cost should not be eliminated.

"Some people think that you should just eliminate fares, especially for senior citizens, but it's the principle of the matter," said Bert Bascus.

Bus fares are so low now, another said, so what difference does a few cents make?

If the city provided a free busing service, some people would take advantage of the system and it would seem like charity for people in East Lubbock who ride the buses the most, explained one bus rider.

While some bus riders believe the cost is reasonable and others say it is too high, most agree the buses are kept clean and pleasant to ride in.

"The buses now are nice to ride, so I imagine the new ones will be even better," commented one woman.

The bus routes are being revised to cover more of the city, according to Lubbock Transit director Ernie Prenevost.

The buses come right to my

Swine Flu Vaccination Clinic Set At Lubbock High for Elderly, Ill

A swine flu vaccination clinic for the elderly and the chronically ill has been set for Saturday and Sunday at Lubbock High School's cafeteria.

Lubbock Health Department officials said the two-day clinic will be for persons aged 65 years and older and for persons suffering from chronic illnesses such as asthma, heart disease, diabetes, neuromuscular disorders and malignancies.

The clinic will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. There will be public parking on the north side of Lubbock High School. The public is to enter the building on the east side along avenue T. Wheel chair ramps will be provided.

Health Department medical director Dr. David Cowgill urged all persons aged 65 or older to consider attending the free clinic. Persons who are chronically ill are encouraged to consult their private physician before attending the clinic.

Seating will be provided for those waiting to receive inoculations. All persons will be required to read and sign an information form explaining the swine flu prevention program before receiving the flu shot.

All inoculations will be administered under the supervision of a physician. There will be an interview with a doctor after a shot is given.

The vaccine to be given Saturday and Sunday is the bivalent type that inoculates against swine flu and the Victoria flu.

Additional clinics will be announced later for persons between the ages of 18 and 65 who will receive vaccine for the swine flu only.

Vaccines for the swine flu have been tested with persons over age 18 and are proven to produce very few side effects, according to the U.S. Public Health Service. Some people who received the vaccine had fever and soreness during the first day or two after vaccination.

"We Must Stand Up"

As the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson says in an interview with the November issue of Reader's Digest, "black Americans must begin to accept a larger share of responsibility for their lives . . . It is time for us to stand up, admit to our failures and weaknesses, and begin to strengthen ourselves."

It couldn't have been better said than the way he has expressed the situation in the black community. We must eliminate the welfare mentality, and get more involved in the political aspect of our community.

There are some of us (blacks) in our community who will criticize anybody for what he or she is attempting to do. In order for us to stand up, we'll have to change an attitude toward those of us who are successful to a certain degree. There are those who we know who are too often criticized. As black people, we keep in mind that all of us can succeed and excel if we want to do so.

As we've written in past years, the massive injection of state and federal aid have not solved the problems of the black community. Again, Rev. Jackson strikes home this situation by saying there has to be a change in the attitude in all of us, especially the young. "What we must do for our young people is challenge them to put hope in their brains rather than dope in their veins," says Rev. Jackson.

We believe, as Rev. Jackson, the black teenagers—even the ones who claim to be tough—will respond to this challenge. Parents, however, must insist that their children go to school, remain orderly in school and learn from school, since education is a major key to improvement.

In regard to business opportunities in the black community, especially east Lubbock, if those whites who owned businesses there move out, then there must be qualified black business persons to take their places.

Rev. Jackson addresses the business situation in the black community in his article by saying: "If we had not lost so many good minds to the jails and the drug culture, if we had taken the pooling of our money more seriously, we would today have the ready capital and trained managers and communal organization to buy out those white-controlled stores that want to close down, direct black business to them, and make them successful."

We must agree with Rev. Jackson when he says: "With the help of motivated teen-agers, concerned parents and the moral backing of black churches, the black community can reverse the tide of urban decadence."

We believe sincerely that with the force of our will, our intellect, our energy and our faith in ourselves, a great deal is possible for East Lubbock. It is an opportunity we cannot afford to miss . . . If we stand up now, we can do a great deal for ourselves and our community.

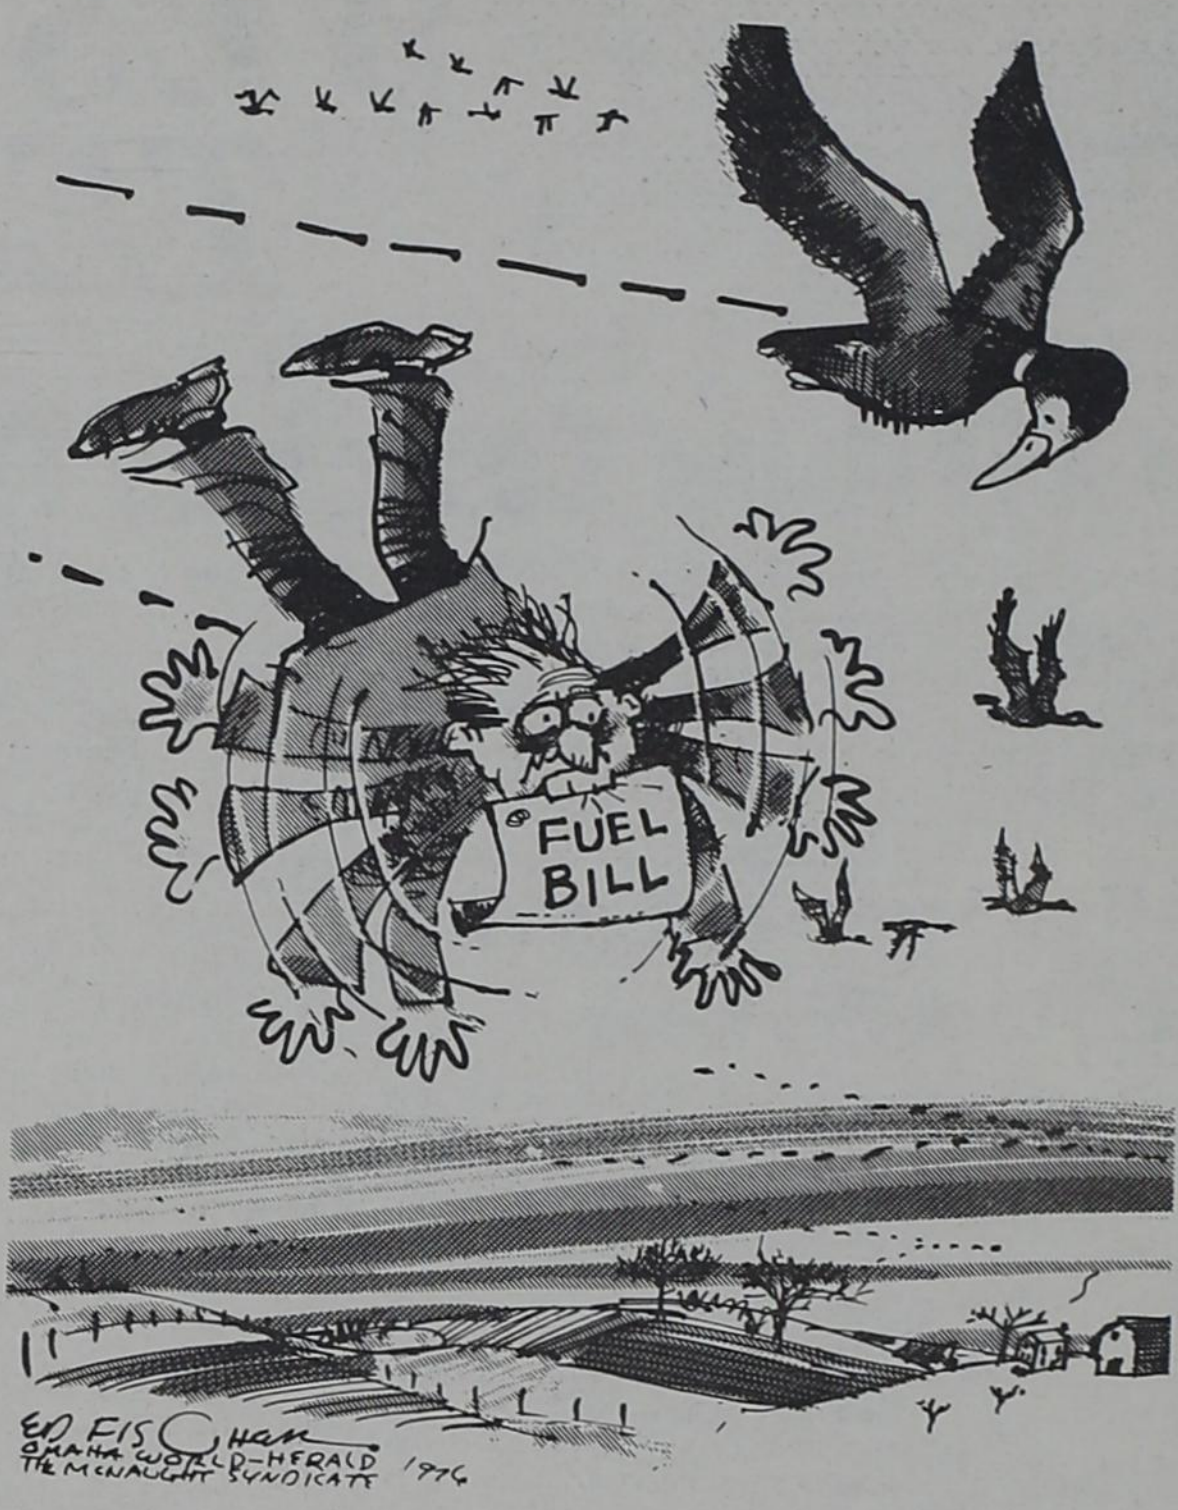

NAACP's New Thrust Good For Community

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), an organization noted for its work in the courts, education, housing and labor, has a new thing going these days. The NAACP is involved into another area of vital importance—the economic arena.

A recent meeting in New York under the leadership of Charles H. Smith, for the NAACP's National Economic Development committee, a great step has been made to let the public know that the NAACP is on the move in this area.

In discussing the objectives for program development, the Committee focused on several critical areas. Among those areas were:

- Creation of a black data bank designed to provide economic expertise to be used in developing legislative programs and in advising business and governmental leaders.
- Motivation of blacks toward business careers.
- Training programs for blacks in business, management and economics.
- Monitoring of programs, policies and practices which have a substantial, negative impact on black Americans, such as unemployment, discriminatory hiring and seniority practices, and lending policies of financial institutions.

•Development of black businesses.

We believe if the NAACP's new thrust is carefully put together, then they will continue to add to the development of the minds of people in the black community. We just hope this new thrust will be seen in the Lubbock community by the local chapter of the NAACP. We hope they at least know what is going on in this area . . .

As I See It . . .

by T.J. Patterson

George Scott Jr., former principal of Dunbar High School and an assistant dean of student affairs at Texas Tech University, discussed the problems of blacks in the public schools of Texas and told this writer how dismal things really are. He said that black kids are facing a lot of problems in Texas. It makes one wonder what is going to happen to the black kids who are attending public schools in Texas.

Mr. Scott, a dedicated person in working with young people, said that a recent survey indicates that 85 per cent of blacks who have taken the American College Test (ACT) scored between 1 and 15. "This is a disgrace to see our black kids fall into this kind of a situation," he said.

Mr. Scott, like other educators in Texas, is a member of the Steering Committee for the Education of Black Children and Youth in Texas. Dr. Earl Lewis of Trinity College in San Antonio is chairman.

The information this committee has come up with over the past several weeks is rather shocking. This committee has talked, at length, with parents, school administrators (including superintendents) and school board members about this problem facing black kids in the public schools in our state.

After several meetings, according to Mr. Scott, "It's apparently true that we'll have a generation of black kids in Texas who are not properly educated unless something is done about the situation."

In past months, this writer has written in this column about the need to have a black as an assistant superintendent in the Lubbock Public Schools. No matter what people may say about hiring this person, because he or she is black, there needs to be some input from the black community concerning solutions to problems of the black boys and girls in our public schools.

After hearing of the problem that larger school districts, like Houston and Dallas, are having, it would be wise to do something to develop a position for the benefit of black children in the Lubbock Public Schools.

There are capable people in the Lubbock Public Schools, including Mr. Scott, who could handle such a position for the welfare of our total community. If something like this is not done, it could cause many problems in the future if the larger school districts are any indication of what is happening to blacks in the Texas Public Schools.

Another shocking fact in the Dallas Public Schools, according to Mr. Scott, is that it is presently 51 per cent black and brown. By 1980, the population of blacks and browns is predicted to be nearly 80 per cent.

Some black educators disagreed with this writer several months ago when he wrote about the importance of our retired principals, present principals and other black administrators getting together and working for the benefit of our schools.

The input from these professionals could really be a positive program for the Lubbock Public Schools. This writer would suggest that these people get together and start looking at the situation in our community.

Of course, some of the black principals are administering at predominantly white schools. This would not take away from their present role, but would be of great importance to the black kids in our community.

As I See It, Lubbock Public Schools need the positive input of those persons in leadership positions in Lubbock to help make the schools a better learning situation for the black kids.

This writer can't really believe that there's so much commotion over the dog pound in our city by the Lubbock Humane Society. There are people in Lubbock, black-white-and brown—who need more attention than those stray dogs and cats at the pound.

In recent weeks, there has been more publicity over how those animals are being treated than how human beings are given opportunities to progress in Lubbock.

Maybe a dog is man's best friend, according to some people, but we need to be a friend to each other first . . .

Letters To The Editor . . .

Dear Editor:

I am a subscriber of your paper for a long, long time, and I like it very much. But since the change, there are some things I use to look forward to reading and I miss them very much. One of those articles is the news from the Jack Anderson with Joe Spear who kept us informed of the news behind the news which was very informative. And the news of interest of what's going on in our own state capitol. Changes and news about Social Security benefits, and changes of the supplement of Social Security were helpful. Some of these changes were a year old until read about it in the West Texas Times.

Now I want to subscribe to one of your weeklies, but I don't know which one, if any, still carry the mention articles. Would you be kind enough to send me one of the copies of the paper published on Wednesdays and one published on Fridays so I can see which one carries the general news most important to those who live outside of Lubbock.

Sincerely,
Mrs. B.J. Jackson

Thanks for the comment on the West Texas Times, Mrs. Jackson. We are still doing what we can to inform the people in the community of what's going on. We will be more than happy to send you one of each copy, and hope you will not just decide on one of the copies, but will insist that we add your name to the subscriber's list for both copies each week.

Sincerely,

community's water supply does not meet requirements of maximum allowable contaminant levels and no treatment techniques are available to remove the contaminant—if the water does not represent a risk to the public health. Foster said a variance could not be granted for water systems containing too much fluoride, however, because there are treatment techniques available to reduce fluoride levels.

If it is not economically feasible for a community to immediately comply with the act, an exemption may be granted if the water supply is not hazardous to the public health. According to Foster, the community must hold a public hearing at least one year after the exemption is granted and set up a compliance schedule. Still to be determined is who will enforce the regulations, Foster said. The federal law allows states to assume the enforcement responsibility he said. But if the state does not enforce the law, the federal government will.

When you meet an individual who thinks he knows it all, the best way to enjoy yourself is to keep quiet and let him enjoy himself.

Starving Artist Sale Scheduled

The fifth annual Lubbock Jaycee-Ette Starving Artist Sale will be held this Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the former Woolworth's building in Monterey Shopping Center. Hours of the sale are 10 a.m.-8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, noon-6 p.m. Sunday.

Last year's sale had over 350 artists entered, and over 40,000 people attended. The sale this year promises to have even a larger number of artists with even more different mediums and types of crafts.

Artists from all over Texas, New Mexico, and Oklahoma have entered the sale. Art works and crafts range from painting, pottery, batik, sculpture, needlework, to macrame and jewelry.

Money raised from the sale's commission goes back to the community to help local service organization. In the past, proceeds from the sale have gone to Lubbock Meals-on-Wheels, the YWCA, Multiple Sclerosis, Texas Boys Ranch, Humane Society, Camp Kiwanis and other worthy community organizations.

The success of the sale depends solely on artist and public participation. All interested persons are encouraged to participate and purchase arts and crafts during the sale.

City Transit . . .

Continued From page One door, commented one woman. But such convenience has not been the case for other bus riders.

"If you have time to wait around for buses, it's the best inexpensive transportation around," one man observed.

"Sometimes I have to wait as long as 30 minutes for a bus and standing in the cold weather, I almost freeze to death," Mrs. Evelyn Anderson said.

Bus schedules often can be difficult to interpret.

"If you don't know the bus route, you may end up spending 30 minutes waiting for another bus to come by," explained one man.

"Sometimes I have to change buses and have to just wait around for buses that are usually late," another said.

While some residents claim that buses come right to their doorsteps and leave them close to their destinations, others said there was room for change.

"I once tried to devise a new bus schedule for East Lubbock, but when I told someone at the city about it, they just laughed at me," said Pat Riley.

But changes are coming—both in cost and in bus routes. The city is trying to make the bus a more appealing means of transportation for all parts of Lubbock, explained Prenevost.

As one woman put it, "The cost is so low and if the buses weren't there I'd have to walk and then I'd just as soon stay home."

SPORTS

by Joe Kelly

It was as good a football game as anyone would want to see, that battle between Texas and Texas Tech. The decision wasn't nailed down until Raymond Clayborn was stopped on a punt return.

Clayborn scares you. He's one of a bevy of fast backs that the Longhorns have and it was conceivable that he could return it all the way, not probable, but possible.

I was standing on the Texas side of the field. I saw Clayborn look up, make the catch. Then I saw what he saw, a solid wave of red bearing down. He didn't have a chance.

The Steers, champions that they are, came silently up the ramp to the dressing room. No tears showed, only the sweat of battle and obvious despair that they had lost. They had fought the good fight and lost a hard decision.

Darrell Royal also took it like the gentleman he is. There were no alibis, no complaints. He complimented Tech, Steve Sloan, his own Jim Johnson, Ted Constanzo, the Texas offensive team "we moved the ball better and scored better."

It was quiet and players dressed quickly and left. Probably telling the story better than anything else were the orange and white paper streamers over the doorway. They seemed to sag like the Longhorns.

Both coaches agreed that Rodney Allison's scramble for a first down was the turning point in the game, along with Texas' failure to move in for a 21-7 lead when the Steers had a first down at the Tech 20, leading 14-7.

Three plays forced the Horns back 26 yards and Russell Erxleben's kick was low and short.

"It was a mixup between the center and me," he said. "I wasn't ready when he snapped the ball."

Now the game is history, the sixth triumph in a season that has been one of surprises. And one of the big questions, partially answered in the A&M game, has been fully answered—can the Raiders play a physical game? Yes, they can.

They paid a price. Both teams did in a battle that had hard hitting from start to finish. Fortunately, it appears that Travis Mileur is the only Tech casualty.

Incidentally, when Greg Mahoney snapped the ball for the game's final punt, that was the first time he had centered the ball in a game! He answered the pressure.

Arkansas answered the pressure by overcoming Rice, although not exactly as expected and that leaves the Raiders and Razorbacks as the only undefeated teams in the conference. A step behind are Texas and Houston, neither out of the race.

Darrell said that he thought Tech was in the best position to win the title and Steve, in a way, agreed. He said that he didn't think Arkansas could beat both Texas and A&M. The Hogs do get both Tech and A&M in Little Rock, face Texas in Austin.

Sloan was relaxed at his press conference following the game. I was standing by the sandwiches (where else?) when he came in. We shook hands and I offered congratulations.

"Thanks a lot," he replied quietly. "I just wish you'd quit scheduling those breathers, though, coach," I remarked.

Steve almost doubled up with laughter, and much of the conference, after that, followed that routine. It was serious, then humorous.

For instance, Steve was asked if the publicity Tech was getting had an effect on his team. It was pointed out that Sports Illustrated was here, along with writers from all over the state.

Steve's reply was that they tried to talk with the squad and that the publicity helped in recruiting, school spirit, alumni relations, in everything.

"I'll tell you one thing," he quipped. "I'm getting a lot more calls from around the nation since we've been No. 6 than when we were No. 83!"

Dan Cook San Antonio sports writer, broke precedent and was typing a column during the conference. He suddenly asked Steve if it bothered him to have him type?

"No, it doesn't bother me, Dan," he said. "I don't care if you take your clothes off!"

On Allison's apparent injury: "He was having cramps, in his calves. We chatted on the sideline with him and shoot, I'd have kissed his calves if that would have helped!"

On Billy Taylor's dives into the end zone: "He goes so high that you'd nearly have to be on a stepladder to stop him. I was afraid that he was going over the crossbar!"

On Allison's three carries at the one, Sloan said that he wasn't worried "We've had good luck with the sneak this season. The trouble was that the line was blocking to the right and Allison was going to the left. I kept thinking he'd make it. Finally decided that we'd better try something else!"

TCU comes up this week and this game is scary. The Horned Frogs don't have a record worthy of fright, but usually, once a season, the Frogs play over their heads and upset someone. If Tech isn't alert, it could be this week.

Rice almost slipped up on Arkansas and the conditions are not dissimilar. The Raiders, bruised and weary after the Texas game, can't afford a letdown. I don't look for one, but with the possibility that an announcement about Jim Shofner's future might be forthcoming, it could be scary.

Couple Marks Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sims Jr. of 1020 E. 29th St., celebrated their sixth wedding anniversary Oct. 6.

There was a special anniversary greeting given to Sims over KLLL Radio from his wife.

Mrs. Sims was honored later with a surprise anniversary party for herself and Mrs. Inell Moore. Their husbands, Charles and William (Dickey), served as hosts at the Moore home.

Mrs. Sims, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Lawson Sr., is a 1970 graduate of Dunbar and is employed as secretary-receptionist at KLLL Radio. Sims, son of Mrs. Emma Freeman, is a 1968 graduate of Dunbar and employed by Texas Instruments.

Mr. and Mrs. Sims have two sons, Teddy Duane and Toby Tremayne. They are members of New Hope Baptist Church.

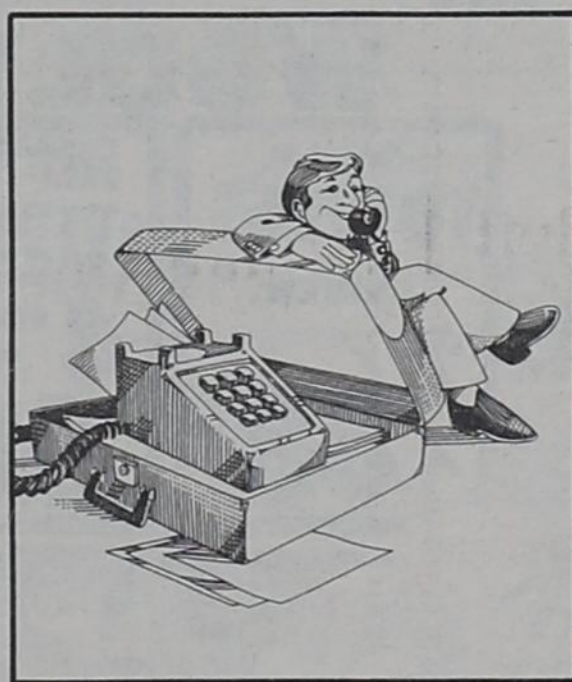

Envy is the conclusive evidence of a little mind. Thinking usually means less talking.

Looking Back Over The Years . . .

"We Need Full-Time Leadership in East Lubbock," says Rev. Cleveland

by T.J. Patterson

(Editor's note: This is part two of two interviews with Rev. Adolphus Cleveland.)

Lubbock can bounce back again?

What are some of the problems you see in the East Lubbock community?

"Well, I think the basic problem is developing a cohesiveness among the leadership. We need a better working relationship and interdisciplinary leadership. Sometimes I think the minister only becomes close friends with other ministers when we need to combine forces with the educators and labor establishments. By doing this we can get together the best minds from the whole leadership picture and understand each others problems. This would help us to understand the limitations of each other. This would keep us from getting hacked off at each other. It would help us to know why an individual is not doing his particular job. If we know more about each other, we can work better together as a team."

Rev. Cleveland, what can ministers do to help bring about this change?

"Well, I think the biggest problem with the local ministers is we don't have enough of them to minister full-time. Being a minister is a full-time job. A minister needs necessary preparation to be able to have vital leadership in a community. I think that spiritual help through the help of various community standing committees would help us a great deal. Many ministers have help in the community, but I think our biggest problem is we have so many fellows in the ministry who work everyday on other jobs. Some even work on two jobs. Their energy is so divided. By the time they work on the job for a company or what have you, or attend a meeting at the church, they are tired. Their time is limited to help the community."

Do you believe that East give $2 a month, we could establish full-time political leadership. It's been done in Houston. This full-time leadership could coordinate bringing all of our various organizations under one umbrella. This could be used for political purposes. This would allow us to have someone to sit in various city or county meetings all day and let us know what is really going on in our community. This person wouldn't have to worry about going to a particular job. This person would be on the job for the East Lubbock community."

Are you saying information is necessary for us to have?

"Oh yes, information is very important for a community. At present time, we don't have anyone who can sit in a meeting and get the information we need as a community. We need someone who has full-time to get the complete picture for us. So now we are just getting the picture presented by the press. This, to me, is second hand information. We need someone who can sit there and see what is really going on. For instance, we need someone who can sit in the working sessions of the City Council. As you know, Pat, that's just where the business really takes place for the City of Lubbock. We just don't have anyone who can sit there through those long meetings. We need someone who can sit there and listen. After listening, come back to the community and tell us what's really going on."

How do you go about finding such an individual?

"Well, I don't think it's a matter of the individual, anybody could do such a job. You can pick a maid up off the street and she could do the job. If 600 of us got behind that maid, she would become an effective leader. I don't think its a matter of finding an individual to fit the job, I think it's a matter of finding people to back the individual. Developing somebody who is independent and supported by the community would do a great deal. I see this as being a main problem as being able to developing somebody through the maze. If we develop this person right, that person will come and show us the way to get through."

What comes first, Rev. Cleveland, politics or economics?

"Yes, politics come first. I think so. I don't remember the exact figures, but at least 25 per cent of the economic life of our country is controlled by the Federal Government. When we become politically active, we get our share of the pie. The pie comes down from Washington. It's cut up when it gets to Lubbock, and if we're not organized to get our slice, the person who's organized gets the largest piece and we get the crumbs which are necessary for them to get along with Washington."

What about business opportunities in East Lubbock?

"Well, I think there are great possibilities. Basically, I think we need to develop a better awareness of supporting our own businesses."

Is that possible?

"Yes, I think with advertisement and promotions of our businesses would help. We should go the extra mile to support our brothers and sisters in business so they will get in a competitive situation with others. I think with enough of us supporting our community businesses, they will be in a position to have competitive prices. It's possible to have a thriving business community in East Lubbock."

Rev. Cleveland, what is the hope of the young black kids in Lubbock?

"I think Lubbock is a good place to be. I'm planning to stay around here. I think there are some good people in Lubbock, and it's our job to make the business community and political community aware of our needs. We need to use our ballot and dollar bills to press the point home in key moments. As they become aware of our needs, more is going to be done. I think more can be done. We are going to have to make the sacrifices for our young black kids so they will have the opportunity to make it here. We are going to have to quit depending on the Federal Government to take care of our problems and start doing something ourselves. I think we are going to have to wear one less suit a year, drive a car that cost $500 or $1,000 less, and put that money into community leadership and community development. This will be the real answer for our kids as we invest in ourselves. Doing this, others will be willing to invest."

What kind of advice can you give these black kids in Lubbock?

"Well, I think the main thing is to develop yourself intellectually. Our kids need to develop a pleasant attitude, and make sure that attitude is an attitude of love. I think so many of our young people are filled with hate, especially in education. Some of our kids won't get their lesson because the teacher is white. They are crippling themselves for the days ahead. They are allowing hate to cripple them. I would advise them to love. I want them to become intellectually able to compete with everyone."

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

This would seem to be the week for the black people in Lubbock, as far as the local screen output is concerned. Two distinguished black films have arrived in town simultaneously and both prove that "black can be beautiful." Both are heartily recommended to persons of all calling, for they also represent the power of the motion picture medium and just what can be done with judicious handling and knowledge of subject and applied expertise as well.

Some years ago you will remember, I am sure, a gentle, moving film about a black share-cropping family in Louisiana about the time of the Great Depression of the 1930s. It was called "Sounder" and it won awards and made stars of two fine performers, Cicely Tyson and Paul Winfield.

Now we have the follow-up or "sequel" if you prefer. It is called "Part 2, Sounder," which bothers me a little. There are and have been too many "Part 2" films and this one could do without that identifying numeral. For it quite stands on its own and as a worthy successor or continuation to the original.

This time the family Morgan is the same but new names have replaced the originals and in this instance to excellent advantage.

The film, by the skilled Robert B. Radnitz, is at the South Plains Mall Cinema. It is G-rated and runs 98 minutes. It concerns the efforts of the black community and the Morgan family in particular to build a new school for their children.

It is, above all, a story of determination 45 years ago that is being reflected in self determination and advances which are being reflected daily on the national scene.

This is a warm, beautifully photographed and directed by William Graham film. It is definitely a worth while time in a movie house, for the color is not important, the purely human values are the ruling sign.

Of the original "Sounder" only Taj Mahal as the folk-singing neighbor has returned. In the key roles as the parents, replacing Winfield and Tyson, we have Harold Sylvester and Ebony Wright who carry on very well indeed. Darryl Young is the eldest child and Annazette Chase is the school teacher.

It is a comfortable, family film, this "Part 2, Sounder" and you could do far worse than budget your time to give it a look. You come away with rewards and with that warm glow that so seldom communicates itself to a movie audience.

Running just a minute less than the above film, 97 minutes, and contrasting sharply with the above with its PG rating, is a funny black film, "Car Wash" which has come into the Fox Theater complex. Here again is a cast of largely unknown players who play this wacky film to the hilt.

You have never quite seen or gone through a car wash establishment to match this one and where "Part 2, Sounder" is gentle and restrained, "Car Wash" emerges with no holds barred. It is a genuinely funny film and worth your attention.

The setting is Mr. B's downtown car wash and the whole broad canvas of hokum and funny situations involves not only the help but their oddball customers as well. The music is superb, by Normal Whitfield, and the visual and dialogue antics are just fine.

The best known name, perhaps, in the lengthy cast is Richard Pryor, the very funny, very talented black comedian who scores as the preacher, with his flashy car and a retinue, which includes the Pointer Sisters. His is a funny portrait.

There is a young woman, Lauren Jones, who touches as the lonely streetwalker, while Bill Duke shines forth as the frightened black militant.

Prof. Irwin Corey who has never gotten a real break visually on TV or the screen is a wow as the suspected mad bomber, and you'll like Lorraine Gary as the Beverly Hills uptight housewife. Add to these the gum-chewing caricature by Melanie Myron and the noticed return to the screen of veteran Clarence Muse and you have the ingredients for this better-than-average, funny film. That's "Car Wash" at the Fox.

Note please the upcoming one-night stand (at the Auditorium) on Nov. 19 of the musical hit, "A Little Night Music" probably the only first-grade, professional show that will cross the local boards this year.

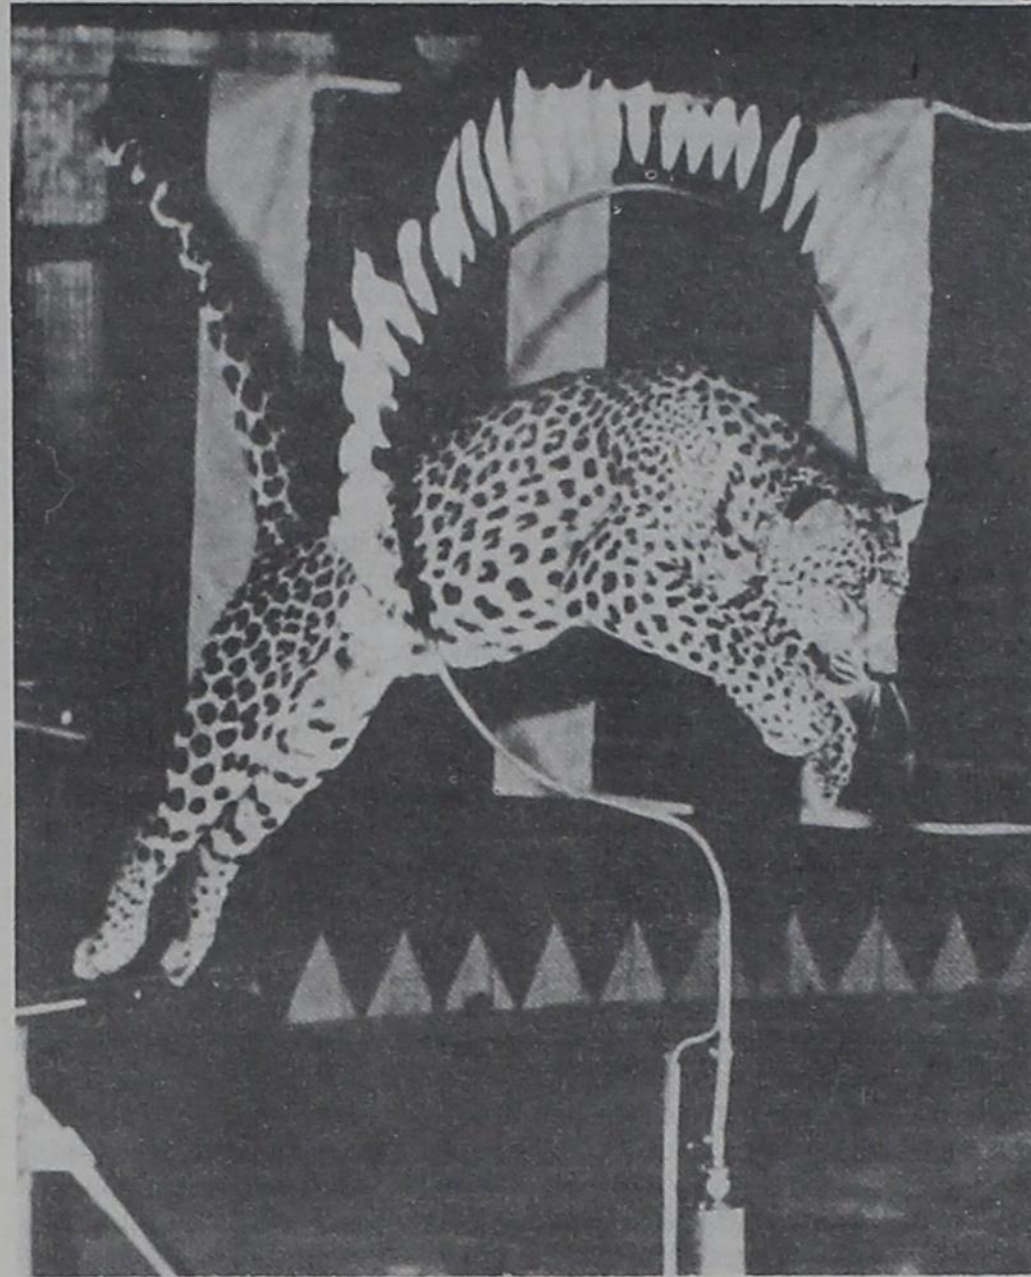

This is the touring company of the Broadway hit that is being made into a film with Elizabeth Taylor in Austria these days. The local visitation of the live company is under the auspices of the Texas Tech University Center Cultural Events. Tickets are available at the Center and you are earnestly recommended to this one.

Old friends Whitemore and Lowe, the duo-pianists, make a return in concert with the Lubbock Community Concerts Association at the Monterey High School Auditorium on Friday night this week, while next Tuesday brings the brilliant Ray Charles in concert to Lubbock Christian College.

Later in the month we have the second concert of the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra and soon the opening of the Tennessee William's comedy, "Period of Adjustment" at the Lubbock Theatre Centre. So, you see, there is plenty to do, if one wishes. I'll catch most of them, I hope you'll take time off and see some of them, too. There's nothing like "live" entertainment, whether its at Jones Stadium, the Auditorium-Coliseum or Theatre Centre or where else. The old tube is fine, but it just doesn't cut it compared to the real thing.

And, remember, speaking of the tube, part one of "Gone With the

All-Star Circus Coming To Town

HOT CAT ACT—Targa, the performing leopard, leaps through a ring of fire during a performance of the International All-Star Circus. The circus will stage a show in Lubbock Nov. 6.

The 1976 edition of the International All-Star Circus, a 90-minute live indoor circus, will appear at the Lubbock High School gymnasium at 2:30 p.m. Nov. 6.

The circus is being sponsored by the Downtown Kiwanis Club as a project to raise funds for its community service projects.

Featured in the show will be the aerial artistry of the daring and dynamic Diamond Duo. Unaided by a net or safety device, the team performs high above the floor of the arena on the seldom seen French Trapeze.

Also appearing in the upcoming performance will be Rajah, the baby Indian elephant; Randon's baby chimpanzees and Targa, the performing leopard.

In addition to these and other animal acts, the circus will present the graceful control of Canny Carey and Company in a display of balancing unmatched by olympic experts. Included too is the Irish team of Terry O'Brien and Company on the slack-wire, an act much more difficult than the frequently seen tightrope.

The circus also will feature clowns, jugglers, magic and many other exciting acts—both in the air and on the ground.

Circus tickets cost $1.50 each and can be purchased at the door.

Council Picks Emory Davis

Emory G. Davis, Texas Tech University assistant professor of sociology, has been elected by the Executive Council of the American Sociological Association to serve as a member of the Committee on the Status of Racial and Ethnic Minorities in Sociology. He is editor of the Multi-Eth Newsletter for the Minorities Committee of the Southwest Sociological Association.

"Wind" will be on the air Sunday night, first time for this fine, outstanding movie in this medium. That's a highlight date, too.

Ringling The Bell . . .

With Bob Tieuel

From a Black Perspective—Booker T. Washington often spoke and wrote about Boley, Oklahoma and once he described "Boley" as a grand experiment which would prove whether or not Blacks were able to govern themselves. "It was a place of refuge from the oppressions and struggles of a people who have known much sorrow," Washington declared. After 70 years the town continues to grow in many ways and some of the younger generation told me the other day that what this burg needs is "some new blood."

Many of the pioneers who settled here have gone on, however a goodly number are "retired" and are hopeful that "my children will carry on and make Boley what it can be." Perhaps they may be right. In this town of some two thousand or more in the trade area (Rusk, Childsville, Sand Creek, IXL, Big Bend) there are many modern and lovely homes and the Boley Housing Authority has plans for more. Some who have lived and worked for many years in such places as Kansas City, Los Angeles, Detroit, Chicago and elsewhere are coming "back home" to live their remaining years in "rich country living" as the local Chamber of Commerce puts it.

There can be no doubt that what my hometown needs is what a lot of cities need—Downtown needs developing. A comfortable living awaits those with a small investment to make and land as well as business property is available at almost any price. With cities in decay all over America, towns like Boley, Taft, Langston, Red Bird, Clearview (all 90 per cent black) should experience even greater growth in the years immediately ahead.

Okemah, Oklahoma (county seat) and Prague are the business centers here and race relations are excellent indeed. The State Training School for Boys is here and the Boley School system is integrated and "welfare" is a dirty word in most quarters. Especially if you are young and able to work. A lot of proud people in Boley. We believe they will make it too.

Cries in the Night: (Human Experience) Love, tragedy, joy, suffering, peace, sorrow, smiles, tears, hope, fear are just a few of the emotions heard and felt and seen in any hospital you might visit. A sort of mixture you would say and you would be right bellringers. Racial and creedal lines are forgotten. There are people here tonight. Red men, black men, white men and others who seek relief from their pain and their sufferings. "Oh God, have mercy on me," is a cry that goes up from a 94 year old woman as her son and daughters watch helplessly by her side.

After nearly forty years of bring cheer and comfort to those who struggle in pain and misery, we sit tonight by the bedside of Mom who some three score years ago in pain brought us into this world. For four nights we sit and watch and pray that "Your will be done." Perhaps now the crisis is past for her and others who are here in the silent hours of the night. It is our first experience of the all-night watch. And perhaps a new crisis will develop tomorrow. Only God knows. We can only pray and hope. And there will be many others who will be doing the same thing: Praying and Hoping.

And thanks again Bellringers for the many cards, letters and flowers and telephone calls to Mom and concerning her. She can be reached at Prague Municipal Hospital- 74864, Prague, Oklahoma. Her full name: Mrs. Bob Tieuel, Sr. (One of the pioneer settlers of Boley. She has owned and operated a business in Boley for 69 years. What patience! I suspect she is tired, don't you. I know I would be.)

Bellringers keep ringing bells of peace and love and joy. And be a good neighbor. They come in all colors.
