LOCAL SHRINERS WILL ATTEND MEETING

All-Day Ceremonial Will Be Held In Canyon May 26

Local reports indicate that there will be few Shriners in Memphis on May 26, due to the fact that they will be on the canyon west of Amarillo for an all-day ceremonial and general entertainment.

Special invitations have been extended to each Shriner to bring his lady with him. Visiting ladies are to register at the temple in time for lunch. Entertainment will be provided for the ladies throughout the day and at night they will attend the potentate's ball at the newly decorated temple. Dancing begins at 9 o'clock.

Several whiteface baby beeves will be offered as a sacrifice to the appetites of the nobility. On the grounds a variety of entertainment has been planned, including a good program of boxing and wrestling. The Ancient Order of Camel Herders will have its tent pitched with the flaps furled back to admit new members.

The stage representing the journey across the hot sands to the city of Mecca will be surrounded by the rock walls of the canyon. Here the lowly novices will be received by the patrol as slaves and with careful instructions and many hardships they will be elevated to full knights of the desert.

All Shriners are asked to be at the temple not later than 10 a. m. The Shrine fez must be worn throughout the day on order of the potentate, Jim King of Memphis. All Shriners residing in the jurisdiction of Khiva temple are urged to be present, partake of the barbecue and join in the festivities.

Memphis May Get Canning Kitchen

Denies Charges

Miss Ruby Mashburn, head of this district's home demonstration agents by extension from College Station, was in Memphis yesterday and met with County Judge Jim Vallance and Judge A. C. Hoffman, county relief administrator, for the purpose of discussing the installing of a canning kitchen in Hall county.

The canning kitchen if installed would be run in connection with the local relief administration, since Hall county does not have a county home demonstrator.

The canning kitchen phase of relief work is a project sponsored by the Texas Relief Commission.

Installed Over State
Canning kitchens are being installed all over the state, and are installed on the plan that the state pays part of the expense and the county pays part.

"Should a canning kitchen be installed in Memphis," Miss Mashburn said, "the state would pay between $200 and $300 toward the installation, which would leave some $150 to be provided by the county."

Citizens Back Work
Miss Mashburn stated that in some of the counties in which canning kitchens were being put in the commissioners' courts were paying the counties' parts, while in others a number of merchants and public spirited citizens back the work.

The kitchens are installed for the purpose of giving those on the relief rolls something to work on in order to receive relief, and at the same time give those who have vegetables, fruit or meat to can a comparatively cheap means of getting the food canned.

Part in Food, Money
Under this plan, the relief worker is paid in food and in money. The person having the food canned pays for its canning with part of the food. The state furnishes the cans and pays the cash part of the labor.

The counties furnish buildings in which to install the plants, lights, water, etc.

Court To Decide
It is undecided as yet as to whether or not Memphis will get a canning kitchen. It will be taken up at the next meeting of the county commissioners' court.

Kitchens were recently installed by Miss Mashburn in Wilbarger, Ford, and Cottle counties.

CHANNING, May 18.—Devolving sand storms continue to sweep over Hartley county, and not enough rain has fallen to register. Much of the grass roots have been killed but some would come back with sufficient rain. Many of the dairy cows are too weak to stand the sand storms and drift to the fences and die. The whole county looks like a desert with great sand dunes. Many of the roads are impassable and lots of the farms deserted.

RELIEF OFFICER GIVEN CHECK FOR $2,000

Sum Must Run Relief Work In County Until June 1

A check for $2,000 was received yesterday by Judge A. C. Hoffman, county relief administrator, to be used for direct relief in Hall county.

According to Judge Hoffman, the money must run the county until June 1.

Four hundred and forty families are on the relief rolls here at this time, which represents some 2,000 persons.

After deducting the expenses of the relief office, $1,685.84 will be given to relief.

This means that each person dependent upon relief will get 82 cents in groceries to last him for the next two weeks.

No more funds will be received by the local administrator until June 1, and there is no assurance that funds will be received then, it was said.

The money is received from the Texas Relief commission in Austin.

THE REFLECTION

DONNA of the BIG TOP by BEULAE POYNTER

BEGIN HERE TODAY DONNA GABRIEL and MADELINE SIDDAL who call themselves "The Gabriel Sisters" are trapeze performers with Renfro's circus.

When Madeline's grandfather, AMOS SIDDAL, asks her to spend the week-end on his farm she persuades Donna to take her place.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VI

Two weeks later "Renfro's Colonial Three-Ring Circus" was hundreds of miles from Lebanon.

Madeline made one attempt to get back into his good graces, but he snubbed her so effectively that she avoided him and then forgot him completely.

Four days after Donna's memorable week-end on the farm Madeline received a letter which she opened, read with a quizzical smile and tossed to Donna.

Donna's cheeks flamed. She took the letter and read it later when she was alone.

"Dear Madeline: I can't very well call you Miss Sidal, though I suppose I should. We have never corresponded, but many times I have written to you for grandfather. Until I met you those letters meant nothing at all to me. Now I should be very grateful if you would drop me a line now and then. Or is that asking too much? I suppose the trivial happenings around the farm will not interest you, but I assure you everything in your life will be of interest to me."

The letter continued impersonally, relating various incidents and closing, "Cordially, Cousin Bill." Donna treasured it, waited until the next day and then answered it.

Because love had come to her, making the whole world more beautiful, she felt a deep sympathy for Con with his hopeless infatuation. He mistook her kindness and again pleased with her to marry him. Donna's refusal hurt him and once more he turned to Madeline for consolation.

It was the sight of Madeline so frequently in the company of the animal trainer that finally precipitated the tragedy, though when it occurred both girls had completely forgotten the threats Trafford had made.

For two days it had rained and attendance at the circus was small. Renfro was in a bad humor. His wife, La Belle Matilda, was irritable, reflecting her husband's temper. The animals were restless and snarling, pacing their cages in a frenzy of terror every time the thunder roused. The clown, De Lanza, had caught a heavy cold and was working under difficulties, and one of the best "props" had broken his arm when a falling stage brace hit him.

All these facts increased Trafford's black moodiness. He was responsible for the safety of the troupe and was working short of help. Tired, soaked to the skin and sniffling from incipient hay fever, he strode into the "big top" to see Madeline with her arms about Con's neck. An electric shock charged with venom shot through Trafford's veins. He whirled and left the tent. He walked for miles in the rain, fighting conscience and professional honor while his bitterness mounted.

Whether he actually ranted with the screws that held the trapeze to beams or whether an inefficient assistant neglected to make sure of their security no one knew. Not even Madeline's shrieks that Ned Trafford had tried to kill her convinced Renfro that his most efficient circusman could do such a thing. But it was not Madeline who came hurtling through space to crash upon the awning-strewn ground and lie, a crumpled all-but-lifeless little figure. It was her partner, Donna.

Pandemonium. Screams. Madeline shrieking and almost falling as she slid down the rope to kneel beside Donna. Renfro calling frantically for a physician. Women sobbing. Children bewildered and terrified. And the rain coming down in sheets upon the gray canvas.

It was Con who reached Donna before Madeline's pink satin slippers had touched the ground. Blood stained the white silk of his gaily braided coat, and Donna's lovely bronze hair fell in a cascade over his arm as he raised her limp body and held her close to him, closer than he had ever done before.

Then, swaying dizzily, he carried her across the arena through the aisle of horrified performers to her dressing room. Madeline, sobbing and wringing her hands, was at his heels.

A low moan from Donna's white lips assured them she was not dead, but she was still unconscious when the doctor arrived. A brusque man who hid a big heart under a forbidding exterior, Dr. Cotton dismissed the crowd of performers who had gathered in the dressing room. "For God's sake, give her a chance! You'll smother her if you all stay here!"

Only Madeline, now crumpled and silent, and Con and Peter Renfro stayed in the little room, while the doctor bent over the improved bed—two cranks placed end to end and covered with a blanket.

"Is she going to die?" Madeline managed to whisper.

"Can't say yet. Her pulse is strong enough."

"Her back?" Con pined.

"It seems to be all right. One leg is broken, a rib and there's a concussion."

"God! There's a jinx on this show!" muttered Renfro.

"She can't stay here, of course" Dr. Cotton said, his gaze sweeping the lavatory room. "I've a hospital of sorts. We'll take her there. Have you some sort of a stretcher?"

Renfro went back to the arena to announce to the audience that Miss Gabriel was not badly injured and that the performance would continue, while Con rushed out to have some of the crew construct a stretcher. Madeline, a victim of remorse and terror, sat beside her partner, tears rolling down her white cheeks with their inconspicuous splashes of rouge.

"She's your sister?" the doctor asked.

Madeline nodded dumbly.

"You've a home, of course?" Madeline almost said, "no," but stopped herself in time. "My grandfather lives on a farm just outside of Lebanon—"

"If she lives," the doctor said slowly, "she will be ill for a long time. You'd better make arrangements to send her home."

"Will she ever be able to perform again?" Madeline asked in a smothered voice.

"I don't know yet."

Renfro returned just as Con and two of the crew came in with the stretcher.

"You'll want to stay with her I suppose?" the circus owner said to Madeline. "This would have to happen when I'm short on acts?"

Madeline looked at Con, then at the pallid face on the blankets.

"The show must go on," she said huskily. "We'll need money. If you need me, I'll stay."

Con lighted a cigarette, and against all rules, smoked it, inhaling deeply. His eyes seemed to have dropped far back in his head and under his grasse paint his cheeks were like chalk.

"I do need you but anxious Donna—how is she, doc?"

Madeline and Con accompanied the physician and his patient to the hospital, a large residence with a few private rooms, one ward, and a small operating room and laboratory. During the half mile ride Donna moaned in intermittent consciousness.

"Oh, God, don't let her die! Don't let her die!" Madeline prayed, the prayer not unmixing with thoughts of her own future. She did not know how Con would react to this accident, whether Donna's absence would center his affections upon Madeline herself or turn him against her.

The trainer and the little crowd that waited downstairs in silence while the doctor worked over Donna, Con paced the floor, puzzling as to how the accident could have occurred. He asked Madeline if Donna had suddenly grown dizzy, if she had been ill.

To all the questions the girl answered, "I don't know." To accuse Ned Trafford was to cast blame on himself and admit a flirtation on which she was now heartily ashamed. And, after all, she did not know Trafford had done anything.

It was after midnight when Dr. Cotton informed them that Donna had recovered consciousness and was asleep. "I'm pleased to say there is no internal injury. There's a slight concussion, two broken ribs and a broken leg and a slight fracture of one wrist. Of course the shock adds complications but with her constitution she should pull through it."

Con burst into hysterical sobs, revealing his Latin temperament. He seized Madeline in his arms and kissed her again and again. "I've got to go on with the show," Madeline said, wringing out of his arms. "I must see her before I leave, Doctor."

"Tomorrow then."

"No. The train leaves tonight."

The physician shook his head. "It would be dangerous to awaken her now. Let her rest."

Madeline hesitated. Duty urged her to stay behind with her partner. Her heart bade her go on with Con. There was a small writing desk near a window and on it were ink, pen and stationery. Madeline crossed to the desk, sat down and composed two letters. The first was addressed to Donna and read:

"Donna, Darling: The doctor says you will be well soon and on your feet and Renfro says I have to go on with the show. I know you will understand my running off like this. We'll need every penny to pay hospital bills. I'll write you every day. Oh, Donna, I'm just heartach that this had to happen! Of course I'm to blame. I'm sure Ned did it but there's no way to prove it."

"Now listen, honey, you're going to get well and you're going to perform again but it won't be next week or next month, so I'm writing Bill Sidal to come and take you to the farm. I'm signing the letter, 'Donna,' and calling you 'Madeline.' Don't fall down on this. It's your chance to regain your strength and have the right care. And grandfather will love having you there."

"Don't lose your nerve, darling. Don't worry, and get well very soon."

"Your loving 'sister,' Madeline."

The second letter was shorter. "Dear Mr. Sidal: Madeline fell from the trapeze tonight and was badly injured, though the doctor says she will live and be in condition to be moved from the hospital in a short time. I am sure she will recover quickly with her family and advise you to come for her at the earliest possible time. She is at Dr. Marvin Cotton's sanatorium."

"Sincerely, Donna Gabriel."

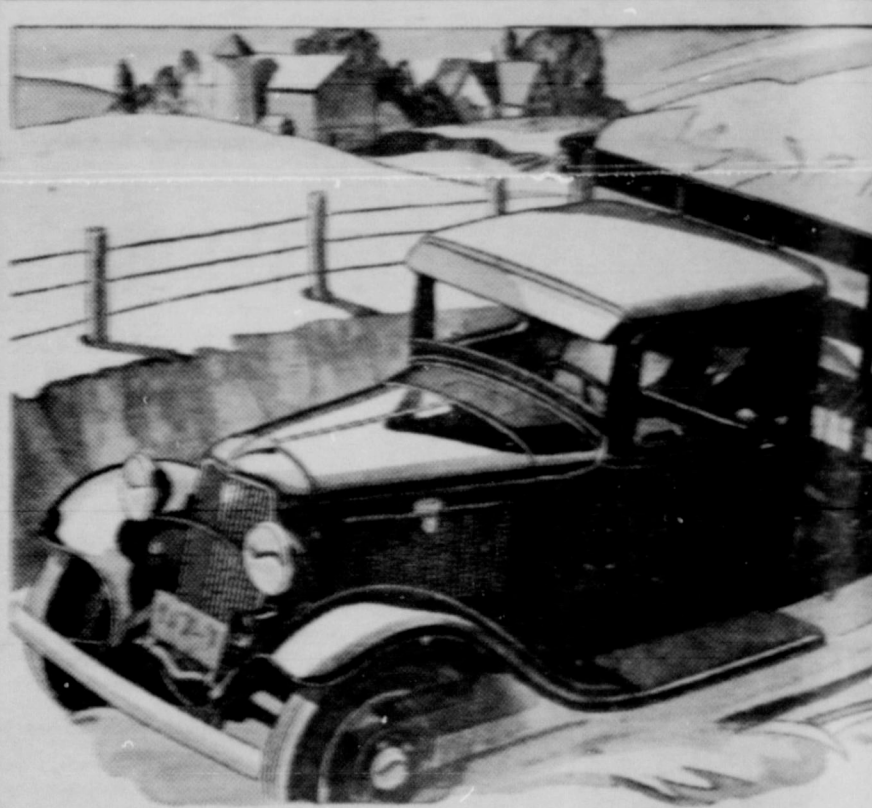

She gave the letters to the physician. "Will you please see that they are mailed?" she asked. "The family will take care of all expenses." She saluted her conscience on the last score. Everything Grandfather Sidal possessed would be Madeline's some day, so in reality she was paying for Donna's care.

.... but HOW I Know My Onions!"

Ham-and-Eggs take their dips and jumps like Steel and Telephone. You can bet dollars to doughnuts most women wish there was a ticker in every kitchen. A penny more or less in the price of bread or tomatoes can make a lot of difference when you're cooking for a family of five—and the woman who isn't long on buying sense may find herself short of cash!

But stocks and bonds are traded in a public exchange. Foods are sold over-the-counter and it's not the same thing at all. There's no "big board" to tell you what to pay for onions and cheese and soap and lard. All the more reason for you to know what NOT to pay!

If you are one of the 3,000 women who read the Daily Democrat every day, you'll know the answer. You'll know, for example, that "blind shopping" is needless extravagance. For the Daily Democrat Ads are your "price ticker", shopping list and sound buying guide all in one.

The ads tell you the price of a bottle of blueing or a can of beans—not only at one store but everywhere. The ads tell you what to serve for dinner tonight; they remind you what you need. The ads insure your getting real value because an advertising merchant knows you will compare his offering with others and choose the best!

And most important these days—whether you're buying corn, stockings or gasoline—the Daily Democrat Ads point the way to quality. Most merchants know that anything less than real quality loses too much good will to be worth the cost of advertising it.

Make it a habit to shop through Daily Democrat Ads! You may never feel the thrill of scalping the market. But you'll have the solid satisfaction of knowing that your housekeeping dollar goes one hundred cents of the way!

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Preserve me, O God: for in thee do I put my trust.—Psalm 16: 1.

First Presbyterian Church
Dr. John Angus MacMillan
Minister

We've all heard about the character in a story by a famous author who was always "writing for something to turn up." The original character of the "waiting for something to turn up" type will be introduced in our morning sermon, Sunday. We expect to have him speak to us at 11 o'clock. He'll probably have something interesting to say. "Waiting Is Not Enough" will be the sermon title. There will be special music—and you'll like it.

"Just Passing Through" is to be the subject of the evening address—at 8 o'clock. What will it be like? Well, it will be built around a chance remark, but deals with a great big fact about you—and about others. Do you like to travel—to go places and see things? If you do, don't miss this service.

Our Junior church is anxious to help you "juniors." It meets every Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Our Sunday school is also an every-Sunday affair. Let's see you there Sunday—at 9:45 a. m.

FIRST METHODIST CHURCH
THE GREATEST KIDNAP PLOT will be the sermon subject discussed Sunday night at the First Methodist Church by the pastor, Rev. E. D. Landreth. The whole nation of American people have been shocked by the daily news from Arizona regarding the kidnaping and rescue from death of the little June Robles. Her name has been on the lips of millions, and from a million homes has gone up one united prayer for her and her grief-stricken loved one. A greater kidnaping than this, and a more glorious rescue will be discussed Sunday night at 8:15 o'clock at the First Methodist Church. Splendid music will also be a feature of the service. We invite you to this service.

Sunday morning the pastor will meet his Sunday School Class and then hurry to Hedley where he will deliver the Baccalaureate sermon for their high school graduating class. There will be no preaching service at our Church at the eleven o'clock hour, but we will be looking for you at the evening service.

TEXAS OIL INDUSTRY EXHIBITS GET ATTENTION

By Associated Press
TULSA, Okla., May 18.—Texas and its oil industry have received much attention through two chambers of commerce exhibits at the International Petroleum exposition which closes at Tulsa Saturday. The Midland and Longview chambers of commerce have exhibits.

Midland pioneered the idea of town exhibits at the oil exposition, having operated a booth at Tulsa in 1928. This year the exhibit in charge of Paul T. Vickers, secretary of the Midland chamber, has as its main attraction a huge Permian Basin oil map showing every field in the Permian Basin of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico.
M. D. Abernathy, secretary of the Longview Chamber of Commerce, is showing East Texas scenes.

Bentley, Giants' $65,000 Bust, Is Salesman Of Paint

WASHINGTON, May 18.—What happened to Jack Bentley, the $65,000 lemon trader Jack Dunn sold to John McGraw?

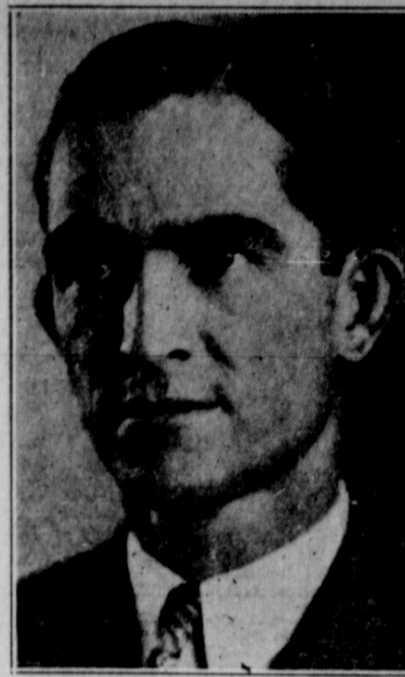

Bentley is a highly successful paint salesman here, just a shadow of the man Dunn sold Little Napoleon to assuage McGraw's ire aroused when Dunn sold Babe Ruth to the Red Sox instead of the Giants.

Jack never was the man Ruth was. He would clout the apple every once in a while, and pitched and p layed first base after a fashion, but he couldn't compare with the Babe.

THE W. T. C. C. TAKES A STAND

THE West Texas Chamber of Commerce in annual convention at San Angelo early this week took a definite stand on many points of interest in government and relief work. We believe this was done with far-sighted intelligence, and that the things resolved by this representative group should be backed to the limit.

Walter D. Cline of Wichita Falls, past president of the organization, made some pertinent remarks that are as important as some of them are comical. He fired a broadside at the present method of administering relief to the unemployed that brought the convention to its feet in approval.

"Monday a representative of the Texas Relief Commission said there was no appropriation for this purpose (road work in the Panhandle, the South Plains country and flooded areas in the Rio Grande Valley)," Cline is quoted as saying. "He may be right, but it's strange that he gave the exact amount available from PWA funds, $2,670,000, which, he said, was to be expended through the relief commission.

"This same representative expressed the hope that some West Texas county would be a pioneer in proving that an opportunity should be given the unemployed to help themselves, rather than to give them direct relief. If I should suggest a pioneer work along this line for West Texas it would be to get rid of a lot of fellows who are in the relief racket for revenue only.

"It would please me if some candidate for a high state office would sponsor a state program to help the needy but on a basis of relief only."

A resolution was adopted to press the strengthening of laws for the prevention of crime by the elimination of the following: trivial technicalities affording criminals delay and protection at the expense of society; "A virtually unlimited pardoning power, now reposing in the person of the governor," and lack of integration between the various law enforcing agencies.

In a resolution favoring continuation of an aggressive program of highway improvement and opposing any further diversion of the gasoline and motor taxes from highway building, the convention urged the Legislature to pass laws authorizing the highway commission to condemn right of way for highway construction, states J. E. Fee of the Dallas Morning News.

United and unqualified support for a federal oil control bill, regulating quotas in commerce, with an amendment providing that the federal administration will not take over proration of individual fields so long as the state lives within the quotas set by the administration, was pledged.

Any modification of the Robertson insurance law was condemned and any movement to abolish or unduly restrict any state institution of higher learning or concentrate high education under control of a single board was opposed.

A four-point program was indorsed in a resolution adopted. It provides for an analysis of agricultural possibilities of every West Texas county; successful operation of small industrial enterprises, bearing in mind processing of West Texas raw materials and employment of West Texas labor; encouragement of settlement of undeveloped or partially developed farm acres on a basis that will make it possible for thrifty families to make a living from the products of their labor, and a survey of commercial needs and possibilities of West Texas cities as suitable locations for new enterprises.

Running throughout the resolutions and speeches, says another writer, was a note of warning that state and national governments had gone far enough in the experimental field, that a backing up is necessary, that government costs must be reduced, that taxes must be lowered, that relief must be based on actual needs only, that the method of administering relief must be changed, that West Texas land titles must be validated and that federal oil control is necessary.

There are four cardinal points in advice to office aspirants, according to a veteran in Congress. The four don'ts to everyone anticipating running for office are: Don't run against an old man, don't run against a young man, don't run against a cripple, never committ yourself.—Waxahachie Light

Personal nomination for the world's most badly scrambled metaphor: "Beneath his well-pressed but shiny blue serge pants there beats a heart of purest gold."—Waxahachie Daily Light

TEST TUBE BABIES

HEALTH

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

The latest tendency, under which I hope haven't fallen, has been to group all disturbances of the bowels under the general term of colitis.

This is due particularly to the fad that arose some years ago for washing out the bowels with all kinds of apparatus. Colon washing began to be exploited as a means of curing almost any kind of disease.

If you'll look up your history, however, you'll find, strangely enough, how these fads have repeated themselves from era to era.

As long ago as 77 A. D., the Roman historian, Pliny, told how the Egyptians used to wash their bowels in exactly the same way that the method is exploited in modern times.

Again in the 16th century, bowel washing had a terrific vogue and the French emperor, Louis the Fourteenth, is supposed to have taken several thousand such intestinal washings.

If you should go to a doctor with the announcement that you have colitis, the doctor is likely to suspect chronic appendicitis, inflammation of the gall bladder or almost any other disease. A real colitis means an infection and inflammation of the intestine, and that type of condition is really rare.

There are, however, numerous cases of severe constipation associated with irritation of the bowel. There are also cases in which people have eaten too much roughage.

Others develop habits involving the daily use of strong cathartics. Much of this condition no doubt is associated with the speed and drive of modern life.

Those who have fallen into any of these evils demand a complete regulation of every detail of their lives from a hygienic point of view.

If you have the cathartic habit, you should get rid of it as soon as possible. It is well to be less conscious of the bowel than to be over-conscious.

The best advice that I can give to a person in this condition is to stop hurrying, stop overworking, stop being anxious about what the future will bring, and get rid of all extra stimulation, such as comes from tea, coffee,

Answers to Previous Questions.
A CORPORAL BOULIGNY, an American enlisted, in the French army, was the first American casualty when he was shot through the knee at Cranville cemetery while attacking a German outpost. Huss left New York in a curved dash Oldsmobile, May 8, 1905, and arrived at Portland, Ore., on June 21. First known as the English Classical School, the first high school became the English High School in 1824.

tobacco, and alcohol.
Regulate your life with definite periods of rest and exercise. Walk enough. Walking is not only a good, mild exercise, but also will keep you out in the open air.

In other words, treatment of this condition demands less attention to the colon and more attention to the body as a whole. Most people with colitis make the condition worse by taking large amounts of bran, psyllium seed, and other roughage.

These merely serve to irritate further the lining of a bowel already over-irritated.

The right diet for a person with colitis is one with milk, fruits, well macerated, and pureed vegetables. After the use of a bland and soft diet, harder materials may gradually be added until you have returned to a normal diet.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
The Democrat's Washington Correspondent
WASHINGTON, May 18.—The first big New Deal battleground will be found in Missouri, now that ex-Senator James A. Reed is going to seek nomination and election again.

Reed is first of the one important Old Deal Democrats to expose himself to the voters on an anti-New Deal platform. Outspoken against the Roosevelt policies, he has been in a class with Al Smith, Senator Carter Glass, John W. Davis, and Governor Ely of Massachusetts.

Reports differ as to the chances that the baleful, white-haired 72-old war horse has for a comeback. Reed has always been closely associated with Boss Tom Pendergast's powerful machine in Kansas City and retains a popular following through the state.

Whether the Pendergast outfit will now take the chance of backing an anti-Roosevelt candidate is uncertain, especially since Senator Bennett Champ Clark has advanced his own pro-administration candidate — Congressman Tuck Milligan.

But Reed is so angry and disgusted at the progressive, experimental trend in Washington that he is even willing to run as an independent and may not enter the August primaries. He is chiefly anxious to roar his protests—and hopes for the chance to echo them from the Senate floor.

Roosevelt sentiment is so strong in Missouri that Senator Riscoe Patterson, Republican incumbent up this year, has been considered ripe for the skids.
He might win, however, if Reed ran on a third ticket.

One Tip That Cashed In

Dr. Cary T. Grayson, once physician to Woodrow Wilson and now a political power and prominent horseman in this area, walked into the White House press room and offered a sure-fire race tip on his horse, Scotch Queen.
The odds were 3 to 1 as correspondents started telephoning bookmakers and their friends. The tip was passed to the Senate and House press galleries, all the newspaper offices, and the departmental press rooms around town.

Scotch Queen won. But so many newspapermen jumped on the raft that the odds were forced down until she paid only $2.90 on a $2 ticket.

Why Johnson Hushed

Behind various inside stories as to why General Johnson didn't make his scheduled speech in Detroit, but was persuaded to hold it for Columbus, is the real explanation.

Dr. Leo Wolman, head of the automobile labor board at Detroit, didn't want his boss to come. The board's troubles with belligerent workers had provided a delicate

Owls To Play Oklahoma Nine Sunday

FREDERICK WILL INVADE FAIR PARK HERE

Games Also Slated With Tulsa And Lefors Nines

Following their battle this afternoon with the Pompa Dixie Rascals, the Memphis Owls return to the Fair Park Diamond Sunday to battle a powerful Frederick, Okla., nine, and here two more games scheduled to be played here soon.

On the following Sunday they play hosts to the Lefors Oilers, another of company nine that is doing its best to stay up with the Pompa and Berger clubs.

Tulla Here June 2
Tulla's first visit here on June 2, two weeks from Sunday. A game was scheduled with the Tulla club several weeks ago, but due to conditions this visit has never been played.

Remembering what happened to them when the Oklahoma nine invaded Texas from Tulsa, the Owls are expecting stiff competition from every club that comes from that direction. They plan full strength for Sunday's battle.

Plenty of Competition
Like so many of the other opponents, they have no actual knowledge of the prowess of the invaders, nor do they know who makes up the club. When the game was scheduled, the Frederick manager named Manager Jack Borne of the Owls that they would be able to give the Memphis nine all the competition desired.

That is as far as local knowledge of the club goes, but apparently it is enough as far as the Owls are concerned, for they have learned to take that kind of report seriously.

1,000 Out Today
Crammed with fans for the big day this afternoon, when over 1,000 fans were expected to be on hand for the battle with Pompa. Borne had not selected his starting battery for Sunday's game.

The tilt will start at 2:30 o'clock and admission will be 25 cents general with a 10 cent charge for women and children.

Eight Memphis players returned to Wichita Falls Sunday for the final 24-hole play in the Wichita Falls Junior Chamber of Commerce Invitation tournament over the Weeks Park course.

LOCAL GOLFERS GO TO WICHITA FALLS SUNDAY

This group qualified last Sunday. Their qualifying rounds plus the final 24 holes Sunday make up their 54-hole totals in play for the title.

Four local golfers—Frank Foxhall, Reginald Greenleaf, Carl Harrison and Thomas Hampton—made up the Memphis team entry. Team play will be held at the same time of individual rounds, but it will be figured on a handicap basis.

Other entrants from Memphis' country club are E. S. Greene, J. E. Wright, Ed Foxhall and O. S. Smith.

The qualifying scores were not released by the tournament committee, being withheld until the time for qualifying ends tomorrow night.

Over 100 players are in the tournament.

BICS SHOULD IMPROVE WITH TRAYNOR'S ARM

PITTSBURGH, May 18.—As Traynor's arm goes, so go the Pirates. The Pittsburgh third baseman, probably the best in the National League, injured his finger in early season, just when he was hitting for a mark close to .300. Examination by physicians indicates that an abscessed tooth may be the cause of the trouble. If it is, it will be packed promptly. He is expected back in the lineup in a few days.

OREN JONES, IRVIN JOHNSEY DOWN FOXHALL AND THOMPSON TO REACH TOURNAMENT FINAL

Oren Jones and Irvin Johnsey yesterday halted the headlong drive of Ed Foxhall and C. O. Thompson in the Memphis Country Club's Scotch golf tournament, and marched into the final with a 2 and 1 victory.

Their championship opponent will be the team of E. S. Greene and T. H. Harrison, rulers of the senior circuit.

The title match probably will be played early next week.

Yesterday's match was one of the most and hardest of the entire tournament.

After halving the first hole, Foxhall and Thompson went into the lead on the second. Within a couple of holes, however, the battle was joined, and on the next Jones and Johnsey were in the lead.

A second time the match was tied, and the defeated pair regained the lead. By the time the first nine was completed the thing was hooked again.

Early on the back nine, Jones and Johnsey were in the fore. On the 14th hole, Foxhall and Thompson battled back into a tie.

Instead of the lead changing as it had been doing, however, the winning team managed a 1-up margin on the 18th and then clinched the match on the 17th by going 1 up with one hole to play.

Methodists Push Christian Of League Lead; Baptists

Manager Harry Grayson led his last-class Methodists to a win over the Christians yesterday afternoon 13 to four, and pushed that team from the last position in the league standing, under the Baptists.

A setting spree was enjoyed by each team in the initial period, and both teams held tight until the last half of the sixth, when DeLaney and his men took advantage of heavy hits and poor fielding to chase six runs. An eight-run inning by the home team kept Burleton's legs scurrying through five of the last six innings.

A shift in the line-up of the Methodists gave them much added power.

Burks, Alexander, Springer, and Beckum played star games for the visitors, while the best offering of the Christians, who couldn't seem to get their ordinarily heavy batmen started, was seen in Dyer, Mitchell, and Jack Norman. Bud McAllen, Fred Sanders, and Maxon McNally Jr., all youngsters, did the best fielding for the hosts.

Jimmy Mitchell pined out the only extra-base hit of the contest, although plenty of singles were struck. He placed a double into left field.

This game was the last of the week, since the game originally scheduled for today was played Wednesday. Monday's battle sees the Christians visiting the Presbyterians. The Christians will then play the Baptists, making it three in a row for the club.
