Jesus Teaches Humility, Forgiveness

WE NEED TO BECOME AS LITTLE CHILDREN, SAID CHRIST

Beripture-Matthew 6:14; 18.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL

THIS LESSON on the need for humility and a forgiving spirit is a timely one. In the last 20 years we have seen men rise from obscurity to great power. It is possible that they were humble n in the beginning, but with great ambitions.

When they gained power they exercised it as if they were omni-potent—even as God. They premed to exercise the power of life and death over their fellow creatures, persecuting and slaughtering innocent millions. They brought on a great war in which millions more were killed-civilians as well as soldiers, and many more were injured or made home-

What a difference it would have made if they had followed Jesus' teaching, and used the power they gained for good instead of evil! Even the disciples, those closest to our Lord, craved to be greater than their fellows, and asked Jesus, "Who is the greatSo much for the "humble and but true that some of our bitter-est quarrels and least forgiving spirits often are those in church groups. We all profess to follow the same Lord and acknowledge the same God, our Father. Let us all reread Christ's teaching on forgiveness. He said that if your brother trespassed against you, you should go to him and tak the matter over. If you could make the other see where his fault lay, you have "gained thy Jesus taught, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heav-enly Father will also forgive you." How can we expect forgiveness if we do not acknowledge that we too have sinned, and forgive others, humbly asking our heav-enly Father to forgive us?

Further Jesus said, that "Whos shall offend one of these little ones which believe in Me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." Children were beloved by our Master.

Jesus further illustrated His lesson by telling a parable of a man who had 100 sheep, but one went astray and was lost. Would not the man leave the 99 sheep and diligently seek the strayed one until he found him? Then would he not rejoice more over that one that might have been lost forever, than over the 99 who

"It must be and can be a peace ful process," he said. do not believe that results can be obtained by moral pressures, by the weight of propaganda, just do not know what they are talking

The following night, in a speech at Scranton, Pa., Kennan said "it is right that individual Americans" should promote their beliefs, and he spoke of the ultimate victory of "the competitive power of free dom in the struggle of ideas."

Kennan argued, however, against "doing anything at the govern-mental level that purports to affect directly the governmental sys-tem in another country." He declared that would be inconsistent with America's international obligations, its diplomatic Telations and its membership in the United Nations and could "involve us in seavy responsibilities."

After Kennan spoke, news reports pointed out an apparent poli-cy conflict between his ideas and hose of the new State Department

On learning that this contrast was being drawn, Kennan is unlerstood to have sent a note to Dulles explaining that his speech had been written and cleared in the State Department several days in advance of Dulles' appearance before the Senate committee and thus could not have been directed at what Dulles said there.

Next Monday, January 26, the telephone business office will open in new quarters at 205 East Fourth Street, around the corner on the south side of the present telephone building, for customers who wish to discuss their telephone servtoe or pay bitts in person.

The new office provides more room than our present quarters, and is conveniently located near the center of the Big Spring business district. In addition, it has been newly remodeled and attractively furnished, so that customers may transact telephone business in comfortable, upto-date surroundings.

We think you will like the new location, and the move will help us to continue to furnish good, dependable telephone service here.

It Is Of Questionable Wisdom To Change The Laws To Fit One Man

By competence, experience, moral fitness and in every other respect Charles E. Wilson is eminently well qualified to be secretary of the Department of Defense, and probably would make a good

But under the laws of the land he cannot qualify for that post unless he disposes of the $2.5 million interest he has in the corporation he heads, General Mo-

Congress quite properly held up this ap pointment until the issue is clarified (1) by Mr. Wilson's getting rid of his corporate interest, or (2) changing the law which has been on the statute books for 75 years, in one form or another.

It is a good law. It was passed as a result of the scandal and corruption that grew out of the Grant administration. It forbids any official of the government, "directly or indirectly," having anything to do with the award of a government contract with a firm, corporation or part-terest. GM is the biggest of all government contractors.

Congress was quite right in raising the issue, and it seems to us it would be a mistake, with serious consequences to the administration, for Congress to change the law to fit Mr. Wilson's special needs. Indeed, it is questionable, under the circumstances, if Mr. Wilson should be confirmed even if he divested himself of his GM interest at this late date.

The surprising thing is that the matter of Mr. Wilson's corporate interest had not been clarified before his nomination. The fact that he commented, in effect, that what is good for the government is good for GM, and what is good for GM is good for the government" did nothing to smooth the way for his confirmation by Congress.

It would be unfortunate if the Wilson affair should shadow the opening days of the new administration, or result in a congressional Donnybrook.

Our Fellow Americans Tell Us A Thing Or So About Making Coffee

A group of Brazilian students at the University of Southern California recently set complacent Norte Americanos back on their heels on a subject most Americans consider themselves experts on-the brewing and drinking of coffee.

Coffee in the United States, the polite but firm young visitors declared, "tastes like medicine." However, they conceded that with cream it is "not too bad." In their opinion, we United Statesers-South Americans resent our assumption that we are the only inhabitants of this hemisphere entitled to be called Americans-don't roast our coffee beans enough,

That may be the secret of the widespread variation in coffee we meet with in this country. Our coffee roasters are faced with the necessity of meeting a mass demand with a single roast and blend that appeals to all, and manifestly this leaves something to be desired. Different people like different roasting and blending results, and it stands to reason no single combination could possibly please all five-pound bags and did their own roasting -not necessarily from choice, but because that was the way coffee was marketed, and one took it in its pristine green state or not at all.

Forty or fifty years ago most house-holds bought the green coffee beans in

In the average household father usually handled the coffee detail, including the roasting, the grinding and the brewing. He would take enough green beans to provide coffee for a day or two, place them in a baking pan in the oven, and stir them frequently until they turned light brown, dark brown or black, according to his individual preference. The degree of roasting set the taste of the brew, and according to the Brazilian students most American roasters don't roast enough.

The aroma of roasting coffee, a glorious treat denied the nostrils of the present generation, used to sweeten the kitchen of the American home every second or third morning-it wasn't considered good practice to roast too large a quantity at once, since its quality deteriorates rapidly once roasted and crushed-but like unbolted corn meal and pork backbone in season, that has gone forever. More's the pity ...

New Cabinet Lists Men Who Took Advantage Of Their Opportunity

The persecution of citizens in Russia, East Germany, Hungary and other Soviet countries must force upon every person liv-ing in this country, citizen or alien, the realization of a life without fear of the police power of government that is so characteristic of our civilization. Of course, the person who, by his own choice, commits legal or moral crimes, faces the consequences of his own decisions, here as anywhere else. But it is neither a legal nor moral crime in America to be different from the generality, whereas in the Soviet countries, a norm is establi by edict-a shifting, whimsical normfrom which even inadvertent deviation becomes a personal peril. No one is safe

Thus, the American standard of life includes not only material advantages, but the even greater spiritual values that come with freedom. The American actually lives in a classless society in the sense that emergence to eminence, in any field, is open to any person with the capacity and will for achievement.

Harry Truman came of what in Europe or Asia would be called small landowners, not far removed from the peasantry; yet ne became President of the United States. Similarly, Dwight Eisenhower came out of the same economic and social level and he is President of the United States.

Neither of them emerged from big cities, centers of culture and opportunity. Truman lived most of his life in a small town, Independence, Missouri; similarly, Eisenhower spent his boyhood in Abilene, Kansas, Neither had extraordinary advantages beyond being a citizen of the United States, Eisenhower did get his schooling at West Point, to which are sent not the scions of an aristocracy nor the descendants of a military caste, but boys who can make the grade after being recommended by a member of Congress.

I read somewhere that a columnist said that Eisenhower's Cabinet consisted of mil-lionaires and a plumber. Much ado is made of the large fortunes of C. E. Wilson and George Humphrey; yet both earned their way up from small-town middle class parents who possessed no great fortunes. And both were small-town boys, educated in our public schools, with no special advantages. The only Cabinet officer whose inheritance is really notable is John Foster Dulles but it was not a money inheritance—it was the distinction of having a grandfather and uncle who were Secretaries of State, I remember Herbert Brownell, Jr., the new Attorney General, soon after he came to New York from Nebraska to find his way in the big city as a lawyer. He was a farm b days and had much to learn about the sidewalks and skyscrapers of the metropolis. He ran for the state legislature and managed his campaign.

In this connection, I find an interpretation of our standards of life by an official of a labor union, Maurice A. Hutcheson of the Brotherhood of Carpenters, which I should like to see pinned on the bulletin board of every classroom because it is so Inspiring of the opportunities for a rich life in our land. Mr. Hutcheson says:

"Today the average skilled worker makes as much money as some junior executives and a good deal more than most white collar workers. He owns a television set, or at least a radio, and he subscribes to newspapers and magazin He sends his children to high school and perhaps even to college. He reads and he what is going on in the world about him. You only insult his intelligence when you try to treat him as though he were

As one reads this, it is impossible not to recognize that here in the United States we have no proletariat, no class-conscio ness, no irremovable handicaps for men of ability and gentus. They can and do rise to the top by hard work and ingenuity. Let us not speak of a Cabinet of "millionaires and a plumber" but rather of a Cabinet of men of achievement in a land of opportunity.

Allergies Are Problem And Can Make Two People 'Incompatible'

The opinions contained in this and other articles in this column are sololy those of the writers who sign them. They are not to be interpreted as necessarily reflecting the opinions of The Herald.—Editor's Note.

Allergies are more or less common place these days, now that medical science has developed modern methods for isolating and treating them, but there are still new ones to be reported from time to time. An allergy, of course, may determine where a person lives, what he eats, what he wears and where he goes.

There are people who cannot bear come in contact with certain types of fabrics. Others would not dare take a bite of chocolate candy for fear that their allergy would bring on misery. There are some people living right here in Big Spring who came here originally because they were allergic to another climate. There are others here who probably would fare much better if they sought the climate these people left behind in another section of the country.

Take sandstorms, for example. A lot of people are allergic to them. In fact, we suspect that nearly everyone is to a certain extent. Fortunately, however, the ill effects caused by blowing dust are so alight for most people that they are unwilling to let such minor disturbances drive them from a climate that would otherwise be difficult to match. Some allergies are sources of discomfort, while some are the cause of embar-

A case we heard of recently probably caused both. It seems that there was a woman who was allergic to her husband. This, we are told, is not necessarily unusual. There have been cases reported where men were allergic to their wives. This particular case was finally remanded to the divorce court. We suppose this was a case when the word "incompatible" was not a mere idle expression thrown into the petition submitted to the court.

Demagogues Continue To Disrupt Improvements In Administration

voritism.

WASHINGTON-The words that President Eisenhower spoke in his inaugural address were eloquent of his intention to take up the task of world leadership. It was a speech addressed not just to America but to free people everywhere.

In championing the United Nations as an instrument of vital importance peace and order, the new President will help to check a widespread campaign calculated to destroy the U.N. In some instances this has been allied with a savage anti-foreign and even anti-Semitic hostility. Eisenhower's strong affirmation will be a counter to his propaganda.

But even before he had taken the oath of office, the old haunting, plaguing question had arisen: Can there be effective government under our system of divided powers in a time of crisis when great authority must be concentrated in the executive? That is the real meaning of the difficulty over the confirmation of Charles E. Wilson as secretary of defense. In the current context the question might better be phrased; who canbe trusted to govern under a system that delegates so much authority to Cabinet officers and others never elected to public office?

A little perspective is necessary to understand how the present controversy is related to a profound and continuing crisis of American political life. Twenty years ago Franklin Roosevelt brought is the professors, the experts to take key government positions. It was not long before they were under attack. The demagoguery of recent years has concentrated on their destruction with a strong anti-intellectual undertone. Eisenhower has brought in the managers of big industry. Before they can take the offices to which they have been appointed their fitness and their impartiality are challenged. Significantly it was the leading conserv ative in the Congress, Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, who was prepared for the challenge. Byrd, who gave his support to Eisenhower in the campaign, had carefully examined the laws requiring that government officials serving on most commissions and in positions responsible for letting contracts have no stock or other ownership in firms with which the government will do business.

As he explained to many of his colleagues, Byrd was convinced that if the law were waived-or even if it were amended in this particular instance-for Wilson and the service secretaries, they would be subject to continuing attack, crippling or destroying them. Conceivably the same demagogues who helped to undermine the experts of another could without much change of pace turn on the "hirelings of Wall Street" and big business. It should not be forgotten that in the extremes of demagoguery "international banker" and "Communist" are the

In the hearing on the Defense Department nominees Byrd pointed out that even though the Senate should vote to ignore the law, Wilson and his assistants would still be subject to prosecution under it. Any citizen would have the right to press for a criminal indictment. Furthermore, as Byrd interpreted the law in the hearing, Wilson and his service secretaries could not designate others to sign con-tracts for them since this would be an obvious evasion of the intent of the

In the Wilson case are several complicating factors. One is the fact that his company, General Motors, is the largest supplier to the government. Another is the remarkable scope of his compensation from the company. According to information before the committee, he will receive an annual punsion of $40,000. He also will be paid over four years a bonus of $625,000. But along with the cash bonus, the committee was informed, is to go a bonus in stock. Besides this, he now holds 40,000 shares of GM stock valued at about

Toward the end of a long and sometimes heated hearing a note of humor was injected. Chairman Leverett Saltonstall of the Armed Services Committee, in an earnest invocation to righteousness, got his figures of speech a little mixed. He said that the new administration must be as clean as Caesar's wife. Byrd remarked that since the legend was that Caesar's wife took baths in goats' milk, there might be some doubt as to her

Here and there we find a district where the ground is wet most of the year, or perhaps all through the year. These places are marshes or swamps. The water is too shallow to give them the name of lakes, or ponds. On the British Isles it is common to describe marshy places as "bogs." The peat bogs of Ireland are famed; many Irish families obtain their fuel supply by digging up the peat and drying it in the In various parts of Canada, and in a Swamps were of high importance in the history of ancient Egypt. Tall rushes of the papyrus (pronounced "puh-PY-rus") family grew in swamps alongside the Nile.

In many swamps there are cattail plants, and the Egyptians learned to turn the bark into tough paper. This was done long before rag paper or wood paper came into use in China, or any other part of Asia, In a cold climate, swamps are frozen laces during winter, and may be buried by snow. Warmer areas have swamps which are open the year around.

fectious grin on his face, you would never guess three days ago was President of the United States if you hadn't seen his picture in the papers so often.

The new ex-President was tak-ing the problem of adjustment after nearly eight years in the White House, with all its attendant burdens, in easy stride.

And so was Jackson County-Kansas City, where he has his new private offices; Independence, where he and Mrs. Truman live in the big white frame house on North Delaware Street; and Grandview.

where his family has a farm. When you consider that this 68year-old man, with the blue eyes twinkling beneath his thick lensed pectacles, came home only Thursday night after turning over the White House to Dwight D. Eisenhower, you had to admit that the adjustment was coming along fine. This reporter bumped into Truman at his offices on the 11th floor of the Federal Reserve Bank Building, where the ex-President tack-
