BEGIN HERE TODAY MILLICENT GRAVES' employer, GEORGE DRIMGOLD, tells her he has a confession to dictate and warns her against a woman in a black ermine coat. Millicent leaves the office and sees such a woman. Later she finds her purse has been taken and a similar one substituted. In the elevator she meets a distinguished-looking man of middle age.

Returning to the office, Millicent finds Drimgold dead. In panic she rushes away and registers at a hotel under an assumed name. Next day she meets the stranger again. He tells her his name is JARVIS HAPP. Happ sends her to a beauty shop where, in spite of her protests, she is transformed into a brunet. Happ takes her home, introducing her as his secretary. He gives her a suitcase filled with accounts and asks her to open a set of books. DICK GENTRY, Happ's partner, hints some of the dealings have been shady. Millicent, alone in her bedroom, realizes someone has entered the room without knocking. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX Millicent whirled about indignantly, to find herself staring into the calm, steady, gray eyes of Norman Happ. "You," she exclaimed in quick surprise. He said nothing, but took a couple of steps toward her. "I suppose," she said scornfully, "just because I'm working for your father you feel free to walk into my room without knocking. I suppose it's part of the duties of my employment..." He interrupted her with a voice that was choked with some emotion. "Forget it," he said. "I didn't dare to knock. I had to sneak in here." "What do you mean?" "I didn't want anyone to know that I was here. It would have been bad for both of us. If I'd knocked at the door someone would have heard the knock and seen me talking with you." "But why must you talk with me?" she asked, her curiosity getting the better of her, and supplementing the rather alarming discovery that in the presence of this young man her pulse became more rapid, her self-assurance seemed to melt away like ice under a hot sun. "I don't know why," he said. "Perhaps you could tell me." "But how should I know what you're referring to?" "What," he asked, "has Bob Caise got on you?" "Why, what are you talking about? What makes you think he has anything on me? I don't know what you're referring to." "He has something on you right enough," Norman Happ said. "I know him, and I know the way he works. I've seen that self-satisfied smile on his face before. He's playing with you as a cat plays with a mouse. You can't trust that chap." "But can't a man smile with-

Norman's hands dropped. "Please," he said, "remember that he's not to be trusted."

"He seemed to me," she said, "to be very alert and intelligent." "Oh, I'll grant you he's intelligent and clever all right," Norman said, his lips unsmiling, his eyes sober. "But what does that mean? Virtually nothing." "On the contrary, I think it means a good deal. I detest mediocrity." "You like the kind of brains that Bob Caise has?" "I'm sure I can't answer that question," she said, "because I haven't seen enough of him." "You'll see more of him all right. What's he got on you?" She had regained much of her self-control. "I'm sorry," she said, "but you can't come in here and talk to me like that. No man has anything on me. I am free to do as I please. I come as I please and I go as I please. I ask permission from no one, and I make explanation to no one." "And what I'm asking for is an explanation?" he asked. "It amounts to that." "And you won't make it?" "No." "Will you say that he has not?" "I won't say anything one way or the other." "Will you remember what I told you about him?" he pleaded, and, as he spoke, he took a step forward. She was quick to retreat, and at her retreat, Norman caught himself, his hands dropping to his sides. "Please," he said, "please remember that he's not to be trusted." "Who is to be trusted?" He shrugged his shoulder and said thickly, "I could offer myself if you hadn't lost your confidence in me." "I'm not so certain that I've lost my confidence in you," she said. "It's simply a feeding of complete bewilderment. I've never received quite such baffling treatment as I've received since I came into this house." "In what way?" "In many ways." "Has anyone been insulting?" he asked. "No, not that. But it's such a remarkable crowd. I can't understand you at all." "What can't you understand?" "I can't understand the relationships. I can't figure you all out. You all seem to understand each other, yet you seem to have a feeling of mutual distrust and suspicion." "There are some things," he said, "which go on here that you won't understand until you've been here for a while." "Such as what?" she asked. "Oh," he said, "the various people. The influences that they have on each other." "I think," she said, "that Mrs. Happ exercises a very complete control over the household, doesn't she?" "At times," Norman Happ admitted, "without enthusiasm, his tone seeming almost surly." "And yet," Millicent mused, "your father is a man of very strong character. He is very much of an enigma to me. Tell me, what does he do?" "You mean for a living?" "Yes." "He makes investments." "What sort of investments?" "Almost any sort." "One could make definition including gambling," she said. She took the sting from the remark by giving a quick little laugh. Norman Happ did not laugh. "One could," he said. "And you and Robert Caise don't seem to get along." He said nothing. "Then there is Mrs. Eaton, a most peculiar woman." As Norman Happ remained silent, Millicent decided to press him for more information. She felt that in some way he would talk to her, felt that she had some power over him which would draw him out despite any mental reservations he might have made to the contrary. "And yet," she said, "there seems to be a mystery about the whole place, something definite, something menacing, something that's threatening." "Has Robert Caise been filling your mind with that sort of stuff?" he asked. "No. I feel it myself. I feel that there's some menacing personality dominating this entire household, a personality which keeps in the background, and..." Her chance remark seemed to have been a charge of verbal dynamite. Norman Happ jumped as though someone had stuck him with a pin. Before he could arrest it, an involuntary expression was torn from his lips. "The woman in black ermine!" he exclaimed. Glorifying Yourself

BY ALICIA HART
Writer for NEA Service

To reduce hips and waistline and to make your legs and back-bone limber and supple, Jac Auer suggests a variation of the old high scissors exercise with which you're probably quite familiar. This is done with the weight on the back of the neck and that fatty spot between your shoulder blades.

Lie flat on the floor with hands on the hips. Extending the legs straight up, raise your hips off the floor, balancing yourself with arms and elbows. Now, holding the right leg perfectly straight, force the left one up and over your head until toes touch the floor. Hold the position a second, then relax and force the left leg back and up until its parallel with the right one.

Reverse, keeping the left leg straight—toes pointed toward the ceiling—and forcing the right leg over your head until the right foot touches the floor. Once you have learned how to balance yourself, do the exercise more rapidly, using first one leg and then the other and making the toes on each touch the floor beyond your head ten times.

Remember that any exercise should be done slowly until you have mastered the technique. If you practice it too fast at first, the chances are you'll always do it in correctly.

This is particularly true when you do bending routines to reduce your stomach and improve the shape of the legs. If you can't lean over and touch the floor with fingertips while holding knees perfectly straight, by all means do not flex the knees in order to get your hands down to the floor. Just keep on trying—day after day—and finally you will be able to do it right, thereby getting full benefit from the exercise.

Texas Charters in Rise for February

Special to The Democrat AUSTIN, March 25.—An increase occurred both in number and capitalization of new charters granted to Texas corporations during February in comparison with the corresponding month last year, according to the University of Texas Bureau of Business Research. There was, however, a sharp drop from the previous month.

"Reports from the office of Secretary of State give a total of 143 new corporations, a decline of 23 per cent from the previous month but an increase of 10 per cent over February last year, while total capitalization of $1,569,000 was 48 per cent below that of January but 22 per cent above February a year ago, "the Bureau's report said. "All classes of corporations shows a decline in the number of new charters granted as compared with January. But in comparison with February last year, there was a sharp increase in the number granted manufacturing, banking-finance, and real estate-building concerns."

Memphis Owls Start Training for First Class

OPEN PLAY AT WELLINGTON SUNDAY

Series of Practice Tilts To Precede League Battles

The Memphis Owls, baseball team that is to carry Memphis' colors in the western division of the Red River Valley Baseball League, officially opened training here yesterday afternoon, preparing to open a series of practice tilts Sunday at Wellington.

At Fair Park Stadium, the handful of players that reported locally spent the afternoon tossing balls back and forth, limbering up arms that have been inactive all winter. Others who likely will play with the Owls this season went into training at Esteline, while two or three more expected to sign with the local club have participated in a couple of games.

Initial Contest

After a day or two of warming up, the group assembled here will go into batting practice. Before Sunday, Manager Jack Boone is expected to get the entire squad together for one group workout that will include infield practice.

The Memphians oppose one of its leading rivals in the league in Sunday's initial practice clash. The club invades Wellington. The game is to start at 3:30 o'clock. On the following Sunday, the Wellington club returns the visit, and a week later the league season gets underway.

Boone expects to have a line-up of about 16 or 18 players to start the season. Each of them will be used in the practice games. Players have not yet been officially signed by the clubs.

Three Moundsmen

Buck Whitfield, right-hander, was among those reporting yesterday and probably will open the Owls' mound wars. Stewart, another right-hander, is expected to report within a few days. To this pair, Boone expects to add one southpaw hurler, giving him a mound staff of three to carry the club through the regular Sunday engagements.

The remainder of the line-up will carry names familiar to local diamond fans—Simms, Moore, Marcum, Morrison, Giosson, Greenwood, Holland and others.

New Faces

Two new faces are expected to be seen in the regular line-up, if the boys live up to advance notices. Both are working on the Donley County highway project and will be available throughout most of the season. They will fill two weak spots on the Owl line-up if they produce first rate baseball. One is McIntosh, a shortstop, who "looks good" to Manager Boone. The other, a third sacker, is an Indian. His nickname is "Chief" and that seems to be all that anyone here knows about him.

Fair Park field will undergo some radical changes during the next two weeks, as workmen change it from a football field into a baseball diamond. Built to house both sports the part offers Memphis the finest baseball facilities it has ever possessed.

To Arrange Diamond

Three of the huge floodlight poles will be removed, as will one section of the fence around the grid field. The foul lines will run inside the east fence and in front of the fourth light pole on the opposite side of the field.

It has not been decided at which end of the park the diamond will be placed. The north end, where it has been before of-

'Bama Grid Ace Threatens Owen

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another of a series of stories on big league training camps. It deals with the Detroit Tigers.

By HARRY GRAYSON (Sports Editor, NEA Service) LAKELAND, Fla., March 26.—The most talked of player in the

Chester Morgan

Detroit camp is not one of last season's satellites—the record-breaking Schoolboy Rowe, Bridges, Greenberg, Gehring, Goslin, or little Jo-Jo White, whose flashing spikes stirred up all the trouble in the world series.

He is not Chester Collins Morgan, the new outfielder who led Texas League hitters with a cool .342.

The young man creating the most excitement down here is untried in professional baseball, but perfectly at home in the searching day of the spotlight.

He is Millard Fleming Howell, better known as Dixie, who wound up a brilliant football career at the University of Alabama with one of the greatest individual performances in the history of the game against Stanford in the Rose Bowl.

Detroit paid Howell $6000 for signing a contract. Scout Eddie Goostree, the discoverer of Rowe, having been instructed to land the Tuscaloosa Flyer at any cost. The Tigers had to outbid the wealthy Yankees, among others.

Howell does not appear to be the least bit tightened up as the result of his wearing football experience. Nor has his speed been impeded by a left ankle broken as a freshman and a left knee injured in the 1933 Vanderbilt feels better infield ground but shortens the right field almost too much. At the soft end, the outfield fences would be at distances hard to drive over (fans would have adequate parking room inside the park and behind the bleachers. However, the infield would be sloping toward home plate, giving the pitcher a decided advantage over the batters. This appears to be the most likely choice when the diamond is laid out.

ARLINGTON DOWNS WILL OPEN SPRING RACE MEET THURSDAY

(The United Press) DALLAS, March 26.—Entries from prominent stables throughout the country are arriving here for the opening of the Spring meeting at Arlington Downs, March 28.

Opening event is the Inaugural Handicap for three-year-olds and to be run over the Waggoner course, 150 feet less than six furlongs. The stake is $2,000 added.

21 Days of Racing

The meeting is to continue for 21 days and will end April 20 in the colorful Texas Derby over a mile and a furlong course for $15,000 added stake. The event is for three-year-olds.

Other outstanding events of the Spring meeting are the Fort Worth Handicap for three-year-olds and upward for a $5,000 purse over a mile and a sixteenth course; the Dallas Handicap for $5,000 added, a mile and a furlong race for three-year-olds and upward and the Three D's Handicap for three-year-olds and upward over a mile and a sixteenth course for $5,000 added.

Added Purses

Three more races for $2,000 added purses are the Juvenile Stakes for two-year-olds over four and a half furlongs, the Blue Bonnet Handicap for three-year-olds and up over a six furlong course and the Arlington Handicap for three-year-olds over a six furlong course.

Many leading stables, now at the Alama Downs, will send entries to Arlington Downs at the close of the racing season at Houston.

OUT TO REPEAT '34 BENGAL VICTORY

Tommy Bridges Schoolboy Rowe Elden Auker

Watch Your Job, Owen

Howell played second base until last year, when he switched to the outfield because of his supposed trick knee.

Mickey Cochrane is using Howell at third in inter-club and exhibition games while Marvin Owen convalesces following a sinus operation.

A bit nervous the first day or two, Howell then settled down to catch Cochrane's eye with his throwing, running, and get up and go.

The youngster is fortunate in

Dixie Howell

coming to a manager like Cochrane. The top Tiger played football himself, and appreciates the Hartford, Ala., lad's competitive ability.

"If Howell has as much stuff as he appears to have now, he's going to be a tough fellow for opposing pitchers to get out," beams Cochrane. "Dixie isn't the type who is content to remain on first base after getting there."

Howell again is fortunate in joining a club which has no extra infielder of worth. The composite ability of Flea Clifton, Heinie Schube, and Francis Parker, recalled from the Beaumont subsidiary, does not equal one first-class infielder.

Indeed, at this writing, Cochrane is not at all certain that Howell will go to Beaumont or to any other minor league outfit.

No Stranger to Game

Howell is more experienced than the average college player. During the last two summers Dixie participated in six games weekly with the Dothan, Ala., club, of the Dixie Amateur League, and prior to that got in three games weekly with Tallahassee, of the Georgia-Florida League. Both of these circuits play a good grade of semi-pro ball.

The genial Mick known as Cochrane is keeping his glimmers glued on the antics of Chester Collins Morgan, too. The Tigers felt the want of a good, slugging outfielder in the thick of the going last season. Pete Fox, although he outdid all the other Bengal flycatchers in the world series, was weak with the willow during the pennant season.

Morgan was brought up from San Antonio because of his stick mark of .342, and the youngster has been shaping up as a big leaguer. His presence is a definite asset to the team, and will give Cochrane a strong replacement in the garden in case Goslin, White or Fox cracks up. He hits left-handed and throws with his right.

The infield is pretty much of a stand-pat proposition, the only possible exception being the possibility of Howell taking over the hot corner job from Marv Owen. Greenberg will be back at first, Gehring at second, and Rogell at short.

The catching will be taken care of by Cochrane, Ray Hayworth, and possibly Frank Reiber, back from the minors and said to have learned to throw to second base.

Wanted: Southpaw Hurler

Pitching will center around the efforts of the "Big Three"—Rowe, Bridges, and Auker. This trio carried the hot last season, and there is reason to believe that Rowe, with his arm in better shape than in 1934, will be better than ever. The same goes for Auker. Firpo Marberry will be ready for relief.

The only weakness in this department seems to be on the left side. Southpaws of the excellent variety are a minus quantity, and Elton Hogsett and Carl Fisher are the only veterans.

Cochrane is hoping to make a starting southpaw out of the rookie Clyde (Mad) Hatter, up from Louisville for his first try in the majors.

BIG BILL TILDEN VALUES HIS TENNIS TROPHIES AT

PHILADELPHIA, March 26.—The glamorous collection of tennis trophies acquired by "Big Bill" Tilden during his many years as the game's greatest star, probably is the most valuable in the world.

In fact, Tilden, who is now heading a professional group of players, has insured his trophies for $10,000.

The most attractive of the collection is the three-year National Lawn Tennis Championship cup, 1911-22. Inscribed on it are the names of some of the most notable racketeers during the past 25 years.

Twice, Maurice E. McLaughlin, R. N. Williams and William M.

Johnston had their graves on it. But the first three-time winner by received permanent. Another outstanding won by "Big Bill" is a Cup, England. Tilden Wimbledon by world's greatest players. Among medals presented for his notable victories Olympic Medal, 1920; Medal, Old England of the world's champion of 1920 and 1921. Medal, and the U. S. Jubilee medals. However, one of proudest possessions is dated by Philadelphia 1921.

'Come on, Boy; One Jump and You're Safe'

Spring floods spreading over the lowlands of eight midwest and southern states brought hundreds of little tragedies as thousands of families abandoned their homes before the rising water. Here the camera recorded one such incident, as Charles Montgomery of Kennett, Mo., went to the rescue of his dog, saving him from the stump-top on which he found him, sitting marooned and terror-stricken.

RITZ

A new Philo Vance comes to the screen in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "The Casino Murder Case," opening today at the Ritz Theatre with Paul Lukas playing the famous detective role created by S. S. Van Dine. Lukas is teamed with Rosalind Russell, brilliant your leading woman of the New York stage who in "The Casino Murder Case" makes her seventh screen appearance within four months. Directed by Edwin Marin, the picture's cast includes Alison Skipworth, Donald Cook, Arthur Byron and Ted Healy.

PALACE

Two murders in an ancient and dismal French Chateau while a notorious criminal attempts to steal a rare old book worth many thousands of dollars furnish some of the thrills in Universal's thrilling "Secret of the Chateau," which opens today at the Palace theatre, with Clarie Dodd, Clark Williams, Alice White, and Jack La Rue in the leading roles.

A dozen persons are suspected, including Clark Williams, playing one of the heirs; Claire Dodd, a beautiful stealer of books; William Faversham, Jack LaRue, a former Paris Apache; Osgood Perkins, the butler; Cecil Elliott, who portrays his wife, the cook; and George E. Stone, in the role of a friend of Williams. The book in question is original copy of the Gutenberg Bible, the first book ever printed.

Naturally, everyone is trying to get possession of the Bible, and all will go at any lengths to get it. An eerie atmosphere is created by the ominous tolling of a bell atop the chateau just before each crime is committed.

TEXAS RANGERS MAY RETURN

ORGANIZATION of a modern state police force for Texas is being backed by numerous groups today. They would bring back the Texas Rangers, modernized and motorized in contrast to the famous old organization that today seems to have turned into a bunch of "revenoors."

Texas needs such an organization, composed of highly trained criminal fighters, unhampered by county boundaries, with latest methods of combating the modern outlaws, and above all courteous and observant of the rights and respect due law-abiding citizens. In a way, it is odd that Texas should be lagging so far behind many other states in this phase of law enforcement when it is the state that originated the plan, born with the Rangers.

Paul E. Fidler, writing in the current issue of Texas Municipalities, says that "Texas is trying to fight modern criminals with obsolete and outmoded police methods. A more direct explanation is found in the fact that, because the existing law-enforcing agencies do not operate under central direction, efficiency cannot be obtained. Through the obsolescence of the sheriff, constable and posse methods of policing rural areas, and through the nation-wide expansion of operation of the criminal element, the state police are seriously handicapped by the lack of a rapid communication system and the engineering of road blockades from a central point. Latter-day public enemies can race from one county of the state to another in stolen cars with little fear of immediate apprehension.

"It would seem well to institute a department of public safety which would include within its jurisdiction not only a bureau of state police, with such companion bureaus as criminal identification and records, intelligence and communication, but also the agencies which now perform inspectional and regulatory functions."

Mr. Fidler goes on to explain more minutely the workings of his proposed department, which are more or less of minor importance. His plan is worthy of consideration, for sooner or later Texas is going to be forced to follow other states along this line of law enforcement, possibly by reviving the historic Texas Rangers.

EUROPE DANCES WITH 'RED DEATH'

THE society folk of gay Vienna have found machine guns and target practice just too ducky for words, according to recent news dispatches.

One cable has it that such sideshow diversions as shooting galleries, introduced to the best Viennese circles recently by young Fascists, have made a tremendous hit; and finally, at a great ball in the former Imperial Palace, ladies in evening gowns deserted the dance floor to let fly with machine gun bullets at cardboard targets representing enemy soldiers.

Everyone, apparently, had the best of good times, and the home of the Strauss waltzes found machine-gunning much more fun than dancing.

This sort of thing, of course, is nothing but the froth which any spirited society is apt to throw off every now and then, and there is no sense in taking it too seriously. But to read about it, against the background of the war threat which is steadily rising higher and higher over Europe, is to get a creepy and uncomfortable feeling.

Edgar Allan Poe once wrote a story entitled "The Masque of the Red Death." It told about a land ravaged by a horrible plague known as red death. Sundry titled folk locked themselves in a remote castle and with feasting and dancing tried their best to forget about the plague outside.

But it couldn't be kept out. At the height of the merry-making, the dreaded infection suddenly appeared in their midst, and the revel abruptly dissolved in a frantic scramble as ladies and courtiers fled vainly from the destroyer.

There is something about this story from Vienna that reminds one of that tale of Poe's.

No red death menaces Vienna. The threat is infinitely graver. Unless every thoughtful student of modern affairs is mistaken, war in Europe today would bring in a new dark age. Famine, revolution, massacre, the collapse of government and the decline of all those graces which make modern society worth while—these are the prices that Europe would inevitably have to pay.

The Foundation Begins To Crack

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN, Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

When a food disagrees with us, we usually find out about it and avoid that particular food. Recently investigators have been studying the question of distress after eating, with a view to determining foods that are most likely to cause such distress and the time when the disturbance comes on.

First, several people were taken who knew that they always had distress after eating certain foods. They were fed these foods and asked to note how long after eating the symptoms appeared. In some cases the distress comes on while the person concerned still is at the table. In these cases the reaction is definitely one of sensitivity to the food concerned, in which case the person is likely to be very ill.

In other cases there is some other factor which is a sort of revulsion against the food. In studying these cases it was found that

The mechanism of this kind of distress can be studied by the use of the X-ray. If the stomach is filled gradually and with repen-

The 'SACRILEGE' of FREEDOM

SPAIN once held its colonies in America in such firm grip that when at last there was an attempt to gain freedom, some of the very subjects who would have benefited by the movement cried it was a sacrilege and refused to help. And so the first attempt to free Salvador from Spanish rule failed. This took place in 1811, and was led by six men, among them two priests. Their revolt lasted less than a month, but they gained dismissal of the despotic governor and amnesty for themselves. Ten years later Salvador gained independence.

repented swallowing movements, its muscle fibers relax and the introduction of even large amounts of food does not greatly increase the pressure within the stomach.

If, however, the stomach is filled rapidly and without much swallowing, the muscle fibers do not relax and there is discomfort.

Investigators, years ago, showed that the mere idea of eating will usually cause the stomach to begin to get ready for the food by putting out the gastric juice. If food is taken hastily or in times of annoyance, this preliminary flow does not take place.

The investigators also point out that the reason why people who get indigestion after eating like to chew gum is because the repented swallowing after the meal starts the waves going down the gastrointestinal canal and stops the waves, in the reverse direction, which produce belching.

An appropriation of $10,000 has been authorized for an investigation of the price of cotton. How about an investigation of the price of investigations?

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

PWA Pictures Bared by Madame Secretary Are in Great Demand... Millis Is in Embarrassing Position With His Farwell Watch... Garner Prefers Applejack.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—The free civil works paintings which Secretary Perkins and minions speaking for her refused to allow in the new Department of Labor building have, for the most part, found happy homes.

It even seems that the half dozen pictures which Miss Perkins, for various reasons, turned back to Administrator Harry Hopkins, the donor, acquired a certain added attraction by virtue of the publicity they received as the only PWAP products which anyone here ever spurned as a gift. They were eagerly sought.

Checking up on some of them, one finds they are now hanging as follows:

Portrait of Steinmetz, the inventor, repeated "because people would think it was Trotsky" office of Harry Hopkins himself.

Full-length view of a not-over-dressed ballet dancer, unfit for labor walls because it was too gay: office of Edwin S. Smith, National Labor Relations Board, who has named it "Spirit of Collective Bargaining."

Painting of nude lady hiding behind some flowers, sent back with explanation that "Madame Secretary wouldn't like that": office of Judge George C. Sweeney, assistant attorney general, who thinks it's swell.

Picture of Lincoln writing Gettysburg address, which "might offend people from the south": Lincoln College, Jefferson City, Mo., a Negro institution whose president wrote and asked for it.

Two Make You Think Those PWAP pictures are hung in every government building in town, of course. Many of them are beauties and some draw many laughs—such as the excellent painting of an unusually cockeyed-looking clown in the office of the NRA Advisory Council.

In a secret office used by investigators for the Senate munitions committee are two striking arrangements by one Lewis E. Rubinstein of New York.

One, "Chlorine," depicts both the use of that article in a laboratory by scientists apparently bent on humane purposes and its employment as a war gas, with girls handling cans of it in a factory and gasping dough-boys succumbing to it on the battlefield.

The other, "Nitrogen," shows first the cotton fields where nitrogen is used as a fertilizer, more battlefields are booming from a sumably containing a layer of helmeted men.

His Face is Scarier One of the most men in town is Dr. Mills of NLRB.

Dr. Mills, two weeks ago, sorely chipped in to buy a watch, inscribing affection and affectionately moved. He went to Chicago. No one can lim any more.

Then the admiral persuaded Mills to resign at NLRB keep kids the watch. Did he leave just to get a going to quit every weeks and eventually elry store? Mills grins and can't think per comeback.

School Children Given Reduction To Dickens Film

School pupils over 12 years of age will be admitted to the Ritz Theatre for 15 cents Sunday and Monday and the Charles Dickens classic "David Copperfield" is shown, it was announced yesterday by Lee Bell, manager of the Ritz.

Other admission prices will be 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults, he said. The reduction in price for school children over 12 years of age is being made in order that every student in the Memphis Area will be able to see this educational and inspirational Dickens masterpiece, Mr. Bell said. Every school teacher in the entire area has been invited to attend a special advance preview showing of "David Copperfield" at the Ritz Saturday morning at 9 o'clock. Teachers who attend will be the guests of the Ritz and The Democrat, with the entire entertainment absolutely free. Tickets may be secured by calling in person at The Democrat office. Scores of teachers have already secured their passes and others who desire to accept the invitation to the preview showing are urged to call for tickets at the earliest possible date, since only a limited number were printed.

Just when everything was all set for working in the yard and garden today another dust storm had to blow up and cause abandonment of the plans. It may take another month to get in the notion again.

The first five days of spring were beautiful with narry a dust storm to mar perfectly delightful weather. And the weatherman holds out no promise of rain in the near future. After the clouds had taken plenty of time to gather and furnish a few samples of moisture, causing people to believe that the seven years of drouth and famine were over, the rain clouds had to disappear and the dust storms start their unwelcome capers. It is the time of year for poets to write their silly sonnets to spring—but who the can write poetry in the midst of a dust storm.
