Seniors, "G Day" is just around the corner. That day automatically changes the lives of every graduate. As he receives his high school diploma, he no longer is a carefree kid, for now he has reached a milestone in his life that requires many decisions, meaningful decisions that may characterize the remainder of his entire life.

The high school diploma is just a beginning, a doorway to life, an invitation, so to speak to enter college, the working world, or in some cases, graduates will enter into the sea of matrimony, with a lifetime mate. These decisions should not be taken lightly, for decisions made at this time of life, will in all probability, reflect upon your entire lives.

Graduation should not be a time of fear of facing a new world, no one should live in fear, rather in faith.

Remember Seniors, the world needs you. It needs clean-cut men and women as stabilizers for a world that at times seems to have gone mad, mad, mad. It needs men and women who can show love for one another. Men and women who can render justice to their fellowmen amid turmoil when there seems to be no justice. Men and women of faith who have God as their Leader and the Holy Spirit to help them live their lives according to God's plan for them.

Yes indeed Seniors, the world needs you as leaders, good leaders, who put God first in their lives and remain putty in His hands for God's tender molding.

There will doubtless be times Seniors, when the world will look bleak and dismal and no one seems to be going in the right direction, temptation to follow the groups will be great, but in God's Word there is an answer, 1 Cor. 10:13 says, "There hath no temptation taken you but such as is common to man; but God is faithful, who will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able; but will with the temptation also make a way to escape, that ye may be able to bear it." So remember and carry this verse with you bury it in your heart and know that his promise still stands true for every generation, past and present that shall trod this earth.

How to live your lives successful day by day was so beautifully described by Thomas Blake, when he wrote, "Each morning lean thine elbows awhile upon the window sill of Heaven and gaze upon the Lord. Then with this vision in thine heart, turn strong to meet the day."

Final plans and program details have been announced for the upcoming Circuit convention of Jehovah's Witnesses to be held in Carlsbad, New Mexico. Entire families of delegates will converge on Carlsbad for the May 24 and 25 event, with most motels and hotels reportedly already booked to capacity. According to Warren Meeks, local spokesman, the convention theme is "Have We Kept Our Senses and Been Watchful?", and the purpose of the meet is to "further train the delegates in our program of personal assistance in Bible study for all interested, regardless of denominations. Last year a monthly average of over 1,300,000 from various denominations took part in the Witnesses' program of Bible Study.

The assembly program emphasizes the need of applying Bible principles in all aspects of family life and will include Bible talks, discussions, and dramatizations, with delegates from Earth participating. Sessions are open to the public with no collections taken.

American Cancer Society Doesn't Endorse Products

American Cancer Society officials announced today that it in no way endorses any commercial product. The Chairman of the Board of the Texas Division of the ACS, Stanley Cole, said, "We want to make it clear that this applies to any type of insurance, especially cancer insurance."

Cole, a San Antonio insurance executive, said the Society feels the statement is necessary because an increasing number of insurance companies have been using ACS statistics in sales promotion literature. "The American Cancer Society has never authorized the use of its statistics or any educational film or printed literature for any commercial purpose," he said.

"There have been some reports," Cole stated, "of American Cancer Society educational films being used by agents in direct sales promotions. This is an absolutely unauthorized activity and we are asking people to report this sort of activity to the State Board of Insurance and the American Cancer Society if it continues."

The year 1974 produced the most devastating outbreak of tornadoes ever recorded anywhere in the world, according to meteorologists of the National Weather Service, who recently launched their annual SKYWARN campaign.

The outbreak of 148 tornadoes in 13 states on April 3 and 4 was unprecedented in number, combined strength and total path length, according to Weather Service Director George P. Cressman. Although the death toll reached 300, it was not a record. On March 18, 1925, a single tornado killed 689 people in Missouri, Illinois and Indiana.

Review System For State Food Stamp Program

States would be required to develop systems for monitoring and improving their administration of the food stamp program under an amendment to food stamp regulations that was proposed by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, (USDA).

The proposed change implements amendments to the Food Stamp Act included in Public Law 93-347, approved last year. That law authorizes USDA to provide 50 percent of state food stamp administrative costs (see USDA press release 2626-74). It also directs USDA's Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) to determine whether or not a state is running the program efficiently and effectively and to withhold federal administrative funds if a state fails to do so. Under the proposed amendment, states would annually review their state level operations and the operations of local areas that issue $500,000 or more in bonus food stamps a month. Smaller local areas would be reviewed once every two years. In addition, states would continue quality control reviews currently in effect. States would then report to FNS on deficiencies and proposed corrective actions. FNS would withhold federal administrative funds depending on the seriousness of the deficiency and the adequacy of proposed corrective measures.

Under today's proposal, state reviews and corrective actions would begin on July 1, 1975. FNS would help the states collect the data they need to do this until January 1, 1976, when the states would take over full responsibility for data gathering and reporting.

FNS said today's proposal is one of several steps designed to improve food stamp program administration. These include more emphasis on the food stamp quality control system and possible changes in administrative procedures which would make the program easier to operate.

Public comments are invited on the proposed regulation, which is scheduled to be published in the Federal Register of Friday, March 21. Written comments may be mailed or delivered to P. Royal Shipp, Director, Food Stamp Division, Food and Nutrition Service, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. 20250 so as to be received not later than April 21. Comments received will be open to public inspection.

TEXAS TALK

By CALVIN WOOD EARL JORDAN

A marked decline in the number of varieties being grown commercially is one of the unusual things about Texas' number one cash crop... cotton. In 1910, F. J. Tyler, in an article entitled Varieties of American Upland Cotton, reported for the United States Department of Agriculture that there were 613 varieties of cotton being grown. Sixty-five years later there are fewer than 50 with only about ten of those commonly used. Two reasons are predominant for the unusual turn-around. First the boll weevil infestation wiped out many susceptible long-staple varieties. Second, producers have developed the varieties they like best and are satisfied with the increases in crop yields, the storm resistant boll (for machine harvest) and the generally shorter growing season provided by relatively few types. Evidence of the success of the varieties being used is amply illustrated when comparing current yield per acre with that of 1950.

There were nine local students among the 309 candidates for graduation from South Plains College.

lege at Brownsville was the featured speaker.

nology; and Jesus J. Castillo, applied science and mid-management.

Use Manure Conserve Energy

Not only is it cheaper to fertilize your land with feedlot manure, it is also a good way to save energy, believes Dr. John Sweeten, agricultural engineer with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

"Use of manure as a fertilizer can save energy used in the manufacture and distribution of commercial fertilizer," says the Texas A&M University System specialist.

"It takes 5.6 million BTU's (British Thermal Units) of energy per acre to manufacture, distribute and apply commercial fertilizer at the rate of 180-60-0, while the energy needed to collect, haul and apply feedlot manure at 10 tons per acre is only 1.2 million BTU's," says Sweeten. "This is an energy savings of 4.4 million BTU's per acre or .44 million BTU's per ton of manure." Another way of conserving energy from feedlot manure is to refeed it in beef cattle rations, says Sweeten. "The energy saved by refeeding one ton of feedlot manure would equal the amount of energy needed to produce one ton of alfalfa in the Texas High Plains, 4.2 million BTU's."

Energy can also be saved in producing anhydrous ammonia by using a process to convert manure, air and water into hydrogen and nitrogen. "This process would require little or no additional fuel to produce ammonia," says Sweeten, "and would save more energy than any other process using feedlot manure. Some 39 million BTU's of energy are now required to produce a ton of anhydrous ammonia."

A YOUNG CHILD may misbehave because he wants attention, is bored or curious. His behavior could also indicate that he is growing more independent and wants to do things on his own.

THE DIET of affluent Americans has decreased in quality during the last 20 years, but the poor may be eating more nutritiously. The reason is Food Assistance Programs, including commodities and food stamps.

Census Here On Dual Jobholding

How many people are supplementing their regular pay check with a second job? How many people are enrolled in adult educational courses or are taking vocational training?

Percy R. Millard, Director of the Bureau of the Census Regional Office in Dallas, announced today that information on these subjects will be collected during the week of May 19 from a sample of households in this area. The questions are in addition to the usual ones asked in the monthly survey on employment and unemployment conducted nationwide by the Bureau of the Census for the U. S. Department of Labor.

Results of this monthly survey provide a continuing measure of economic conditions in the country. In March, total employment (as measured by the monthly survey of households) declined by nearly 200,000 to 83.8 million. This marked the sixth consecutive month of employment reductions, which have totaled 2.6 million since last September.

Households in this survey are among the 50,000 nationwide that have been scientifically selected to represent a cross section of all U. S. households. All information they supply is held confidential by law and is used only to compile statistical totals.

The interviewer who will visit households here is Rosemary McNeese of Amherst.

Landscape Accessories Important To Appearance

Accessories are an important part of a yard or garden and can add character and individuality to the home landscape if properly chosen, says one authority.

"However, too often accessories are bought which serve no purpose and only clutter up a yard," points out Dr. William Welch, landscape horticulturist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "An accessory should be beautiful in itself, have a practical value, and relate to the overall landscape design." Welch suggests using natural sculpture as a garden accessory. "A well designed piece of abstract sculpture can create interest in your garden and will increase in value over the years.

Outdoor furniture can also add interest and provide a useful function.

"When choosing garden furniture, look for comfort, attractiveness and low maintenance," advises the Texas A&M University System horticulturist. "Outdoor furniture should be practical and in harmony with the landscape."

If furniture or sculpture proves inappropriate or too costly, Welch suggests using natural materials such as driftwood, tree limbs or roots, boulders or rocks as yard accessories. "Natural materials can be related to most landscapes and are easy to get."

Other useful, decorative accessories include birdbaths, stained glass windows, outdoor chandeliers and plant containers. A stained glass window can be used to enclose an area while an outdoor chandelier can provide light and possibly repel insects.

"Avoid the temptation to overdo accessories," cautions Welch. "Simplicity is the best design."

Beware of Poison Plants

"You're gonna need an ocean, of calamine lotion. You'll be scratchin' like a hound, the minute you start to mess around, with Poison Ivy..." or so go the lyrics of a 1950's song appropriately titled, "Poison Ivy."

You may have handled poison ivy last year and escaped without an itch, but don't press your luck. No one is permanently immune to poison ivy, oak or sumac.

The Texas Medical Association reminds that your next meeting with this pesky plant could take place in your own yard, as well as in the woods and fields. Poison ivy, poison oak and sumac have appeared in city gardens and have been known to form beautiful growths up the sides of houses. But beware and don't touch. Poisonous oils from these plants can also come your way in the smoke from a neighbor's burning trash or on your dog's coat.

If you are able to detect poison plants, you can often avoid them. Poison ivy and its close kin, poison oak, are three-leafed plants which may grow as low bushes or climbing vines. They may be mixed with honeysuckle and other climbers. Poison sumac, an eastern swamp plant with seven to thirteen leaflets and small white berries, usually grows as a shrub.

If you even suspect that you have been exposed, wash thoroughly all affected areas with warm water and soap. Sponge with a strong alcohol solution. Using rubber gloves, clean your clothes in an oil solvent and soapy water.

Ivy, oak and sumac poisoning start with itching and redness within a few hours to several days after exposure. Then watery blisters appear. There is no cure for the "big itch." But wet dressings of boric acid or Epsom salts solution bring some relief. Calamine lotion also reduces itching. If the inflammation is extensive, it is best to call your physician. If you know that you will be near poison plants or working with them, have your druggist

Be Ready When Tornado Strikes

The month of May is one of the worst for tornadoes in a season that normally lasts in Texas from February through June. But the destructive winds don't necessarily follow the rules or the calendar, and an insurance executive advises readiness at all time.

"Whenever and wherever a tornado is spotted," says J. O. (Jim) Smith, Jr., chairman of the Texas Insurance Advisory Association (TIAA), "immediate action can save lives and property."

Texas is a favorite resting spot for twisters, and the penalty comes in lives and property lost. Companions in destruction are lightning, a frequent killer and flash floods.

have already caused problems nationally, and this is more than twice what occurred in the same period of 1974.

Knowing what to do before a tornado touches down can save lives and property, Smith says. "Knowing what to do after can reduce damage, too."

In a tornado or other high winds, Smith says the TIAA recommends:

--Get in a bathroom or closet near the center of the house on the ground floor. At least get under a table or other protective covering to avoid injury from falling debris.

--Avoid buildings having large and relatively lightly anchored roofs, such as auditoriums and gymnasiums.

--In open country, move at right angles to the tornado's path. Lie flat in the nearest ditch, ravine or other depression if trapped.

--No matter what, don't stay in an automobile.
--Anchor or tie down mobile homes, frequently victims of the worst damage.
--Keep a battery-operated radio on hand for the latest advisories.
--High winds cause the most damage by pushing in walls and windows and tearing off roofs. Flying debris is also deadly. If property is damaged, Smith says the TIAA suggests:

--Make necessary temporary repairs, keeping a record of costs for the insurance adjuster and for tax purposes.
--Deal only with a reputable contractor for a loss estimate or for repairs.
--Let your insurance agent or company representative know if you must move into temporary quarters.

--Be prepared with an inventory of damaged personal property (such as furnishings, clothing and jewelry) to speed the claim processing.
The TIAA is an advisory organization with membership consisting of insurance companies writing approximately 90% of the property insurance in Texas.

Cut Flower Care Outlined

Flowers that are properly cared for when freshly cut will make longer lasting, attractive arrangements, says Everett Janne, landscape horticulturist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. He recommends the following procedures. "Always use a sharp knife or shears to cut the flower stem," says the Texas A&M University extra since fashion and fabric trends changes often, rapidly dating past years' purchases. Add currently fashionable trims and companion fabrics in current design lines to update what is on hand," the specialist advised.

-Buy multi-design patterns. Patterns that contain several garment pieces and variations are often the same price as those with only one. -Modify well-fitting and fashionable patterns already on hand by varying with unique fabric or trim selections. Patterns pieces may be switched in the same size, brand and basic shape. "For example, switch sleeve pattern pieces that are stitched into the same basic arms eye seam. If in doubt, compare pattern pieces for similarities by lining up one on the other." -Make maximum use of the sewing machine by regularly following manufacturer's instructions for cleaning and oil-ing. Machine life will be prolonged and repair bills reduced. -Know your sewing abilities. Abandoned projects due to selecting too difficult to sew patterns or fabrics cost money. -Plan ahead. Be flexible. Think before acting.

Major appliances usually are coated with an acrylic enamel finish that can be cleaned with warm water and detergent. Avoid use of ammonia, alcohol, chlorine bleach, abrasive cleansers or strong solvents, warns Doris Myers, home management specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System. These solutions can permanently damage appliance surfaces. If you must scrub, use a little baking soda on a damp cloth, the specialist says.

specialist. "A dull cut will crush the stem and plug up the plant tissue. This keeps the stem from carrying water." Janne stresses using a clean container for the flowers. Used containers should be thoroughly cleaned with a household bleach solution to get rid of any bacteria. "After the flowers have been cut, put them in warm water and make sure that several inches of the stem is below water," points out the horticulturist. Remove any leaves that are covered by water. Then cover the flowers with a plastic film to prevent moisture loss and put them in a refrigerator or cool room for four to six hours. The flowers are now ready to be put in an arrangement. "Be sure the stems are covered by about one-fourth inch water and keep the arrangement out of hot or cold air drafts and away from direct sunlight," advises Janne. Using chemical commercial preservatives in the water may help keep the flower in good Homesewing of clothing is definitely a savings, it saves an average of two-thirds the cost of comparable ready-to-wear items, according to Mrs. Becky Culp, area clothing specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, the Texas A&M University System. ## Ag Producers Must Be "Fuel Conscious"

Farmers and ranchers must continue to be "fuel conscious" and stay abreast of the changing fuels situation if they expect to operate as efficiently as possible during 1975.

"Fuel use for agricultural production will continue to increase in the coming years while farm family fuel use is expected to decrease," points out Charles Baker, marketing specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

He expects fuel used in agricultural production to be exempt from any government imposed price increases although the economic situation may dictate increases.

"Current stocks of crude oil and other fuels are high and consumption is down, but a lengthy embargo could still present serious problems," points out Baker. "Furthermore, agricultural producers are concerned

Wash Fiberglass Products Carefully

Washing fiberglass products can be disastrous if recommended care procedures are not followed, according to one clothing specialist.

Beverly Rhoades with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System, said that fiberglass products should always be laundered separately since fiberglass fragments are released during washing.

"These will become embedded in the fibers of any other fabrics in the same wash load, if these garments are worn, the fragments will irritate the wearer's skin."

"If a load of clothes is accidentally washed with a product containing fiberglass, there is no known way to remove the fragments. Repeated washing simply embeds the fragments further," the specialist said. She advised that after laundering any fiberglass product, a load of old rags should be run through the washer and dryer to absorb the fragments.

"Products containing fiberglass should have a label warning consumers about the dangers of washing fiberglass with clothing items," Miss Rhoades said.

with shortages of two types of fuel, natural gas and LP gas."

The demand for natural gas has far outpaced its supply at the regulated interstate price, notes the Texas A&M University System specialist. Not only has the low price depressed supply, but it has also encouraged consumption.

"LP gas supplies are also being threatened with overconsumption due to low prices," points Baker. "LP gas is used widely within the petroleum industry as well as in agriculture."

The economist advises agricultural producers to be "fuel conscious" throughout the year and to consider the following points to minimize inconveniences:

1. Maintain contact with a reliable supplier.
2. Keep the supplier advised of future fuel needs and changes.
3. Keep on farm storage filled.
4. Schedule machine work to avoid rush seasons when possible.

"Farmers and ranchers are generally leading the way in fuel conservation," contends Baker, "and they must continue to do so if they are to meet their production schedules."

Lead Poisoning Can Cause Mental Retardation Or Death

Medical help for children in Texas comes from many sources, and for three children living near Brenham it was the State Health Department Laboratories which discovered they had high lead levels in their bodies.

Lead poisoning can cause mental retardation or even death, and early discovery is vital to prevent any lasting effects.

How did the laboratories in Austin become involved with lead poisoning cases near Brenham?

The State Health Department, in cooperation with the Texas Department of Public Welfare, is carrying out an extensive medical screening program throughout the state for children on welfare rolls. The State Health Department is responsible for the physical examinations given under this Early and Periodic Screening, Diagnosis and Treatment (EPSDT) Program through a contract with the Welfare Department.

When a medical screening team from the State Health Department rolled into Brenham last year, bringing with it the promise of better health, the three children with lead poisoning attended the clinic.

During the extensive physical examinations, blood samples were taken to be sent to the Health Department Laboratories for analysis. On this day, a lucky one for the three children, the blood samples taken disclosed the sinister lead condition.

The initial high lead reading led to another test to verify the first result, and the children began treatment to leech the lead from their systems.

It also resulted in an investigation by an environmental health engineer of the premises where the children lived. His inspection of the home showed lead-based paint peeling from the walls, woodwork and window sills. The paint chips have a sweet taste which children find enjoyable, and they were chewing on the window sills and picking up paint flakes.

Since the discovery, the walls have been covered over and the parents advised of the lead problem. And, the children have been undergoing periodic blood tests and treatment by a local physician.

These youngsters are just three of the more than 159,000 children in Texas who have been examined in the EPSDT Program.

During the physical examination by a physician or nurse, blood samples are taken and sent to the special Medical Screening Division of the Bureau of Laboratories.

Each child's blood undergoes a laboratory analysis for syphilis, lead, hemoglobin (anemia) and hemoglobin types (sickle cell and related diseases). About 30,000 individual tests are performed each month.

The laboratory staff includes 15 highly-trained personnel, including medical technologists, chemists and laboratory technicians. The medical technologists are all certified by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists (ASCP). The chemists hold college degrees, and the laboratory technicians are usually college graduates.

The supervisor of the Medical Screening Division, Brad Therrell, Ph.D., says the program is an enormous undertaking. Dr. Therrell relates that, "The professionals for the most part have taken special training courses to make them more proficient in their specialized skills, some in Boston and some at the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta."

"We feel we are playing a very important role in helping children of the state toward better health. That's the reason we're here," said Therrell.

The Health Department facility is the largest lead poisoning analytical laboratory in operations in the country with the exception of New York State at Albany. Only two of three other laboratories in Texas are equipped to do lead testing.

The lead atomic absorption equipment called for an outlay of some $30,000. Automated equipment enables the laboratory staff to keep abreast of its continuing work load.

"There is no way the job can get done without skilled, dedicated personnel," said Dr. Therrell. "We are able to do the tests at a great financial saving with uniform quality control in our central laboratory, as opposed to having each medical team attempt to do this in the field," he said. The Austin staff performs laboratory tests for the entire state, except for Houston.

recreational aspects of grasses? "Turfgrasses are essential for the health and happiness of people in urban surroundings," contends Duble. "In a recent national survey city dwellers ranked 'green grass and trees' as essential for their well-being."

Green belts and open area developments, such as parks and golf courses, are becoming increasingly popular, according to the turf specialist. "Golf courses have replaced lakes as the major attraction for land developers for the sale of home sites, apartments and condominiums."

Rather than restrict the use of fertilizer for turfgrasses, Duble urges efficient use of plant food materials. He also suggests the use of slow-release fertilizers that are especially formulated for use on turf. Organic materials such as sewage sludge are also well suited for use on non-crop land to promote grass growth.

With the present world food crisis and fertilizer shortages, should fertilizer use be restricted only to crop production?

"Absolutely not," argues Dr. Richard Duble, turf specialist for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. "Fertilizer plays an important role in maintaining grasses in lawns, parks and golf courses, and these areas make significant contributions to the environment as well as having aesthetic and recreational values."

"For instance," says Duble, "grasses release oxygen to the environment while filtering many harmful pollutants. Sulfur, a major air pollutant in industrialized areas, is readily absorbed and utilized by grasses. Plants also thrive on carbon dioxide exhaled by humans. Furthermore, turfgrasses significantly reduce temperatures, glare, dust and noise in urban environments."

Ecuador Indians Taught New Techniques

AGATO, Ecuador--Three years ago, Peace Corps volunteer Malcolm Walker of Plainview, came to South America to live among the 2,000 Indians of Agato, Ecuador. With earth, wood and water, he constructed a simple Indian adobe which had no running water, electricity or plumbing. Like the subsistence farmers in the area, he put in a small garden beside his home. But unlike his neighbors who grew corn year after year, Walker's garden contained a variety of new vegetables such as carrots, beets, cabbage and lettuce, plus an abundance of beautiful yellow marigolds. Walker, who completed his Peace Corps tour in early March, said that when he first began farming there, "The flowers were a real attention-getter. First the women stopped by to ask what the flowers were. During the conversation, I'd begin to talk about the other vegetables I was growing. In turn, the information was passed along to their families and neighbors."

It was Walker's job as a Peace Corps volunteer horticulturist to improve the family gardens in his area by introducing new varieties of vegetables and better gardening methods to local farmers and school children. His other goals were to devise a better system of crop rotation and to introduce companion planting and organic gardening.

When he first started out, Walker admits, a major part of his work was developing good community relations. The Indian community was poor, but proud. They didn't look kindly upon a stranger coming into their midst telling them that they should change their ways. Walker first had to prove he knew what he was talking about.

Things were slow at first, but as his garden progressed he was able to get 12 families to begin similar ventures. He explained that although the flowers were the "ice breaker," they were really put in to show the value of companion planting.

Experiments had shown that certain flowers, such as marigolds, could be interplanted with vegetables to help retard germs and insects that attack food crops. The strong roots of the flowers are able to fight certain germs and keep the vegetables from being overwhelmed. Also, the colorful blossoms of the flowers attract insects away from the vegetable plants. His work helped to show that these findings held true for Ecuador.

Walker didn't try to introduce irrigation in Agato because water is in short supply much of the year. However, he did encourage farmers to use organic fertilizers to improve their crops and to cultivate their land better.

Periodically, he would hold conferences for farmers so they could see his vegetable garden and hear about various techniques they could try. About once every two weeks, Walker would go to the school to see how the children were coming along with their garden projects.

The school garden was one of his first projects after he became accepted in the community. He asked school officials to let the "future farmers" of Agato plant a garden for the school. When his plan was accepted, Walker began teaching the children the basics of farming. Now, the kids help with all phases of the gardening, preparing the soil, planting the seeds, hoeing and harvesting.

Walker extended his original two-year Peace Corps tour by an additional year in March, 1974. He hoped that his additional work would ingrain the new farming methods so that the Indian community would continue them after he'd gone. He feels they will and that he has helped the people of Agato permanently improve their diets and farming habits.

A native of Plainview, Walker is the son of Mrs. R. C. Walker of 2601 West 11th St., Plainview. He graduated from Plainview High School in 1967. He attended the University of Texas in Austin for a year and graduated in 1971 from Texas Technical University in Lubbock with a bachelor's degree in civil engineering.

During summer vacations he worked for Walker Bros. Produce Co. in Plainview as a farm hand and for the Grubbs Consulting Engineer firm as a field engineer.
