Residents Warned To Watch Out For Stinging Tree Moths

A Megalopie apereularis...for those of you who don't have an entomology textbook handy...is a moth, commonly called "asp" in the larval stage.

These brown or grey, semi-crescent shaped larvae may become extremely abundant, feeding on foliage of a variety of trees and shrubs. They're making their annual appearance in Texas now, and will be noticeable until months of late fall.

Everyone should familiarize themselves with the appearance and medical importance of these stinging caterpillars. Children, in particular, should be warned to avoid them.

Individual reaction to the stings varies greatly, dependent upon many factors such as age, sensitivity status, size of caterpillar, area of skin involved, and the amount of pressure on contact.

A mature larva dropping from a tree into a person's shirt or blouse and mashed against the skin in several places before being retrieved would likely cause a much more painful condition than the simple act of brushing an exposed arm or leg against a small specimen.

A burning pain is felt almost immediately on contact. Small, raised, whitish spots appear, later becoming red. The inflamed area may spread for several inches, accompanied by swelling.

The resulting skin reaction frequently lasts for days. Further systemic symptoms may arise of an allergic nature.

Hollow hairs are filled with poison supplied from poison gland cells opening directly to the hairs. The tips of the hair or spine can readily penetrate the skin and break off.

The "buck moth" is another stinging caterpillar common to oak trees as well as some other trees, often stepped on by barefoot children.

Leave the puss caterpillar and "buck moth" alone. For while they probably won't kill you, a disturbed system isn't something to be taken lightly.

A spread of lead arsenate (two tablespoons per gallon of water) or 50 per cent wettable DDT (two tablespoons per gallon of water) will get rid of them for you. (A weekly feature of the Public Health Education Division, Texas State Department of Health.)

OUTDOORS IN TEXAS

We look to the advent of spring as something beautiful but it's more than that.

Trees that bloom in the spring also produce food and shelter.

Much of Texas is rolling plains with some desert and mountainous areas. Fortunately for the outdoorsman, we still have millions of acres of trees throughout the state. And this timberland is as important to wildlife as are our mountains and our plains.

The average person doesn't realize the vast forest resources within the boundaries of Texas. For instance: Texas' forest lands cover 22,033,900 acres, more than 55 per cent forested. Commercial forests in the state reach the staggering total of 2,171,900 acres, with a saw-wood volume of 27,239,300,000 board feet.

These Texas timberlands grow wood for some 1,000 mills and factories that provide full-time jobs for 43,000 persons. They earn in excess of $138,000,000 per year and the goods they produce are valued at over a half billion dollars.

These are values in cold dollars and cents. Tree is a renewable resource. They continue to grow and new forests can be brought along to take the place of those consumed by the industry.

An interesting feature of this tremendous forest area is that Harris County has more than a million acres of forest land. Yet the largest city in the South—Houston—the county seat of Harris County, has more than a million population. Houston County, in East Texas, is second in forest area with 88,400 acres. Thus we have the picture that forests unfold in the economy of Texas. Too few, however, realize the great benefits to our wildlife, which also is a renewable resource.

The East Texas forest land once was haven for wildlife. There were plenty of deer, turkey, bear and smaller game. The Indians didn't destroy it. The white man did.

There were game outlaws throughout the forest lands of East Texas. They poached. They killed game out of season. They killed more than the bag limit and were responsible for many other outrages against wildlife.

However, their's were not the only sins.

Many of the land owners, looking first to the dollar, with no eye on posterity, cut down hardwoods, to raise more pine. As a result the crop of mast disappeared on thousands of acres of land. There was no food for the wildlife.

Unfortunately, some of these land owners were some of the major ones. They could see no possibilities in anything but tall pines.

And they weren't too particular about polluting the streams, either. They were responsible for killing off of many fish.

It has been only within the last few years that many land owners have been sold on the idea that hardwood and pine can grow on the same area, without harming each other. Now there is a comeback in much of the hardwood area.

This is a result of work being carried on by the U. S. Forest Service and the State Forest Service and the Game and Fish Commission. None of it would have been possible, however, without the full cooperation of all the land owners.

More than two-thirds of all the forest land in Texas is held in tracts of less than 5,000 acres. Farmers own some 21 per cent of all the forest land in Texas. The governments, state and federal, own only about 7 per cent. Forest industries own another 27 per cent. All of which means that some 45 per cent of the forest area is held by other private owners.

Another tremendous hazard to wildlife of Texas forests is fire.

Experts estimate that more than 99 per cent of all forest fires are man-made. Man will burn off thousands of acres of timber each year and in turn destroy a great deal of wildlife.

Unfortunately many of these fires are caused by carelessness. Others have been set by responsible persons, for one reason or another. Whatever the cause—wild life suffers most.

It is much easier to grow a tree than it is to reproduce wildlife. We can go to other areas and buy a thousand seedlings and re-store a piece of property. They will stay there and grow. But with wildlife it is entirely different.

Conservation Is Our Responsibility

by Ronnie Johnson

Some two hundred years ago the colonists began cultivating the soil of the eastern seaboard. They found it was very rich and produced an abundance of products. For many years they took from the land not realizing that it would soon be depleted and useless to them anymore. As it was depleted, they began moving westward, cutting trees, clearing the forests, and plowing the land. They did not know the land they had left behind would be susceptible to the wind, rain, and other forms of erosion that would completely decrease its value.

Misuse of the soil continued in the 1930's. During World War I, the price of wheat raised considerably. This encouraged the ranchers to plow up their grassland and sow wheat. Wheat did not protect the soil, and as a result it was blown away. When hard rains came, it was washed away.

Millions of dollars worth of topsoil have been lost as a result of wind and water erosion. Statistics have proven that it takes one hundred years to build one inch of topsoil. This one inch can be lost in less than ten years if the land is not cared for properly.

This should paint a sad picture in the mind of every American citizen. Without the soil, very little can be accomplished. Our nation depends either directly or indirectly upon the soil or its progress. Let us ask ourselves this question: what will our nation do when our soil has been completely destroyed? It is time the farmers of this community and our nation considered this problem seriously. They should consult their local county agent or soil conservation specialist to learn exactly what their soil needs and how to stop its erosion.

Crop rotation is a sound practice to increase the mineral value and control the ever-present problem of erosion. During the winter a good cover-crop should be planted to stop erosion during the late-winter months. Proper terracing and contouring of the land will stop the water erosion.

I believe it can be truthfully said that soil conservation is a problem that everyone should be interested in and should do all in his power to help promote it.

Conservation is something that everybody has to exercise. I believe that everybody is responsible for conservation, whether it is forest conservation, soil conservation, wildlife conservation or any kind. Everybody is responsible for the conservation of their environment. It is the duty of every individual to engage in the project of conservation to make this world a better place to live.

The Weldon Bradley home and office and the Howard Bridges home are being repaired and rebuilt. A new roof will be put on the Howard Bridges home. Roy Lilley is repairing the damage to his well and will probably build back as soon as adequate plans can be found and money obtained. Plans are being made to replace the store as soon as possible and the residence at the store. No word has been received about the gin or housing projects destroyed there. Earl Phelan has made no definite plans. The Jerry James have their new house moved in already.

NEWS from the High Plains
Research Foundation

"Irrigation efficiency is one of the answers to profitable cotton production," James Valliant, Assistant Water Engineer at the High Plains Research Foundation, stated in the 1959 research reports just released to supporters of the Foundation.

Irrigation applied preplant and at peak bloom produced the best grade and highest income in 1959. Production from this irrigation method ranged from 85.3 to 94.3 pounds of lint per acre inch of supplemental water applied.

The return from the preplant, peak bloom method of irrigation ranged from $161.00 to $181.00 per acre. Pumping costs were figured at $6.00 per acre foot at Halfway. Some authorities, however, report this cost as high as $9.00 per acre foot.

These results indicate that the time of application, not the total amount of irrigation water applied, controls dollar returns from irrigated cotton.

Cotton irrigated at a total of 17.2 and 21.5 inches returned less income in 1959 than the 8.6 inches applied in the preplant, peak bloom method.

From these results it is evident that a more profitable cotton crop can be grown with less water, less labor, and less pumping costs in a year like 1959. Time of irrigation and fertility level are two of the major controlling factors in irrigated cotton profits.

"This experiment will be conducted over a period of several years before definite conclusions can be made regarding the recommended irrigation methods and fertility levels netted for most efficient cotton production," Mr. Valliant said.

One of the most wasteful practices in the use of irrigation water is applying this water to land having slopes of 1-3 per cent with the rows running down the slope. To illustrate this fact, water studies are being conducted at the High Plains Research Foundation comparing water usage on sloping land to a benched area of same acreage.

An 8-row bench 726 feet in length and two areas of similar dimensions running down the slope were selected for this study. During

The parental transfer of pupils from one district to another before the June 1 deadline also transfers the per capita funds for the students involved. Per capita money cannot be transferred after June 1. Applications for transfer of students should be filled in the office of the county school superintendent.

preplant irrigation, 55,000 gallons or 4.6 inches of irrigation water were applied to the bench. This same number of gallons was applied to one of the sloping areas, but 12,800 gal. or 1.06 inches were lost in run-off, and the moisture was not sufficient. On the remaining sloping area, irrigation water was applied until the soil was sufficiently moist. Public Schools Receive Small Share Of State Tax Dollars Today

Austin, Texas — Texas now spends a smaller share of its State tax dollar on public schools than it did ten years ago, the first year of sweeping changes in school financing under the Gilmer-Aikin school laws.

This is one of the striking facts documented in the latest edition of "Trends," annual statistical research publication from the Texas State Teachers Association.

This year's report covers the first ten years of experience with the Gilmer-Aikin Minimum Foundation School Program. Public school expenditures are back where they were in 1948-49, percentage-wise, the year before Gilmer-Aikin improvements went into effect, the report shows. In 1948-49 the State spent 27.19 cents of each dollar for public schools. In 1949-50, the first Gilmer-Aikin year, the figure rose abruptly to 29.67 cents. Last year, in 1958-59, public schools got 27.68 cents of each dollar spent by the State, or two cents less than ten years ago.

Like other State services, the total number of dollars spent for education has increased. But other State expenditures have increased at a faster pace, the figures indicate.

Much of the increased cost of schools, the research shows, has been due to the increased number of school-age children, plus the fact that they are attending school more.

"Trends" points out these significant changes in the last ten years: Scholastic population (5-17 years of age), up 33.6 per cent; enrollment, up 46 per cent; and average daily attendance, up 51 per cent. To teach the 51 per cent more children in school, the total number of teachers has increased 49.4 per cent.

The figures are:
Scholastics: Up from 1,554,758 to 2,077,901.
Enrollment: Up from 1,349,804 to 1,971,408.
ADA: Up from 1,151,971 to 1,739,910.
No. of teachers: Up from 74,934 to 82,088.

With 2,168,000 school-age children for the 1959-60 school year, this means more than 1,795,000 children in school every day.
