One of the most serious handicaps to industrial recovery that could be created right now would be the levying of new taxes by the legislature in its forthcoming special session.

Johnnie Fischer Medalist Of Amateur Tournament With Record Breaking 141 Score

Gus Moreland, Dallas Walker Cup Star, Finishes In Tie For Fourth, Scoring 144 Strokes; Johnnie Goodman Seventh

By ALAN GOULD, Associated Press Sports Editor

Weak in reserve strength, the Cowboys will rely mainly on their experience. Eleven of the candidates are letter men, ten of their fourth year performers.

Fischer captured the low scoring honors for the second consecutive year with the new record figures of 72-69-141, in one of the wildest and most exciting finishes in the 37-year history of the national tournament.

Two more tournament records were smashed when it finally developed that 36-hole scores of 150 marked the qualifying limit and that a playoff was needed among an even dozen who finished there.

Wednesday morning the twelve in the 150 bracket were to battle it out in the elimination system for eight places remaining to round out the match play field of 32.

The three surviving ex-champions, Max Marston of Philadelphia, Chick Evans of Chicago and H. Chandler Egan of Del Monte, Calif., finished on the border line.

Along with them were two Walker cup stars, Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of Cleveland, and George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, who nearly blew himself out of the tournament with a 79 Tuesday after his sensational first round 71.

The others are R. M. Grant of Hartford, Conn.; Chris Brinke of Philadelphia, Nicol Thompson, Jr., of Canada, Eddie Held of Jamesburg, N. J., who had seen previous playoffs; Spencer Overton of Baltimore, who came back with a sub-par 79 after his opening 80; Will Gunn, Jr., of Wallingford, Pa., and

Pearson Wins Off Senators

General Crowder Defeated; Uhle Beats Old Tiger Teammates

WASHINGTON—Monte Pearson, the Indians' national rookie, Tuesday bested the veteran "General" Alvin Crowder in a neat pitching duel and Cleveland set the Washington Senator down 3-1.

The defeat shaved a game off from Washington's American League lead since the New York Yankees triumphed the Detroit Tigers in New York. The Senators are now heading the parade by 8 1/2 games with fifteen more to be played.

Pearson was bearing down all the way and allowed only four hits. Crowder likewise was miserly, giving up five, one of which was Hale's home run in the second.

Pirates Tied With Chicago

Cubs Beat Phillies Two To Nothing On Eve Of Series With Giants

PITTSBURGH—The Pirates clambered back into the tie with the Chicago Cubs for second place in the National League Tuesday by beating the Brooklyn Dodgers 1-0 and 2-0 in their final double header.

The Bucc finished 7 1/2 games behind the idle New York Giants. Heinie Meine and Walter Hoyt reeled off 15 innings of runless pitching. Meine held the Dodgers to five hits and Hoyt went one better by granting only four.

CHICAGO—As a final tuneup for their "last ditch" series this year with the New York Giants, which opens here Wednesday, the Cubs edged out the Phillies 2 of 0 Tuesday and took the series three games to one.

Despite the victory, the Cubs fell into a tie for second place as the Pittsburgh Pirates won two games over the same nine, made by Leonard and Haxman, of Paris, Tex., whose performance, after an outgunning 45, was not good enough to get him a qualifying place. Haxman totalled 156.

Under The Dome At Austin

By GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN, (UP)—Though Texas voted overwhelmingly for beer and repeal of the 18th amendment, its legislature is still dry.

Not only are a majority of the present members dry but their successors may also be dry.

An analysis of the August 26 vote reveals while the statewide vote was wet, the drys won in most legislative districts.

Ray Holder, Lancaster editor and former legislator, made the analysis. He vouches for its accuracy.

Explanation of the seeming anomaly is that cities which rolled up a large wet vote to do not have a majority membership in the legislature.

Despite this advantage, response to the movement to raise the beer tax at the special session of the legislature is lacking.

Staunch drys are among those opposing such a tax. "It will bring on a return of bootlegging," they warn.

State Senator Ben Oneal of Wichita Falls, a student of taxation and head of the senate tax investigating committee, is among those who oppose increasing the beer tax.

There is some talk that state sales tax advocates are proposing an increased beer tax in hope it will drive the friends of "nickel beer" to support the general sales tax, if beer taxes are kept down.

Another legislative plan in hand and gained a half game on them.

Only two Philadelphia got as far as second time and none to third as Lon Warneke shut them out with six hits for his season's 17th victory.

You may say "an eight cylinder costs more than a six." If built by anyone else than Henry Ford it would. The Ford Motor Co. has the greatest automobile manufacturing plant in the world. It is owned by Henry Ford, his wife and son. He sells no stock—pays no dividends. This item does not enter into the cost of his car and for this reason can produce quality cars at a lower cost than our opposition. Dollar for dollar Ford gives much more value. ling beer, still in the nebulous stage, calls for creation of a separate beer division of the state government.

The multitalented duties now connected with its regulation and sale now are thrown upon present state officers. The state treasurer issues the revenue stamps, the state comptroller issues permits. Various other officers have other duties.

Some say create a separate state agency to handle all the beer matters. Indiana has created such a bureau.

Partial poll of legislators indicates the present legislature is favorable to submitting repeal of state liquor law to a popular vote. This can not be done at the special session because a constitutional amendment may be submitted only at a regular session. The next regular session will be in 1935.

If the drys put up an strong a vote in the election of the next legislature, as they polled against beer and repeal, they can block submission then, apparently.

An attempt will be made to have the special session authorize issuance of the entire $20,000,000 in state relief bonds.

The constitutional amendment permits issuance of relief bonds not to exceed $20,000,000.

The governor's proclamation assembling the legislators specifies as one of the purposes the issuance of $20,000,000 bonds. She does not mention any less amounts.

Whether the bonds may be used to relieve hurricane distress is doubtful, former Governor James E. Ferguson admits. Apparently the wording of the constitutional amendment is broad enough to permit such use, though unemployment relief was in mind when the amendment was submitted.

The amendment reads: "The proceeds of the sale of such bonds to be used in furnishing relief and work relief to needy and distressed people and in relieving the hardships resulting from unemployment, but to be fairly distributed over the state and upon such terms and conditions as may be provided by law."

It takes no prophet to see the words "work relief" open the way for efforts to have the state finance employment projects which communities failed to get included in the federal projects.

Some senators propose a large part of the money be used for road building.

Two former legislatures voted down proposals to issue road bonds. The suggestion is likely to meet rough going.

Governor Ferguson has a horror of martial law. She will use it only as a last resort. She revealed her feeling when martial law for the Lower Rio Grande Valley was suggested following the hurricane.

State senators come to the special session of the legislature with a new dignity. Each has a private office.

Senators were given private offices in 1930. The state departments multiplied. The senatorial offices gradually were taken away. Three new state office buildings have been recently completed. So the senators get private offices again.

CONSULT YOUR WIFE for Sound Advice....

Mr. Man, you may know more about the intricacies of the stock exchange, more of high finance, more of the whys and wherefores of politics, more of this and that

BUT, when it comes to shopping, your wife has probably got you beat six ways to the jack-pot.

Now don't let your male egoism get the better of you and just say, "The bl—k she has,"—think about it. After all, women have made it their business to be good, economical shoppers. They have devoted thought and effort to the business "you haven't had time for."

Go to your wife and ask her how she handles this shopping proposition. She'll tell you, "Well, the first thing, and it's the most important, too, is to read the ads in the Daily Herald."

And then she'll be glad to demonstrate for your benefit exactly how reading the ads led to economies and advantages in the purchase of everything from that club steak you liked so well last night to the new dress you've been admiring.

Then, too, she'll probably welcome the opportunity of proving to you that she can save you money and assure you of better quality by buying your shirts and socks and such for you after checking the ads. Why not let her try it? She is a real expert at this shopping business. Above all, don't forget to follow her advice when you're shopping for yourself and check the ads in this paper before you start out to do your buying.

For The Love of Eve by Lucy Walling

CHAPTER VII

Eve and Dick stayed at the Hotel Miramar for a week. They usually dined in the marine dining room overlooking the lake. Eve enjoyed the formality of their surroundings and each evening wore a dinner costume. She had a flair for clothes and was aware that, though many of the women about her were gowned more expensively, few wore smarter costumes. And because she was happy her eyes glowed and smile scurried her lips. When she looked at Dick, correct in his severe evening clothes, she was proud of him.

"Dick," she began enthusiastically the fourth night of their stay at the Miramar. "I've an idea."

"You're full of ideas," teased Dick. "What is it now?"

"Let's always dress for dinner. There's no reason why people who have fortunes should monopolize all the niceties of life. It's fun to change into evening clothes for dinner. Don't you think so?"

"M-m," answered Dick.

"Then we'll do it always! Oh, Dick, I'm so glad you see things as I do. You're a perfect dear to agree with me all the time! I'd hate to have just an ordinary husband. You will let me plan everything the way I want it, won't you dear?"

"M-m," answered Dick.

After dinner he suggested going out to watch the skating. They put on warm wraps and trudged through the snow over the deserted brittle path to the lake.

"Reminds me of the lake at home," said Dick. "I'd like to be out on the ice now. Haven't skated for 10 years. My old skates got too short and I never seemed to have money to buy new ones."

"Oh, Dick," Eve interrupted him. "I've just had a grand idea for the lake for my column tomorrow. I can scarcely wait to write it. See the red and white outfit that girl is wearing? It gave me the idea. Here she comes now. Why, as I live and breathe, it's Gladys Rippl! Dick let's leave. If we want to keep our marriage a secret we can't afford to be meeting people we know."

Eve turned back toward the hotel and Dick followed reluctantly. He would have enjoyed skating in the moonlight on the frozen edge of the lake.

He took Eve's arm to keep her from slipping on the icy walk. "Eve, sweetheart," he said, "I don't like keeping our marriage a secret. As far as I'm concerned there are few to whom it matters but you, dear have so many friends in the city that it is bound to cause complications."

"I'm thinking of my position," she said. "We'll announce it later. With this Dick had to be content."

Each morning he drove to "the job" before 7:30. Eve, in her smart black business clothes, boarded an eight o'clock trolley. She never glanced at the morning Times until she reached the older district of the city where the streets were lined with stores and office buildings. Instead she looked at the beautiful homes along the boulevard over which she rode. Eve wondered about the people who lived in those houses and was sure she could never be contented until she had seen a home like one of those.

Her promotion at the office had no brought with it the satisfaction Eve had expected. She had not realized how much Alice Marshall had smoothed her way and made things easy for her.

Eve was particularly annoyed by Barnes' habitual tardiness in the morning. How much space was to be devoted to each advertisement. This delay often made it necessary for her to prepare her copy at a speed making careful work impossible. Inevitably there came a day when she was obliged to remain an hour over time.

True, Barnes and Arlene were also detained, but that did not lessen Eve's resentment. She knew that if Barnes had been prompt the work easily could have been completed by 5:30, the store's closing hours.

Eve was anxious not to give Dick any cause to resent her work. She suspected that secretly he cherished an ideal of a home-keeping wife who would be watching for him at the window when he came each evening. Dick's work kept him outdoors much of the time and he always arrived with a healthy appetite. Eve seldom was ready for dinner before seven. This evening it was nearly eight, but Dick did not complain.

Saturday night came and the hotel held its weekly dinner, dance. Eve wore the gown of pale gold which she had worn on her visit to the night club in New York with Theron Reece.

As she turned from the mirror she called to Dick. "I'm so happy, dear! I think this is the most adorable place to live. And I love dressing for dinner."

"It would be nice if we could stay on here," Dick agreed. "But I suppose since tomorrow is Sunday we can drive around and try to locate a place to settle in."

Something froze in Eve. She asked, ever so quietly, what Dick's plans were.

"We'll have to find a place within my income," he told her.

"But we have two incomes!"

"We're not counting on anything you may earn," Dick announced with finality. "Your money is yours to do with as you please. If I were you I'd bank that money. You may do as you like, however. I'll never question you about it. But I am going to support our home on my income and I will endeavor to add to our savings each payday."

Eve was not in the most pleasant frame of mind as they descended to the dining room. She had been enjoying the luxury of the past week and saw no reason why she and Dick should combine their incomes and continue this mode of living which, she felt, would leave them free from the petty cares of the average young married couple.

"Dick," she began after the waiter took their order, "I dreamt last night that it seems only fair to remind you that we agreed marriage is a fifty-fifty proposition. So I want to pay my share."

"Successful marriage is always a fifty-fifty proposition," Dick agreed. "But that doesn't necessarily apply to finances the way you mean. I should say it is important for each to meet the other half way. What I mean is turn for turn and fair play."

Eve recalled Dick's noncommittal "M-m," each time she had thought she had scored a victory. She took her cue and said, "Let's have a marriage free from quarrels, too, Dick. Each of us will always think of the other's side of the question, won't we?"

"That's the only kind of a marriage I will have," he answered with emphasis.

Eve was determined to enjoy the present and let the future take care of itself. No need to hurry in locating another apartment. She would meet that unpleasant contingency when it arrived.

So she smiled brightly and said, "In the meantime on with the dance."

They danced between courses. It was not until after they had finished dinner that Eve saw Theron Reece.

He had just entered the dining room with a vivacious looking girl. The couple lost no time in getting on the dance floor. Reece's glances swept the restaurant and he saw Eve at once. She looked away but the crowd was not large and before the dance was concluded she was forced to return Reece's nod of recognition. Evidently he was determined to continue their acquaintance. A shadow of apprehension clouded Eve's sky. She hoped Reece had not noticed her wedding ring.

"Let's go now, Dick," she said when they returned to their table. He agreed without asking any questions.

But Reece was not to be disposed of so readily. He approached, bowing, and said, "Good evening, Miss Bayless."

Eve felt a sudden panic but managed to introduce the men without disclosing the fact that Dick was her husband. Before Reece could begin conversation she arose for another dance with Dick.

After all, she reasoned, it was not strange that Reece should be there. Much business was conducted between Lake City and Cincinnati and Reece, a salesman lived in the latter place. The marine dining room of the Hotel Miramar was an attractive restaurant and it was natural for him to dine there. But Eve felt she wanted to leave the Miramar before her joy was spoiled.

So she said to Dick, "I think, darling, it might be fun to look for an apartment tomorrow. We will get up early and not lose any time."

She could not resist one guarded glance toward Reece's table as Dick guided her toward the door. There was something sinister in Reece's dark eyes as his glance met and locked with hers.

Mexican Parties Form Coalition For Next Election

By JOHN R. MORRIS
United Press Staff Correspondent

MEXICO, D. F. (UP)—A coalition of all the opposition parties in Mexico has been effected with a view to terminating the domination of the National Revolutionary Party. General Antonio I. Villarreal told the United Press in an exclusive interview today. The outline of the coalition platform, as revealed by General Villarreal, indicates clearly the present government conservative and reactionary.

General Villarreal, twice an exile in the United States for participation in revolutions which failed, or Colonel Adalberto Tejeda, ex-governor of Vera Cruz, whose radical views are both hated and feared by all property owners, are the two leaders at this moment. He is considered the most likely to receive the nomination for the presidency. The nomination will be made at a convention in December or January, soon after the convention of the National Revolutionary Party.

Owing to Villarreal's long absence from Mexico, he spent 12 years in New York, Texas and California returning here only a few weeks ago, some politicians in the coalition headquarters now consider Tejeda the favored candidate. His red shirts is the strongest single unit cooperating to form the coalition. Tejeda, a national radical figure for years, appeals to most discontented classes.

The new party, as yet unnamed by the opinion of observers, will need to be radical in its platform to appear sufficiently more advanced than the present government. President Rodriguez has resumed on a large scale the distribution of free lands to peasants, one of the objects of the revolution and one of the most important planks, also, in the new coalition's tentative platform. The definite platform of both groups will be formulated at their respective conventions this winter.

Even the greatest of the coalition's rallying cries, that of anti-revolution, is also a cardinal principle of the National Revolutionary Party. Every government document and letter written by a government official, is signed with the slogan, "effective suffrage; no reelection." The dominant national Revolutionary Party within the last year amended the constitution to prevent not only the president but all other federal and state executives and legislators from being ever re-elected to an office once held.

In the platform of the nationalists, however, "no reelection" means the ousting of the powerful faction organized by Obregon and Calles, which has held the power since Obregon assumed the presidency in 1920.

"It is true," General Villarreal said, "that the pretext of no reelection on various occasions has taken constitutional form, but frequently it has been nullified by the influence of governments desirous to ignore it. This pretext is of supreme importance since its true purpose is to prevent perpetuation in power, which may be achieved in a variety of forms, and to prevent therefore a dictatorial system."

"The present regime is a perfect example of 'continuismo.' This regime we propose to renovate, as we consider it obsolete. We propose to do this, however, in a peaceful manner since we consider it futile to resort to violent measures."

"We believe that the general desire for such a change is so great that public opinion will, on this occasion to achieve the miracle of the country entering, by new paths, an era of true liberty."

A characteristic plank of the platform being drafted tentatively by the coalition leaders is as follows: "Property and wealth, being by modern revolutionary concept purely social factors, shall be limited to the degree demanded by the public interest."

The political groups listed by Villarreal as composing the coalition include, besides Tejeda's militant followers, the Liberal Constitutionalist Party (which carried Obregon to power but later broke toes occupying a small home actually pays a higher rate per thousand cubic feet for his requirements than does the man who lives in a large home, he declared.

"It is perfectly obvious that some of these faults can be eliminated with the step rate, or block type rate, incorporating a higher rate per thousand for the first few thousand feet and a very much lower rate for the last thousand used," Mr. Coughlin continued.

The proposed optional contract rate would provide a flat rate of 30 cents per room per month with no residence being billed no less than 4 or more than 8 rooms and a meter rate as follows: first 1,000 cubic feet per room per month, 6 cents per 100 cubic feet.

Next 1,000 cubic feet per room per month, 3 cents per 100 cubic feet.

All in excess, two cents per 100 cubic feet.

Mr. Coughlin made this further statement:

"We are offering this rate at this time because we feel it is good business to do so in spite of the fact that our earnings do not justify any reduction in rates. Two years ago, our earnings, based on the appraisal at hand, amounted to only 16% and since that time our domestic revenues have declined 25.2%.

Any one who reads the newspapers is certainly familiar with the very general satisfaction of the public so far as rates are concerned; and employees of gas companies, have, of course, borne the burden of these complaints and for several years have recognized the fact that most of the trouble was caused by the form of rate which was in popular use and which required the customer to pay as much as 20% of his annual bill in one month. While we have recognized this, we have been slow to do anything about it. Any form of rate which would be corrective is bound to be a radical change and small companies, like ours, are inclined to let the large gas companies bear the cost of such experiments. While some of the large gas companies in this area attempted to modify their rate, we do not feel that such modifications completely meet the situation, and pending further experiments by these companies, we do not feel that our customers should be penalized until a practicable and equitable rate is discovered. We feel, therefore, that we should go ahead with our own ideas.

"In the final analysis we hope to cover at least a part of the revenue which we shall lose if this rate is inaugurated here. We know that our customers could very comfortably utilize 20% to 30% more gas than they are using at present. Obviously, the only reason they do not use it is because it costs so much. We hope, therefore, that by so reducing our rate we may be able to encourage our customers to install central heating plants and other gas using appliances, and that, in time, will develop enough additional gas consumption to compensate in part for the revenue which we will lose on this rate in the next couple of years.

"As stated in my opening remark, this rate is being offered without any strings attached. At the same time, I think it fair to remind your commission again that this gas operation is not, and has not had sufficient earnings to pay depreciation on the property, let alone a fair return on investment as allowed by law. I feel that I must remind you that the two factors which contribute most to this condition are the meter reading charge of 26c per month, and the gross receipts tax, by reason of which we are compelled to pay to the city 5% of our gross receipts each month. You gentlemen are all aware of the fact that we are relieved of little or no expense in operation by reason of the fact that city employees read our meter, and are also aware of the fact, I am sure, that this tax is discriminatory. I do not think there is any need to dwell on the arguments with respect to these provisions in our franchise and I will state that we are not disposed to contest these taxes at this time but will leave to your discretion any modification which you may see fit to make. Suffice to state, that we feel that the meter reading charge is particularly discriminatory and burdensome. If you gentlemen see fit to reciprocate by the elimination, or modification of these provisions in our franchise, we shall greatly appreciate it."

Cabbage

During the hysteria of the World War an organization called the American Protective League was formed.

Full of patriotic fervor, members demand of strangers that they produce draft cards, suspected all persons speaking with an accent of being spies and called sauerkraut "liberty cabbage."

Men back to the NRA movement say they hope no such organization is fostered to fight the Blue Eagle's battles.

Music

Frank J. Hogan, the lawyer who successfully defended Californian Edward L. Doheny, in the Harding oil scandals for a reputed fee of $1,000,000, is one of Washington's cleverest toastmasters.

The other night Hogan was presiding at a dinner. It came time to introduce George O'Connor, one of the town's best known ministers and a close friend of long standing.

"I understand you were toastmaster at a Georgetown University dinner recently," George said Hogan, thinking to kid O'Connor. "That gives me the right to sing a song."

"No," shot back George, "you only know one song—"California, Here I Come."

Notes

Four hundred friends of Henry Morgenthau, Jr. Farm Credit Administrator, gave up $2.50 a plate at the recent dinner tendered him in California. Senator McAdoo was called upon among other speakers.

"I thank you for this fine tribute you pay to me," said McAdoo. Editors of the U. S. Coast Guard magazine dug up an F. D. R. letter of Oct. 1932 exiling the men of the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard. Alongside of it they printed an open letter to the President suggesting that now was the time to prove appreciation by restoring pay cuts to service men so they can meet increased prices under the Blue Eagle.

The return of President Roosevelt from his Hyde Park home was a signal to start humming again. While he is out of town things slump amazingly.

Tug-Of-War

The tug-of-war between the banks and the government on credit policy is still a draw.

Returning pilgrims from the A. B. A. convention in Chicago say that neither the President's honey, Eugene Black's licorice, nor Jesse Jones' vinegar tasted right to the ruffled palates of the bankers. So far as the majority of New York financial men are concerned the barometer is still set at "no change."

But here and there under the surface you find the feeling that it may not be so sensible to buck the government's wishes. After all nobody has yet figured out definitely how far up its sleeve the government can reach to accomplish its purposes. And they have got to be accomplished if the recovery program is to go over.

In essence the government is telling the banks that they must treat American business as a going concern and grant loans in the same type of risk they did in 1926, or else. The exact nature of the "or else" isn't clear yet even to the government but you can bet all the cotton in Dixie that it isn't bluff.

Preferred Stock

At the moment the government is concentrating heavily on the RFC preferred stock angle. If banks accept that it will deprive them of the argument that they cannot risk their depositors' money in loans to cover expenses or for

Special Legislative Session Opening Thursday Due To Remove Obstacle To Flight Of Blue Eagle Over Texas

By VERNON A. McGEE

AUSTIN, (UP)—The state legislature will convene in extraordinary session here Thursday to remove the last major obstacle in the flight of the Blue Eagle across Texas.

Governor Miriam A. Ferguson has asked legislators to "consider and pass such legislation as may be deemed necessary to amend, change or repeal existing laws, affecting and controlling trusts, conspiracies against trade, and monopolies."

The purpose is to enable Texas to join fully in the NRA program to put men back to work, to awaken industry, to establish codes of competition in all channels of trade.

A month from today Texas may have its own Industrial Recovery Act. The text of a uniform measure for all states, endorsed by the national administration, has been sent Governor Ferguson by National Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

In none of its sections does the proposed act repeal the anti-trust laws of Texas. It does not even suspend the operation of such laws.

It does exempt any code of fair competition or agreement approved by the NRA, and any action complying with such a code or agreement, from the provisions of Texas anti-trust laws.

The measure may prove too mild for the Ferguson administration. The governor's proclamation suggested legislation to "amend, change, or repeal" existing anti-trust laws.

The governor has not indicated whether she will refuse to sponsor the model measure and propose another in a message to the legislature.

The NRA's model measure undoubtedly will prove too mild to sections of Texas business which have long sought out-and-out repeal of the state's anti-trust statutes. Major oil companies, working through skilled lobbyists whose pay is estimated at $1,000,000 annually, will support the repeals.

The task of engineering through the legislature a bill harmonizing Texas statutes with the NRA, without loosening the state's reins on conspiracies against trade, probably will fall to Senator Walter Woodward, Coleman.

He is known to favor an act making compliance with an NRA code by any person, firm or corporation, a defense against any court action charging violation of Texas anti-trust laws.

Adoption of a Woodward sponsored bill would be a political victory for the potential candidate for governor or for attorney general. Woodward's friends long have marked him for either of the two offices.

Neither Woodward's measure nor the NRA approved bill submitted by General Johnson would impede

National Tuberculosis Association Field Secretary Meets With Members Of Howard County Health Workers

ARTHUR J. STRAWSON

At the Douglas Hotel Tuesday afternoon a special board meeting of the Howard County Health Association was held with Arthur J. Strawson, field secretary of the National Tuberculosis Association present.

Mrs. R. E. Blount, president, explained that the Howard County Health Association, through the Texas Tuberculosis Association, is affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association of New York.

Here to discuss the approaching sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals after Thanksgiving, Mr. Strawson announced that among innovations in the sale this year will be a "Thanks for Health Day" dramatic program for grade children offered to the school teachers for use on the last day of school before Thanksgiving, Nov. 29, or soon thereafter.

Another innovation in Howard county will be the use of health bonds in place of Christmas seals for use with lodges and other organized groups. As usual a few of the large and generous gifts will be visited but the time and cost of this method precludes its wide use. So most will receive 100 or 200 or more seals by mail of which they may buy all or any part or none as the case may be. "Bangle day" Dec. 16 will complete the seal sale effort when celluloid double barred crosses will be offered on the streets for the smallest possible amount.

In the routine business of the session Mrs. J. C. Douglass, treasurer, showed that through the year certain tuberculosis families have received milk and it was given to children of several schools to the extent of many dollars monthly.

A nominating committee was appointed to report to an early annual meeting for the election of officers who will be selected along with a Christmas seal sale committee whose chairman will be entrusted with the management of this county-wide campaign. Howard county, with an average of nine deaths a year for 1931 and 1932, said Mr. Strawson has some 80 open and active tuberculosis patients at any given time. These may have each one infected some three or four others since their disease became active so Howard county has at least some 240 persons needing care or active watch in order that new cases of tuberculosis in the county may be decreased.

Metcalfe Opposes New Taxes, Expects Strong Safeguard On Use Of Bond Relief Proceeds

'Obnoxious Sales Tax' Is Out Insofar As Representative In Lower House From This District Is Concerned—Off To Austin

SAN ANGELO.—Declaring that he would oppose the "obnoxious and unnecessary sales tax and join with others in providing whatever safeguards are deemed necessary in the issuance of bonds and the distribution of relief funds in Texas, Rep. Penrose Metcalfe left for Austin Sunday. He expects to do some preliminary work toward introduction of some protective legislation before the special session of the legislature opens Thursday. He expects an active and interesting session. He says:

"Of primary interest will be the consideration of issuance of whatever portion of the recently voted relief bonds the legislature thinks necessary in the emergency. I can see no need to dissipate these funds for an expensive organization to handle relief work. In emergencies such as war time and one that now confronts our nation and state, there are always plenty of patriotic and responsible citizens who are ready to devote their time to the supervision of such relief without pay. Direct relief should only be given to those who are physically unable to work, and relief employment should be supplied those who can work. As much as possible of the funds should be expended on permanent improvements such as roads, streets, parks, and similar projects, that will be in the nature of investments, rather than upon useless or impermanent works. I favor using as much as may be necessary upon needed highway construction; this would require no additional overhead, as the present highway department is ready and able to care for these activities.

Law Limits Costs

The law recently passed creating the relief commission expressly provided that not to exceed three per cent could be expended for administration, but from accounts throughout the state it appears that this has been disregarded. I feel that more authority should be given to the local committees as they are serving patriotically and without cost to the state, and certainly are in a position to be familiar with the local needs.

"I regret very much to see the committee here resign, as it seems to me to have been a very capable and representative body, and one that could handle the situation adequately, if given enough authority and allowed to use its own judgment. I am sure it was the intention of the legislature in adopting the measure creating the relief commission that the details of the local situation be left largely in the hands of the local committee. I am fully convinced that if the money is to be squandered by the employment of an army of supervisors and inspectors and other overhead that the legislature will look with little favor upon the issuance of any bonds for such work.

Against Sales Tax

"It appears likely that another strong effort will be made to put over the obnoxious and unnecessary sales tax. I have consistently opposed this tax and the levying of other additional taxes as I do not think they are necessary. We have been told so often that the sales tax is to be a substitute for the present ad valorem tax and will shift the burden of taxation dictates this is correct—then it will no longer be necessary to continue diverting all this tax to the schools, and a portion might be used for retirement of the bonds. Heretofore only a part of this tax has gone to the schools and this legislature diverted it all for a period of two years, as it thought that would be a sufficient time to tide over the emergency. Also there is a possibility of diverting a portion of the gross-production tax on oil for the purpose of retirement of relief bonds. If the amount of bonds issued be kept at a sensible minimum, to meet the actual needs of unemployed and destitute, and the overhead and waste in its disbursement done away with, I am confident that only a small amount of bonds will have to be issued.

"I expect to oppose vigorously the levy of a sales tax, but certainly if one should be levied, there ought to be a proviso included in it that those who pay a state ad valorem tax should receive a credit upon their ad valorem of any amount paid in the form of a general sales tax. This proviso should also be included in any income tax, should one be levied. I do not believe in any double taxation.

Chance For Home Rule

"There has been a suggestion made that possibly the funds of the University of Texas might be invested in the relief bonds. I am unqualifiedly opposed to any such procedure, as the heritage of this great state should not be so spent. The state now owes the common schools interest and principle on their bonds that is long overdue and I do not want to see the university endowment get into the same shape.

"There is also a possibility that legislation may be requested giving the citizens of this county the chance to vote upon a county-home rule form of government. The recently adopted amendment to the constitution gave this right to counties above 62,000 population without further action of the legislature and provided that upon petition of citizens in counties of smaller size that special acts could be passed granting this right to them. Of course it should be understood that no such provision would become operative unless it was subsequently adopted by a two-thirds vote of the people in cities and outside of cities, each a class of residence to be counted separately and the move to fail unless adopted by both. If the people of this or other counties desired that this opportunity be granted them, it would be necessary to petition the legislature for the passage of such an act. So far I have received no such request from any of the counties of this district and merely mention this as an eventuality.

"Those who have been on the ground in Austin predict that this session will extend for at least 60 days. Of course the constitution provided that 30 days shall be the limit for a called session, but the governor can issue a call for an ad-

Rev. and Mrs. Shettlesworth Give Luncheon For Officers Of Church

Rev. and Mrs. S. J. Shettlesworth delightfully entertained members of the First Christian Church Board and their wives with a luncheon in the church basement Monday night.

By means of attractive place cards guests found their places at a lovely T shaped table decorated with bows of rosebuds and sweet peas.

Mrs. Shettlesworth gracefully expressed the spirit of the evening when she said "The meal is served for you all as our family." The bountiful and perfectly prepared chicken dinner was served by the three Shettlesworth girls, assisted by their brother, Jack Shettlesworth.

Following the meal, Rev. Shettlesworth in a brief but impressive service ordained T. E. Baker as deacon.

In the business meeting which followed, Roy Milner was elected chairman of the board, H. L. Bohannon, vice-chairman and J. H. Stiff, secretary.

Rev. Shettlesworth was called upon to outline some of the objectives of the church for the new year. He called attention to the fact that in spite of the summer period the church had retired practically all of its local obligations as well as meeting current responsibilities. Among his further recommendations he suggested that attention be turned at once to arranging the budget for the new year; planning for a series of revival services to begin on October 8th, and followed by a systematic effort to remove a goodly portion of the church debt. These suggestions were all enthusiastically endorsed by the group.

In closing his address he expressed his appreciation for the loyal support that has been given him by the board and appealed for their continuation of this determination to build up a great spiritual atmosphere, and he met with a happy response and assurance that they were with him for a greater church.

Those attending were: Of the Elders: Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Creath, J. L. Milner, J. I. Prichard and H. Clay Reed; Of the Deacons: Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Baker, L. M. Brooks, H. L. Bohannon, H. E. Clay, Delmont Cook, Joe Ernest, W. M. Gage, J. W. Garrison, D. C. Hamilton, E. W. Potter, J. H. Stiff, Willard Sullivan, C. M. Shaw, James Wilcox and Cecil Westerman. The honor guest was Mrs. M. E. Barrett, the only surviving charter member of the church. Joseph Cates, caretaker of the church, was also present.

The meeting, which was a sacred occasion throughout, was closed by singing "Blest Be The Tie That Binds."

Parent-Teacher Association Council Elects Mrs. Roy Pearce As Secretary

The Council of the Parent-Teacher Association held its first meeting of the term Tuesday afternoon at the high school, with the new president, Mrs. Albert M. Fisher, in charge.

The Council decided to hold a late summer round-up and to arrange with the president of the district for a school of instruction, the date to be announced later. The meeting hour was changed from 2:30 to 3:30.

The different units told of their projects and plans for the coming year's work. The secretaries of each ward were asked to mail newspaper clippings of each meeting to the district publicity chairman.

There was a good representation from each unit.

Boys' Work Committee Chairman Outlines Year's Program

Spirited singing, important reports by committee chairmen, and an interesting address by E. A. Kelley featured the weekly luncheon of Big Spring Rotary on Tuesday.

Mr. Kelley, choosing as his subject "Comparisons on International Relationship," compared present day international relations to the man who "cannot see the woods for all the trees." Whether nations and peoples will ever get out of the woods, he said, depends not on politics, nor on arms, nor on victories or defeats, but on character and a sense of responsibility.

As chairman of the committee on Boys' Work, Grover B. Cunningham outlined the plans of his committee for this year. They include outings for Boy Scout Troop No. 1 at least once every two months, entertaining boys at the Howard County 4-H Club, and bringing the members of this year's Senior High school class to a Rotary luncheon at least once. The first outing for the Boy Scout troop will take place this Saturday on the Tom Ashley ranch.

Dr. M. H. Bennett, as chairman of the Crippled Children committee, announced that the club is giving 24 one-half pints of milk daily, to be distributed among undernourished children. This committee is also sending a child afflicted with a harelip to Dallas for an operation.

The club was favored with a piano selection by Miss Nancy Dawes.
