Controversy Over Chemical Control Methods

The use of certain chemical elements and compounds for the control of organisms that compete with man for the available supply of food and fiber has become a worldwide fact of everyday life. This widespread and increasing use of chemical control methods has, in turn, led to an ever increasing amount of controversy and concern about the impact of these materials on man and the environment.

Because Texas' economy depends to a large extent on agriculture, the use of insecticides, herbicides, and inorganic fertilizers in the State has been extensive. For years the Texas State Department of Health has monitored the effect of pesticides on man, and increasingly in recent years, on the environment.

In public health, unrealistic restrictions on use of insecticides would be as devastating to humans as to the crops involved. Pesticides have played a paramount role in controlling outbreaks of vector-borne diseases in Texas over the years. The Venezuelan Equine Encephalomyelitis (VEE) epidemic of 1971 in South Texas is the most recent example.

Pesticides in people and in the environment are monitored in many areas of the United States, including Texas, to gain knowledge about potential health hazards and environmental pollution. Similar community studies are conducted in 15 states.

In Texas, the State Health Department conducts the Texas Community Pesticide Study; in Cameron and Hidalgo Counties in the Lower Rio Grande Valley of Texas. Through the assistance given by this program, pesticide poisoning cases have declined substantially in this part of Texas in recent years.

During the years 1964 through 1967, the project recorded approximately 70 cases of insecticide poisoning each year.

One hundred eighteen cases were recorded in 1968; 16 cases in 1969; 23 in 1970; declining to only seven cases in 1971. Most of these poisoning cases resulted from skin exposure to methyl and ethyl parathion. There were no deaths. Most acutely poisoned individuals responded promptly to appropriate treatment, with no known residual health effects.

In the community pesticide study, and effort is made to learn how much of the pesticides stored in people comes from food, water, or air, respectively.

60- THE THREE HOTSHOTS... in the golf tournament Saturday morning tying for high score were Larry Tunnell, Ross Middleton, and Joe Neal Ellis. Also pictured are sponsors of tournament, Robert Gossett and Macky McCarty.

GETTING A LITTLE PRACTICE...On the practice green Saturday morning before the tournament started were Bill Scott, Pody Welch and Dale Riggs.

The scientific term for the work humus does is "stimulate ion exchange." A Technical Bulletin from the South Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station at Clemson, S. C., includes the concept that "humic acids also mobilize the phosphate anion. In the presence of humates, plants use phosphate fertilizers much more fully than otherwise."

William M. Castellini, grower-shipper, Opelousas, La., says, "Another advantage in using liquid humus is the financial saving. I used a product named 'Energizer' (Concentrated liquid humus), and my normal seed requirement was cut by 60%. Depending on the size of one's operation, the size of one's operation, the savings at $2.00 per bushel can run into hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Liquid humus is proving out, in effect, as a growth catalyst, not only for marketable crops but also for homeowners. It not only gives fruits and vegetables a richer flavor, longer shelf life and more attractive color but also helps to improve lawns, shrubs, flowers and trees. In short, everything that grows needs humus.

Liquid Humus, A Growing Catalyst

Modern man has done a good job of clearing fields for crops yards and gardens. But in doing so, he has interrupted Nature's methods of soil enrichment.

To offset this, man has added all kinds of fertilizer to the soil, without realizing it's difficult for plants to assimilate it. At the same time, he has cleared away the leaves, branches and other deciduous material that, having decomposed into compost and eventually into humus, would make fertilizer nutrients available to crops, shrubs and lawns.

Humus is the element that opens the door for the plants to get the foods they need--to help build more substantial root systems and get better results from fertilization and insect and disease control. But composting takes years--even decades--to decompose sufficiently. And compost or mulch has been bulky and difficult to handle. Now however, industry has evolved a method of "mining" humus and concentrating it in a liquid form which can be diluted with water. As a highly concentrated liquid, it is easy to handle and goes right to work when added to the soil.

Realizing that plants get relatively little benefit from fertilizer without humus, farmers, ranchers and homeowners can now easily apply liquid humus--and reduce substantially the amount of fertilizer needed for more productive plants that grow more rapidly and are more disease and insect resistant.

City Council Meets Monday

The men discussed and reviewed the bills for the month of May, then voted to pay them.

The meeting was then adjourned.

Attending the meeting were: Mayor, Larry Tunnell; City Attorney, Andy Stroebel; Water Superintendent, Johnny Enloe; City Secretary, Betty McAlpine; and Councilmen, Doug Parish, Harvey Hickman, Ross Middleton and Calvin Wood.

Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Simmons returned home Wednesday, June 7, after visiting their daughter and family, Mr. and Mrs. Bill McKnight, in Dallas. While there, they attended the graduation of their granddaughter, Sharon, who was one of 575 graduating seniors of Skyline High School in Dallas.

Charcoal itself provides no flavor. Permanent ceramic briquets in the gas grill reach cooking heat in a few minutes, and there is no long wait to start cooking. The heat is regulated manually so there is no need to move a grill up or down.

Feeding Solid Foods To Baby

Although milk is one of baby's most important first foods, solid foods should make their way into his diet early in the first year, according to foods and nutrition specialist Sally Springer.

The Texas Agricultural Extension Service employee said that today's baby has a tremendous variety of prepared foods specifically developed to meet this particular need.

Generally, the first type of solid food given to the infant is cereal in the pre-cooked, ready to serve form. Often cereal is introduced as early as the first month.

Strained fruits usually are the next type of food added to baby's diets. Meats are the last solid foods to be included. Today, however, many doctors are suggesting that strained meats be included much earlier--about the same time as cereal.

Miss Springer, Texas A&M

University specialist, said that young babies should usually be switched to junior foods which have a minced texture to custom the foods with more texture than strained varieties. This is generally recommended around the age of eight months. Finally, toddler foods bridge the gap between baby foods and regular family meals.

"It's a good idea to introduce babies to a variety of foods and flavors and to increase the texture in these foods as soon as an infant is ready to handle them," Miss Springer said.

Keeping a baby on a liquid and strained diet past the age of one year invites later feeding problems, according to Miss Springer. Only one new food should be introduced at a time, however, so that possible problems of tolerance or allergy may be readily identified. "Small finger foods and teething biscuits and cookies should be introduced when the baby begins to get teeth," she said.

"They're a good start in teaching the baby to feed himself." The Specialist warned that the importance of feeding habits established in infancy should not be underrated.

"There's a growing feeling that our national problems regarding obesity began in childhood eating habits," she said. "It's important to teach moderation very early in life."

"Mealtime should be regarded as a pleasant occasion by a baby. Foods should not be used as punishment or as a reward. And food that's forced down does a child very little good in the long run."

Infant feeding has come a long way over the years. Research continues to improve foods and techniques so that infants get a healthy start in the world.

Mrs. David Hartman was admitted to the West Texas Hospital in Lubbock, Monday for tests. Wednesday she received an appendectomy. Mrs. Hartman has been ill for the past two weeks. She is in room 418.

MRS. TERRELL DEAN OTT
(Nee Cynthia Johanna Wrinkle)

Wrinkle-Ott Vows Exchanged in Muleshoe

In an impressive double ring ceremony, performed by candlelight, at the First Baptist Church in Muleshoe, at 8 p. m. on Saturday, June 3, Miss Cynthia Johanna Wrinkle of 332 Avenue J, Muleshoe, became the bride of Terrell Dean Ott of Rough 1, Earth.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Roy N. Wrinkle of Muleshoe and Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Ott of near Earth. Rev. Charles P. Dunnam, pastor of the United Methodist Church of Earth performed the ceremony before an altar decorated with a spiral Swedish wrought iron candelabra with long white candles accented with leather, plumous, baby breath and blue satin bows. Flanked by Swedish wrought iron cathedral candelabra with matching accents. A memory candle was the focal point of the setting. It stood on a white pedestal encircled in an arrangement of babies breath, white carnations, and white baby mums. A pair of white hand dipped candles were placed at the left of the memory candle. The arrangement was accented with lovely blue satin.

Venise lace and enhanced with applied daisies centered with seed pearls scattered about over the train. Her triple layered silk illusion veil was attached to a Juliet cap of lace encrusted with tiny seed pearls. The bride carried a bouquet designed with a cascade of daisies and leather with pearls and accents of blue. An antique handkerchief carried by both her mother and grandmother, Mrs. Emma Schuster, of Tulla, at their weddings, was tucked into the bridal bouquet.

The bride carried out the traditional something old, new, borrowed and blue. The hankie served as something old, her bridal gown was new, and she wore a blue garter. Something borrowed was a gold cross from Mrs. J. D. Small. She also wore a penny minted in the year of her birth in her shoe.

Maids of honor was Sharon Wrinkle, Muleshoe, sister of the bride. Her other attendant was Mrs. Jimmy Evans of Wichita Falls. They wore identical formal length dresses designed in frost blue mink mist featuring an empire bodice, bishop sleeves, square necks, with double rows of Venise beading laced with satin ribbon down the front and bordering the skirt. The cuffs of their sleeves were decorated with Venise lace and blue satin. They carried a handful of daisies. Daisies also accented their head pieces.

Eddie Alair, of Earth, was best man and Coy Davis of Pacos was groomsmen.

Gary Wrinkle, Muleshoe, brother of the bride, was candlelighter.

Teresa Ott, Earth, niece of the groom, served as flower girl. She was dressed identical to the attendants. She carried a miniature basket of marguerite daisies and leather leaf. Ring bearer was Scotty Schuster, Stratford, cousin of the bride. Ushers were Jimmy Evans, Wichita Falls, Tony Keith, Earth, Joe Rivas, Earth and Randy Morgan of Dimmitt.

For her daughters wedding, Mrs. Wrinkle wore a 2 piece ensemble designed in blue and white polyester with a light jacket. Her gold accent matched the white accessories. Mrs. Ott chose an aqua blue two piece chiffon dress with white accessories. Their corsages were of white roses.

Fashions Reflect Social Change

Discover an unlikely barometer and current guide to social change by turning to the fashion pages of the women's section of current newspapers and magazines.

"There you'll see fashions and fabrics reflecting the current world situations, moods and trends," noted Roxanne Schnorr of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service at Texas A&M University. "Fashions have become a national symbol representing the spirit of America."

The clothing specialist explained that turning back the pages of U.S. fashion history gives illustrative examples. Following World War I, women's dresses became simplified in style. Hems were raised from the floor length found in earlier gowns and skirts.

A reflection? Yes. Women were beginning to enter the work force—they needed practical styles and lengths to work efficiently. As women started actively participating in sports, freedom and simplicity in clothes was projected to meet the situation.

"In the early 1920's the bouncy sleeveless, flat chested dresses in knee length pointed out the very beginnings of women's liberation movements," Miss Schnorr said. "Women demanded the right to vote. The growing prosperity and leisurely atmosphere contributed to the new expressiveness and freedom in clothes."

The strict, uniform and untrimmed dresses of the World War II era definitely described the national crisis. The number of women taking jobs in the labor force increased dramatically. Many women took men's jobs. They didn't need or want feminine attire. The simple styles reflected the problem of expensive and rationed materials.

What about today? Are there signs of the national concerns? Miss Schnorr reported that the 1972 fashions provide definite indications of the changing national attitude toward Red China.

Oriental styles began to infiltrate American fashions at the entrance of Red China to the United Nations—long be-

Candelight Ceremony Unites Roberson-Walker

Miss Donna Kay Roberson of Earth and Dusty Walker of Lubbock were united in a double ring ceremony at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, June 2, in the First Baptist Church of Earth.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B.H. Roberson of Earth. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. James Walker of Lubbock.

The double ring vows were read by David Griffith, minister of the Church of Christ at Grand Prairie, before an archway decorated with greenery and accented with daisies and white wedding bells and bows. A beautiful white memory candle was arranged at the choir rail.

Wedding music was presented by Mrs. Howard Cummings, organist, who accompanied Mrs. Marie Slover as she sang "The Twelfth of Never."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a long formal wedding gown of white satin and re-embroidered aliencon lace. The dress was fashioned on empire lines with a bell shaped skirt of satin with an overlay of lace. Scalloped lace formed a border extending to the chapel length train that fell from the softly gathered waistline. The long bishop sleeves were all of the aliencon lace. A sheer yoke was finished at the neckline with scalloped madellions forming a high collar. She carried a bouquet of carnations, stephanotas, and baby breath.

The bride carried a penny dated 1900 given to her by her mother-in-law in her shoe as something old. Her lovely wedding gown served as something new. Something borrowed was a white Bible belonging to her maid of honor. For something blue, the bride wore the traditional blue garter.

Serving the bride as maid of honor was Miss Naomi Carr of Lubbock. She was attired in a long yellow and white dotted swiss dress with an empire waistline, short puff sleeves and a scooped neckline.

Daisies and lace bordered the sleeve bands and neckline. Attired in gowns identical to maid of honor, were candle-lighters, Terry Walker and Sherry Carter. Terry is a sister of the groom and Sherry is a niece of the bride.

Lafonna and Lavonna Walker, sisters of the groom served as flower girls. James Carter, nephew of the bride, from Portales, New Mexico, was ring bearer.

Frosty Walker of Lubbock served as best man. Ushering the guests were Ron Mills of Lubbock and Larry Brent from Bonham, Texas.

The bride's mother wore a pink double knit dress with white accessories.

A reception in fellowship hall followed the ceremony. Miss Beverly Crabtree, Mrs. Jessy Cole, and Mrs. Richard Boydler served guests wedding cake, nuts, mints, and punch. Guests were registered by Mrs. James Carter, sister of the bride, from Portales, New Mexico.

For a wedding trip to points of interest in Texas, the bride selected a yellow and white knit dress with an empire waist line and white accessories.

Her costume was completed by a white carnation corsage lifted from the bridal bouquet.

The bride is a 1969 graduate of Springlake-Earth High School. She is presently employed with Furr's Cafeteria in Lubbock.

The groom is a 1967 graduate of Tahoka High School and is employed with Time - D.C. Inc., of Lubbock.

Is Your Child Safe At Home?

"Ninety-five per cent of accidental poisonings occur while children are supposedly under adult supervision," said Mrs. Doris Myers, home management specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. More than half a million different kinds of medicines, cleaning aids and other household substances tempt children's curiosities and often cause poisoning.

"The key to halting these poisonings is a continuing plan of prevention in the home," the Texas A&M University employee said. "First, don't store bleach, detergent, drain cleaner or other hazardous substances under the kitchen sink or any other place accessible to small children.

"And don't keep bug killers, medicines or other dangerous items next to food."

Paint, insecticide, turpentine, alcohol or other such substances may be mistaken for something to drink when poured into bottles or similar-type containers.

"Just because something looks, smells or tastes horrible to you doesn't mean that a child won't eat or drink enough of it to poison him," Mrs. Myers said.

The specialist said that a child's sense of smell and taste aren't as developed as an adult's. He can't read or recognize the signs of poison, and just one taste can kill him.

"Remember," Mrs. Myers stressed, "it's up to you to keep your child safe from poisons."
