NOSIN... WITH POLLY

The street is quite... It's hard to get used to... even the puppies up and down the street look lonely, they cannot understand why the high spirited energetic youngsters leave each morning in that long yellow bus and do not return until late afternoon. Our dog, Bourbon, is more fortunate than other dogs on our street because he lives next door to the only Kindergarten. Knowing most every child in this end of town, Bourbon, can't figure out why they all go inside the house and won't come out and play with him. Each year when the old yellow bus starts its rounds to pick up the kiddos one cannot help but note the quietness and hush that falls over the town. We're indeed glad we are not living in a country where youths are carted off to military school for good, by the time they are out "of diapers" we love their laughter, we love the sunshine that seems to linger in a place where youth abides.

"NOSIN"
This was brought in by one of our readers, it was composed by a mother shortly before her death. The truth in her poem can be felt by every mother whose family has grown up and left home.

SMUDGES ON THE WALL
We are lonely since no little feet
Go patter on our floor
An no little dirty fingers
Makes marks upon our door

No little thoughtless children
To let the flies come in
But since we are old and lonely
How we want them back again
We go into the kitchen
To bake a cake at noon
There are no little chubby hands
Reaching up to lick the spoon

There are no baby fingers
To tie up when they bleed
It seems our lives are useless
For us there is no need
As all of them have grown and gone
Maybe we can have a part
And instead of binding fingers
We can bind up wounded hearts
As they go out to battle
With the world and its woes
How we wish they were back again
To trample on our toes

All you who have little ones
And feel the need of rest
Try to be very patient
And know that you are blessed
They will grow up and go away
In no time at all
And you will think a thing of beauty
Is all the smudge on the wall.

National Red Cross Issues Appeal To Lamb County Chapter For Aid

An appeal to residents of Lamb County for $1146, our quota to help restore thousands of disaster victims on the Gulf Coast to normal living was issued today by Mrs. Bonnie Haberter, chairman to the Lamb County Red Cross Chapter. The money will be used on the basis of family need to rebuild, repair, and refurnish homes swept away by the mountainous tides and 190-mile-an-hour winds of Hurricane Camille, which struck the coast of Louisiana, Mississippi, and Alabama on August 17. "The murderous force of the storm, one of the most destructive in U. S. history, centered on the Mississippi resort cities of Biloxi and Gulfport," Mrs. Bonnie Haberter, chapter chairman, said. "An eye witness at Gulfport said the destruction there was 'utter and unbelievable.'"

The local organization hopes to secure additional memberships from men over 35 years. These men will be useful to the organization as associate members. Those 35 years or under may become active members in the association. President, Dean Jones, explained that membership to the Young Farmers Chapter was not limited to farmers only, but was available to everyone interested in agriculture. Membership dues is set at only $5.00 annually to those seeking membership. Meeting dates have been set for 8 p. m. every third Thursday of each month. These meetings will be held in the Vocational Agricultural Building on the campus. # Team Reports On Results Of Eight-Month Study Of The Golden Eagle

A Texas Technological College research team of scientists including a biologist, ornithologist, wildlife management expert and livestock specialist issued a lengthy report based upon an eight-month study of the golden eagle as a predator. Although many things were learned, the scientists pointed out the necessity for further study before definite conclusions can be reached.

The study was sponsored by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, the National Audubon Society and the National Wool Growers Association through a grant to Texas Tech's International Center for Arid and Semi-Arid Land Studies.

Participating in the 1968 study were Biology Professor Robert L. Packard and Wildlife Management Professor Eric G. Bolen as project leaders. Working with them were Professor M. Kent Rylander, ornithologist, and Professor Frank A. Hudson, professor of animal science.

The field research team consisting of graduate students compiled statistics on eagle numbers in three important ranching areas in Texas and New Mexico, traditional wintering grounds for migrant eagles. These areas also contain a smaller number of eagles year around.

Survey routes covered 4,500 square miles in Presidio, Jeff Davis, Culberson and Hudepeth

THE FIGHTING FRESHMAN are expected to have a good season, and the desire to give their best to the eagle seems unanimous. They are 66-Bobby Cleary, 50-Barry Pittman, 33-Nicholas Triana, 55-Kevin Anderson, 15-Larry Thomas, 87-Mario Price, 44-Bobby Jack Angeley, 11-Brian Sanderson, and 86-Guy Lynn Davis.

Counties in West Texas; 5,000 square miles in the Edwards Plateau area of Central Texas in Kerr, Edwards, Bandera, Real, Kinney and Uvalde Counties; and 2,400 square miles in Mculloch, San Saba, Llano, Lampasas and Mason Counties.

The New Mexico study area included 10,000 square miles near Roswell, an area for which aerial census figures were available for every year since 1964. The area customarily produces approximately a quarter-million lambs per year. The Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife provides the annual eagle census.

The team summed up their short-term study as follows: "Based upon the aerial census data available to us and on our interpretation of these data, we are unable to report the location of any meaningful populations of wintering golden eagles in the Edwards Plateau."

The census data for the Trans-Pecos area of Texas indicated eagle populations of 1-3 eagles per 100 square miles, or a total population of approximately 60-100 birds. We searched for nests in areas of previous use but located only a single active nest where an eaglet was successfully reared.

"Eagle populations in New Mexico were, by comparison with Texas, quite large. The overall population in the census area has been estimated as numbering 100 birds in the winter months; densities may reach 8-9 birds per 100 square miles on the average."

"Ranchers were visited in each area stressed that the 1968 eagle population present during their respective lambing seasons was not of the same size as other years. They believe rather large annual fluctuations occur in local eagle populations (wintering and nesting). Our inability to locate many active eagle nests in 1968 concurs with at least the latter point. The population estimates for eagles wintering in New Mexico have not varied greatly in recent years. However, larger and inconsistent variations appear in the Trans-Pecos area."

"The Tech Eagle Team found only one instance of known eagle predation that occurred during our survey; this happened in the Edwards Plateau Region and involved a bald eagle."

"More livestock carcasses were located per man-hour research in the Edwards Plateau Region (Edwards study area) than elsewhere. However, using criteria we established from the literature and from our own observations, we think that approximately 10 per cent of these carcasses were actually victims of predation (All types). Stillbirths and other circumstances seemed to account for many of the other losses."

"About 38 per cent of the dead lambs or kids found in the Val Verde Region were attributed to predatory losses. Only two dead lambs were discovered in the Guadalupe Mountain Region; of those, one appeared the victim of predation, the other was a birth fatality."

"Ranchers we interviewed indicated that little or no eagle damage occurred during the 1968 lambing season."

"Examination of materials found in eagle nests consistently revealed the extensive use (both in frequency and in composition) of jackrabbits and cottontails. Remains of livestock were found in most nests (average of about 70%), but represented only two animals per nest. The competitive aspects of avian versus ground predators, considering the availability of either small rodent populations or rabbits, seems an important ecological relationship acting in any damage eagles may cause to livestock."

"An appraisal of the habitat suggested that brush cover serves to protect important buffer foods from eagles (or ground predators) and that livestock may then be sought as food instead."

"Despite the fact that the studies did not fully coincide with the beginning of the various lambing seasons the research team members stated that there is no question that golden eagles do, upon occasion, kill young lambs."

They pointed out, however, that it is almost impossible to assess the exact amount of this economic loss because of the eagle's habit of feeding upon carrion. Also, the presence of lamb carcasses or parts of carcasses in eagle nests does not reflect the true picture, according to Dr. Eric G. Bolen, because many lambs which die from natural causes are represented in the carcasses found in eagle nests.

Regional Director William T. Krummes of the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife is commenting upon the report received from Texas Tech, calling attention to the fact that this report was made by a team of specialists, each representing a different discipline attention.

Wonderful things happen to pork when roasted over charcoal; it cooks well done inside with delightfully crisp flavored exterior. Roast the meat over glowing-rather than flaming-coals, suggests Gwendolynne Clayt, Extension consumer marketing specialist. If you have a meat thermometer, use it. Cook pork to an internal temperature of 185 degrees whether cooked indoors or out. Pork ribs ends are a good choice for barbecuing.

Life At The Century Mark

Honolulu, Hawaii—Would you like to live to be a hundred? A Gallup poll once showed that half the population fancied the idea of blowing out 100 birthday candles at a time. But the goal may be more appealing to contemplate than to achieve.

A study of 267 persons who have reached that age reveals that only 13 of them express any eagerness to continue living. The rest, according to researcher Dr. Joseph Lerner of the University of Hawaii School of Medicine, are either discontented or apathetic.

Throughout most of their long lives, the doctor found, these centenarians had had relatively few serious illnesses. But now, 10 were completely blind and five completely deaf. Another 79 had seriously defective hearing or vision.

Easily confused because of their similarity in both shape and flavor, smoked picnic and smoked ham are different cuts of meat. Mrs. Gwendolyn Clyatt, Extension consumer marketing specialist, explains. Meat cut from the shoulder section is called picnic; meat from the leg is ham. Although both meats are baked, smoked picnic should be cooked slightly longer than ham for best flavor and tenderness.

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Chaney and Melissa had dinner, Thursday night in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Middleton.

"Mini-Cooks' Cooking Books" To Go On Sale September 13

Lubbock-A Mini-Cooks' Tea Party, for ages 8 to 80, will launch a new publication, the "Mini-Cooks' Cooking Book," Saturday, September 13, from 2-5 p. m. at The Museum on the campus at Texas Tech University.

Dunlap's will furnish fashions for two style shows, scheduled for 2:30 and 3:30 p. m. Door prize drawings will be held at 3 p. m. and 4 p. m. Children of members of the West Texas Museum Association will be models for the style shows, according to Mrs. R. Q. Lewis, president.

The public is invited to the Tea Party. Tickets are available from members of the Women's Council, or may be purchased at The Museum, or Dunlap's downtown or Caprock Center stores. Admission is 50 cents.

Refreshments prepared from recipes in the cookbook, complied by the Fine Arts Committee of the Women's Council of the West Texas Museum Association, will be served by live "mini-cooks", daughters, granddaughters and nieces of Women's Council members, according to Mrs. J. C. Chambers, chairman of the event.

Illustrated by artist Pat Allgood, the book contains recipes for dishes which can be prepared by the younger set, but are equally popular with the sophisticated hostess. Party ideas, table decorations, and simple crafts for entertaining are included in the book.

Recipe cards feature the mini-cook illustrations, and original "Mini-Cook" dolls, made by Lubbock artist Gerri Grigg, will be on sale at the party, and will also be presented for door prizes. Mrs. Richard Dickey is chairman of decorations for the Tea Party.

Dolls are available in pairs for $3 plus tax. Recipe cards are $1 a box plus tax. The "Mini-Cooks' Cooking Book" is priced at $3 plus tax. Mrs. Russell Bean, chairman of distribution and sales, announced.

Mrs. John F. Lott is chairman of the committee which compiled the cookbook and homesteaded the recipes.

Following the Tea Party launching, the "Mini-Cooks' Cooking Book" will be on sale at The Museum sales desk as well as book stores and gift shops.

Net proceeds from the project will be used to further the work of the Association in arts and education through The Museum.

Financial Facts
By Norlan Dudley

The "half dollar explosion" took place from 1793 to 1833. The total silver coinage of that period amounted to $96.3 million. Of that aggregate, $33 million of 90% consisted of half dollars. Four percent of the amount was in silver dollars. The remaining 5.1% took in the smaller coins.

Half dollars predominated because they were cheap to coin. In those days, you could bring silver bullion to the Mint. By paying a brassage charge, you could walk away with half dollars.

Thus with half dollars, you didn't have to wait. Should you want smaller denominations, the delay was great. So people with silver bullion went for half dollars.

Today, they are very scarce.

September 11, Date Set For Annual Field Day At HPRF

Hundreds of West Texas area farmers are expected to be on hand September 11 for the 13th Annual Field Day at the High Plains Research Foundation.

With the addition of agricultural chemicals and seed distributor exhibits to the regular features, the Field Day is expected to be one of the most successful since the Foundation began in 1956.

The chemicals and seed displays will be exhibited in a tent on the lawn south of the Moody Building near area where field tours will begin.

The chemical and seed displays will become a part of the farm machinery exhibits which has proven to be one of the most successful features of Field Day activities. It is estimated that the farm machinery exhibits will number some 50 to 60 different exhibits. Noting its popularity, Longmeyer, Foundation director, said the farm machinery exhibit grows every year.

Field Day activities begin with research plot field tours at 1:30 p. m. These tours will continue until 4:30 p. m. Foundation facilities will be open for inspection during the afternoon.

The evening program will begin at 5:00 p. m. Guest speaker will be Congressman Bob Price, U. S. Representative, 18th Congressional District.

Door prizes will be given away during the program. A highlight of the program will be drawing for a free Hawaiian Vacation for two and $500 in expense money. The vacation has been donated by Hale County State Bank, Plainview Coop Congress and City National Bank.

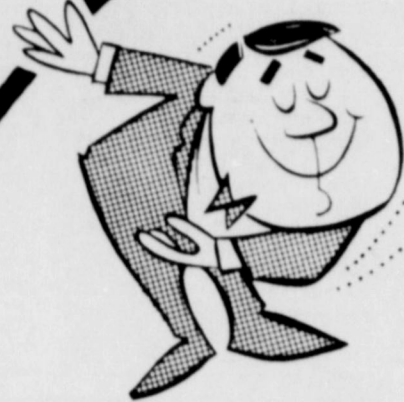

Area residents are invited to attend the activities and view the latest research underway at the Foundation. Special areas of research includes new programs in minimum tillage, castor volunteer control and the swine feeding economics study.

The Board of Trustees will conduct a regular business meeting the morning of Field Day.
