WJH Becomes Middle School

Watson Junior High School is implementing significant and exciting changes toward a middle school concept for the 1992-93 school year. A middle school combines the best in educational methods with an understanding of the unique needs of adolescents. It bridges the gap between the close supervision and structure of elementary school and the demands of high school. A combination of academic teaming among teachers at each grade level and provision of an advisory period for all students will create a climate within which students experience academic success along with an improved sense of self esteem. Academic teaching teams will consist of language arts, math social studies and science teachers. Each term will have a daily team planning period for the purpose of planning instruction, Coordinating curriculum, and assessing student success. This structure enables teams to improve instruction through a better understanding of individual student needs.

An advisory program is designed to promote successful academic habits, improved interpersonal relationships, and positive self-esteem among students. A daily thirty minute period will provide planned lessons in specific social and study skills. UIL preparation, TAAS remediation tutorials, and assignment completion are among activities that will also occur during this time.

Including academic teaming and advisory periods in Watson Junior High will provide a smoother transition from elementary school to high school. The ultimate goal is to provide an educational setting that best meets the needs of adolescent students. establishment of a supportive environment, accompanied by high expectations, will produce positive results in student achievement and improved attitudes toward learning.

Parents and interested community members are invited to attend an informational program to learn more about these programs on May 12 at 7 p.m. in the High School Cafeteria. The staff will explain the program and its benefits for students in greater detail.

Senior Citizens Program

Need Donations, Volunteers

By Glenn Williams
President Of Meals On Wheels, Inc.

It appears that our Senior Citizens Program is fast approaching what might be a crisis situation in three areas. Though this may be temporary, we are badly in need of assistance.

(1) We need more utilization of the Senior Citizens Van. It is available to transport seniors (anyone who is at least 60 years old) for nearly any needed purpose--such as going to the doctor, taking veterans to the Veterans Hospital, providing a ride to and from the Lubbock airport; and on a local level, going to the Post Office, the grocery store, to pay utility bills, to the barber and beauty shops, etc. However, we CANNOT take people out of town to shop. Presently our utilization is so low that the question arises as to how long it will be cost effective. Therefore any of you seniors that can use the service, are encouraged to do so. To schedule a ride you may call Edd Harp at 272-4693, or Sharon Plott at 272-3647.

(2) The Meals On Wheels program is virtually out of money. We have barely enough to operate one more month. This is because SPAG has not yet reimbursed us as we had expected, and as they probably will sometime later. Also, the number of subscribers has suddenly increased, which makes the cost much greater than we had anticipated. Any of the churches, other organizations or individuals that can make contributions to keep the program alive, we urgently ask that

Search Continues For Five Year Old Shawn Lea

Following an intensive search, on the ground and in the air, by the Earth Police Department both Thursday night and Friday reaped few clues as to the whereabouts of five year old Shawn Lea Perry. Shawn who has been missing since Thursday was last seen about 7 p.m. playing near an abandoned church in the 400 block of First Street, which is next door to her home.

Shawn is described as weighing about 40-pounds and has long blond hair, hazel eyes and two silver-capped front teeth. When last seen she was wearing black sweat pants with red paint on them and a short sleeved T-shirt with red and brown stripes.

Following Friday's all-day search, the child's disappearance has been labeled an abduction, according to Earth Police Chief Curtis Coffman.

A tracker dog picked up Shawn's scent around her home and the church but nowhere else in the neighborhood, Friday, according to Tracy Bridges, Lamb County Sheriff's Department deputy in Earth.

The interior of the abandoned church was checked as well as houses and vehicles in the neighborhood as well as abandoned houses that scatter the area.

Earth residents have assisted in the almost around the clock search.

Helicopter and airplane searchers were called in, it was feared the child had wandered near a cluster of cesspools about three blocks from her home, according to Bridges.

With the status of the child's case has turned from a missing person to an abduction.

"Right now we're stuck in the mud," Bridges said. "The only

Gov. Richards Proclaims EMS Week

In support of a special resolution passed April 11 by the Texas Board of Health, Gov. Ann Richards has proclaimed May 10-16 Texas EMS Week. The observance coincides with National EMS Week proclaimed by Congress. This year's theme for the observance, "EMS--It Starts With You," reflects each citizen's responsibility for emergency medical services--injury prevention, emergency response, first responder training and citizen support of EMS. Every year in Texas, emergency medical service personnel respond to more than a million calls for help. "Most of those calls come from alert, concerned citizens who know the importance of immediate care in emergencies," said Gene Weatherall, chief of the TDH's Bureau of Emergency Management. The bureau licenses some 1,250 EMS services and "first responder" groups, and certifies some 40,000 emergency care attendants, emergency medical technicians, paramedics, firefighters and others. The bureau also offers training, approves equipment and helps secure financial support for local emergency units.

During the week, EMS personnel throughout the state will stress public awareness of how and when EMS should be called. Public service announcements and activities will underscore strategies for injury and illness prevention.

Weatherall said that public information and education materials on all aspects of EMS are available from the Bureau of Emergency Management, at 512-458-7550.

Among the available pamphlets, guidebooks and posters are information on careers in EMS as well as volunteer participation and training. "Nearly half the people who work in EMS are volunteers," Weatherall said.

Screwworm Outbreak Within 200 Miles of Border

A new case of screwworms in the state of Tamaulipas in the Republic of Mexico has moved the eradication battle to within 200 miles of the Texas border and brought to 40 the number of cases in that country.

Program officials with the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) confirmed a case was found Monday in the Aldama area just below the Tropic of Cancer near the Mexican coastline.

Mexican program officials now have 300 filed inspectors specifically working to define the extent of the outbreak, said Dr. Cliff Hoelscher, an entomologist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. The new case was reported about 800 miles north of cases found this winter in the southern states of Chiapas, Tabasco and Campeche.

"Many of the field inspectors are still in the Yucatan," Hoelscher said. "What's frightening is that as the inspectors move farther out into the country, they find more cases."

Additionally, 95 million sterile screwworm flies per week are being dropped from airplanes in the infested areas to eradicate the outbreak. The sterile flies disrupt the reproduction cycle of the insect.

The current screwworm outbreak in Mexico was initially detected on January 17 and has continued to spread.

The outbreak is now being attributed to the December importation of cattle from Honduras, Nicaragua and El Salvador--all infected countries south of Mexico--for meat, he said. The cattle were to go directly to slaughtering facilities, but thinner ones were shipped to other parts of Mexico to be fattened.

The screwworm and its flesh-eating larvae have been the scourge of the livestock industry for generations, accounting for $250 million in annual losses in the United States during the 1950s and 1960s. Screwworms were finally eradicated in Texas in 1982.

"The public must remember this pest attacks both livestock and pets, with some cases in Mexico being reported from dogs," Hoelscher said.

The entomologist said he had several concerns about the Aldama outbreak. That region is a prime livestock production area. In the screwworm battle of the early 1980s, it took almost three years longer to eradicate the screwworms from that region than any other area, he said.

"The more livestock you have, the more hosts you have. Eradication is harder," he said.

Additionally, studies have shown screwworm flies can travel great distances on wind currents, up to 100 miles from their original domain, he said.

"Adult screwworms are extremely strong fliers and are a real threat to the Texas livestock industry," Hoelscher said.

Also, wetter--than-normal conditions during the winter and spring contribute to higher fly populations, he said. Eggs do not hatch as well in hot and dry weather, he said.

All livestock owners are urged to inspect animals carefully for the presence of blow fly larvae and send in suspect samples for positive identification.

"Ranchers or business operations importing cattle from Mexico to Texas must use caution and follow quarantine procedures to avoid the accidental importation of screwworm infested animals," he said.

Texas ranchers are urged to treat all wounded animals and keep veterinary practices that cause a break in the animal's skin to a minimum, he added.

Mailing kits for sending in samples of suspected larvae for laboratory identification are available from most county Extension service agents. All samples should be sent to the USDA-APHIS Veterinary Services Screwworm Identification Lab, Box 969, Mission, TX 78572, telephone 512-580-7360.

Several members brought food for the refreshments for the May 5 meeting. Our Noble Grand Mary Ann last week was doing her very specialty, seeing after her father in law, trying to make him more comfortable at the time of his illness. He may soon be feeling much better. So glad to see her back.

Our V.G. Doris was ill tonight. Mickey is not feeling well.

There were 12 members present. June read a letter from Pat. So glad to hear from her. We sure miss those smiles and hugs from the members that are so far away or members that are not present for some reason. Sandi, Pat and Lena, how many grocery donation tickets do you want? We all can sure make place for groceries. Good Luck to two drawings May 30. Proceeds go to the Building Fund.

Evidence and Facts on Cancer Prevention

There are three types of studies upon which the guidelines are based: epidemiological and clinical studies of humans, and laboratory animal studies. Since each type of study has specific strengths and weaknesses, the Society reviewed the results of all three before drawing conclusions.

The epidemiological studies, also called populations studies, are based on comparisons of dietary intake and disease rates in different countries or in defined groups within the same country. The findings from these studies may be difficult to extrapolate to other populations with different dietary habits, environment, or genetic backgrounds.

Unlike epidemiological studies, animal studies allow for control of the subjects' diet, environment and genetic background. A major weakness of this type of study is the uncertainty of applicability to humans.

Clinical studies, which intervene and place the subjects on a specific diet, can examine the diet's relationship with subsequent disease. The long exposure time for diet to produce chronic diseases in adults is a handicap in designing clinical nutritional studies.

Association Versus Causation

It is important to distinguish between association and causation in the area of cancer and nutrition. Causation of cancer is extremely difficult to establish, so association is often used to imply probability of causation. Association means that a dietary factor (or lack of the factor) and a specific cancer occur together consistently after other variables have been controlled. Knowledge of the associations between foods and disease are what enable people to reduce their risks for cancers.

Unfortunately, no concrete dietary advice can be given that will guarantee prevention of any specific human cancer in any given individual. The American Cancer Society nonetheless believes that there is sufficient inferential information to make recommendations about nutrition that are likely to provide some measure of reducing cancer risk.

Make A Master Shopping List For Your Family

By A. Carman Clark

Making a master shopping list that fits your family's eating, living and cleaning habits is one way to save time at the market. This kind of personal list will also help avoid the frustration caused by running out of items.

Take advantage of copy machines. Print out a dozen copies of your family master list--the things you've found you want to have on hand in the kitchen, bathroom and laundry, things you know you need to replenish each week or each month. Tape one copy of this list where it will be seen and can be checked each day--on the back of a cupboard door that's opened frequently or fastened on the front of the refrigerator with magnets.

Each time any family member notices that a cereal is getting low, the tea bags are almost gone, the "back up" jar of mayonnaise has been opened or the last roll of paper towels is in use, the master list needs only a check beside that item. Whoever is going to do the marketing can carry off that list and put up a fresh copy for the coming week.

A master shopping list may work best for you if the items are separated into categories: Produce, Frozen Foods, Meat, Dairy, Bakery, Juices, Canned Goods, Paper Products and Cleaning and Personal Items. You might save time by writing your list according to the layout of the market where you usually shop or by your preferred pattern of marketing with dairy and frozen foods picked up last.

Brand name preferences can be written on the master list. So can price limits set by your family's spending plan.

Some items on a family marketing list will change with the seasons. Paper plates in June. Popcorn in November. Fads will come and go--frozen pizzas, raisin bars and green spaghetti. You may want to foster change by trying a new food each week--bulgur wheat, black beans, lentils, new cheeses. Let technology serve you in small as well as big ways. A photo copy of a shopping list which fits your style of living and is kept handy, in sight of all family members, requires only checks. With practice, you may never find any cupboard bare.

Life is like a school of gladiators, where men live and fight one another.

Dairy Queen Contributes To

MAC Committee

Margie Hawkins, area supervisor for Dairy Queen, recently received a letter stating that Dairy Queen will participate in a new state wide Children's Network Telethon promotion.

"This promotion involves selling the "Miracle Meal", Beef Country Basket (4 finger) and a 16 oz. Coke, for the sale price of $2.99," said Ms. Hawkins. "For each meal that we sell, 50 cents will be donated to the CMNT. Another 50 cents, per meal, will be donated to the Muleshoe Activity Committee and will be used right here in Muleshoe."

The sale which began on May 4 will continue through May 24. The state wide promotion will involve competition between stores to see which stores sell the most miracle meals.

The top selling store will receive $500.00 to be distributed among the store employees and free trips for two for both the store manager and the store operator (area supervisor) to Disneyland.

There are also prizes for different size stores in three different categories. Winners in each of these categories will receive $500.00 to be distributed among the store employees and free trips for two for both the store manager and the store operator (store supervisor) to the Fiesta Texas theme park in San Antonio.

heat stroke to chemical dependency, psychiatric problems, rehabilitation or home health services.

"Hospitals are good community citizens and major employers, and health care workers are dedicated, caring professionals," Richards states in the proclamation. "It is fitting that we salute Texas hospitals and their employees for the around-the-clock care they provide. We should recognize Texans across the state who support hospitals by volunteering their time, using hospital services and programs, and making charitable contributions."

Texas Hospital Week is a time to recognize the dedicated people who deliver hospital services to Texans, said Terry Townsend, CAE, president of the Texas Hospital Association.

"The hospital's mission can be accomplished only by a team approach, which includes doctors, hospital employees, volunteers, board members and benefactors," Townsend said. "All team members play a vital role in achieving the overall goal of providing the patient with quality health care service."

Texas Hospital Week is celebrated in conjunction with National Hospital Week which originated in 1921. A hospital magazine editor selected May 12, Florence Nightingale's birthdate, as a special day for communities to get to know their hospitals, in 1924, the American Hospital Association assumed sponsorship of National Hospital Week, and in 1953 it extended the celebration to National Hospital Week.

Texas Hospital Week is sponsored by the Texas Hospital Association, the Austin-based trade association that represents 81 percent of Texas hospitals.

MOTHER

It is so important that a child feel secure and loved the first weeks and months of its life. Our foremost authorities say that if a child's spiritual and emotional welfare is neglected in the early weeks of life, there is a great chance of permanent damage to its personality growth.

Therefore, on this day, we honor not only the beloved mothers of our adults and youth, but the very young mother who has both the tremendous responsibility and the precious opportunity to mold the life and character of the very young child. May she seek early God's help, who in the person of the Son, said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me."

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny; the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.
