Start Preparing Now for Next School Year

Now is the time to begin preparing for the next school year. One of the most important preparations is to see that your child has current health immunizations.

Texas state law requires immunizations for all public school students. The student's immunization record must be validated by a doctor's signature or by a clinic. Necessary immunizations are listed below:

1. Diphtheria-Tetanus — three doses required, with the last dose since the fourth birthday, and additional boosters every ten years.
2. Oral Polio — three doses required, with the last dose since fourth birthday.
3. Red Measles (Rubeola) — one dose since the first birthday or a doctor's statement of disease.
4. German Measles (Rubella) — one dose of vaccine.
5. Mumps — one dose of vaccine, or doctor's statement of disease, required for first graders or below.

If your child has had these immunizations, please send a record of the dates to school as soon as possible.

Lubbock City Health Department and the Lubbock Public Schools strongly encourage parents to bring immunizations up-to-date immediately. If immunizations or boosters are necessary, these may be obtained from family physicians, the Lubbock City Health Department Clinic, located at 1100 North Avenue Q, or the Well Baby Clinic at 102 Avenue J. Immunization records of any sort should be brought with you to the doctor or clinic.

Lubbock City Health Clinic times are 1:00 p.m. until 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The Well Baby Clinic is open on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Friday, from 8:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m., and on Thursday, from 6:15 a.m. until 2:30 p.m.

Students easily can receive immunizations now and in the early summer. Waiting until August to complete this requirement will mean waiting in lines for long periods of time. No students will be allowed to enroll in the Lubbock Public Schools next year without satisfying the state immunization law.

George Bush Jr. to Speak to East Lubbock Republicans

George Bush Jr. will be the guest for the East Lubbock Republican Committee on Friday, July 20 at the Mae Simmons Community Center. The meeting is to begin at 8:00 p.m.

The public is invited to come and hear Mr. Bush speak.

Also expected is Lubbock County GOP Chairman Ruth Schiermyer, and Miss Jane Ann Stinnett. The East Lubbock Republican Committee's Women Aux. under the direction of Mrs. R.S. Stanley will meet at 7:30 p.m. the same night at Mae Simmons.

Johnny Deal and Elvin Gibson are scheduled to appear on the program with George Bush. Mr. Deal will be singing a song he has written, which tells about blacks and the Republican Party. As soon as Mr. Deal has the song copywrited, he has been told by some Republican Party leaders that they will help him publish the song. Mr. Deal is a member of the East Lubbock Republican Committee. He first introduced the song at the May meeting.

Elvin Gibson, a student at Dunbar-Struggs, will give highlights of a speech given by Joe Hixcox at our June meeting. Mr. Gibson is a very intelligent young man who is interested in the security of the United States. Elvin has recently been appointed president of the newly formed East Lubbock Young Republicans.

E.L.I.C. Meets Wednesday

The East Lubbock Investment Co. (E.L.I.C.) will be in session at Mae Simmons Community Center at 8:00 p.m. Wednesday, July 18th. All interested citizens of East Lubbock are invited to attend this important session and get into the positive action. There is no more time for talking, but doing something about or conditions in east Lubbock is what it is all about now.

The Small Business Administration representative will be present to give us more advise on what we should do next, and answer all questions you may have in mind concerning our company's progress.

Come out and get into the "Action" and get out of that mud, and help yourself, and in turn you will help someone else. It could be your own children. You don't have to be rich to enter this "Action Program". Come out and we will tell you how.

Let us move forward, and build up "East Lubbock."

Let these few words below be your motto: "God grant me the serenity to accept the things I cannot change, courage to change the things I can, and give me wisdom to know the difference."

We will have some representatives from Dallas to help us on our program. You see if we try, there's always a helping hand around.

Michelle Howard Attends FHA National Meeting

Michelle Howard, senior at Dunbar-Struggs, was one of the 195 Texas delegates attending the 1979 Future Homemakers of America National Youth Leadership meeting, July 9-12, at the Washington Hilton Hotel in Washington, D.C. Representing more than 65,000 members of the Texas FHA Association, she was among approximately 2,000 delegates throughout the nation attending the four-day conference.

Planned to correlate with the theme, "Future Unknown—Dare to Determine Your Own," the meeting's objective was to help Future Homemakers explore their future and the future of the family. Convention delegates participated in sessions focusing on the future and how one plans for it, and resources and aids to chapter planning. They visited their congressmen at the Capitol and other governmental and educational agencies.

Michelle, who was a voting delegate to the meeting, is the local chapter president, 1979-80 and 1980-81. She has completed all three levels of Encounter (leadership training / self-improvement), and has been elected Area I HERO vice-president.

JACK ANDERSON WITH JOE SPEAR WEEKLY SPECIAL

By Jack Anderson and Joe Spear
NIXON WANTS TO IGNORE PRESS IN HIS WELL-PAID RETIREMENT

WASHINGTON—One day, historians will trace the origins and growth of the hate affair between Richard Nixon and elements of the press. But meanwhile, Nixon has settled the stormy relationship simply by ending it. The former president has apparently decided that no one from his staff will talk to reporters anymore.

For four decades, Nixon has used the press, abused the press and been abused by the press. He tried to cut off relations with newsmen once before. In 1962, he lost the governorship of California and called his infamous "last press conference" to excoriate the reporters who were covering his campaign. He told them they wouldn't have Nixon to kick around anymore.

But he made a comeback against the odds. He reached the White House, with the conviction that he had gotten there by circumventing the working press. The way to stay in power, he decided, was to keep the press at bay.

Reporters were given comfortable accommodations, fed with daily trivialities and occupied with diversions. But they were kept away from the news. He did not want the acts and policies of his administration to reach the people through what he considered the distorting prism of the press.

In seeking to contain reporters and to shut off the leaks, Nixon and his associates committed first the blunders and then the crimes that produced the greatest political scandal in American history — Watergate.

Now Nixon is living in seclusion, supported by the taxpayers who contribute $300,000 a year to his welfare. He should be accountable to the taxpayers, therefore, for how he spends their money.

But he has no intention of answering any more press inquiries. The secretary who answered the phone at San Clemente told us the staff is too busy and the budget too tight to deal with the press. She complained that Congress doesn't give Nixon enough money.

Kudos for Carter: White House press secretary Jody Powell recently suggested that Washington, D.C. deserved long gas lines. "No place should have a longer gas line than Washington," he said.

That angered us. So we instructed our reporters to investigate whether White House aides have to wait in those frustrating lines like the rest of us. We expected to learn that they are chauffeured to and from work and that they get special gas allotments for their private cars.

Our suspicions were wrong. We found that the only aide who travels by chauffeured limousine is National Security Adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski. The other aides drive their own cars.

Our White House contacts said that Jody Powell and other presidential aides sat in the gas lines waiting their turn—unless they could persuade their wives, husbands or kids to do it for them.

Many of the White House employees have Georgia license plates; technically, therefore, they do not have to observe the Washington area's "odd-even" gasoline plan. They are entitled to fill up any day of the week. But we were told they voluntarily adhere to the plan.

The White House motor pool also has a new look. The cars are all six-cylinder Dodges and Buicks. They average 19 miles to the gallon, and they are driven on official business only. The drivers carefully log every trip to prevent abuse.

Of course, the gasoline allocation rules don't apply to the White House motor pool. But our reporters talked to the military people who run it. They say gasoline usage is down.

Last year, the White House burned an average of 2,485 gallons a month. This year, they have cut back to 2,394 gallons—a savings of nearly a hundred gallons a month.

Postal Defector: The Reader's Digest, an American institution for 57 years, has become disaffected with another American institution—the Postal Service. Because of skyrocketing mailing costs and declining services, Digest officials are shopping around for a cheaper way to reach readers. They have already contracted with several private companies to deliver a small percentage of their magazines, and they are looking to shave mailing costs even more. Currently, the magazine's circulation bosses told us, they spend 16 cents of every dollar they earn on delivery of their products to customers.

Kennedy Campaign: Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., says he is not running for the presidency in 1980, but his supporters are preparing for a race, anyway. The Machinists Union has purchased $10,000 worth of campaign buttons, which have been distributed to politicians who have declared their support for Kennedy. In Washington, there aren't enough buttons to go around. So Rep. Ed Beard, D-R.I., is coping with the problem by pasting Kennedy photos on the buttons of other political candidates.

Headlines and Footnotes: Observers who heard Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren Burger testify at a recent anti-trust hearing are wondering where he has been for the past year or so. He referred to the cost of a loaf of bread which, he said, is less than 40 cents. . . . An energy conservation law, which was passed four years ago, requires federal officials to set standards for energy efficiency in government buildings. The standards still haven't been set.

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN—Energy—how to produce more of it—remained the topic of state officials in Austin, as well as at Camp David where President Jimmy Carter was meeting with his staff to draw a new energy policy for America.

Texas Governor Bill Clements fired more criticism at Carter last week while attending a National Governor's Association meeting in Louisville, Kentucky. A governor's panel there rejected a recommendation backed by Clements for a Carter-supported plan for a windfall profits tax on higher-priced oil at 50 percent.

Clements had proposed a 100 percent tax on windfall profits that would not be reinvested in some form of energy development. Clements told the group even the oil companies are against his version because it is too restrictive.

Earlier on "Issues and Answers" television interview, Clements said he favored production of synthetic fuels, including gasohol, but would do all in his power to defeat Carter in 1980.

In The Same Boat

Meanwhile, back home in Texas, Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, rapped Clements for his constant criticism of Carter, saying both men share similar energy policies.

"As far as I'm concerned, there's not a bit of difference between the president's ineffectual leadership and Gov. Clements' action," Ogg said. Clements' recent statements that fuel would be channeled to the cities and also saying that rural areas would not suffer were "as inadequate and confusing as the president's."

"First, he (Clements) vetoes a gasohol program for Texas. Then, on national television, he calls for production of alternative energy sources."

Ogg said in reality no solutions have been offered by either of the two leaders.

Hearing on Fuel Shortgages
A Senate subcommittee hearing on fuel shortages in Texas suffered a shortage of its own—no oil producers showed up to testify.

The absence of a witness to testify for the oil industry prompted Consumer Affairs subcommittee chairman Sen. Ron Clower of Garland to blast the industry's invited spokesman for "not showing the people of Texas the courtesy to come here, and present the oil industry's side of the story."

Clower was referring to Bill Abington, general counsel for Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association.

Those who did testify included representatives from the U.S. Department of Energy, the governor's office, service station operators, tourist development groups, businessmen, labor, consumer groups, farmers and truckers.

All testified the gasoline shortage is having serious and adverse effects on the state.

English Inevitable

Secretary of State George Strake said Wednesday he would like to see a "serious, honest" debate on bilingual voting and bilingual education in Texas.

The Republican's remarks were made in response to a Federal Election Commission report that said Spanish-speaking Texans are poorly served by state and local election officials. The report's data "are old and on a fairly small sample" and ignored other facts about Texas voting, he said.

Strake said he does not favor immediate repeal of a federal law requiring bilingual ballots, but "if the Mexican people come to the conclusion that they don't want it, I would be in favor of dropping it."

"It seems to me the longer you continue bilingual training the more you're continuing the inevitable. The sooner you get (Mexican-Americans) into an English world, the better it will be for them," Strake said. He stressed he would do all he could to involve all Texans in the political process.

Death Penalty Upheld

Texas Supreme Court rejected convicted murderer David Lee Powell's arguments that the state's execution procedures were illegally adopted and should be overturned.

The Court upheld without comment lower court decisions on Powell's appeal. Prison rules set injection with sodium thiopental as the method of execution. Powell was convicted of killing an Austin policeman with the AK-47 assault rifle.

Family Farm Security

Farmers and others are organizing to pass a constitutional amendment to authorize the state to guarantee loans to buy farm and ranch land. The bill's intent is to combat high interest loans which prevent young Texans from entering farming and ranching.

State Rep. Luthor Jones, E-El Paso, said most young persons cannot afford the almost 30 percent down payment required for farm and ranch loans. If the amendment is approved on Nov. 6, the state will issue bonds which will eventually guarantee as much as $100 million in loans.

Sheridan's Ride

by Jack Sheridan

You know, usually Friday the 13th is considered a "black-letter day," bad luck, happenings of ill nature, all the rest of it. But, it is not always so. For this past Friday the 13th turned out, for Lubbock moviegoers, to be a "red-letter day." On that day, with ribbon-cutting, a guest appearance by venerable Pat Buttram (Mr. Haney of "Green Acres") and a hoarde of national moguls, Mann Theatres unveiled the brand-spanking new four-plex on Slide Road, just across from South Plains Mall.

Mann has had the older four-plex, of course, out on 19th Street, a theatre group that started as a twosome and expanded into four. This new one is a four in its own right.

Harold Lieck, so long the suffering manager at the old Fox (he had to preside at the partitioning there some years back) has had his hand buried in the preparation of the new building, a time of bad weather and slowed construction. But, he is now king of the hill, manager of the new one, with a replacement taking over at the older facility.

The new theater complex is charming. It has an airy, plush lobby, its auditoriums are large and comfortable and, praise heaven, it has wide big screens in contrasts to the "boxed" screens of the old houses.

I was present at the ribbon-cutting and afterwards attended the first showing in the new house. It was a two-theater screening of "The Muppet Movie". You know the Muppets, those clever creations by Jim Henson and his staff so popular on television. Well, I had my doubts about this G-rated epic.

Banish the doubts. I haven't had such a good time at a movie in a long, long time. The story of Kermit the Frog, Miss Piggy, Fozzie Bear, Animal and all the others, of their trek through difficulties and situations to a vital audition in Hollywood is a knockout. I don't mean for little kids alone, either. I defy an adult who won't be taken completely in by this mix of song, satire and charm and humor, as I was. The music is simple but delicious, and the technical treatments (Kermit on his bicycle) are bogging. Oh, I did like "The Muppet Movie." Nothing could have gotten a new theatre off to a more auspicious start.

How nice, too, to sit through 98 minutes of movie without a cuss word, a sex reference or some dastardly, cheap ploy. There are villains, of course, Charles Durning is properly evil and frustrated as the fried frog leg chain man who has eyes on Kermit, with Austin Pendleton as his henchman, though not without redeeming qualities.

But, it's all The Muppets and principally that lovable, clever and earnest Kermit, bless his heart.

There are a passel of cameo appearances by well know (and live) names, ranging from Bob Hope, Madeline Kahn, Cloris Leachman, the late Edgar Bergen and his Charlie, Dom De Luise, Orson Welles, and, outstanding as a sardonic waiter, Steve Martin. The music by Paul Williams is first rate.

Just go see, "The Muppet Movie" and take the kids. I don't often have a chance to make that suggestion anymore! As Kermit might say, you'll absolutely flip!

I went back to the new four-plex the very next afternoon for another comedy. This is "Lost and Found," which stars the two players who scored so heavily in "A Touch of Class", Glenda Jackson (she won an Oscar for that one) and George Segal. Add Maureen Stapleton as a Jewish mama stereo role, and you've got the backbone of talent—plus a bonus, Paul Sorvino superb as a talkative, philosophizing cab driver.

This one misses the mark for top rating as "A Touch of Class," achieved, but, when you've got two experienced pros such as Jackson and Segal parrying and bickering their way through, you've got entertainment. Jackson is mistress of her craft and a delight to watch and hear in anything. Segal is a little more heavy-handed now and then, but still they complement each other hugely and "Lost and Found" benefits mainly from its casting.

There's no point in recapping the plot here. The two meet in a series of ludicrous mishaps, they marry and hie off to a New England university where Segal is battling for the coveted tenure rating. The rest is up to you. I particularly liked John Cunningham as Segal's rival teacher and friend and Miss Stapleton is always good to see and hear. She, too, is a pro.

The electric drama of my week came from the other Mann Theatres complex, the senior outlet, on 19th Street. It was Clint Eastwood's exciting, graphic and taut tilm, "Escape from Alcatraz." This 112 minute, PG-rated prison entry is superbly produced, with an outstanding music treatment in low-key, and top-notch direction from Donald Siegel (who made "Dirty Harry" with Eastwood).

Eastwood, who has wallowed through some bad ones lately, capped by the silly "Every Which Way But Loose," returns to his strong, silent, clipped dialogue image with powerful effectiveness in the Alcatraz film. Based on fact, the film traces Eastwood's incarceration in the maximum security prison in San Francisco Bay, his relations with fellow inmates (all stunningly cast) and his eventual plan and execution of an escape plan. No one had ever broken out of that fortress before and the preparations and the actual break are absorbingly and tautly done. They make it, but they or their bodies have never been found, as the closing card explains.

There is a stunning portrait etched by Patrick McGoohan as the Alcatraz warden. He becomes one of those "man you love to hate" characters and he plays it for all its worth. There are fine performances for all the supports, the fat killer, Wolf, by Bruce M. Fisher; Frank Ronzio, the convict with the attachment to his mouse; Roberts Blossom as the tragic artist; Paul Benjamin as the embittered black inmate; and Larry Hankin who quails at the last minute on the escape caper.

Having lived in San Francisco a portion of my pre-Texas life, I know, from a distance across water, the sight and even sounds of Alcatraz as it was in its operational days. The movie people have restored the interior to its former spit-and-polish appearance, against the sad, neglected condition of today.

"Escape from Alcatraz" is first-rate entertainment and Eastwood has never been better. You'd better drop by and catch it. I doubt if you'll catch a better thriller or more compact, professional film during these long dog days of summer.

Kitchen Safety

THE SHOCKING FACTS

The shock of your life could occur in your kitchen unless you're aware of safety practices. To avoid a jolt when working in the kitchen, heed these hints from the Consumer Information Department of Corning Glass Works.

1. Don't use electric appliances while standing in water, touching plumbing fixtures or any other metal objects.

Replace or repair frayed electrical cords. Exposed wiring can cause shocks and burns.

2. Keep all electrical equipment away from the sink where extra cord length may dangle into a water-filled sink.

3. Don't overload outlets. Always unplug appliances when they are not in use and when they are being cleaned. Likewise, when an appliance has a detachable cord, unplug it at the wall outlet first.

4. Cover unused taps on extension cords by wrapping them tightly with electrical tape. Use snap-in plastic covers on unused wall or baseboard outlets.

5. Never throw water on a fire involving electricity, such as a grease fire in an electric fry pan. Instead, pull the plug first, then, use a Class C fire extinguisher (for electrical fires) or a dry chemical extinguisher. Water travels through electricity and could cause dangerous shocks.

6. Have the wiring in your kitchen checked by a qualified electrician.

With the proliferation of electrical appliances in many kitchens, older homes may not have enough circuits to handle the extra demand. Circuits can be added and divided, so don't take chances!

the pocketbook IMPACT OF POLITICS

A Penny Saved

At a time when the federal government is questioning the practicality of the penny, claiming that it costs more to make it than it is actually worth, the Commerce Department reports that it will cost the copper industry about $3.5 billion to comply with government regulations between now and 1987. The report continued that regulations already in the works could raise copper prices 43 per cent above what they would otherwise be.

Price Hike for Poor

It now costs more to be poor. Recently the government raised the income benchmark it uses to determine whether a person officially is living in poverty. An urban family of four now needs $6,700 to be poor whereas it used to take only $6,200. For rural families it's easier to be poor; they only need $5,700, up from $5,270 in 1978.

Easier Said Than Done

Uncle Sam apparently needs to call a collection agency. As of September 1978 the world owed the United States $73.7 billion, with the bulk from transactions, aid programs and loans made since World War I, according to the State Department. Considering the fact that our national budget is running at a deficit of some $30 billion, all that is needed to balance the budget is the recouping of those debts.

American Women Moonlighting

Inflation is causing many people to take second jobs. According to a UPI wire story, Dennis Sobin, the publisher of Tab Report, reports that an increasing number of housewives and secretaries apparently are picking up extra cash in their spare time by engaging in the world's oldest profession—prostitution. Sobin said that there are approximately 1.3 million prostitutes in the U.S., or about 1 per cent of American women.

Crime Doesn't Pay?

Many Americans greeted the filing date for their income tax with trepidation. But for two Americans it was a day to celebrate. On this past April 15 the six-year statute of limitations on prosecuting tax evasion cases expired. So the two, who had robbed the Eastman Kodak Co.'s Rochester, N.Y. plant of $837,567 back on March 9, 1972 had reason to smile. The statute of limitations for criminal charges had expired March 9, 1977. When asked his reaction to speculation of the bandits' celebrating their feat, Thomas E. Schoenwetter, an IRS representative in Rochester said, "I can't say I'd blame them."

Fallen Timbers

Sen. William Proxmire's Golden Fleece award recently went to the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Economic Development Administration for "mindless funding and lack of oversight." The reason for the award was the spending of $279,000 to build a community center in the woods two miles from the nearest road. The building was so remote, reports the UPI, that when it collapsed three years later, none of the 300 residents in Merrill Township, Mich. for whom the center had been built, noticed.

Exchange Students Seek American Host Families

Would your family be willing to welcome an international high school student into your home during the coming school year?

By sharing their daily life with a student from another country, the members of your family will have the unique opportunity to learn about a different culture through another person's eyes, while deepening their appreciation of their own country by introducing America to someone new.

The only requirement for becoming a host family is a willingness to accept a young person from another country into the everyday life of your family, so the student and family members can share an enriching experience. The host family provides only meals and shelter, as well as companionship and love.

YOUTH FOR UNDERSTANDING, a non-profit international student exchange organization, is now seeking U.S. host families for incoming students from 27 countries. Annually, host families throughout the United States open their homes and hearts to 7,000 international students, aged 14 through 18, who will be spending eleven months as "ambassadors of friendship" between diverse nations and cultures.

YOUTH FOR UNDERSTANDING received funds from the U.S. State Department in support of its efforts to promote world citizenship and understanding through teenage student exchange opportunities. YOUTH FOR UNDERSTANDING just received endorsement from the Senate of the State of Texas.

Kelly's Heroes

by Joe Kelly

by Joe Kelly

Help! I've been back from vacation for two weeks and I'm ready for another one. The reason is simple; over the weekend, starting Thursday, my wife and I painted a bedroom that badly needed it, worked in the yard and did many other little odds and ends that needed doing.

Anyway, what with the 100 degree heat, it made us think kindly of those nights under blankets, when barely opened windows muffled the sounds of the frogs croaking. Even the frogs slowed down in the cool weather.

This is an odds and ends collection from vacation, skipping the NFIB conference in Washington. We drove through a lot of rain east of Dallas, primarily in Arkansas and Tennessee. Rivers were flooded and they apparently had been having heavy rains for some time.

Arkansas roads are getting back to what they used to be, which was a disappointment, because L-30 was a beautiful Interstate when first finished. It, like most interstates, has had so much traffic that it is breaking up and many states are not able, or won't, repair the roads. And that was true most of the way through those states, Pennsylvania, parts of New York, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan.

One day when Joe and I were at Cold Brook, we split up so each would have better fishing. I was in the lead and finally, about noon, I came to one of my favorite areas. The brook is covered with trees and has fast water. It slides into a pool around a bend and then goes to one of the finest natural holes anywhere.

I pulled a couple of trout out of the fast water and then found a comfortable spot on the sandy area alongside the brook. I waited for Joe until hunger pangs forced me to open the sandwiches. Still no Joe.

As I sat there, my back to the woods, I suddenly looked up just as a huge hawk, or owl, soared across a little under treetop height. It had huge wings and soared gracefully until it disappeared. I wasn't startled, although I was surprised, since I had never seen one so close on the brook at any time.

Later, when Joe caught up, I asked if he had seen it. He hadn't. Still later, near the end of our fishing day, we were not far apart and the same bird, I think, flew right over both of us. All Joe saw was the shadow.

I told Jim Whitelaw about it later on and he nodded his head. He figured it probably was an owl. He said that he had had them soar within a few inches of his head as he sat as I had been sitting.

Jim had written that a beaver had done a lot of damage to the trees around Pine Pond and, the Sunday we fished there, he showed me where the industrious beast had chewed down a lot of trees.

There was no sign of the beaver and apparently, a stary, it had left. Later, when we visited Abby Williams, she told us that the beaver had taken up residence on Owl Pond, "he pond." So, now she had both a beaver and an otter to watch, along with ducks.

Abby told us, when we visited her one day, that they had been visited last fall by both a pretty good sized black bear and also a wildcat. She fired five shots over the head of the bear before it finally casually ambled off. It later was seen farther down the trail towards the state locks.

As for the wildcat, Lynn and I had heard one two years ago at Pine Pond. Abby said that she looked out about twilight one night, but didn't see it right away. "You know," she declared, "when you live in the woods you develop a sense of feeling. I didn't think it looked right, but I didn't know what it was. Then I saw it. It was just sitting there, not moving." Another shot over his head and the cat took off.

As for her "coon cats," she gave us a sequel. I had been curious for two years as to what happened. She told us.

One of the cats died, one was given to a family in Saranac Lake and a relative had taken six to a pet shop in Plattsburgh some 60 miles away.

As a prelude to what follows, I asked an Andrews veterinarian two years ago if it was possible to cross a cat and a raccoon.

"Yes, I guess it's possible," he said, "but you'd probably wind up with a pretty mean cat."

Abby said that the "coon cat" had taken to a young boy whose family had received the one in Saranac Lake. I haven't seen it," she said, "but I've heard that the cat is mean and won't let the boys' parents even go in the bedroom with the boy."

There wasn't much apparent wildlife around Jim's cabin, although it's worthy of note that when Joe left the fish heads and entrails on a long, they were gone the next day. The raccoon obviously was around.

We were coming up the trail late one rainy afternoon towards the end of our stay and just had time to see a whitetail deer flash his flag and leap casually through the woods away from us. At night we could hear owls at Pine Pond, but none around Oseetah Pond. The usual assortment of chipmunks and red squirrels played around the camp, of course.

As mentioned last week, there was little traffic in the area and it was especially quiet after 5 p.m., when the last fishing boat started back to town. People weren't staying at Pine Pond, either, which cut down on the traffic.

So, after the "tourists" took off for the night, we had the area to ourselves. You had the feeling, even being close to the water, that you were deep in the wilderness. And, when you come right down to it, we were. For all the boats and traffic, it is the wilds and the generally unseen animals shared it with us.

"The art of being wise is the art of knowing what to overlook."

The Black Presence: In 1974 the population of Gramercy, Louisiana, was 46 percent black; the general labor force 39 percent black. Yet at the Kaiser Aluminum Co. plant there, only 2 percent of the 290 skilled craft workers were black, and none were women. Blacks held less than 15 percent of the nonskilled jobs at the plant, and most of them had been hired since 1969, when the company first embarked on a plan to recruit non-white workers.

Before 1974, Kaiser had refused to institute on-the-job training to upgrade the skills of its work force, and instead hired its craftsmen from outside the plant. At the prodding of the union, the company agreed in 1974 to institute a training program to provide an opportunity for its laborers to upgrade their skills.

States Frank Askin, a professor of law at Rutgers University Law School in Newark, N.M. "if access to the training program had followed strict seniority, the recently hired black workers would have had little chance to take part. Thus, the company agreed that separate seniority lists of eligible white and minority workers be maintained, and that applicants to the program be admitted alternately from the two lists. The minority list also included women, who were targeted to receive 5 percent of the trainee slots."

The system was designed to self-destruct when the percentage of black skilled workers at the plant approached their percentage in the labor force. At the time Brian Weber filed the suit that resulted in a landmark decision recently by the U.S. Supreme Court, 13 trainees had been hired for the program—six whites and seven blacks. Since Weber was not eligible for one of the openings for whites, he complained that black workers with less seniority were being preferred, on the basis of race.

This decision, believes Prof. Askin may be the court's most important in the area of race relations since Brown vs Board of Education in 1954, when public school segregation was outlawed. It sets the nation's legal system firmly against continuation of this country's own unique apartheid system of racial separation and in favor of programs designed to bring minorities into full and equal participation in the American mainstream.

The Brian Weber Decision (Con) "The decision that had the effect of giving priority in job training to blacks with less seniority than whites has the dreadful consequence of making the character of one motivation central in deciding whether or not he has broken the law forbidding preference by race." End of quote from Carl Cohen, professor of philosophy at the University of Michigan. He defines "racism" as the favoring or disfavoring of races, giving advantages to persons or imposing handicaps on persons simply because of their race.

Recent great quotes: "Black supporters of direct election now understand that the electoral college flies in the face of '1 man, 1 vote'— that in 1968, 616,000 people in Connecticut who gave Hubert Humphrey eight electoral votes were wiped out by 261,000 people in S. Carolina who gave Richard Nixon eight electoral votes. In 1976 blacks voted overwhelmingly for Jimmy Carter in Illinois, Indiana, Michigan and California—but every black vote was nullified, because every electoral vote in these states went to Jerry Ford." Black columnist Carl Rowan in Dallas A.M. News.

Former California Governor, Ronald Reagan recently appeared in Tulsa, Okla. to speak to the black-oriented National Newspaper Publishers Association. His reviews were somewhat mixed, according to our bellringer sources. Reagan gave what many attending considered a typically conservative Republican speech, condemning big government, minimum wage laws and the welfare system. Observers speculated that Reagan appeared at the convention not to try to woo the black publishers of the country, but simply to use the occasion to speak to his already faithful following.

C. Rodger Wilson, general chairman of the Kappa "Fine 79" Coordinating Committee, has announced that plans are nearing completion for the 62nd Grand Chapter meeting of the Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity, August 5-10, 1979, with the Chicago alumni and Theta Zeta Chapters as host at the Conrad Hilton in Chicago. Kappa Alpha Psi was founded in 1911 to foster all around achievement and to combat social distance, commonly experienced then throught America. To be honored include Mayor Thomas Bradley of Los Angeles, Rev. Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia and Marion Anderson, world renowned former contralto, (retired).

WATER FACTS AND FANCIES

Little Leaks Are Big Drains
A slowly dripping faucet can waste 15 to 20 gallons a day.

Faucets are the second greatest source of leaks. (Toilets are No. 1.) The American Water Works Association suggests you check all faucets in the house once or twice a year. Worn washers, the most common cause of leaks, are easy to replace.

Turn off the water supply line, then take apart the faucet. For more complicated fixtures, consult a good household do-it-yourself book.

Be sure that the new washer is the right size. The washer has to spread out to the edges of the valve stem when screwed down. If the faucet still leaks, you may need a plumber to find the problem.

Lever-controlled faucets are just as easy to disassemble and repair. Replacement parts can be found at hardware or plumbing stores.

Repairing drippy faucets is one of the simple things we can do to prevent unnecessary drains on our water supply—and on our budgets.

HOW TO CUT YOUR DRIVING BY 15 MILES A WEEK

President Carter has asked us all to drive 15 miles less every week. And if you're like most drivers, you can save 15 miles—and probably a lot more—just by changing your driving habits and planning ahead. Here are some easy tips to help you save 15 miles a week:

Set aside one day a week as your "car-free" day.

Is there one day each week when you could leave your car at home and find other ways to get where you want to go?

Join a work pool, school pool or shopping pool.

Carpooling can save you a lot of miles and money—as much as $650 in gas every year.

Trim your driving by two miles a day.

Keep a street map handy to be sure you're taking the shortest routes. Try to run errands closer to home.

Before you grab your car keys, think ahead.

How many trips could you combine? Are you sure each trip is necessary?

Ride with someone who's already on the road—the bus driver.

Check out your local bus system and let someone else do the driving.
