SCLC Hearing Reveals Military Racism

Pvt. Gary Hubbard of Fort Stewart told SCLC military hearing panel that he was punished "for standing up for myself when I was called a 'nigger' in the mess hall." Seated beside him is his mother, Mrs. Janie Hubbard. (Harold Moon/SCLC photo)

Over 50 black military personnel presented written or verbal complaints at the Southern Christian Leadership Conference's first public hearing into racial discrimination in the U.S. armed services, held Oct. 30 in Savannah, Ga. Most were from nearby Fort Stewart and Hunter Army Airfield.

"We knew there were racial problems in the armed services," said SCLC president Dr. Joseph E. Lowery at the close of the one-day hearing, "but we had no idea of the depth, scope or volatility of the situation."

Dr. Lowery chaired the hearing panel, which also included Rev. Hosea Williams and Tyrone Brooks, both of SCLC, and Savannah Atty. Orin Alexis. Documents and recorded testimony from the hearing will be turned over to Cong. Ron Dellums (D.-Calif.), the black member of the House Armed Services Committee, for possible Congressional investigation.

Dr. Lowery said SCLC plans to hold another such hearing in the near future at another base.

Soldier who testified at either open or closed sessions said the turnout would have been greater, but about 10,000 of their ranks had been sent to Florida for maneuvers.

"We had trouble getting authorization to post the SCLC fliers about this meeting," stated Pfc. Eddie Thornton of Hunter. "They called troops on standby because they felt there might be a riot. All we wanted to do was promote this so we could discuss the prejudice in the military."

Among the most common complaints filed at the hearing were: being called inflammatory names by commanding officers; being denied information, encouragement or opportunity for educational or career advancement; receiving harsher punishment for misdemeanors than was warranted or ever received by whites who committed similar offenses; inability to obtain fair hearing or adequate legal defense; and frequently being given the most menial tasks and heaviest labor.

Pfc. Thornton and Pfc. Marion Mann, both MPs, were the first to testify during the morning public session. Pfc. Mann said that he complained to superiors about being treated abusively during a narcotics check of his room. Though no drugs were found, he was relieved from duty and given such assignments as sweeping the sidewalks.

"Before Mann, there had never been a black in MPI (military police investigation) at Hunter," said Thornton. "They don't want us in 'elite' sections like that."

The general consensus was that the Army particularly harassed blacks who aggressively pursued their rights. Such service people are "flagged" they said, and can usually expect to be accused of gambling, drinking, using drugs, or disorderly conduct.

"Racism is the reason I left," said a former army officer during one of the sessions closed to the press and public. A 12-year veteran who had served in Vietnam, he said he thought his opportunities would be better in the National Guard, but was frustrated there, too.

A former captain said that black officers usually felt insecure, did not receive information critical to their advancement, and were expected "not to be assertive." She stated that, as a dentist, she had gained valuable experience in the Army, but left finally because of discriminatory treatment.

Most of those who testified indicated that they had tried to register their dissatisfactions through official channels. "But the 'chain of command' works against you," stated Pvt. William Bryant.

They said that military legal assistance was usually of little help in providing them with an adequate defense. According to Pfc. Mann, "As soon as they find out you want a public trial, they don't want to touch your case."

When Dr. Lowery asked the soldiers, "Is it a general feeling among blacks that they're not getting fair treatment," they responded, "Yes."

"Many of us feel there is no future for blacks in the Army," said Pvt. Thomas A. Jones, who called Fort Stewart's prison "a plain racist ghetto." Other soldiers nodded in agreement when he warned that the racial situation at the base was explosive.

"There's going to be a race war (at Fort Stewart)," Pvt. Jones said. "With all the reprimands piled up on black soldiers' records," he said, "they have nothing to lose."

Dr. Lowery thanked the soldiers for bringing racial problems in the military out into the open. "We believe that the service personnel who testify at these hearings are exhibiting the highest form of patriotism," he told them. "They are challenging this nation to live up to its lofty commitment to equality of opportunity and justice for all citizens."

SCLC held the hearing in response to complaints the organization has received from bases across the country. Defense Department surveys have documented the disproportionately high number of blacks who fill military prisons and receive less than honorable discharges.

Banquet, Retirement Dinner Planned for Rev. W.L. Grimes

There were services for Rev. W.L. Grimes Sunday, November 12, 1978, at 8:00 p.m. at the Mt. Olive Baptist Church, 1610 Vanda. The appreciation services were hosted by the Caprock District Association.

The history of Rev. Grimes' ministry goes back a half century when the only employment Lubbock offered for minorities, like Rev. Grimes, was working in cotton fields and as ranch hands.

Rev. Grimes came to Lubbock to build a church in a city which had very few black churches. There were some people who didn't want Rev. Grimes to build a church or they said that it couldn't be done. Although people disagreed, Rev. Grimes went to the Lord for guidance and assistance.

For 52 years the Lord has made a way for Rev. Grimes to construct churches such as St. James Baptist Church, Rev. Kado Lang, pastor, and Mt. Olive Baptist Church, Rev. Benjamin Roberts, Jr. pastor. Rev. Grimes has also helped a few other churches in the city.

For a man who has lost one arm, which he lost when he was very young, he has done more than some people that have both arms. Rev. Grimes knew his time as being pastor of Mt. Olive had come to a close but he knew he would not leave Mt. Olive without a pastor presiding over Mt. Olive. So he prayed that the Lord would make it possible for Mt. Olive to have a pastor. The Lord did just that. The Lord sent Rev. Benjamin Roberts to his aide.

Rev. Benjamin Roberts, Jr., a native of Shreveport, Louisiana, has been in Lubbock for two years and was a member of Mt. Olive Baptist Church. Rev. Roberts got his experience from Rev. S.R. Roberts and Rev. A.L. Patrick. Rev. Roberts is known as young Rev. Roberts.

Rev. Roberts says, "I was also praying that the Lord would send me somewhere to preach His word." So, Rev. Roberts was called to be the pastor of Macedonia Baptist Church in Shreveport, Louisiana. However, he knew that the Lord wanted him to leave Shreveport so he came to Lubbock.

Rev. Roberts has been the pastor of Mt. Olive Baptist Church for two months now, and he realizes that he has a great deal of work to do in that area. Roberts says, "The Lord can do anything. If you attempt great things for God, you shall expect great things from God, because His word is truth."

Rev. Roberts would like to invite all Mt. Olive members to come back home and those that do not have a home to come on and join the Mt. Olive Baptist Church,

Bureaucrats' Waste in 6 States Uncovered by Justice Department

Copyright, 1978, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.
WASHINGTON—The great federal spending scandal surpasses all others in sheer magnitude. For years, the bureaucrats have been squandering tax money. They waste more money than most governments around the world have to spend.

We have previously reported, for example, on the scandals at the General Services Administration. The Justice Department is now beginning to crack down and has uncovered fraud in half a dozen states. But similar frauds are flourishing in other government agencies. Here are just a few:

—The bureaucrats at the Health, Education and Welfare Department let an estimated $6.3 million in fraud and waste slip through their fingers during the 1977 fiscal year.

—Government auditors estimate that fraud in federal financial assistance programs surpasses $2.5 billion each year. For example, the Agriculture Department loses $500 million annually in food stamps—half of which, auditors believe, is due to fraud. The Labor Department estimates that cheaters got away with $38 million in unemployment insurance overpayments in 1976.

—Untold millions are wasted each year by Defense Department procurement officers who pay $2.19 each for screws that could be purchased for 35 cents; $4.65 for tiny plastic pins worth less than a dollar and $3.35 for nuts that cost 60 cents in a hardware store.

—Pilferage at military supply centers accounts for additional millions of dollars in waste. The stolen items range from sunglasses and batteries to office supplies and gasoline. At the Norfolk Public Works Center, for example, more than 700,000 gallons of gas could not be accounted for. Navy investigators discovered that drivers were selling government gasoline by the truckload to unscrupulous businessmen.

There are many reasons for the tremendous waste of the taxpayers' money that goes on every day. One is that the bureaucrats have more incentive to spend money than to save it. Their promotions often depend on expanding their operations and their performance is often measured, therefore, by how much and how rapidly they spend.

Thrift could be practiced by the federal bureaucrats and millions could be saved merely by cutting down on the luxuries to which government executives have become accustomed.

The taxpayers maintain a fleet of automobiles, for example, for the convenience of top officials. In the old days, only officials of Cabinet rank had government automobiles. Anyone else was given streetcar tokens for official travel around Washington.

Manpower is also wasted in a thousand subtle ways. Trifling departmental decisions are processed by time-wasting, paper-consuming committees. All too often, their objective is to evade issues, shift responsibility and hand the work to someone else.

The more committees and subcommittees formed to share the burden of decision, the less chance that any single individual will be blamed. Anything produced by a committee is bound to be innocuous because so many people participate.

The system also encourages superiors to build staff empires, which will justify promotions and salary increases. The process begins when an official complains that the work-load is too heavy for him to carry alone. He has no intention of dividing the work with a rival, so he starts accumulating subordinates.

Footnote: We try to keep a watch on waste in the government, and we encourage the participation of our readers. Anyone who has knowledge of government waste can write to us at P.O. Box 2300, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Spook Scoop: CIA Director Adm. Stansfield Turner recently gave a speech to the National Press Club and exhorted his audience not to leak his agency's secrets. Each anti-press statement, strangely, was greeted with loud applause. His enthusiastic supporters, it turned out, were several retired CIA men who obviously agreed with the director's sentiments.

—The CIA, under some fire for having a cadre of spies that is mostly male, has put out the word that it is looking for a few good females for clandestine work. Adm. Turner, in fact, has pledged that he will dispatch a team of recruiters to any woman who calls him.

—When Turner was appointed director of the CIA, he was presented with a T-shirt emblazoned with the words, "Super Spook." His wife got one which reads, "Mrs. Super Spook." Turner wears his T-shirt when he plays tennis with FBI Director William Webster. The top G-Man, incidentally, wears ordinary tennis garb.

Inflation Hot Line: The White House has set up a special 13-person task force to take calls from citizens who have questions about the president's economic plans. The hotline crew has been receiving 500 to 600 calls a day for the past two weeks. Although the economic experts are assigned to give advice on how to fight inflation, they will also take calls from citizens who want to offer the president some advice. If you live in Washington, D.C., and have a question or advice to offer, call 456-6766. Those who live outside of Washington can call 800-368-9191. It is a toll-free number.

KELLY'S HEROES

by Joe Kelly

Texas Tech is becoming the type of team that fans hoped to see, but had faint hopes of seeing. The quarterbacking leaves little to be desired and the running game is strong. The passing attack also is sound and the receiving is outstanding.

Defensively, Tech still gives up too much, especially in pass defense, but A&M is the only team that has run up the score to any extent. Tech has posted a 5-3 mark more by outscoring its foes than by a sturdy defense.

All of which isn't bad. It means that games are not close to the vest type affairs. There is scoring. There are some sensational plays. And there is enough defense to make it interesting.

No, the Raiders do have an interesting team. They probably are not bowl contenders, just as they definitely are not conference championship contenders. The big thing is that this year's squad has shown steady improvement and that's a big plus.

The victory over TCU last week had its tense moments, particularly when the Horned Frogs stormed back to make it 13-10. That's when oldtimers had visions of past visits to Fort Worth.

This isn't past years. The Raiders accepted the challenge, drove for an icing score and then tacked on an insurance tally when the Frogs became generous. It was a good win and gave Rex Dockery a chance to play some of the less experienced squadmen.

This week the Raiders run head on into the type of team that can be a Raider nemesis, a passing team. Mike Ford will be, without doubt, the best passing quarterback the Raiders will face.

No team has been able to stop Ford yet, including such powers as Florida, Penn State, Ohio State and Houston. Texas did the best job of shutting him down, the Mustangs getting only three points. Take away the Texas game and SMU is averaging 33 points a game.

The best way to beat the Ponies is to utilize ball control, by key interceptions and by outscoring them. Simple, huh? Not really, and the Raiders face a herculean task.

Tech has shown that it can put points on the board, especially since James Hadnot became a running back as opposed to a tight end converted to running back. And, with Hadnot, the Raiders have the type of game that dictates ball control.

Home Field Advantage?—Last week every home team in the league lost—Texas, Baylor, TCU, Rice. That ran the season count to 14 wins by visiting teams against 11 losses in league play.

Houston took a giant step towards another SWC title by beating Texas in Austin last week. And Bill Yoeman was a pretty good prognosticator when he said, again, that the home field didn't mean much. Maybe Fred Akers, who disagreed, now agrees.

Anyway, the Cougars are odds-on favorites to supplant Texas and play host in the Cotton Bowl. They have only Tech and Rice to elude, which should be like taking candy from a kid.

The major bowls are starting to take shape, which leaves only the minor bowls interesting on which to speculate. And, in many cases, conference races are so snarled that that is impossible at this time.

Take our league, for interest. Texas probably will win its final three games and be available. Arkansas, panting for a bowl, still must get by A&M, SMU and Tech, in successive games, and that won't be easy. Indeed, maybe impossible.

The Aggies are looking to a bowl, too, and they must play Arkansas, TCU and Texas. The third team tied for third place in the league, Tech, must play SMU, Houston and Arkansas, and there's little hope for a bowl bid for the Raiders.

Other leagues also are snarled, including the Big 8, SEC and Pac 10. The ACC also is up for grabs, and then you have the independents, led by Penn State, with Notre Dame, Pitt and Navy other possibilities.

Of the games this week in the SWC, the top one is the Aggie-Razorback clash at Little Rock (presumably with Texas officials). It's a make or break game for both. They each are 6-2 for the season and 3-2 in the league.

It promises to be a bitter battle. Before the season started, the pick would have to have been Arkansas. Now, with Tom Wilson at the helm and the Aggies strong and healthy, it could be A&M. That's the pick here.

The next best game should be Tech and SMU. As we said before, Ford's passing makes the Mustangs click, but they have a running threat as well.

Tech is in good shape for the game, with more balance as the result of Hadnot's power running and Ron Reeve's passing well. There should be a lot of scoring and, while SMU ought to be favored, I'll take the Raiders in a mild upset.

As for the other two games, they shouldn't even have odds posted. Texas should have no trouble with TCU and Baylor ought to win its third game of the season handily against Rice.

Lubbock ISD to Construct Model Creative Playground

The Lubbock Independent School District is appealing to companies and individuals of the West Texas area to make unique contributions to the success of the magnet school concept.

A team of educators from Texas Tech University and Ella Iles Elementary School, 2401 Date, in Lubbock has issued a call for materials to construct a model creative playground project. The playground will serve 120 pupils ranging in age from 4 to 7.

Telephone poles, railroad ties, cable spools, sand, lumber, pipe, galvanized sheet metal, brick, shipping flats or skids, and nails are needed to construct the model. Other materials needed are a cargo net, a large rubber conveyor belt and a used car body or old boat. All sizes of used tires, large metal washers and nuts and bolts also are needed.

An important feature of the area to insure the safety of the youngsters is 155 feet of chain-link fencing and a gate to divide the area from the adjacent street. After all materials are collected, individuals or groups of volunteers will be needed to construct the model playground project.

Equipment designed from the donated materials will form components of the playground to include four major projects: a creative play structure, a tricycle track, sand and water and ecological areas.

The model playground will be used as an extension of the indoor curriculum. Opportunities for motor development, science activities, art projects, drama and puppet presentations, and creative play will be provided in the outdoor setting.

Kay H. Knight, principal of Ella Iles, and Linda O'Neal, doctoral student in Tech's College of Education, are coordinating efforts to implement the model playground project.

Dr. Libby Vernon, consultant from Texas Education Agency, has been instrumental in meeting with participants of the project to finalize plans, according to O'Neal. Professors in Tech's College of Education, College of Home Economics, and the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation have contributed ideas and materials on the structures.

Randall Gilbert, senior student in the Department of Park Administration and Landscape Architecture, constructed scale designs of the plans.

Individuals and companies wishing to donate materials or labor may take them to Ella Iles or contact Diana McRae, (806) 792-2092; Mary Owens, (806) 795-8770 or (806) 742-3361; Sandy Jones, (806) 792-9610; or Ann Candler, (806) 792-1923 or (806) 742-2320.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

The column this week is a day late in reaching my estimable publisher and I can only hope that you are reading it now. Once a month or so, this happens. The reason is very clear and understandable. You see, the Lubbock Symphony Orchestra plays a concert with guest star every month or so down in the attractive Civic Center Theatre and so, because our roots in Lubbock are very much with this talented and beloved group, we reserve the right to let you know how it all came out!

And so, at 5 a.m. on a Tuesday, I can tell you how it all came out. One word. Beautifully!

It was a goodly sized audience. It was an impeccable orchestra under William A. Harrod's knowing leadership, it gave us late in the evening an equally impeccable soloist, Israeli-born celloist Yehuda Hanani.

Harrod served the pre-intermission time for himself and his orchestra and rightfully so. We had the time-worn overture to the Marriage of Figaro and the equally weary Casar Franck Symphony in D Minor. Both numbers were admirable in performance.

But, you see, it was the soloist we were anticipating. Yehuda Hanani. (I wonder why he spells his name with an "a" when Yehudi Menuhin is known by the "i"?)

Hanani, who is the first professional cello soloist with our orchestra since the electric appearance of Leonard Rose (lo! it must be nearly 20 years ago!) lived up to all advance hopes. His instrument is deep-throated and golden, his skill is beyond question and he took us away and soared all the rest of the evening long. His adherence to his homeland introduced him with the reverent "Kol Nidre."

But, it was the lengthy, demanding and fascinating "Variations on a Roccoco Theme" by Tschaiakowsky that spelled the night. It was done with aplomb and authority and the orchestra supported the young soloist in breathtaking fashion.

They tell me the evening ended with the wearisome selections from Bernstein's "The West Side Story." Somehow, after hearing the ethereal touch, the soul-kissing sound of that cello, I couldn't stay around for "Maria."

It was a glorious evening. Another night of which to be proud, wherein our orchestra is concerned. I don't know how Harrod accomplishes what he does—but he does!

And so does his amalgamated, closely knit ensemble!

My congratulations are to the orchestra first, to Harrod and to the gifted soloist who, as I am writing this, will repeat his triumph on the second concert of the pair in the Civic Center Theatre tonight (Tuesday).

I want to talk to you about three movies "The Wild Geese," and "The Boys from Brazil," both at Fox 4-complex, and "The Big Fix" at Showplace 6. Next week will have to do.

Can't hold up the presses any longer. Next time around, okay?

Awareness Through Movement Course Offered at YMCA

A new direction in Physical Education for better coordination, flexibility, balance, and posture is offered through the new Awareness Through Movement course at the YMCA.

Although new to the United States, this technique called the Feldenkrais Method after its developer Dr. Moshe Feldenkrais, has been in practice in Israel and Europe for 40 years. Feldenkrais, a Tel Aviv physicist and judo and yoga expert, did extensive study in anatomy, physiology, neurology, and psychology to recover from a serious knee injury. The result is a unique approach to physical education or re-education.

Delton Justice, instructor of the Y's course, who trained with Feldenkrais for three years, described the technique as "a method of freeing ourselves from habitual patterns of movement and behavior; a way to tag our unused potential, improve how we feel and perform in daily life."

We learn greater efficiency and quality of movement and how to use our brain to re-direct our muscles and motor system," Justice said. "This means flexibility without stretching, strength without fatigue and improvement without strain."

The one-hour course beings

Nov. 14 and will meet on Tuesdays and Thursdays for six weeks. "Y" members pay a $15 enrollment fee and non-members pay $20. For further information or to register for the course, contact the YMCA at 762-0588.

Ringling the Bell . . .

with Bob Tieuel

The Black Experience in Politics: The conviction of U.S. Rep. Charles C. Diggs, Jr. (D. Mich.) by a mostly-black jury on 29 counts of mail fraud and illegally diverting more than $60,000 worth of congressional employees' salaries to personal uses, must serve as a warning to all our black elected officials, believes the Baltimore Afro-American.

There can be no doubt that we are still living in the era of Watergate—a time when all public officials are coming under constant scrutiny. If elected blacks are to survive this era, more than the usual care must be taken to assure conduct and personal responsibility in both fiscal and interpersonal affairs.

The Afro-American continues: "It is true, we need not be reminded, that black officeholders have never been given the special protective cover that white persons in office have. There is (and, indeed, always has been) a concerted effort to harrass black politicians, to lay secret plans for their downfall and to neutralize their effectiveness—if not eliminate them".

To say this, however, is not to fall victim to the often-heard excuse that all indictments of our elected leaders are only racist ploys. As human beings, blacks have had our share of non-electoral and even elected leaders who have placed personal gain, selfish ambition and deceitful concerns above service to the masses of black and poor people they are supposed to represent.

Black leaders at all levels cannot afford to think that racial commitment will substitute for rigorous compliance with the innuendoes of law. It may seem like too much to expect a "Jackie Robinson calibre" among all black elected officials, but indeed this seems to be what is required. We cannot afford to sacrifice the hopes and aspirations and influence of the black movement on the altars of personal carelessness or questionable deeds, believes the Afro. We do too.

"Right to Work" Argument Draws Black Voters: By the time you read this, most of the elections in the nation will have been decided. And it was expected that especially in the larger cities of the nation, blacks would be drawn to the polls in larger numbers than usual because of the appearance of the "right to work" issue on the ballot.

A great number of national and regional civil rights leaders and black clergymen say that the interests of labor and the working people are closely tied with the interests and welfare of black people and civil rights.

These same leaders however are not unmindful of the fact, that all labor unions are not free of bias and discrimination. Some still do not accept blacks freely and give them an opportunity to advance. Yet there are many unions in which blacks have made steady advancement in job opportunity and in pay. And the beat goes on. How did you vote?

On Inflation: Public opinion polls have shown repeatedly that most Americans believe inflation to be the No. 1 national problem. And of course Blacks with the lowest per capita income are suffering the most. We agree with bellringer, H.B. that "an undisciplined and selfish public will not respond to any measure short of compulsion, and will make every possible effort to circumvent voluntary controls ... We must not forget that no nation in history has ever voluntarily abandoned run-away inflation".

A Thanksgiving Note: We are so grateful for all of our readers and friends of this column and even our critics. And we pray that at this Thanksgiving season we will all be thankful for the blessings of Our Father who will never put on us more than we can bear. And remember that no matter bellringers what condition you may be at this moment, there are those who are in much worse shape than you are. We then can all be thankful to the One from whom all blessings flow.

Footnote: Bellringers polled like the way George Bush of Midland and Dick Slack of Pecos conducted their campaigns. If either or both emerge victorious, it could mean that "mud-slinging" has had its day. Issues not personalities should count most we believe too. Be a good neighbor. They come in all colors.

Administration Committed to Full Employment

The Carter Administration remains committed to the goal of full employment as it moves to control inflation, Secretary of Labor Ray Marshall said.

Marshall told the Conference of Black Mayors that the Carter Administration intends to reach the Humphrey-Hawkins Bill target of 4 percent unemployment by 1983.

This is the full employment goal specified by the bill, signed by President Carter along with legislation to extend the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA).

The goal can be reached, however, only if inflation is brought under control, Marshall said. He told the black mayors:

"That is why it is important for you to understand why we must curb the budget deficit and why we need your support on issues like hospital cost containment."

Marshall said he wanted to "clear up a few confusions" concerning the anti-inflation program.

Marshall also branded a "misconception" the belief that the President's efforts to strengthen the dollar would trigger a deep recession next year.

He said President Carter's actions will reduce the cost of imports and, thus, lessen one of the important inflationary pressures on our economy.

"It is also likely that these new higher interest rates will be a temporary measure which can be relaxed when the dollar strengthens," Marshall said.

The Administration's view, Marshall said, is that the economy is "strong enough to absorb a higher Federal Reserve discount rate without slowing our economic growth."

Likewise, Marshall said, it is a misconception that President Carter's anti-inflation policy is moving this country toward mandatory controls.

Marshall said the Administration has "no intention of deviating from" its firm opposition to controls.

Finally, Marshall said it is a misconception that the President's program is "inequitable."

"Our policy is designed to apply to both prices and wages," he said. "We have no intention of making the average working man or woman pay the full price for controlling inflation."

Marshall called the price standard a "tough" one—one the Administration can make stick through use of federal procurement policy, import quotas and deregulation.

"There are many features in this program that are designed to protect the real incomes of American workers," Marshall added.

Because we are sensitive to the problems of those workers at the bottom of the economic ladder, we have purposely built a low-wage exemption into the wage standards program," he added.

"This exemption for all workers earning less than $4 an hour, will apply to 49 percent of all manufacturing workers and 26 percent of all full-time wage and salary workers," Marshall told the black mayors.

He said the "real wage insurance" provision is designed "to make sure that workers do not suffer if inflation continues above our economic targets."

These and other elements designed to treat workers fairly were put into the anti-inflation program after consultation with union leaders, Marshall pointed out.

Emphasizing that "no one benefits from continuing inflation" Marshall urged support for the President's program and said "the costs are too high to sit on the sidelines."

A five-year old showed up at kindergarten one day dressed in faded blue jeans under a frilly petticoat and a beautiful ruffled party dress. Pinned to the dress was this note from the girls' mother: "I hope you don't think this was my idea!"

"Have you ever been troubled by diphtheria?"
"Only when I tried to spell it."
