For Concrete Proposals Thieves Don't Take A Holiday

Over Christmas knock off for Christmas, judging from burglaries reported by police and sheriff's officers today. At least nine places were burglarized in the last few days. Sheriff's officials were today investigating burglaries in the Mid-way School district. The school and three residences were burglarized during the earlier part of the week. Aubrey Leonard, who lives in a house east of the school, stated that some $1,400 worth of goods were stolen from his home.

The safe in the school was opened, and apartments just west f the school were completely ransacked. Officials do not know how much was taken from the apartments as the people living in them are away for the holidays.

Sheriff Jake Bruton stated that the houses were entered between Monday and Wednesday nights. The investigation started Wednesday evening when the burglary was discovered.

Missing were radios, lamps, clothes, and practically anything that could be moved. Authorities believe that a pick up or some sort of truck was used in hauling goods away. A battery was taken from

Situation Of Aged Is Viewed As Unsatisfactory

The association, a non-profit,

the subsistence level, the group said, and it added: "Benefits are low, on the average considerably below subsist-ence except for those few, some 350,000, who are drawing pensions under both old age and survivors insurance and private plans." The report said payments at current levels probably will be far too low in the future, which it pictured as an era of a 600 billion dollar annual income by 1975, with a vast increase in the number of aged persons living on pensions SEE ME unior feeders.

Heretofore, only classes for finished steers have been included in the there has been a trend on placing more emphasis on commercially fed calves, and young livestock feeders are being encouraged to feed calves on a strictly practical feature commercially fed steers.

The Grub Line Rider has been taken to task for a statement that recently appeared in this column, which was to the effect that club boys from outside Howard County, who had bought calves from Howard County Hereford breeders, were well pleased with them and had well with them.

This comment grew out of the fact that a club boy from another county who had previously fed out steers that had been raised in the Wild Horse Creek part of Howard County had recently come back to this county for another calf from the same herd.

Criticism of our statement came in substance and effect, in these words: "You don't see any of those steers at the big shows." This meant, to be more specific, no steer from a Howard County herd, sold to a club boy from outside the county, had ever been seen at such shows as Timonium, Chicago, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles or Kansas City. We do not have information that any of these steers ever reached any of those shows, nor do we have any information that they did not get there, either.

The point we would make is that the boys who bought these steers with the advice of their youth leaders, have been well pleased with them. They bought them for the purpose, as such is generally understood over the country, in order to learn the practical side of feeding steers for a profit, and not as something to ride to the "big shows" and they have been happy with their purchases. In fact, they are expected to come back for more of these calves.

As we understand the basic principle of steer feeding in 4-H and FFA projects it is to teach sound practices of steer feeding and not showmanship.

Better lessons in showmanship could probably be learned by feeding the animals in a circus or by going to Hollywood.

In order to clear the situation as far as this column is concerned. taken on the whole and on the average, there are no better Herefords anywhere than those found in Howard and the surrounding counties, so far as practical and profitable beef-building enterprise contemplated.

The Grub Liner also takes the position that the best of education is practical education once the boy or girl has learned to read, write and cipher. This fact is universally recognized and the field of practical education is one that is being made broader all the while, for both boys and girls.

We deny that any junior feeder can get better practical feeding experience with calves from elsee than he can calves from the herds in this area.

It will be remembered that prior to his entry into the field of public service, Porter was associated with a bank here. Now, with a long tenure in an office that acquainted him with practically every branch of county operations, Porter will be able to carry to the auditor's post a rich background of knowledge and skill. While the county loses a good man in Chester O'Brien Sr., who has served so capably in that capacity, the impact will not be felt due to quality of the replace-

It is guite natural that each officer at the courthouse will look upon his own place as the most important of all. That is a commendable quality and one which makes for better performance in office. While we will not say that the place of the clerk is the most important in the entire county set-up, we will say that there is none more important.

So many things-those on which the public depends for a permanent record, accurately and promptly prepared-hinge upon the clerk's office that it's administration cannot be left to someone with little more to recommend them than good intentions. We do not know if or how many have applied for the post, but we do know that the court should give every consideration to qualifications that will give the county promise of top service.

The idea that the American male needs a girdle to get ahead in a woman's world belongs to Dr. Burgess Gorden, president of the Women's Medical College in Phil-adelphia. The distinguished medic says girdles contribute to a gal's sense of well being by elevating her abdomen, thus allowing her to get more air into her lungs and oxygen into her body tissues.

And if men are going to compete with women successfully, he believes, they had better start wearing this secret success weapon, too,

Well, I have just completed a poll of 15 men on this question, and they voted 14-to-1 as follows: "If wearing a girdle is to spell the difference between success and failure, we'll give up right now and go fishing. Let women rule the

The trouble arises over the fact that Texas University and Texas A. & M. To the thousands of exes of both schools, this gridiron clash is much more traditional than turkey on Thanksgiving, and they resent having their holiday all a week ahead of the big game. Abreham Lincoln in 1863 issued the first official Thanksgiving proelamation, in which he decreed that the fourth or last Thursday in

Possibility Of Women Jurors Is Considered In New Courthouse

Big Spring is going to move a step ahead of Big Dallas when the new Howard County Courthouse is completed.

Although women are not allowed to sit on juries in Texas, provision is being made for such an event in our new Courthouse. There will be two modern dormitories for jurors, separated by a sort of

This was deemed advisable because women probably wil be made elegible for jury service in Texas long before the county builds itself another oCurthouse. The jury dormitory for men will be of sufficient size to accommodate a complete jury, which will be required immediately after the new facilities are put into use. The dormitory for women jurors is smaller, containing space for about

As matters now stand it would be virtually impossible for women to serve on criminal juries for capital cases in Big Spring. The law requires that the jurors be kept together from start to finish of such trials.

Only five other states do not permit women to serve on juries, and most peo-ple who have given the matter any thought feel that these other states will admit women to jury panels sometime in the future, possibly within the next decade.

If this should occur in Texas within the next 10 years, Howard County likely will be one of the few counties in the state hich is prepared in advance. The last time Texas voted on a pro posal to make women eligible for jury service the measure failed by a substantial margin, and indications were that the women themselves cast a majority of their votes on the negative side. However, there are those who believe world these days is to draw down the curtain of gloom. At practically every spot on the globe the formula is trouble, trouble, boil and bubble. This can be added up to an impenetrable blackness calculated to frighten the hardiest optimist.

Yet, from the perspective of the change so soon to take place there are real glimmerings of hope. It is a dual perspective: The effort of those who are de-parting to appraise what they have achieved in as good a light as possible and the changed approach already being planned by the men soon to take over.

One can discount by half the claims President Truman makes for his policies of the past seven years and nevertheless bring up a fairly impressive score in the matter of containing the Communist threat. From a source directly concerned with carrying out those policies and yet with no political mortgage to redeem comes a moderately hopeful account of that part of the world usually considered blackest-the Far East.

Deputy Secretary of Defense William C. Foster recently completed an inspection trip of trouble centers around the globe. It was just two years ago that he made a similar trip, which gave him a basis of comparison

His report noted improvement in many areas. In Indo-China the training of sizable numbers of loyal Vietnamese encourages the hope that with greater political independence self-defense against the Communist guerrillas is not impossible While law and order are still a gamble in Burma, the principal rebel bands have been put down. But it was on the island of Formosa that Foster saw the most progress. Both militarily and politically the regime of Chiang Kai-shek has moved far toward greater strength, stability and popular acceptance. Export surpluses are helping to make the island self-sustaining.

Partly as a pesult of this impression the file a recommendation that one or two divisions of Nationalist Chinese troops be sent to Korea. This would be the beginning of a rotation program with other divisions replacing those sent in the first instance. The United States would have to supply all food, clothing and arms.

But the investment in military equipment for the Nationalists on Formosa already is in the hundreds of millions. To send a division or two to Korea would have at the very least the advantage of putting the worth of this investment to the test of combat, and combat moreover against other Chinese.

Aside from any prescription left behind by those putting down the burden of policy, John Foster Dulles is already working on a new approach to Korea, Formosa and Indo-China. While no public announcement is likely even after Dulles has taken over as secretary of state, the basic pattern of what is being planned can be revealed as follows:

The coordination of the struggle in Korea and Indo-China, with the use of the Nationalist Chinese as an asset in that struggle; The application of pressure in a variety of ways to the strong-hold of Communism on the Chinese mainland, thereby ceasing merely to respond defensively at those points where Communism chooses to at-

A revision of the Formosan neutrality policy, making it possible to launch attacks against the mainland opposite Formosa. At present about 400,000 Communist Chinese troops are stationed in this area because of the danger of such attacks and the belief is that the number might be increased and thus more of Red China's manpower would be immobilized if the threat became more real, A naval blockade covering China's principal ports, stopping the flow of tin, rubber petroleum etc. carried chiefly in British Greek and Panamanian ships the ships under the Panamanlan flag being owned for the most part by American interests

This last step is still under debate. It would have explosive repercussions with America's European allies and especially with Britain because of the likelihood of a retaliatory attack by the Communists on the British crown colony of Hong Kong.

What has been reported about the improvement of the situation in Far Eastern trouble centers must of course be measured against what still is to be done. In that light it looks small, indeed. And as certain as anything can be in this age of uncertainty is that to stop the far-flung program of aid in the Far East will be to see the small gains of the present go quickly down the drain.

speare are tragedies, but others are comedies. The comedies provide stories, and end happily. Thirty-seven plays are listed as having come from the pen of Shakespeare. He seems to have written "Henry VI" at the age of 25. After that, he produced from one to three plays each year until he was 49 years old.

Almost midway in his career of writing, the poet of Stratford-on-Avon wrote the comedy called "As You Like It." This is less widely known than such of his other plays as "Hamlet," "Romeo and Juliet," "Macb.th" and "The Merchant of Venice." Like everything else which he wrote, this play has parts of interest, and language of beauty.

The plot has to do with two families in which there were quarrels between brothers. In one family a duke was driven from his lands by a younger brother, and went into hiding in the Frest of Arden.

Behind him the duke left his pretty daughter, Rosalind. She was a dear friend of Celia, the daughter of the man who seized the dukedom. These young women remained loyal comrades, despite family trouble.

To the castle came a young man named

Rosalind. Orlando took part in wrestling against a heavy, rough opponent, and won the contest. Then he went away, and at length reached the Forest of Arden. He learned that his older brother was seeking his death. -Rosalind and Celia fled from the castle in disguise, and took up life in a cottage at the edge of the same forest. There they were found by Orlando, but he failed to recognize them. Because he was in love with Rosalind, he went about carving her name on trees.

As the play comes toward the end, the two bad brothers feel sorry about their wicked ways, and give back lands and other rights to the good brothers. Rosalind and Orlando are married in the green wood, and Celia weds the reformed older brother of Orlando.

What do workers want more than a rising standard of living and protection against inflation? The answer, I think, is pretty obvious: An assured minimum

Men like Humphrey can look years ahead and develop iron ore sites in Labrador; Wilson can plan dual-purpose plants for side-by-side defense and civilian production.
