'Lame Duck' Amendment Given Ratification By 36th State

Measure Goes Into Force By Missouri Vote

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP)—Ratification of the "lame duck" amendment was completed Monday when Missouri became the thirty-sixth state to approve it. Missouri was the last needed state to approve this modernization of the federal machinery. The amendment will become effective October 15 next.

Hoover
The Republicans in congress are pushing out on Mr. Hoover in substantial numbers. He can not count on his normal Republican support in the votes that are to come before March 4.

The underlying feeling was forcibly illustrated when he was overruled on the Philippine Independence Bill. If he had vetoed that bill prior to election he would have been sustained in both houses.

That may be one of the reasons why Mr. Hoover is not to burn up his papers this week.

Charity Begins At Home! Let's Get The Job Done Now!

CHARITY begins at home! Every community in America faces a problem created by prolonged economic stress. They have more men, women and children who must be given necessities of life than in many years.

But this money cannot legally be used to help those who are unable to work—unable because of illness or because they are otherwise physically incapacitated.

Every cent of the money raised will be used for charity. This plan for meeting the responsibility has been devised as the most economical and satisfactory from the standpoint of the public as well as those in need of charity.

By providing sufficient money at this time we can care for this problem now for the entire year, and have charity work done through our central agency, without wasteful duplication that so often causes worthy people to suffer while unworthy ones receive benefit they do not deserve.

Gresham's Law

Little or no mention is being made of Gresham's Law in the current push over the "barter" movement, currency inflationary schemes, and hoarding dollars.

Sir Thomas Gresham, founder of the Royal Exchange in London, first stated the principle of his celebrated law in 1590. Boiled down, Gresham's Law means that bad money drives good money out of circulation. He stated his principle thus:

"Where by legal enactment a government assigns the same nominal value to two or more forms of circulatory medium whose intrinsic values differ, payments will always, as far as possible, be made in that medium of which the cost of production is least, the more valuable medium tending to disappear from circulation."

By a slight stretch of the imagination and a considerable wrench to economic formulae, an analogy to Gresham's Law may be found in the present situation.

Commodities, which may be considered as a form of circulatory medium, are so much cheaper and more plentiful than money that the old system of barter is coming back into use. While money stays in hiding, the cheaper medium of commodities comes to the front, and a butcher swaps a side of bacon for the repair of his refrigerator, or a farmer trades a wagonload of maize heads for a pair of boots.

The disparity of value between money and commodities is at the bottom of the present stagnation throughout the world. Money is so dear that three dollars will buy a fine hog, or a little more than twenty will buy a bale of cotton.

How to close the gap between money and commodities is the big problem of the time. Those who advocate a cheapening of money would find that Gresham's Law would rise to confound them. All the same, some political and financial leaders are said to be in favor of a bit of inflation of the currency—really, it means a devaluation of money value by increasing (inflating) the circulatory medium.

The other method, one that Congress and various farmers' organizations have been trying to pass, is to wait for the announcement of the Roosevelt Cabinet and the formulation of the Roosevelt program. There is more uncertainty in the air than there used to be. We can see this in the action of the State Department in reaffirming the Stimson Doctrine. Here is an example of co-operation between the outgoing and the incoming administrations brought about quietly and effectively through the simple method of honest understanding between Mr. Stimson and Mr. Roosevelt. Had other matters of equal importance been dealt with in the same spirit on both sides there is no reason to doubt that the situation in Washington today in regard to such vitally important questions as the budget would not be so confused.

However, for various reasons, largely personal and temperamental, the situation is confused. There is an administration program which the Democrats will not accept; there is, as yet, no Roosevelt program which they can support. As a result there is silence, doubt, and uncertainty among the responsible leaders of the Democratic party, and, in the interval of waiting, the Huey Long and others are filling the air with their threats and their promises.

They are saying, in effect, that by one device or another they wish to inflate the currency and in one spectacular stroke relieve the burden of all debtors. In view of the fact that at the moment no one is speaking authoritatively for the Roosevelt administration, there are many persons who suppose that these inflationists, some of whom were ardent Roosevelt men, are revealing the true intentions of the new administration.

Yet this belief, which is shared both by the Huey Longs and by those who have let themselves be frightened by the grimaces of Huey Long, is groundless unless we are to assume that Mr. Roosevelt intends to break every promise he made during the campaign. To believe that Huey Long is a spokesman of the new administration is to impugn the good faith of Franklin D. Roosevelt. For the commitments of the President-elect to a policy of orderly adjustment of the debt structure are specific and unequivocal.

Let us recall these commitments. Therefore to begin with, the Democratic platform which is declared to be a covenant with the people to be faithfully kept by the party when entrusted with power. The first three covenants of that platform placed first because they are first in order of importance, promised (1) a reduction of federal expenditures; (2) the maintenance of the national credit by a federal budget annually balanced; and (3) "a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards" and an international monetary conference to consider the rehabilitation of silver and related questions.

But we are not dependent upon the platform or upon any inferential promises drawn from its brief statements. On October 21, speaking at St. Louis, Mr. Roosevelt gave his views as to how the eight principal classes of domestic debt should be dealt with. First, he said, "at the very top of the credit structure of the country, surpassing all other groups in moral and material importance, stand the obligations of the Federal Government." These are "paramount," he said, "When they go, everything goes. Happily these obligations are secure. They suffer only to the extent that the government is permitted to be extravagant, wasteful or ill-managed. They suffer if the federal budget is not balanced, and particularly where the deficit of one year is not cleared up in the succeeding year." It is conceivable that the man who spoke these words could consider proposals to start the printing presses?

He then passed on to the next two classes of debts: the obligations of the states, and the obligations of cities, counties, and other local units. In respect to both classes his position was that their bonds must be kept "sound and secure" by the balancing of budgets through economy and honest administration.

That is not the language of an inflationist who wishes to relieve all debts by blowing up the currency.

Mr. Roosevelt then discussed a fourth class of debts, the foreign bonds held privately in this country. His view was that the investors had been badly misled but that they must take their losses. He did not propose to relieve the foreign debtors by reducing the gold content of the American dollar.

The fifth class of debts, he went on to say, are the domestic bonds of industrial companies. His view was that the amount is relatively small, and that these bonds are not a serious problem. For during the boom American industries tended to pay off their debts rather than to create new ones since they were able to finance themselves so largely by the sale of stock.

The sixth class he named were public utility obligations. His con-

I BOUGHT A CHEAP WASHER!

The lesson was not worth the cost!

Many have found that buying a cheap washer was a costly lesson—that their money was squandered instead of invested.

The Maytag is not a cheap washer. Nor is it expensive. Its value—based on cost of washings—makes it the most economical washer to buy. For it offers the lowest cost per washing of any washer.

The extra quality in a Maytag is extra value for every dollar you invest—practical value in better washing, longer life of clothes and more years of service from the washer.

Don't buy a washer till you've seen the Maytag. Please for a Maytag free home demonstration.

clusion was that, apart from financial success represented by pyramided holding companies, these obligations "do not at this time constitute a problem in American finance."

The seventh class were railroad obligations. His position was that "the savings of millions of persons... are involved in the securities of their railroads," that the government should, for a specified period, "see the railroads through, provided they put their houses in order," and that "where adjustments are to be made... let us arrange for their handling by a swift and orderly method."

The eighth class were real estate mortgages, urban and rural. As to urban mortgages, he proposed relief from excessive taxation and easier credit facilities. For farm mortgages he proposed lower interest rates, extending the time of capital payments, and action to prevent farmers from being driven from their homes.

Now any one who will consider this approach to the problem of debts will see that it is the very opposite of the inflationist's approach. Mr. Roosevelt proposed in an orderly way to adjust those debts which require adjustment and to maintain all obligations, public and private, which it is possible to maintain. The inflationist proposes to strike at the currency itself, to debase it deliberately, and at one stroke change the value of all debts and obligations. The inflationist method would propose to relieve not only the farmer who has a mortgage but the public utility company which has bonds outstanding, to reduce the value not only of money owing on real estate mortgages, but all money—money in savings banks, money in insurance policies, money in government bonds, money owing for salaries, for wages, for every kind of fixed obligation.

Mr. Roosevelt ran and was elected after a campaign in which he made it entirely clear that he proposed to deal with the debt problem by detailed and specific adjustments. To suppose that he has secretly scrapped these pledges, and is now following Huey Long, is to believe that there is no honor left in our public life. (Copyright, 1933, New York Tribune, Inc.)

Short Course To Be Held For Women At Settles In February

All Howard county women—including town and country—are reminded of the approaching Short Course to be given at the Settles Hotel on Feb. 10, 11. cockpit, when his body was found. He had cut the switch and flooded the motor with chemicals carried for that purpose, to prevent it from catching fire in case of an accident.

He had taken a fire extinguisher from the dash board in the cockpit and held it in his right hand. His left hand rested on his right knee. He had unbuckled the safety belt.

He had saved the mail, but lost his life. Those who helped carry the body to San Antonio said it was plain that Fuller had kept his ship afloat as long as possible with the fuel supply the ship carried and then, after doing everything possible to prevent fire attempted to land in the best way possible. He apparently had attempted to raise himself from the cockpit after un-tion that the government purchase American products EXCEPT when they cannot be readily obtained and when the price is too high.

Notes - Mr. Hoover has not yet decided what he will do after he leaves office. That announcement denying he intended to do any writing was made in order to keep the publishers off his neck.

Hussia

Recognition of the Soviets or continuation of the Hoover-Stimson policy is assumed to be the choice before Mr. Roosevelt. There are close friends here who believe he has a new departure in his mind.

Germany

Chancellor von Schleicher as luncheon host to Dr. Schwarz, the German consul in New York stirred comment in Berlin. Lunch hour is reserved for big-time appointments.

McAdoo

Appointment of a secretary of the interior from the west, preferably California had much of Senator-elect McAdoo's attention while out.

Glass

Would Governor Byrd of Virginia inherit the seat of Senator Glass if a cabinet place were the senator's choice? Yes—as probably as he would replace Senator Swanson if the lightning struck there.

Railroads

Three major coming railroad difficulties are worrying the experts. Missouri Pacific has a large maturity in 1933 and will be unable to meet it if present requirements for collateral are maintained.

Economy

Whatever differences of opinion the democratic leaders may have they are united on one thing. They agreed that Mr. Roosevelt shall be given complete authority and responsibility for carrying through his economy plans in the administrative departments.

Counties

Final analysis of the election by counties shows an amusing sidelight. Hoover carried only one county on the entire Pacific coast. That was Benton county in Oregon—named for one of the most active democrats of history.

Debts

New York bears reminders that drastic debt legislation is on the way from the legislatures of several western states.

Jury Fails To Reach Verdict In Second Trial For Damages

Suit of Sidney Gurian, New Haven, Conn., youth against the Texas and Pacific Railway company for damages must be tried a third time.

Demand

Local business men are still counting on a shortage of processed goods to bring about a trade revival this year. Normally six billion dollars worth of industrial equipment is ordered each year.

Sales Tax

Mr. Roosevelt was "shocked" recently over the sales tax because he has that earmarked for use by the states. He is understood here to think it will enable development of lower real estate and other taxes.

Bonds

The liberal Mr. Eastman and two other members of the interstate commerce commission are supposed to have had breakfast here last week with Mr. Roosevelt. They went over the railroad plans.

What the bankers want is: (1) First line securities valued for two years or so as to interest charges by the government; (2) Second line securities at 2 to 3 per cent interest instead of present 5 and 6 per cent and (3) Wipe out the fringes of hopeless overloading.

The bankers claim their scheme would lift bond prices from 10 to 20 points. Every potentially sound bank and insurance company could put its finances in order at once.

Inflation

In the best banking circles you will hear that they have organized with the insurance companies to kill inflationary legislation. They are confident it is as good as dead right now.

Fruit Juice From California Flown To Diners In Europe

Diners in the capitals of Europe may soon be able to sip fresh orange juice from California prepared by a special quick-freezing process if a test shipment via air express, which passed through here recently for New York proves satisfactory, according to Jesse Maxwell, local traffic representative of American Airways.

Repeal Of Robertson Law Again Asked

ATLANTA, (UP)—Bills introduced in the house of representatives include a group of measures regulating supervision of insurance and repeal of the present Robertson Insurance act under which companies operating in the state are required to invest 75 per cent of their reserves in the state.

Attempts to repeal the act have been made at almost every legislature since it was passed in 1907. The plea for repeal is that it caused big companies to withdraw and keeps investment money out of the state rather than causing investment.

Rep. P. L. Anderson, San Antonio, renewed the attempt made by him at the last legislature to stamp out slot machines. His bill declares them a nuisance liable to seizure and destruction.

Decreasing the license fees on motorcycles, side cars and automobiles. Under the proposal motorcycles would pay $4, side cars $2 and automobiles a graduated fee which works out to $2.80 on a 2000 pound car and $11.25 on a 4500 pound car.

Authorizing county commissioners to pay $20 a month penalty to persons over 70 who have less than $250 yearly income.

Providing for the state furnishing free Spanish text books in Mexican border counties with cities of 5,000.

Licensing fish dealers.

Prohibiting suits over mineral claims to be started after five years' acquiescence.

Creating one state tax board to take over all tax collecting functions now apportioned among various state departments.

The proposed automobile registration fee act calls for 14 cents per hundred pound weight on cars weighing up to 2000 pounds. Those between 2001 and 3500 pounds would pay 18 cents a hundred; those from between 3501 to 4500 24 cents a hundred and those over 4500 would pay 25 cents a hundred.

Anderson's test a legislative record by introducing 15 bills in one day.

History Of Plains Course Is Arranged

This extension course on the "History of the Great Plains," offered by Texas Tech College, will officially begin here Wednesday evening when Professor W. C. Holden lectures to the class for the first time.

Nineteen have already signed for the course and a number more have signified they will do likewise. The class is being started with the exception that at least one or more will sign up at once.

Persons in Stanton and Garden City who contemplate taking the course are asked by Mrs. Pauline C. Brigham, county superintendent, to be here Wednesday evening. An out of town party was here Friday when an unauthorized letter allegedly bearing the name of the county superintendent, was received saying the course was to have started then.

The course is open to any one and is not confined to school teacher or college students, although graduate and undergraduate credit will be granted in a Texas school except the university where only undergraduate credit is granted.

Number Of Newspapers In United States Remains Almost Stable In 1932

PHILADELPHIA—Despite general condition in the year 1932, the number of newspapers and periodicals published in the United States and Canada remained almost stable, according to statistics just released with the sixty-fifth edition of N. W. Ayer & Son's Directory of Newspapers and Periodicals for 1933.

At the beginning of 1933 there are a total of 2368 dailies, with an aggregate circulation of 38,826,000 and 11,970 weekly newspapers—as against 2415 dailies and 11,978 weeklies a year ago.

Trade publications vary in gains and losses, remaining on the whole fairly constant. There have been slight increases in the listing of agricultural, financial and banking, advertising, automobile and insurance publications. On the other hand,
